Tiberius said, "I suffer that son of Germanicus to live, that he may be in time a public calamity, and the final author of his own destruction. In him I nourish a serpent for the people of Rome." Caligula was not long in demonstrating to the people of Rome his serpentine characteristics. It is said that a traitor is one who "turns to bite the bosom that warms it." Caligula proved to be such. Tiberius nourished the serpent that would exert the venomous powers of unholy ambition and impatience upon his wicked bosom. Caligula made an agreement with Macro, one of Tiberius' servants, to betray his master. When Macro had decoyed Tiberius into his bed-room, they dismissed all the servants and smothered Tiberius in his bed-clothes.

Tiberius, who sent so many out of the world by the most cruel methods of torture, was hurriedly sent out himself. He exercised no mercy toward others and received none himself.

In every country where Christianity is professed there are laws and habits of thinking which bring punishment and contempt upon vice, cruelty and injustice; and these restraints are placed upon those who reign, as well as those who obey. It is noticeable what a change Christianity has made in the laws of the Isle of the Britons since Cæsar's time.

OUR SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

BY GRANT MAHAN.

IN two or three months from now a great many, perhaps the majority, of our Sunday-schools will be closed for the winter. It does not seem to be just the right thing to do. The Sunday-school work is not less important in winter than in summer. The schools in the country are usually the ones that suffer. But it would seem that the country people are the ones who should keep their Sunday-schools going in the winter, for they have a great deal less to do then than in the summer.

There is a great deal lost by this closing of the schools. The lessons are so arranged that no one can afford to lose nearly half of them. If one is to get the good he should out of the Sunday-school, he should attend it every Sunday. It is bad enough to miss a lesson once in a while, to say nothing of knowing nothing about the work for four or five months. Just think about it for a little while. As a rule the schools in the country do not do much work the last quarter of one year or the first quarter of the next. If one looks over the list of lessons for the year he can readily see what is missed by so doing. Take this year's lessons, for example: The first six months are devoted to the study of the life of Jesus as recorded in Mark's account of the Gospel. The first lesson was, "The Mission of John the Baptist," Mark 1: 1–11; and the last was, "Jesus Risen," Mark 16: 1–13. Suppose the first quarter passed before the school was organized. It is easy to see that the one-half of the study of Christ's life would be lost.

The loss is more apparent, if possible, when we look at the studies in the Old Testament. At the close of this year the lessons will end with the "Close of Solomon's Reign." Last year they ended with Ruth. The year before last the children of Israel were left at Sinai. The Old Testament series runs through several years, and if one misses about half he can not get the connected history of the Jewish people. System is necessary in order to accomplish any very great work. Getting a knowledge of the Scriptures is certainly a great work. And it is a work, too, which can not be too well done. To get this knowledge and get it well we must go to work systematically, and we must stick to the work. There can be no such a thing as doing half the work and leaving the other half undone.

If the church members are what they ought to be, if they are what they profess to be—that is, Christians in deed and in truth—they will do all they can for the Master, both in the summer and in the winter, for there is just as great a need for work in one season as in the other. You never hear of a man who is working against all that is good going away from his work when the weather is unpleasant. He labors just as hard, he offers just as many inducements, he ruins just as many souls in one season of the year as in another. And what are we, who profess to love God with all our heart, soul, mind and strength, going to do about it? We ought to do our duty. Are we doing it if we withdraw from the field for months when there is great need of our doing all we can? It is to be doubted whether there is one among us who has done all he can.

But the winter is coming, and what are the members in the country going to do with their Sunday-schools? It is quite a while yet till winter, but it is time for thinking about this matter. It seems to be taken as a matter of course that there should be no Sunday-schools in the country during bad weather. Is there any argument in favor of closing the Sunday-school that can not be given as a reason for closing the common school during the same time? Is the religious instruction of the young of less importance than their common-school instruction? We ought to think about these things in all earnestness.

The common reason given for closing the Sunday-schools in the winter is, that not many would attend if they were not closed. A great number is not what makes a good Sunday-school. The promise is given to the "two or three" who are gathered together in Christ's name. It does not matter how few there be, if they are gathered together with the right motive. We do not seem to look at our religious duties as we should. They can not be put on and off. When they are once put on they must be kept on for all time—till the end comes, when we shall lay every burden down. The schools ought to be kept open during the entire year. There are a few in every locality who like to attend divine services. And these, if they are earnest and zealous workers, will be the means of drawing others into the work.

I would like to see a Sunday-school in every neighborhood, and I would like to see that school open and its members at work every Sunday in the year. There is no other way by which the church can exert so great an influence over the young. And the young are the ones the church must look after. A work that can be carried on or dropped, according as the weather is pleasant or unpleasant, will not seem to outsiders to be a ery important one, and it will not have half the ttraction it would have if it were carried on right long. And no wonder. If we believe in a work e will have no desire to half do it. But we will lways be looking for opportunities to do more of , rather than seeking to shirk it part of the time.

There are a great many fair-weather Christians. here are a great many who are always ready to alk religion. There are too few who are all-the-ear-round Christians. There are too few who re living up to what they profess. It is a very asy matter to say we believe in a thing. But the aying so amounts to nothing if we do not prove y our actions that we do believe in it.

Time is not long at best, and surely each one who has his heart in the work will do all he can. No one of us can do much, even when he does all e can, and what will the result be if he does not o the little he can? Each one who is in favor of losing the Sunday-school during the winter ught to analyze his motives and see just what hey are. Are the schools closed because of the good it does to close them? I want to put the question to each one, and I want each one to answer it to his own satisfaction, Why do you want o be without a Sunday-school for several months of the year?

Mt. Morris, Ill.

TEACHING THEM TO OBSERVE ALL THINGS.

Matt. 28: 20.

BY A. FLORY.

How much of this kind of teaching is done in this age of the world? How do men teach in our public schools? Do they tell their pupils that part of the rules laid down in arithmetic are necessary and part are not? Do they say the part called "addition" must be thoroughly studied, but when they come to the part called "subtraction," that it is not necessary? Would you like to have your children taught in this way?

Is it not strange that men are so exact in regard to secular knowledge, and so indifferent in regard to God's Book? Are there not hundreds and, perhaps, thousands of men in the world to-day, teaching just in this way from God's Book? They treat God in a way they would not like to be treated themselves. When God's Book tells them to believe and repent, they are willing to comply, but when it tells them to be baptized for the remission of sins, they seem to have no need of this. They claim that their sins are already pardoned. Where the Word tells them to eat the bread and drink the wine, they do that without a murmur, but when they turn over a little further, and find where Christ washed his disciples' feet, they shake their heads and pass by, saying, "We have no need of this; we are all holy." Still a little further on, where Paul told his brethren to salute one another with a holy kiss, they slide right around this plain command, saying, "We have no use for this small and simple command." Too often we forget how Satan deceived Adam and Eve. When God told them what they should not do, Satan told them that they would receive no harm, if they did it. Are you not aware that he is still at his old tricks? When Christ tells them to observe all things, he steps right in, and says, "You need not do all of them. Just do as many as you want to do and it will be all right." Dear reader, if you have accepted this kind of teaching and expect to be saved in this way, you will be sadly disappointed. Is it not enough to move the stoutest heart and cause the sympathetic tear to flow, when we think on these things?

Paul, in writing to his Corinthian brethren, says: "For to this end also did I write, that I might know the proof of you, whether ye be obedient in all things, lest Satan should get an advantage of us: for we are not ignorant of his devices." 2 Cor. 2: 9–11. "Take heed that no man deceive you." Matt. 24: 4.

THE TRUE RICHES.

BY NICODEMUS C. BIGLER.

"And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully: and he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my fruits? And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods. And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry. But God said unto him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God."—Luke 12: 16 21.

THIS is a momentous and truthful lesson for our time, seeing how covetous and greedy the people are to accumulate riches, thinking as the man in the parable. Many obtain their riches, as Jesus said of the Pharisees,—they are so greedy and miserly as to rob poor widow women. Jesus told them that they have their reward. The man who is obedient to the laws and commandments of God through Christ Jesus, has more in this mortal life than the sinful rich man.

Our citizenship is not in this world! The Christian is looking for more glory than all the earthly treasures and comforts could give him. Moses refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, "choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt."

The rich man may enjoy the pleasures of this life. He may think of his farms and treasures, and when he lies down to repose in sleep, he has not the comfort he ought to have. Jesus says, "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Will his riches benefit his soul in his dying hour? No, not at all.

The angel in the Apocalypse saw a great multitude ascending up the brilliant, beautiful starry steps of heaven. He then asked, "Who are these that are arrayed in these beautiful, white robes and whence came they?" They are those whom the world despises. "These are they that came out of great tribulation,"—out of garrets and underground cellars,—out of dirt and rags and poverty and dungeons, etc.,—"but they have washed their robes and made them clean and white in the blood of the Lamb, and therefore they are before the throne of God and serve him day and night."

HOPE AS AN ANCHOR.

BY HESTER ADKINS.

MANY times have I been made to think and reflect upon the word "hope." It is spoken of in the Word of God. Christ is said to be the hope of glory. What a great blessing to us helpless, dependent beings! It is the anchor to the soul! Dark, indeed, would this life be, were it not for that bright ray of hope which illuminates our pathway.

We are always hoping for a better day, for things more suitable and convenient, for a better position in life. Sometimes we hope in vain, but even then it is a pleasure to hope, for it keeps our heads above the waves of trouble and adversity and disappointments. When we have centred our affections upon some dear ones, and loved them as our own life, and fancied how happy we would always be with them as our friends, and they seem to forget us and treat, with contempt, our friendship, still we hope for their return. When we remember our sweet little babe and how we all loved him, a great hope springs up within us that we may meet him again in heaven! Oh, when death, that dreaded guest, visits our home and takes from us some darling form, and our hearts seem crushed, and heavy-laden, then it is that hope is our comforter. Christ said, "I go away, but I will send a Comforter." That Great Comforter will guide us into all Truth. He is our hope! We hope to meet our friends in that sweet haven of rest where Jesus is and where death is no more, and in order to gain that blessed home, we must be born again, for, unless we are born of water and the Spirit, we can not enter the kingdom of heaven. We must be regenerated before we can do the will of our Father,—before we can sow good seed. Oh, how needful it is that we sow good seed, for we reap what we sow. If we sow to the flesh, we shall of the flesh reap corruption, but if we sow to the Spirit, we shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. Gal. 6: 8.

AMEN.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

ACCORDING to the idiom of the English language, Amen signifies "so be it," "verily," and implies a concurrence in or a union of minds. It is used as an expression of sanction to the prayer of some one else, but I have never been able to fully understand just why we use the word in the conclusion of all prayers. But I want to say Amen to sister Gertrude A. Flory's article,—"Loyalty in God's House." I fully agree with our sister that nothing so enhances a woman's beauty as a plain white cap. Nothing makes her appear so angelic, so pure, and, to the intelligent mind, suggests the idea of loyalty to the church and loyalty to the ancient customs of nearly all other churches.

Not many years since, the good old Methodist women wore this emblem of purity and submission to the dictates of God's Holy Word, and I have in my possession a bridal cap, one hundred years old. It is plain to my mind that the white cap was originally considered the proper covering for women during public worship or prayer.

Our dear sister also reminds us of our efforts to escape the ridicule of the world by wearing bonnets during divine service. I believe we should at all times of public worship lay aside the "outdoor garment" and have our heads covered with the emblem of power, "because of the angels." I think it would be consistent to remove our bonnets at the door of the church, and for men to also remove their hats at the door, instead of the irreverent custom of entering the house of God and sitting with the hat on until services begin. We are instructed to let all things be done decently and in order.

ONE OF THE EVIDENCES.

ONE of the proofs of the divine origin of the Bible is its capability of enduring the test of close and thorough study in its every portion. The more a man knows about the Bible, the more he values the Bible; and the more a man studies the Bible, the more he finds in the Bible that is worth studying. There is always something that is fresh and that is deserving of attention to be found in any and every text of the Bible that is brought under examination. This is the unvarying testimony of every intelligent Bible student; and the fact that this is so is an added reason why the Bible should be studied systematically and persistently.—Sel.

ONE received by baptism in the Roann church, Ind., Aug. 24.

BRO. D. E. PRICE will go to Wisconsin next week to labor in the mission field.

AUGUST 11 one was received by baptism into the Independence church, Kansas.

BRO. D. E. BRUBAKER, of Maxwell, Iowa, expects to engage in mission work during the coming fall and winter.

BRO. JOHN GABLE, of the Middle Creek church, Mahaska Co., Iowa, reports that they have recently received two into church fellowship by baptism.

BRETHREN PERCY TROSTLE AND D. W. MILLER, of Nickerson, Kansas, with their wives, visited us last week. They report excellent crops in their locality.

BRO. J. S. FLORY is now at Longmont, Colo., where he will spend the month of September, after which he expects to return to his home at Tuhunga, California.

"ELD. D. C. MOOMAW expects to give the Altoona, Pa., Brethren a series of meetings the first of October, and from there he goes to Southern fields. Bro. D. C. M. is an able expounder of the doctrine, and should continue in the field."

BRO. S. B. SHIRKEY, of Rockingham, Ray Co., Mo., has ordered 160 copies of the "Miller and Sommer Debate." The interest taken in the book in the congregation where the discussion was held speaks well for the work. Our Brethren should make a special effort to extend the sale of the "Debate," not only among our own people but also among those outside of the church. Let the Truth be made known.

BRO. JOHN METZGER, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., has been holding some meetings at Walshville, Ill. The only members at that place are John P. Studebaker and wife. Bro. John reports good meetings and a pleasant visit at that place.

BRO. D. M. MILLER writes us that the Milledgeville church, Carroll Co., Ill., expects to hold a series of meetings beginning Oct. 5. Bro. J. G. Royer is to be with them. Bro. Miller will leave home for Iowa, Sept. 5. His address during September will be Galva, Ida Co., Iowa.

WE are glad to learn that the work of the Committee, sent to the church at Astoria, Ill., was successful and that their report and decision was almost unanimously accepted by the church. We rejoice and hope that a new era of success and usefulness may be in store for the church at Astoria.

IN Bro. J. H. Miller's article, in No. 33, read "Brethren church," instead of "Bethel church." Bro. J. H. will soon enter the field again to labor for the cause of Christ. He has recently moved to Goshen, Ind., and the labor of building and arranging his new home has taken up his time for some months.

FROM Bro. S. W. Hoover, of Dayton, Ohio, we learn that at an election held in the Lower Stillwater church near Dayton, Ohio, Bro. L. A. Bookwalter was called, by the almost unanimous voice of the church, to the ministry. May the Lord grant him grace that he may labor faithfully and acceptably in his new calling!

BRO. J. C. LAHMAN writes under date of Aug. 23rd that Bro. Hershey and himself had just returned from a trip to the South-west, a report of which will appear in the MESSENGER. In his last report he referred to Bro. S. M. Forney. He now says that Bro. Forney has not preached south or east of Medical Lake. At the time of writing, Bro. Hershey's health was not good.

"WE have now gathered an unusually large harvest,—our praise meetings have been held, and,—now, what next? What will we do with the abundance with which the Lord has blessed us? Will the church and her work receive a proportionate increase in contributions, or will we lay so much by as an investment for our own special enjoyments? If the latter, then the Lord will receive neither honor or glory for his bountiful giving."

TIME is thus referred to by Dr. Robertson: "That strange, awful thing, Time! sliding, gliding, fleeting on—on to the cataract; and then the deep, deep plunge down, bearing with it and swallowing up the world and the ages, until every interest that seems now so great and absorbing, is as a straw on the bosom of a mighty flood! Let but a man possess his soul with this idea of time, and then unworldliness will be the native atmosphere he breathes."

"FOR ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God." This language of Paul contains a deep truth, a truth that every Christian man and woman should learn. It is that the man of God is so fully under the influence of the spirit of Christ, and so completely controlled by it, that the world does not come into his spiritual life. He is dead to the world, but alive to Christ. How do those people who believe in making Christianity popular, and in making concession to the world so that it may accept Christ, interpret Paul's words? Will we not, by going worldward, become dead to Christ and alive to the world? Can we be dead and have our lives hid with Christ in God, and at the same time be controlled by the world?

BRO. I. M. GIBSON started for Philadelphia on Monday, Aug. 26. We wish him God speed in his new field of labor, and hope that he may meet with success. Faithful labor, adherence to principle, and a firm trust in God are the elements essential to all successful church work. Without these, failure may be expected. Even with them we do not always see the fruitage.

"THE best way to get rid of a great many unpleasant things is to let them alone. The same holds true of men. There is nothing that defeats their crookedness so well as to let them alone. They want contention, and if they don't get it, they are soon starved out. Don't contend with such as are seeking after it. It is an undesirable quality at best, and the less we cultivate it, the sooner it will die out."

THERE may be a slight delay in filling orders for the "Miller and Sommer Debate," owing to the fact that the first edition is about exhausted, and a second edition has been ordered. Orders may be sent in and they will be filled as soon as possible. The book seems to give good satisfaction, and we think there is no doubt but that the second edition will soon be sold. In case the entire edition is sold there will be a handsome sum placed to the General Missionary Fund. We hope our agents will continue the canvass for the book so that the edition may be sold.

BRO. S. S. MOHLER, of Cornelia, Mo., stopped with us on his way from Waterloo, Iowa, to Warsaw, Indiana. His stay was very short, but we were glad to have a visit from him. The work of the committee at the Waterloo church ended very satisfactorily. The decision and the report of the committee were accepted by those who were present, and it is now hoped that the church at Waterloo may enjoy a season of prosperity. Bro. William Ikenberry was placed in charge of the church for the present. May the Lord bless the work, and may peace and prosperity attend the Waterloo church!

A GOOD and a true man was suddenly and unexpectedly called to his long home. He died, surrounded by those whom he loved and by whom he was loved, and in the midst of those with whom he had labored for many years for the good of the church of his choice; and the sorrowing multitudes gave expression to their deep grief in silent weeping. He was a good man in the highest and truest sense of the word. For a half century he had fearlessly and with wonderful power declared the truth of God's Word, and for many years he had borne a prominent and a useful part in the councils of the church. Gentle in spirit, and noted for the pious example of his life, he was always found true to his convictions, and ever stood ready to defend with his matchless power what he believed to be right, but he submitted with the true Christian spirit when decisions went against him. He was always found on mercy's side, and some felt that if he erred at all it was in this direction. With deep emotion a brother, noted for his firmness and decision of character, and, who if he erred, it was in a lack of sympathy for the weak, said: "Our dear brother has left us; he was one of the most pious men I ever knew. If he made any mistakes or errors in judgment they were always on the side of mercy, and I feel after all that when death comes to us, it will be better for us to be found on the side of mercy." The brother's words were deeply impressed upon our mind, and they only show that when death comes close to us, as it came to us that day, that we feel the need of the spirit which comes down from above which "is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of MERCY and good fruits."

"THIS is a beautiful world of ours, and were it not for our own ugliness we might enjoy a fair sample of what Adam's paradise was. If Christ or his laws were accepted in all of our hearts, we would now have what we so often pray for, 'Thy kingdom come.' This kingdom will come as soon as we accept its laws. Until then this world can never become the kingdom of Christ. Sinners must either be converted or destroyed. It is the will of God that they may turn to him. But if they will not do this, then justice demands their destruction, for Christ's kingdom must come."

IN the Chautauqua course of reading is a short history of the early church by John F. Hurst, D. D. Under the head Christian Worship, we find the following paragraph. "The service consisted chiefly of reading selections from the Old Testament, the apostolical epistles, and, latest of all, the gospels. The reading was attended with copious exposition. The day of the elaborate homily, with a short Scriptural passage as a mere motto, had not yet arrived. All that was said was meant to give the hearer a deeper knowledge of the Divine Word. Singing psalms and hymns was an important part of the service. It might be led by an individual, but the music was by the whole congregation. The psalms of David and the rythmic parts of the prophecies furnished the favorite basis. Prayer was connected with the singing, and the congregation responded 'Amen' at the close. The concluding part of the service was the Lord's Supper. Until about A. D. 150, the Agape, or love-feast, was connected with the Communion service, but, because of its abuse, was afterwards separated from it. After the prayer, the kiss of charity was given, and the apostolic benediction was pronounced."

DEATH OF BRO. SAMUEL C. PRICE.

ON the 22nd day of August death came among us so suddenly, and all unbidden, and took away from us our dearly beloved brother, S. C. Price, better known to all who loved him, and none knew him but to love him, by the familiar name of Uncle Sam. He was widely known, and this announcement will bring sorrow to many hearts all over our Brotherhood.

For several years Bro. Price had been suffering from a peculiar heart trouble, which at times caused intense suffering. The least exertion would bring on a paroxysm of pain which lasted usually only a short time, after which he enjoyed apparently as good health as he ever did; but each attack left the organ weaker and at last it suddenly ceased to act. In a few brief moments all was over and the spirit of our dear brother left its tabernacle of clay and winged its way to the home prepared for all those who love the Lord.

We do not often write eulogies upon the dead, but it seems to us that the example of a Christian life so full of love to God and to humanity, so full of mercy and good works of gentleness and kindness, as was the life of our dear Bro. Price, may well be set before us as an example worthy of our imitation, for the > "Lives of true men all remind us

> We can make our lives sublime,
> And, departing, leave behind us
> Foot-prints on the sands of time."

Our departed brother has left behind him an imperishable record of goodness, of kindness, of helpfulness in every good work, of unselfish love to others, and of consecrated devotion to the cause of Christ, whom he served for more than forty years, that will live when the marble and granite monuments, erected to keep in memory the great names of the earth, shall have crumbled to the dust. In his life, humble as it was, we have exemplified the truth of the words, "It is better to be GOOD than to be GREAT."

He was not only loved and esteemed by his own brethren, but all who knew him bear willing testimony to his goodness and uprightness. One of our most prominent citizens, standing by the side of his lifeless body, with deep emotion said, "There lies the best man I ever knew," and these words are but an expression of the feelings of all who knew him intimately. Paul once said to his brethren, "I have you in my heart," and so those who knew Bro. Price had him in their hearts. His strong love for humanity, his unselfishness, and his devotion to the church of his choice, were the strong characteristics of his life. His liberality was only bounded by his means to give, and he gave, and helped, and labored, expecting nothing in return. He did not wait until appeals were made to him for help, but he constantly sought out worthy objects of charity and gave to them with a liberal hand, and, best of all, with a glad, cheerful heart, and many, very many are the poor whom he fed, clothed, and warmed.

He was an active, energetic business man, and was upright and just in all his ways. He labored not for money for the sake of having money, but that he might have the means for doing good. He might have died a wealthy man as the world counts wealth, but in his great, good heart he could not say no when a favor was asked of him. Frequently in speaking together about these things, he said to us, "I would rather die poor with the consciousness that I had helped others on in the world, than to live for self and become rich." A brother speaking of him said, "Yes, he was a good man; too good for his own good." How can that be? we asked. "Why, he might have had a great deal more money if he had not trusted everybody," was the answer, and it was true; but who will attempt to measure the treasures our brother laid up in heaven by helping others, by giving to the poor, and by lending to the Lord with all the wealth he might have stored up in this world!

He loved the Brotherhood, and his hand was open to every call for help in church work. He was a regular contributor to the mission fund, and before his death set apart a sum of money that might be used when he was here no more to give. He took a deep interest in the educational work of the church, and in this as well as in all other work in which he took an interest, he made it manifest by a ready and cheerful assistance. He was true to his convictions of right, and had the courage to stand up for them, even if he stood alone.

He lived to pass the allotted time of man's life, —three score years and ten, but he always kept his heart young. As some one has said, "He was the youngest old man we ever knew." As age with its infirmities came upon him, he seemed to grow younger in spirit. One great source of enjoyment to him was to see others happy, and it was his constant aim to bring happiness to others. He was a special favorite with the young people, and hundreds of the students at this place loved him as a father. He had a kind, cheering word for all, and many who were struggling with poverty to prepare themselves to teach, received from him more substantial encouragement.

On Sunday morning, Aug. 25, we laid his body to rest in the Salem churchyard. It was estimated that about two thousand people assembled at the home of Bro. Price, where the funeral sermon was preached by Bro. Joseph Amick to the great concourse of people who filled the large yard around and about the house. Just at the conclusion of the sermon, Bro. Price's daughters, Libbie and Mary, with their husbands, brethren Percy Trostle and D. W. Miller, of Nickerson, Kansas, reached their old home, now made desolate by the hand of death. They had reached Mendota, Ill., at 4 A. M., Sunday morning, too late for a train and had driven across the country forty-five miles, and were at home in time to take a last look at the remains of their loving father.

And there, in his own door-yard, beneath the spreading pines and leafy maples, where Uncle Sam had gone in and out for nearly fifty years, we took our last, long, lingering look at the dear, dead face. Calm and peaceful it reposed in the coffin, and as we looked we said, "He is not dead but sleepeth." We bore him in grief to the quiet little cemetery and tenderly laid his body in the grave by the side of the loved ones who had gone before, and there he shall rest until the glad resurrection morning, when he shall come forth, clothed with immortality and everlasting life.

TRACT MEETING.

THE following is a report of a meeting, held by the Book and Tract Work, by Bro. S. W. Hoover. It came too late to be placed in the proper department this week, and we give it a place here. We rejoice to know that the work is doing good and we trust our brethren and sisters will not forget to give liberally to this good cause:

"The Tract Work held its first quarterly meeting of the current year on the first Wednesday of August. The members were all present and manifested their usual interest and zeal in the work. The business was all transacted pleasantly, and, we trust, in a profitable manner.

"The former officers were re-chosen to serve another year. Eld. J. S. Flory, of Tuhunga, Cal., was also present and, by request of the Committee, took part in the proceedings. A number of brethren and sisters from the near vicinity also were with us, and gave aid and spirit to the work by word and precept. Bro. Flory has had considerable experience in tract and pioneer church work in the far West. The West presents a wide and inviting field for work, almost unlimited in extent. There are thousands of points and places settling up where the doctrine of the Brethren should be planted without delay. Millions of tracts should be distributed in this territory alone in the near future.

"It is much easier to enter a new field as yet unoccupied, comparatively, and plant the doctrine and establish churches than it is when and where the field is already occupied by others—one or more of the numerous sects—many of which are quite active in the dissemination of church literature and the Gospel as viewed by them.

"As a rule, our Brethren in the West are more active and self-sacrificing than those are in the East. Kansas is leading out nobly in this work. The Brethren of the North-eastern District of that State presont an example of business enterprise and interest in missionary work, well worthy of imitation by her older sister States and Districts, many of whom have abundant wealth. Much of it, together with the active workers, sound in the faith and full of Christian zeal, should find employment in the great harvest field of our Lord's kingdom."

Missionary and Tract Work Department.

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor. 16. 2.

"Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give. Not grudgingly or of necessity, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor. 9.

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." 2 Cor. 8. 12.

A CALL TO THE WORKERS.

BY LANDON WEST.

Is it not time that all the workers arouse to the work? And is it not time, too, that every one examine himself whether he be in the faith or not?

The judgment must come, and the unprofitable fig-tree must either bear fruit or be cut down, and the branch that beareth not fruit must be taken off. Then I do feel that each child of God should examine himself at once to see whether he is in the faith or not, and to see, too, whether the fruits of God's spirit have been borne or not. Gal. 6: 19, 26; John 15: 1, 20.

It is not enough to be among the virgins, but each one, to go in to the wedding, must have a blaze on the lamp and oil in the vessel. Matt. 25. The fruit we are to bear, is not all in our singing, praying and preaching, but the use we make of every talent. Our time and our money; our head, our hands, and our feet; our eye and our heart yea, our tongue and teeth,—all help [illegible] move and help glorify our Master's name.

To preach and sing and pray is not enough when our money is cankering, or is spent for our eyes, or our stomachs. We must do with it like the poor widow did with her mite. She did all she could and that is what we must all do to be approved, for if we have not done it, we know it, and our hearts condemn us. Yea, and when our own hearts condemn us, there is, there must be a wrong, and God is greater than our hearts, and, of course, he, too, will condemn us, and oh, the result! Do not forget, then, that the judgment is to begin at the house of God,—among those who profess to follow Jesus Christ, and to be the light of the world, 1 Pet 4: 17, but if our light be darkness, how great is that darkness? Yea, how great is our blindness! Oh, how great and fearful will be our fall and our ruin!

The people who have a free Gospel should give more for the sinner,—the ragged, the sick and the hungry,—than all other people, because they have more to give and they have more to enjoy, and, besides all, they are promised more enjoyment, both in this world and also in the world to come, the life below and the one in heaven. 1 Tim. 4: 8. Nor is this all. It is to make other tongues give praise to God, 2 Cor. 9: 11, 12, and thus gladden hearts on earth and make praise in heaven. We thus become workers together with Christ and with God, for the building up of that kingdom that knows no end. 2 Cor. 6: 1. And when even a stranger is to be rewarded for giving a drink of water to a Lazarus, should not every branch see that it be not without fruit, and plucked off and burned up? Yea, let every saint strive to give to the work and to bear much for him who gave his life for his enemies!

This is to widen the work, to hasten his reign and brighten our crown. May God help!

HOW MUCH OWEST THOU?

BY JACOB ETTER.

It is all right and proper to know what our indebtedness is, even though we do not have to pay it immediately. The Word says, How much owest thou?

There are people who have a great deal of this world's goods. They may say they have made it by economy, and that they do not owe any man anything. Perhaps they have never asked themselves how much they owe. But the words will come to each one, How much owest thou?

A man may own a quarter, a half, or a whole section. To work this amount of land he may conclude he has not help enough. He may decide to hire a girl and pay her two dollars a week, which makes one hundred dollars; and hire two men at twenty dollars a month each, which makes four hundred, and the other hundred added makes five hundred dollars. Some one may ask him, "Does it pay to run a farm in that way?" He will say, "Yes, I received a good recompense for my investment in labor. I pay that just as readily as a[illegible] money I ever owed."

If he is a renter, some one may ask him, "What rent do you pay?" He may say, "one-third," or "two-fifths," as the case may be. If the owner of the land gets this amount of rent, how much is due to the Lord? The question may be asked, "Who owns this farm?" God owns it, for he has not given it to any one. All are but his stewards. How much rent does he receive? How much do we pay the Lord?

If we paid our just dues, there would be plenty of money to support the missionary cause. People would not be calling in vain for preaching. The church would be able to send her missionaries out [illegible]. Go, therefore, and teach all nations. How much owest thou the Lord?

If the time and money, spent uselessly, were paid to the Lord, the church would have greater power to the converting of mankind. Many who are deprived of hearing the Gospel would be deprived no longer. They cannot believe in him of whom they have not heard. They can not hear without a preacher and the preachers can not go unless they are sent. "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof."

"Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in my house." Mal. 3: 8–10.

Each one ought to know, and if he does not know, he ought to find out, how much he owes the Lord. And when he once finds out how much his indebtedness is, he ought to pay it all. Let every one of us ask himself in earnest, How much do I owe the Lord? How much effort have I made for him in return for what he has done for me?

THE CHILDREN'S MISSION.

BY MARY M. GIBSON.

Dear Children:—

As our list is not increasing as it seems to me it ought to increase, I feel like suggesting a plan by which we might have a better system in giving our pennies for our blessed Master's cause. Many of your parents have reaped a bountiful harvest and will be willing to help us advance our work. Many of us will reach another birthday,—yes, many more birthdays. Now, little children, let us form a resolution that, on every birthday, we will give as many pennies as we are years old. Many, no doubt, could give their nickels or dimes. How nice it would be for many of us to form this habit and continue it while we live. If we would live to reach forty, after forming this plan at six, if I mistake not, it would amount to eight dollars for Jesus. That would be good, surely. If all would adopt this plan, we would do a great work for Jesus. When we adopt the plan of giving for Jesus while young, as we grow older, we will love the work more and more, and be willing to give a great deal more than the small amount herein named. You would realize that it is far more blessed to give than to receive.

God gives us many blessings so that we need not withhold our gifts for the gaining of the souls of our fellow-men to Jesus. Remember, too, that in giving we are working for our own soul's welfare in eternity, equally as well; for God truly remembers us in our liberal deeds, and when we give those pennies in Jesus' name, his Word says we shall in no wise lose our reward. He is making a record of all the good we do, and every sacrifice we make for the sake of his cause. Do you know that Jesus loves us all the more, because we work to get souls to love and serve him? While life is in us, Jesus gently knocks at our hearts, to get us to love him above all else. Many of us realize the first gentle knockings of Jesus while quite young, but we must cultivate his spirit more and more by thinking all the time of what he did for us. Remember, there will also be last knocks, and if we have lived in his service and love, it will then be pleasant to die, but if we defer the accepting of Jesus from time to time, our heart grows hard and careless. Then we should be afraid that Jesus has gone to return no more.

You, at the door of whose heart Jesus is knocking, should open up to him, and let the King of Glory in before the evil days come. Your parents would rejoice and have happy hearts, instead of an aching void that can never be filled. Many parents sorrow in behalf of their children because they have never yet known Jesus in the forgiveness of their sins. Oh, how they mourn, and weep, and pray that God may yet pardon their folly!

Dear children, we love dearly to receive your pennies for Jesus' sake, but, ah, far more we rejoice to hear of the conversion of your dear souls to the service of our Master! We well know you have gained more than the world would be worth to you. You must love him better than self, so he will help you in every sorrow and trial you meet in this life. If we love Jesus dearly, we will realize quickly what is not his pleasure. If we do stray, we should be quick and free to acknowledge and confess that we are the ones that sinned. Let us smite upon our breast and say within our soul, "God be merciful to me a sinner." Then we feel as little innocent children again, and can go on our way rejoicing.

I am glad to tell you that some in our Sunday-schools have adopted the plan of giving a penny every Sunday (besides the tenth of all they receive). Now, if they would add the birthday pen-ies to that, they would increase their amount to almost double during the year.

I hope and pray that many more may join in with us, and help to increase the work of our dear Jesus. We may be able then to reach the true spirit of giving in the name of God's dear Son, Jesus!

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THOUGHTS FOR THE CHRISTIAN.

BY MARVIN M. SHERRICK.

THE three essential elements of the Christian are, "head-knowledge," "heart-knowledge," and "right living." The first is the understanding of God's plan of salvation, and is received through faith. The second is the offspring of the operation of faith, and is made perfect by obedience. The third is the natural outgrowth of the renewed mind and regenerated man. Is there really anything like a poor Christian in the world? When a professor becomes spiritually lean and poor, is he yet a Christian? This latter term means, being "Christ-like." The word itself implies all that possibly can be implied. To prefix qualifying terms destroys the primary and self-evident meaning of the word. Do I truthfully deserve that appellation? Am I all that Christ wishes me to be?

The Gospel of Christ was preached to the Christians in the days of the apostles. The Christian does not change so much that a new Gospel must be preached every succeeding generation.

Pride, if of the right kind, is positively necessary in the Christian race. There are two kinds of pride, viz., false and true. False pride makes a man believe he is something when he is nothing. True pride makes a man believe he is nothing when he really is something. True pride causes a man to "glory in the cross of Christ," thus crucifying self.

Whatever is denominated religion is to-day accepted by the world. No inquiry is made by the popular professor as to the origin of such religion or its principles. So far as he is able to judge, the principles may be living or dead, the origin may be from men or God. The most objectionable feature of this tendency is, that all is accepted as Christianity,—no distinction being made between the two terms. Christianity is always religion, but religion is not always Christianity. A religion, to-day outside of the Bible, will always remain outside, not of the Bible only, but heaven.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

BY JACOB KEISER.

WE read in Divine Truth that there was a certain man who had two sons. The younger, when he had grown to manhood, became dissatisfied with the association of father, mother and friends, and asked his father for the share of goods that would fall to him, that he might go out into the world and do for himself. His father granted his request and gave him his portion. The son left home, no doubt thinking he was very rich, and not knowing the value of his riches, went into a far country. There he wasted his goods in riotous living, and then he was left in poverty. No friends were there to administer to his wants and he found himself in a starving condition. He went and joined himself to a citizen of that country to feed swine, and he would have eaten of the husks which the swine did eat, but no man gave him. How many prodigals are there to-day that are feeding on the husks of sin,—that are staying away from Father's house, and are in a starving condition,—going on regardless of their poverty that is degrading in its nature and not fitting them for any permanent usefulness in this world nor in the world to come, but is leading them farther and farther away from Father's house?

We learn that this boy saw his lost and undone condition, and when he remembered that at his Father's house there was bread enough and to spare, he resolved at once to return. Although overcome with shame for the sin he had committed, he confessed his sin and begged to be received only as one of the hired servants, but the father was made to rejoice and ordered the fatted calf to be killed and the best robe to be put on him, shoes on his feet and a ring on his hand, and there was rejoicing in that house. So we believe there will be rejoicing in heaven when sinners repent. Although they be ragged and dirty, and there is misery written on their every feature, yet will our Heavenly Father hear them, if they call on him in faith believing.

When the father saw his son afar off, he ran and fell on his neck and kissed him, so when we are far away from the Father's house, he calls us and if we heed that precious call, he has promised to come in and sup with us and we with him.

Remember, dear, unconverted friend, if you read these lines, that God's people are praying for you! The church is inviting you to come. Angels are interested in your welfare and our Savior is pleading with the Father to spare you a little longer. The Father is standing with outstretched arms, ready to receive you. No one is so steeped in sin but what he can return. Then, why not say as the prodigal, "I will arise and go to my Father's house, and he will welcome me back with joy"? He will forever free you from the bondage of Satan and place your feet on the solid Rock, Christ Jesus!

As we peruse the columns of the MESSENGER we are made to rejoice that so many prodigals are returning home to the Father's house, all over our beloved Brotherhood! What rejoicing there must be in heaven when sinners thus come flocking home! While we thus rejoice, we are made to weep that there are so many that will reject offered mercy and wait for a more convenient season. The Psalmist said, "To-day, if you hear his voice, harden not your hearts." That convenient season may never come. Do not trifle with your best Friend! Soon these golden opportunities will be forever past and you will have to take up the doleful lamentation, "The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved." With shame you will be cast out from the joyous assembly into the comfortless and lonely gloom of night, outside of Father's house. That would be mortifying indeed. Oh, the horror that must seize the soul when it is driven from the presence of God in anger, and shut out from the peaceful kingdom!

The prophet says, "We all, like sheep, have gone astray! This was the case with the prodigal. Dissatisfied with associations at home, he went from under the protecting care of father. How many young people we see in this day and age of the world like the prodigal! They leave home and friends, expecting to find protection out in the world, but after a while their hopes become blasted and they meet with disappointments on every hand until they are reduced to misery and want, and in this condition they remember that they have a father, mother, and kind friends at home. They return and plead for that father to receive them into his home again. Then there is rejoicing in that family because the wanderer has returned.

When we go out from our earthly father's house to perform our different vocations in life, let us ask our Heavenly Father to go with and protect us from the evils of this world. But to say and do nothing, would call down his displeasure upon us. Then, if we would make a success of life, and must make the world better by our having lived in it. Go where we will, if we are faithful, the world will respect us, and when the Angel Gabriel will blow the last, long, loud trumpet, to call the world to judgment, we will not be ashamed to have the page of our lives unfolded before the vast throng that will be gathered there, but can rejoice with the holy angels and sing the song of redeeming love, while the ceaseless ages of eternity roll their onward rounds!

Toward Sunset. -No. 3.

IF the people of Colorado are not enterprising, they are nothing. The greatest achievement by this energetic people, and the one that challenges the admiration of every traveler who enters the State, is the construction of a road to the summit of Pike's Peak, 14,147 feet above the level of the sea. Thousands of people are carried over these courses into the clouds, above village, plain, and mountain. The views afforded by the various routes have been pronounced superior both in magnitude and magnificence to those from the summit of the Peak. The balance of the world seems to fade from memory for a time,—so it seemed to eighteen of us who began the ascent of the mountain side.

July 11 at 7 A. M. we started and compassed the twelve miles in six hours. We passed through wild and romantic scenery. From high mountain tops we gazed down on other hill-tops. At our feet were tall cliffs, overhanging, yawning chasms. Looking over the valleys and plains stretching far to the east, we see Manitou, Colorado City, Colorado Springs, Denver, seventy-five miles to the north, and Pueblo fifty miles to the south. Looking south-west, the observer, if he is fortunate enough to be at Grand View when a train crosses Marshall Pass, may see a remarkable sight; for, on the Pass, at an altitude of 10,852 feet and ninety miles away, may be seen the smoke of the locomotive of a railroad train, climbing the mountain. We pass snow at and above timber line, 12,000 feet. Evergreens have been burnt out and are replaced by aspen. The signal station on the summit is surrounded by rock.

Descending the mountain, we pass through the gate-way to the "Garden of the Gods," a very pleasant place.

On the 18th I arrived at Granada, where I spent a few days with my daughters. While there, Butte Creek, on the bank of which they reside, was visited by an overflow, and we awoke one morning to find ourselves inhabiting an island. Their garden was greatly benefited by the irrigation.

On the 22nd I bade adieu to my daughters and left for Kansas City,—my little grandson accompanying me. Arriving at Kansas City on the 23rd, I boarded the train and, after a pleasant ride of two hours, arrived at Polo. It was raining. Rainfall is a frequent occurrence here, rendered noticeable in this instance by contrast to the dry atmosphere I had been inhaling.

Echoes From the Highway.

AFTER the harvest meeting at the Bear Creek church, west of Dayton, wife and I went to Preble County. At Brookville we were met at the depot by Bro. Samuel Miller's son, who took us to his father's home where we found Bro. Samuel quite indisposed,—so much so that he could not attend the harvest meeting next day at Sugar Hill meeting-house, near West Alexander. On Sunday we attended two appointments at Beech Grove, not far from Eaton.

On Monday evening we had another meeting at Sugar Hill. These meetings were held in the bounds of the Upper Twin district. There is another meeting-house in the same district, called the Wheatville district, near where Bro. Crosswait lives. One of their ministers,—Bro. Jacob Garver, is the elder in charge. He lives in an adjoining district. Upper Twin has passed through some fiery trials, but the prospects are for brighter days. A greater number of ministers in the district is one of the needs. Eld. Landon West was in attendance at the Sugar Hill meeting. He lives in the Lower Twin district. He also has charge of several other churches. We were sorry to find him in rather poor health. Over work seemed to be telling on him.

We returned on Monday night to Bro. Samuel Miller's whom we found improved in health. Through their kindness we were taken to Brookville, and arrived at Dayton in the evening. Next day we attended a church council at the Lower Stillwater church house. In addition to other business transacted, a choice for a minister was held, which resulted in the election of Bro. Levi Bookwalter, who, we trust, will make an efficient laborer in the great work of our Master!

I filled an appointment the same evening at the old church house in Dayton. Next day, while on business in Cincinnati, I met, accidentally, Bro. Crosswait, and another brother, from Upper Twin church, who were on their way to Adams County, Ohio, to follow up a mission work commenced there a year or two ago. From them we learned that Bro. West was much better a day or two before he had sought aid for the restoration of bodily health in the manner recommended by James. The Lord is not slack in his promises.

From Dayton, Ohio we went to Denver, Indiana, and from there to Mexico, same locality. Our meetings at both places were well attended. We made many new acquaintances such as we shall never forget. This is one of the oldest strongholds of the Brethren in the West. The members seem to be earnest and zealous for the maintenance of the doctrine of the Brethren in its ancient purity, and we hope they will guard against anything that might cause trouble amongst them as they have passed through some fiery trials, and at the present time are going through a siege of persecution from persons who ought to be engaged in a better business. But then we can not look for much else from hirelings. Christ's sheep know his voice and follow him; a hireling they will not follow. Men of ungodly lusts will stoop to ungodly means to make merchandise of the Gospel. They shall have their reward.

It is at Mexico, where Bro. Levi Miller is doing a noble work in building a home for the helpless poor of the church, and orphan children in the Middle District of Indiana. By his own free-will offering he will donate it to the District. It is a fine, well-arranged building, well worth five thousand dollars. We trust there are many in the District that will want a hand in that noble work, and will now go on and see that the home is well furnished and endowed with a permanent fund. Another week or so and the building will be completed. It is to be heated with hot air from a furnace in the basement.

We have no way of knowing to what extent God will reward such generous deeds, other than we know it will be great to the fullest extent. Eye hath not seen nor has it entered into the heart of man what God has in reserve for such of his saints. This is penned from Chicago, which city we expect to leave August 21, for Longmont, Colo., where we expect to tarry until the last days of September. J. S. FLORY.

A Few Thoughts on Church Matters.

Dear Editors:—

I WISH to assure you of the high esteem in which your paper is held by its wide circle of readers. The character of the MESSENGER is alluded to in words of praise wherever I go. I not only allude to the interesting matter, as pertains to the variety of its subjects, but more especially to the spirit of its matter; for it is well said, "They that have not the spirit of Christ are none of his." It is a fact that a proper spirit, attending what we say and write, will add great weight and force to our Christian character.

It is to be lamented that our brethren did not see, in years gone by, the necessity of throwing a proper guard around our publications,—our literature! We now have an advisory committee to aid the editors in guarding the columns of the MESSENGER. We have a committee through whose hands all matter must pass before it can appear through the Tract Work. This is as it should be.

It will be remembered that at different Annual Meetings of recent years there has been literature circulated that reflected seriously on the church. At the Annual Meeting, at Mexico, Pennsylvania, a Pittsburg paper was circulated on the ground, with a lengthy article, making statements that seriously reflected on the church. The spirit of the article was totally foreign to the spirit of Christ. At the Annual Meeting, at Dayton, Ohio, a similar effort was made.

At our recent Annual Meeting, at Harrisonburg, Virginia, the same thing was done in the shape of an anonymous tract. I confess that I was not a little surprised to see how quickly this tract found its way into the columns of the periodicals of those who have gone from us, including the Vindicator. I wonder if the result would not have been much better, if they would have inserted some good things about the church! Their comment is that it was written by some good German Baptists. I have only to say that good German Baptists do not write such anonymous articles as that. We have had anonymous tracts, such as "Seven Thunders," circulated before. As to the author, the spirit of the article, and the "style of writing" safely locates the writer. I urge that we continue to steadily maintain in our speaking and writing that "meek and quiet spirit, which, in the sight of God, is of great price."

Let our efforts be to edify and build up. I presume there might have been a long, dark list of unhappy events penned about the church in the apostles' day. I. J. ROSENBERGER.

Back to the Old Home.

ON the morning of June 5 our little son Henry and I boarded the train at Belleville, Kans., en route for the eastern part of Tennessee, to visit friends and relatives, after an absence of twenty-three years.

Arriving at Johnson City on the evening of the 7th, and, after visiting among my husband's relatives in Carter County until the 17th, we were conveyed to the neighborhood of Carter depot. Here was my old home. I found many changes, but there still stands the old stone house and the mill where I spent so many happy hours in my childhood days.

While standing upon the old porch, I thought of the loved ones that once lived there. I remembered the dear old mother who worked and toiled so hard for a large family, and whose life was such a good example for all those around her, especially the young! She always had a kind word for them! In my imaginations I could hear her sweet voice singing, as in days of yore, when I was a young and thoughtless girl. Well do I remember that dear old father, who attended to the mill, grinding day after day, and whose voice could be heard, at times, singing that good old hymn, "When I can read my title clear,"—the only hymn I ever heard him try to sing. I thought of others of the family, who are scattered,—some one place and some another.

My mind was carried back to the war,—the cruel war that broke up so many happy homes in the South! Near there I visited sister Magdalene Sherfy, an old mother in Israel, whom I learned to love in my younger days. I met many of my old associates whose faces were familiar to me, but many were not there, and I felt sad to think that I could see their faces no more.

I had the pleasure of meeting cousin Nora Moomaw, widow of Bro. J. C. Moomaw, of Virginia, who was also visiting her relatives in Tennessee.

On the first Sunday in July I met with the brethren and sisters at the Knob Creek church for worship. There were only six ministers present. Bro. George C. Bowman did the preaching in the forenoon, and Bro. Wm. Sherfy in the afternoon. Here is where I formerly held my membership. I felt glad to be at the old, familiar meeting-house again. I recognized many faces, but noticed quite a change in the people. Those young associates of mine that are left are growing old. Many of the saints have passed away, and others are taking their place.

On the next Sunday we met there again, on a solemn occasion. One of our dear aunts was consigned to the tomb. Brethren George C. Bowman and Samuel Sherfy conducted the funeral services. One of the brethren, in his discourse, said that the life she had lived was a better funeral sermon than they could preach. Thus her good works follow her.

The Knob Creek church has a large membership, with three elders and a number of other ministers. It is pleasant to be among those good people.

From here I was conveyed to the home of Eld. F. W. Dove, in whose pleasant family I spent several days. Here also is a large church, but we failed to reach their place of worship on their meeting days, which we regretted very much.

July 20 Bro. Dove, wife and son, went with me to the Pleasant Valley meeting-house, to their regular monthly meetings, which are on the third Saturday and Sunday of each month. I think there were seven ministers present and, if I mistake not, all are elders. Here we had some good meetings. I thought of the hungry souls out West who are longing for the Bread of Life, but who have no one to deal it out to them.

In 1862, I, with eight others, was received into the church, at this place, by baptism. Here I met old uncle Benjamin Bashor, my father's brother, who is in his ninety-second year, but appeared to be in very good health for a man of his age. I went from here to the home of Eld. J. B. Pence, of the Limestone church, where I spent a pleasant week. Bro. J. B. Pence has the oversight of this church here. The churches here, in this part of Tennessee, all seem to be in a flourishing condition. I extend my sincere thanks to all the brethren, sisters and friends for their loving-kindness shown toward me while sojourning with them. I arrived home Aug. 4. My visit to the old home was a pleasant one. It awakened thoughts of my early days, and will not soon be forgotten. I thank the good Lord for his goodness, mercy and watchful care over me and mine while I was absent! LOUISA J. WILLIAMS.

Belleville, Kans.

From Bareville, Pa.

ON Saturday afternoon, Aug. 3, we held our harvest meeting at Bareville, and a very good meeting we had. It so happened that Bro. P. S Myers was visiting among us just at this time, and, of course, was called upon to address us in the English language, while Bro. Israel Grabill, of White Oak, preached in the German language. The text, selected by Bro. Grabill, and used by both speakers, is found in Luke 16: 9. The idea presented by Bro. Grabill was, that by "the unrighteous mammon" is meant the riches of this world, whether it be money, lands, stock, grain, or anything of that sort, and that, when we have enough and to spare, it is our duty to use it in doing good to our fellow-men, and thus "make to ourselves friends, who shall receive us into everlasting habitations."

Bro. Myers followed in his earnest, whole-souled manner, by pointing out more directly the avenues open to us through which much good can be done. He began by saying that the religion of Jesus Christ should reach the domestic life, or family circle. There are many, especially in our cities and towns, who can not otherwise be reached than by visiting their homes. Why not do this when the Scripture teaches us that the apostles went from house to house preaching the Gospel? Brethren, chosen for such work, must be supported, so that establishing of ministerial posts, supported by the church, is necessary to accomplish this great work.

Another means of winning to ourselves friends, is the spreading of religious literature throughout the land in the form of tracts, books, and church papers.

Bro Myers also earnestly urged upon us our duty in educating the rising generations through Sunday-school work, and thus building up the church. The mothers and fathers in Christ should not do all the work, and imagine that when they are gone the church will go to ruin. No, on the contrary, they should be willing to roll the burdens from their own shoulders on the younger brethren and sisters,—feeling confident that there are still those among us who are able to bear the banner royally.

We enjoyed the society of Bro. Myers and his wife so much that, when the time for their departure came to hand, it was with reluctance that we bade them good-bye. LIZZIE MYERS.

From Centre View, Mo.

BY request of anxious hearts I send you the following lines. The report came to me while I was with the Father's children in the Smith Fork congregation, Clinton Co., Mo., that our daughter was sick with a severe attack of bilious fever, and a few days later, that my wife was also sick. I am happy to find the daughter nearly well, and my wife improving in her health. I was away from home just one month, had the pleasure of being with the brethren, sisters and friends in the Wolf River congregation, Brown Co., Kans., several days, and tried to tell them the Way of Life, and, as many as received the Word, were baptized.

This congregation is under the care of elder H. H. Sawyer. The members have built an excellent meeting-house, and I hope they may be successful in building up the Lord's cause at this place. The soil is as good as it is necessary to have it for growing corn and other crops, and the Lord has blessed the labors of the farmer greatly. The Lord is ready to bless the church, too, if her work is directed aright. There are a goodly number of my native State and County people living in this County.

July 21, Bro. Sawyer preached the funeral of sister Sallie Cummings,—a first cousin of mine, She will be remembered by a great many persons in Monroe County, W. Va.

From the above-named congregation, I came to Clinton County, Mo., and began the work in the Walnut Grove church. I continued here for several days. Then came the love-feast, which, I think, was a fulfillment of the word to those who participated in the services. The conduct of the large assembly of witnesses was certainly praiseworthy, as far as the writer could see. I often think, that if we could dismiss all other considerations at such meetings, or on any other occasion, we would get a great deal more benefit and enjoyment out of the services. But when we fail to discern the body of Christ, we are sure to grow weak and sickly, and, if not aroused soon, will fall asleep.

Now a few words to the many who have written me about preaching. I am forced to refuse a good many, and now I will say that my arrangements are to go to Weeping Water congregation Nebr., during the latter part of September, and will remain in that and surrounding congregations during the month of October. I may, possibly, be able to fill some of the calls in Iowa in November. For the winter I may go to Tennessee or some place where I can find a little milder climate than where I have been for the past few winters I make this statement so that you will not ask me to preach in places where I can not come now. The future may present an opportunity. In writing to me, please state on what railroad you live, and it will save a good deal of perplexity to look up the different routes, and how to reach you. I expect to devote my entire time to the Master's work as long as I am able. I am denied the privilege of doing any manual labor, because of bodily affliction. A. HUTCHISON.

Excursion to Forest Park, Kans.

I SEE by the GOSPEL MESSENGER that the Wade Branch church, Kans., will hold her love feast at Forest Park, Ottawa, Kans., Sept. 13th. Now, there is a harvest excursion that will leave all points in the East, as far east as Ohio, Sept. 10. All Brethren who wish to attend this feast, can purchase tickets via Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe railroad, to any point in Kansas, and stop off at Ottawa until after the love-feast.

Wayside Jottings.

THE Landessville church seems to be moving along in peace and union. We have preaching twice each month and, notwithstanding the fact that death has taken from us our shepherd, Eld. J. C. Tinkel, we are kindly remembered by our adjoining elders, which favor we greatly appreciate.

Yesterday, Aug. 18, elders Jacob Crumrine and David S. Caylor, of the Wabash church, were with us and preached unto us a very acceptable sermon. How it makes our hearts rejoice to sit and listen to the familiar voice of Bro. Caylor! How it reminds us of years, long past, when we heard him preach time and again, and his loving warnings were unheeded! Our hearts are filled with joy unspeakable when we remember the day, March 6, 1870, when he led us into the baptismal waters. Though we forsook father and mother, the ties of Christian fellowship far exceed the ties of consanguinity.

I must not omit to say that we, as a church, have also been favored with a few telling sermons by our much esteemed and beloved young brother, Joseph Spitzer, but he is going to leave us for a while again. May the Lord bless him in his labors for the church wherever he may go, and grant that he may return to us in the near future!

Encouraging Words.

Dear Brethren:—

I SEND you this letter for publication if it is your pleasure to give it a place in the MESSENGER for the encouragement of missionary workers.

B. F. MOOMAW.

PLEASANT GROVE, VA, AUG. 8, 1889.

My Dear Brother:—

To-day my thoughts go back to one year ago, when you and Bro. Daniel were here and organized our little church of eight members I shall never forget that occasion, but will always hold in fond remembrance your earnest work and diligent endeavor to set us on the true and solid foundation of the apostles and prophets,—Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone. I remember your earnest prayer for the little plant which was rooted and grounded in this part of the vineyard, and I have frequently seen unmistakable answers to those prayers. Praise the Lord!

Oh, dear brother, the hope of the Gospel brings more solid joy than all else besides! How it gladdens our hearts to find that our path is growing brighter and our faith and hope stronger! Yes, a hope which maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts."

I am sure that you will rejoice with us to learn that the little flock now numbers nearly fifty. Two more were baptized last Sunday and seem to be happy to find the rest which Jesus gives to those who come to him in his appointed way! Bro. Love spoke well in the morning, and seemed to enjoy perfect liberty. We had a good church and prayer-meeting on Saturday evening and an excellent spirit was manifested in all that was said and done. Our house is generally full every Saturday evening at prayer-meeting, and the Sunday-school interest is good also. Bro. Love told us of his visit to your house and we were all glad to hear from you. I trust that the good Lord will abundantly bless you and put it into your heart to visit us again before long. Pray for us, dear brother, and may the God and Father of our Lord Jesus give us all grace to come off conquerors and more than conquerors through him that loved us and gave himself for us, is my prayer! Amen. My family join me in Christian love. Write to us when it is convenient. I. T. OLIVER.

From Rockingham, Ray County, Mo.

BRO. LEMUEL HILLERY was with us and preached in this congregation about one week. On Saturday, Aug. 10, was our council for the report of the annual visit. Bro. Hillery was with us. In the morning, before council opened, eight precious souls were baptized to walk, we hope, in Christ. There were more than one hundred members present. The church is still in peace and union. The membership loves the church and her principles. Aug. 24, we expect Bro. J. G. Royer to commence meeting in the same house where the Miller and Sommer Debate was held, and to continue at least one week.

The "Miller and Sommer Debate" is selling well here and must have its effect in the near future. If we all live right, God will bless us.

S. B. SHIRKEY.

Corrections.

In my article in GOSPEL MESSENGER, page 629, of 1888, the phrase, "I am sorry to publish the inference that there are some who do not, but the church and the world know they do not, and the sheep are starved and scattered," is understood by some to apply to the elders in Moscow church, whereas I intended it to be general, as I did not know or remember, if I ever did know, that there was any elder living there but Bro. I. Hershey (and he asked for assistance) who would carry out the order of the church.

Again, some are under the impression that I was sent to the Pan Handle, Tex., in Bro. Wise's place, to take charge of the mission there, while the fact is, I was only requested to go down and help Bro. W. Wyland to do some church work in Lipscomb County, and in the "Strip," preparatory to his removal to Hunt County, Texas. Part of the work resulted in electing Bro. —— Fauger to the office of deacon,—the Lipscomb church having had only two official members, brethren Brubaker and Cripe, both in the second degree of the ministry. In the Neutral Strip Bro. Elihu Moore was ordained as elder, to take the charge of that church; he has Bro. M. Ennis in the second degree to assist him in the ministry.

The Oklahoma excitement has greatly reduced the number in their congregations, and while the enthusiasm which existed one year ago, both in church and State, has somewhat abated, the zeal of the little churches there is as strong as ever. Though everything is comparatively dull at present, especially in Texas, they are hopeful that a reaction will take place after the excitement is over, which will greatly add to the interest of the spiritual work of the church by and by.

A sister over three score years was baptized in the Cimarron River. She formerly lived in Brooklyn, New York, and had Beecher and Talmage for her spiritual instructors for years, but never heard the whole, unadulterated Truth till the unlearned Nazarenes or Bethlehemites sounded the trumpet. PERSONS, in ordering books not published by us, should be careful to give the full title, the name of the author, and by whom published. If all would do this, delay in receiving them would often be avoided, as it sometimes happens that books bearing the same title are edited by different persons. When we have the title, the author, and the publisher, there can be no mistake made.

THE Sunday-school work for the summer, as far as we have learned, seems to have been successful, not only in keeping the membership at work, and teaching the Scriptures to the children, but a number of conversions have been reported, as fruitage of the work. Some of the seeds thus sown may require a long waiting for a return, but have patience. In the Lord's own good time there will be a coming forth and a good crop. "Many days hence" may be the experience of most of the teaching. But the Lord careth for the good seed, and he will not suffer it to go to loss.

QUERIES AND ANSWERS.

1. Explain Matt. 16: 18: "And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Question.—What does the pronoun "it" refer to?

ANSWER.—The church. If the querist had been in doubt as to what the word "rock" referred, we would have thought it necessary to give a more extended explanation. But as to the answer for the above query, we think there can be no question.

2. Where was the church during the Dark Ages, and by whom was it restored?

To these queries, no definite answer can be given. From the apostolic church the decline was gradual. The departure was not made all at once or in gigantic strides. It was by here a little and there a little. One departure followed another, so that, for several hundred years, the digressions were so small that they largely escaped the notice of the historians. Another reason for them not being noticed, was, the changes made were such as were generally accepted by the people and were in harmony with the popular ideas of religion, hence those, who dared to contend for the Truth, made themselves so unpopular that they were not noticed in history except as disturbers and martyrs. Persecutions began, in their darkest forms, when the power and the influence of the true church were overshadowed by the Romans or Roman Catholic church. As this power asserted itself, the true church, by persecution, was driven into obscurity—to the mountainous countries and into caves and dens. These years were called the Dark Ages, because, for the time being, the power and influence of the Gospel were hid and the world received not its light.

To the Bohemian and Waldensian Brethren is generally acceded the honor of holding the "Oracles" in profession and practice, and, as a result, they were the subjects of most bitter persecution. But in what form and under what special name the true church existed, can not be told. The histories of those years are as blind as were their authors. This we know, however, that the true church did exist because of the "promise," and we know that God can not lie.

By whom restored? Practically speaking, there was no restoration, as the church was never lost. For a time it seemed to be hidden, but it always existed. There was no time in the history of the world when God did not have a people, and so it was during what is called the Dark Ages. The church was not lost, but, through persecution, was hidden from the notice of the world. Its coming forth can be attributed to no one man, name or sect. People get mystified on this subject, because they are seeking after apostolical succession through lineal ancestry, forgetting that the Gospel sun moves while the people remain still. When a people or nation forsakes God, his light, —candlestick, — is removed and they are left in darkness, while others receive the light, and become God's people—church—not through a blood lineage, but through the light of the Gospel. This change is not necessarily instantaneous, but gradual. The people of the earth have their time of light and darkness, but not all at the same time, neither is the length of time the same. Yet the sun never ceases to shine, and there is no time when all the people are either in light or darkness at the same time. So it is with Christianity. Wherever the Gospel light shines, there is the church.

The Reformation of the sixteenth century is the accepted time of the church coming out of the darkness of the past ages, but it was only the dawning of the Gospel light that was to increase and shine forth in its full glory. Luther, Calvin, Knox, Melanchthon, Zwingli, Menno, Fox, Mack, and others that might be named, were all recipients of this light in different degrees of its brightness, but did not have it all. They used the light as it came to them. And if we have been doing the same thing to-day, we ought to be enjoying its meridian splendor. If we are the church of Christ to-day, it is because we hold and obey the truth, and not because of any lineal blood succession. God places his seal of churchship on the people that accept and obey the Gospel as given through his Son, independent of name or place. He is the light, and those who walk in that light are his people and church.

3. "To deliver such a one unto Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus."—1 Cor. 5: 5.

This has reference to fornicators that were suffered to remain as members of the Corinthian church, and seems to be somewhat indefinite as to the true meaning and intention. There are two views given by commentators. The first one is, that all who are outside of the covenant of grace are in the world, and therefore subjects of Satan's kingdom. And those who are expelled for crime, such as is named, are delivered unto Satan. This being done in a public way, makes the man's sin appear to him in all its sinfulness and shame, and in this way his spirit is broken down,—he is humbled, and in this condition brought to repentance, which alone can be the condition of restoration and salvation.

The other and severer view is, that, in his expulsion, he is in a special way given into the hands of Satan, who has power to bring upon him bodily affliction and suffering. This he is made to feel as a penalty for the crime committed, and through the enduring of this penalty he is brought to repentance, which, in the end, will save the spirit.

We accept the former view as being the more reasonable, and in harmony with church discipline, although sin, especially of this order, often is followed with physical sufferings. The sin of fornication and its attendants, is becoming one of the leading sins of the age, and should not be winked at by the church.

4. "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins."—Heb. 10: 26. Does the apostle mean after conversion?

The apostle is here speaking to his Hebrew brethren, including himself; therefore has reference to those who have been converted. In looking at this Scripture we must discriminate between the unregenerate sinner and the one who sins after being regenerated. For the unregenerated man there is no sin for which there is no sacrifice. The sacrifice that Christ made reaches every phase of sin to that of blood. He died to save to the uttermost, but it must be remembered that he died only once. This one death gives to every man the possibility of one birth. If, after we have been born again, through the merit of this death, we sin again to death, then we are placed beyond the possibility of salvation, because there is no more sacrifice,—there has been no provision made for another birth, as Christ died only once and made only one sacrifice. Hence the important question, "Is this the sin that is unto death?" The most generally accepted opinion is, that it is the sin of apostasy,—denying the faith and crucifying afresh the Lord of life and glory, —when men willfully and determinedly sin against better light and knowledge. This is a terrible condition for those who have once tasted of the good word of the Lord, and have been delivered from the power of sin. And because of this the warning is given. Let it be a warning to all, not only to avoid great sins, but small ones as well, as little sins lead to larger ones, which may lead to the sin for which there is no sacrifice.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

I BRING MY SOUL TO THEE.

I bring my soul to thee, dear Father,
All stained with pollution and sin,
And hudrened with vices and follies,
Temptations that Satan may win.
Unless thou in mercy wilt pardon,
And cleanse in the blood of thy Son,
Till spotless and pure in redemption,
I shall be forever undone.

I bring my soul to thee, dear Father,
Who rulest in heaven and earth;
To keep for thy glory in heaven—
For the joy of the heavenly birth.
I give it in faith in thy keeping,
O entwine it with eternal bands:
That whether waking or sleeping,
It shall be kept safe in thy hands.

SPIRITUAL BONDAGE.—John 8:36.

BY WM. M. LYON.

Number Two.

We desire to notice, first, that species of spiritual bondage which is confined to the preachers, and which we shall call

MINISTERIAL SLAVERY.

We need not look very far till we find this prevailing to an alarming extent. No denomination is exempt from it, though it may prevail to a greater degree in some than others. It consists in this: Those would-be-preachers who are not free to preach the plain, simple doctrine of the cross, because they are the property of another; they are not their own, they are simply "hirelings," hence they are compelled to preach to please their employers. They are "tongue-tied." The purse-string of the parishioner is used to tie the tongue of the hired preacher.

Doubtless, many of these slaves would like to be free, but rather than labor with their own hands (1 Cor. 4: 12), and give up their big salary, they choose to drag along the heavy chains of religious thralldom. They may sigh and pray for their freedom, but, alas! their sighs and prayers are doomed to go unheeded and unanswered. There is but one road that leads to the city of Liberty, and they are not willing and humble enough to walk upon that, hence they must rankle and clankle on in their chains. Christ is able to make them free, if they were only willing to receive him fully and Scripturally, and then suffer with him. Their slavish chains are forged and made by their own hands. O, what slavery is this! Yet to-day there are thousands who are suffering under this galling yoke of bondage!

Now we would not have you understand by this that it requires no money in order to preach the Gospel, but let us be careful that money is not the leading object in the work. Let us not sell our liberty in the Gospel for money. Let us not become slaves for filthy lucre's sake.

But now we will try to come a little nearer home. So far in the history of our people, we do not think that we can find many, if any, who have become slaves on account of "big salaries" paid by the congregation, but we are sorry to say that we fear a great many are in bondage for other reasons that we will now proceed to give.

We have already referred to the wretched state of him who is simply a "hireling," whose mouth is not his own, and we have tried to point out some of the evils connected with this system; now let us try to look at the other side of this question.

I have sometimes thought that while many other denominations seem to have the one extreme, possibly we may have the other. While they pay their preachers large salaries, and then expect them to preach to suit them, and thus take away their liberty, how many of our own preachers are there who go about "tongue-tied," and refuse to preach the necessity of giving for the support and spreading of the Gospel! Why? Simply because they are afraid that brethren A. and B. and sisters C. and D. will get offended if they preach the whole, plain truth just as it is given in God's Word. Thereby they would lose,—what? Part of their salary? No; for they don't get any to lose. But what? Why, a little honor. Now has Christ made that man free? I answer with an emphatic NO; he is still in bondage of the worst kind, and is worse than the hireling, because he encourages the sin of covetousness in the congregation by refusing to preach that God requires his people to support his cause liberally with dollars and cents, and we had better see one spoiled preacher, who has become a slave on account of his salary, go down to torment, than to see a whole congregation swallowed up in the awful gulf of destruction for withholding what belongs to the Lord. God has ever taught his people to give for the support of his cause, and to-day he still requires it, and his ministers are in duty bound to preach that part just as well as any other command, no matter what the people, brethren or sisters, may think.

It often puzzles my mind and seems so very strange that money is so much more apt to spoil and damn a preacher than anybody else, or even the congregation! This fact would lead us to the conclusion that preachers are manufactured from the worst kind of material, or they would not be spoiled so easily!

To-day there are thousands and tens of thousands of blood-bought souls starving and dying for want of the Bread of Life, while the means to supply their spiritual wants are in the hands of those who claim to be Christians, and I am forced to the conclusion that perhaps the greater part of this terrible sin rests upon the ministry, because they are afraid to preach the duty and necessity of giving for the preaching of the Gospel.

Let us not, then, dear brethren, conclude that the desire among ministers for praise, honor and promotion is confined altogether to other denominations. I greatly fear that we can find it much nearer home. I have frequently heard those of our own ministry say that there is just as much Scripture for a supported ministry as there is for anything else taught in the Bible, and yet, some of those very ministers were wearing the muzzle over their mouth, so far as preaching on that subject was concerned. Ask them why they fail to declare this publicly from the pulpit, and they will tell you that they don't like to because they fear they may hurt the feelings of some of the members, and sometimes they seek to justify themselves with this excuse: "I fear some of them may think that I'm preaching for money."

Surely such ministers should pray for more Christian boldness, or perhaps this would be a better prayer for them to use: "Lord, help me that I may not be such a coward,—such a slave —so afraid of my brethren and sisters. Make me a free man!" What if the sincerity of our motives is questioned by our brethren or sisters? Does God tell us to be silent in such cases? God pity all such as are thus trammeled down in abject, spiritual slavery!

"THE heart speaks louder in the ears of the Infinite than the lips."

WALK IN WISDOM.

BY JOHN FORNEY.

"Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man." —Col. 4: 6.

PAUL, as a wise minister of the Gospel, was deeply concerned for the welfare of the church and the salvation of humanity, not only while he had liberty to be with the church, to teach them publicly and from house to house, but his zeal and love for the cause, which he had espoused, did not abate when he was in bonds and in prisons. Above all other things he would care for the prosperity of the church.

This is clearly set forth in his epistles which he wrote to the churches. After he was carried away to Rome, and in prison under Nero, with his fellow-prisoner, Aristarchus, he remembered the church at Colosse, and wrote this epistle in which the text at the heading of this article is found. In this epistle he gives many good and profitable instructions to the believers in Christ Jesus. In the fourth chapter he says, "Masters, give unto your servants that which is just and equal: knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven. Continue in prayer, and watch in the same with thanksgiving; withal praying also for us that GOD would open unto us a door of utterance to speak the mystery of Christ, for which I am also in bonds: that I may make it manifest as I ought to speak."

Paul gives us instruction how we shall behave ourselves toward the outsider, hence we have the language, "Walk in wisdom toward them that are without."

Paul well knew that the future growth and prosperity of the church depended on the light they set before those that are without, and that every member of the church is under the deepest obligation to use all wisdom in all his dealings and conversation with the world, that he may be a light to the world and salt to the earth—that his Christian deportment may have the best of influence over them that are without.

My brother and sister, watch and bridle your tongue well, lest your religion be vain. "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man." Let that holy principle be so fully and completely stamped upon our mind and soul, that the good fruits of the Holy Spirit may be scattered all along the path of our life wherever we go, and in whatever we say and do. Then we shall be living epistles of Christ, known and read of all men.

Dear ministering brethren, let us be good examples to the flock, for our life and conduct will be known and read of all men, not only when we are behind the stand, but our conversation outside the pulpit will be watched, as the standard of our life and conduct.

I must confess that no man can stop my mouth any sooner, when I reason with him on the subject of our holy Christianity, than when he points out a brother or minister and says, "Look how he jests, cracks jokes, and engages in filthy and foolish talk,—such as I am not guilty of and I am not a professor, much less a preacher." If any of our members are guilty of such, let them read Eph. 5: 1-4.

Let him remember the language of Divine Inspiration which says, "Filthy communications corrupt good manners." Let him apply our text, "Walk in wisdom toward them that are without."

A man, some years ago, said to me, "You and some of your brethren preach that the Christian must be separate from the world, and must live a holy life." I said, "We do preach it by the authority of the Bible." His answer was, "That is all right; you do preach it, but your brethren do not all live it out. I know one who was seen playing cards."

At one time I got a letter, which is now before me, from one outside of the church. I give his own words: "Members go to fairs, march in political rallies, and do not dress in the order of the church."

Such doings, as above stated, should not be once named amongst us, as it becometh saints. Let us walk so as to "have a good conscience, that, whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ. For it is better the will of God be so, that ye suffer for well doing than for evil doing." 1 Pet. 3: 16–17.

Jesus said to the apostles when he sent them to preach, "Behold I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." Matt. 10: 16.

It requires a great deal of wisdom, a well-balanced mind, and a great deal of study, to have the mind always ready, that we may know how we may answer every man as we ought to, so that our words may minister grace to the hearer, more especially so when warned not to answer a fool according to his folly, lest thou also be like unto him." In the next verse we are commanded to "answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit." Prov. 24: 4, 5.

The question presents itself, How, then, shall we answer a fool as not to be found like unto him? Surely, we must not give a foolish answer. If any one talk foolish in our presence, or act foolishly in any way, never allow yourself to be carried away by his folly, neither in word or deed, "lest thou also be like unto him." "But answer a fool according to his own folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit."

This can only be done in one way, and that is by always giving a wise answer to any foolish question, or a wise and gentle reproof where there is a foolish act. In that way you can so far exceed a man's folly by your wise answer that he will see his fault, and be ashamed of his foolishness. We see in the example of our Lord Jesus Christ, our Great Teacher, how he always gave wise answers to all foolish and unwise questions of the Scribes and Pharisees which were put to him, such as recorded in Matt. 22: 17, and 22: 29–33. In these passages you see the wise answer the Lord gave them in their folly, and put them to silence. In Matt. 23: 13–22, and many other examples we are taught, not only to silence foolish men in their folly, and strip them of their self-conceit, but to overcome Satan himself by wise answers. Matt. 4: 1-11; Luke 4: 3–12.

Brethren, let us "walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time." We are called upon to overcome all evil with good, and it is every member's business to let his light so shine that he may be of some benefit to them that are without, that we may help them to the light of the Gospel, lest our light become darkness, and our life a stumbling-block in some outsider's way and keep him out of the church. The increase of the church must come from without. Let us all study to show ourselves approved unto God,—workmen that need not be ashamed, is my prayer!

BEARING BURDENS.

BY S. O. LARKINS.

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ."—Gal. 6: 2.

It is useless to describe the author of this language, for surely his name should be familiar to every little boy and girl, yet there are thousands of little boys and girls, and a great many grown-up girls and boys who know nothing of him, neither of the One whose law he bids us fulfill.

"Bear ye one another's burdens." This speaks directly to us, and I want to show some of the benefits to be derived from obedience to this injunction.

When we lie down at night we can sleep sweetly, with no remorse of conscience, no unhappy forebodings of evil. We can rest assured that "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters." When I come to pass through the dark valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for the Lord is with me, his rod and his staff comfort me.

"Bear ye one another's burdens." What is your burden, my brother? What is your burden, my sister? Is it the loss of a dear companion,—one that was dear to you and the light and sunshine of your home? Why should your heart bleed, and tears of sorrow roll down your cheeks? Can you not realize that what you have lost, they have gained, and even more? "Whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." Cling closely to the Savior and he will give you rest, joy in your sorrows and peace of mind. He will be to you a father, and ye shall be his sons and daughters. Then the little loss is great gain and we are the winners at last.

The Savior rebuked the wicked lawyers for binding heavy burdens upon men's shoulders that they would not remove. Brethren and sisters often burden others by careless and hasty speech. O what a great burden to a community is a tale-bearer! The weight of his presence is distressing and the sound of his voice is alarming.

How many hearts are bleeding and torn to-day by unkind words! What great mischief has been done by things being repeated a little different from what they were first spoken! How many mountains have been made of mole-hills!

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." The apostle, in the same chapter, says, "For every man shall bear his own burden." This would seem to conflict, yet its true meaning is all right. Every man and woman has a burden that another can not bear for them. This they must bear alone.

"Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such a one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself lest thou also be tempted." There is great beauty in this language, and when a proper application is made of it to ourselves, it stands out in all its beauty and fullness. We are ready to find fault with others for mistakes of any kind, and very seldom, if ever, take into consideration the cause of the provocation or the peculiar kind of temptation by which they are overcome.

In weighing the faults of others, and before sitting in judgment in their case, it would be well for us to put ourselves in their place and see if they did not do about as well as we would have done. Whenever we can place ourselves in the situation of another, our judgment will be about right.

When the sinner feels the greatness of his sin which is crushing him beneath its ponderous weight and destroying his peace, he becomes willing that the great Burden-bearer of the universe shall remove his load. How long, O how long will men and women carry their load, borne down to the earth, when relief is so easily obtained!

Kind words from a sympathetic heart are as a healing balm and will lighten our burden, whilst a harsh word or rebuke out of place will increase the burden and perhaps crush the bearer beneath its weight. The apostle says we have gifts differing according to the grace given us. Our inclinations and besetting sins are not the same. Our burdens are various in their nature,—that which is a burden to one is not to another. That which weighs one down with grief does not affect another, and if we try to sympathize one with another and encourage one another in these trials of life, the load will be more equally distributed and more easily borne. There is one who sticketh closer than a brother, who will never leave nor forsake us if we put our trust in him, though all others may and do sometimes.

A load is often given us to test our faith, and frequently we carry a heavy load as the result of mistakes and errors made in haste. Christ has taken our heavy load and made us free, and if he has made us free, then are we free indeed. There are thousands, yes, tens of thousands who are discouraged and sad; they have sought all the pleasures of earth for relief but, alas, they lie down at night with a heavy and sad heart, distressed, perplexed, weary, and restless,—almost tired of life, not knowing where to find relief. What a change when they hear the invitation,—know, feel, and realize who gives it! The music of the angels' voices when they made known to the shepherds the advent of the Messiah, and sang, "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good will to man," sounds glorious to our ears through the ages, and why shall we not join and swell the chorus until every mountain, hill and dale, throughout the world, shall echo back the sound, and earth's many millions join the triumphant strain, "Peace on earth, good will to man?"

MAMMON AND FASHION.

BY D. C. MOOMAW.

The following well-conceived and ably-written article on "Mammon and Fashion in the Church," was clipped from No. 30 of the Religious Herald, a Baptist weekly, published in Richmond, Va. The subject is treated logically and philosophically, and no one can gainsay its teaching. Of course it will not check the onflowing and influwing tide of pride (the butterfly variety) and haughtiness that is overwhelming the wealthy and aristocratic congregations of American Baptists. The bold author, R. C. Ould, who could enunciate such unpopular sentiments, of course did not expect that a feather would fall, or a jewel disappear, or a flounce flounder, or a bustle be put away, or a golden calf less a god, on account of his Philippic. Like a very Titan, however, he has thundered with his iron battle ax on the brazen doors of the fortress of the god of this world,—doors made impregnable by the solidifying process of fifty centuries, but the only effect of his daring deed will be the recoil of the ax on his own head. He had as well try the impossible feat of teaching Beelzebub the pure morality and decency of the Sermon on the Mount, or to convince a libertine that the role of minister of the Gospel would not place him nearer the goal of his heart's ambition, as to make the average Sunday actor or actress on the religious stage abate one jot or tittle of the pomp and circumstance of Fashion's and Mammon's performances. Their motto seems to be,

"Let the old world wag as it will,
We'll be gay and happy still."

Brethren and sisters, let us read and assimilate. Let us see that, although it is not our fight, we do not get so near that, in the prospective hewing and chipping of our Baptist friends, the keen edge of Bro. Ould's Gospel ax finds us within the circle of its heroic operations. He has undertaken a tremendous job, sure, and I pity him from the bottom of my heart, but, in the classic language of Shakespeare, I say, "Lay on, Macduff."

MAMMON AND FASHION IN THE CHURCH.

"One of the most brilliant writers and clearest thinkers of the nineteenth century has announced that three parts are essential to a perfect system of religion. The three parts are criticism, dogmatism and evangelism. Criticism is necessary to guarantee the truth, dogmatism to defend the truth, and evangelism to propagate the truth. I propose to apply the first term here presented to guarantee the truth of a plain and simple proposition—viz, Mammon and Fashion within the church are inimical to the church. It becomes painfully apparent to any intelligent observer that popular pests, such as the love of money and the pride of fashion, are enemies to the cause of Christ. The conspicuous hypocrisy of a fashionable church disturbs the normal flow of the spiritual life-current of religion, and discourages the efforts of the faithful followers of Christ. The real disciples of the meek and loving Savior are offended and discouraged by the senseless pride and folly of weak pretenders and noisy professors of abnormal holiness, while the cold and rational world looks down with mingled aversion and contempt upon the glaring contrast that spans the gulf between the lives and the professions of weak and false worshipers. The diminutive brains that characterize the votaries of fashion, present evidence as strong as proofs of Holy Writ that such intellectual attributes are too feeble to grasp and hold ideas as opposite as godliness on the one hand and the flimsy frivolities of fashion on the other.

"Can the pure Spirit of God, the sordid passion and greed of gold, the pride of power and the vanity of fashion, tenant the 'soul's frail dwelling house' and the poor, weak brain of a silly hypocrite at the same time? It is written that it is hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven. Is it not still harder for the light-winged butterfly of fashion to pass unsinged through the fires of worldly temptation? The love of money and the caprice of fashion are unquestionable evidences of unchristian selfishness. The influence of money and the vanity of fashion have so changed the environments of the church, that God's poor have been spurned from his own temples, because they were plainly clad, and (like their Divine Master, while on earth) had not where to lay their heads. The destitute and humble Christian is no longer a brother or a sister. The slighted children of our Heavenly Father are too poor to array their persons in the costly raiment that feeble and proud creatures so much admire. The pew of God's church is closed to them, because they are not recognized members of fashionable society. It is true they are humble and devout followers of Christ and trusting members of his fold, but they cannot associate, in this world of hypocrites and frauds, with the chosen dudes and dudesses of the foul world's society. The presumptuous sons and daughters of exquisite fashion hold their empty heads so high above the heads of their less presumptuous fellows, that the veriest Pharisee would blush at the brazen effrontery of their absurd arrogance.

"God's people should constitute one pure household, where affection and brotherly love, forbearance, charity and good-will shall reign uninterruptedly and forever. The lowest worshiper at the filthy shrine of Mammon, and the weakest votary of the imbecile goddess of Fashion will concede that they do not expect to meet with men or leaders of fashion in heaven. If susceptible of acquiring knowledge, they must know that the 'pomp of heraldry, the pride of power,' and all that beauty, all that wealth can give, 'await alike the inevitable hour when the path of glory leads but to the grave.' They must think, if they are capable of thought, that the greed of gold and the insanity of fashion, with all the puny and insignificant things of life, will halt abruptly at the threshold of the grave.

"They must believe, if they are one degree above the scale of idiocy, that there are no banks and no stupidity of fashion in heaven. There are no millionaires, no queens of society, no flashing diamonds, and no costly silks or ostrich feathers, no satin-lined or velvet-cushioned pews, to rule out God's own poor children from his own home in heaven. The unthinking imposters must know that the darkness of the grave forever conceals their pride. They should know that they can no longer mock the Christ born in a stable with the absurd irony of an aristocratic worship, and clothed in the unseemly raiments of a brazen hypocrisy. They know that their offensive pride must expire with the last breath of their ill-spent lives. They know that they will be denied the childish pleasure of displaying brilliant jewels and costly equipages on the Lord's Sabbath. They know the time must come when they will no longer strive to excite the envy or the admiration of the gaping herd of human creatures.

"How transcendental in its acute absurdity is the boast of wealth and the pride and vanity of fashion when exhibited in the temples of the ever-living God! The money-changers shall be again driven from the temple; they defile it by their presence and their work.

"The vanity and gaudy methods of the fashionable church have proved, if proof was needed, that money has usurped the throne of God.

"This grand and beautiful country, that spreads its magnificent domain from ocean to ocean, and from the tropic to the frigid zone, is yet unable to supply the abnormal demands of egotistical church fashion. This wonderful Union of thirty-eight empires and many territories could not supply a minister of sufficient tone to satisfy the sentimental fancy of a high-pressure congregation. A committee of exquisite dudes, possessing supernatural instincts, were appointed to import a haughty and pious ecclesiastical autocrat to minister to the invalid souls of an exquisite congregation. It is true this act was in violation of a national statute, declaring against the importation of contract labor. But the even balance of justice and the strong arm of the government were made to yield to the demands of Fashion, endorsed by the decree of Mammon. Such extraordinary methods were believed to be 'requisite and necessary as well for the body as the soul.' It seemed that the dormant piety of the fashionable church needed the tilt-hammer blows of an imported giant to impress the hard heads of the sons of Mammon, as well as the soft hearts of the proud daughters of fashion. In our own city, a few weeks ago, a female member of a fashionable church advised a friend, who was leaving here to reside in a western city, to leave the Baptist church and unite with the Episcopalians, assuring her that, as a Baptist, she would not receive that social recognition that the society church would give her. This episode needs no passing comment from a religious standpoint.

"What observer has not been annoyed or disgusted at Sunday scenes in our own goodly city—and I claim Richmond is as far advanced in civilization as any other city—by the sight of the long-drawn-out column of Sabbath dudes that infest every avenue to the church—each young scion of fashion, with a well-greased and delicate mustache, and nobby Derby hat, large cane and small legs, often with a cigarette between his bloodless lips, waiting to review the dress parade of fashionable young ladies as they trip by for inspection on every Sabbath day. What impression did the well-read sermon make upon that giddy congregation? Their every thought was concentrated upon their bangs and frizzes, bustles, fine clothes, ribbons, hats, flounces and furbelows. The chief use of such a church is for the display of finery and feathers.

"In a fashionable church in the City of New York (where even the Baptists have wealthy and fashionable churches), the baptistery was so long unused that it became filled with Sunday-school flags, cast-off raiment, second-hand hymn books, and other sacred debris, thus unfitting it for the purpose for which it was devised. The sexton of this church was a proud and fashionable man. A fashionable church and a gaudy congregation will have none other than a fashionable sexton. This officer at once served notice on the fashionable minister, when the ordinance of baptism was to be performed, that if that ceremony was repeated he would instantly resign his position.

"A visitor to the Centennial from a remote, rural district reported, on his return, that the most interesting thing he saw at the great Exposition was the 'Theological Garden.' It is probable this unsophisticated agriculturist visited a fashionable church in the City of Brotherly Love, as that is near kin to a zoological garden.

"Now, Mr. Editor, I have written more than was my purpose, and will close with an apt quotation from a well-known writer: 'Ever since the greed of gold sold the Christ and raffled for his garments, it has crucified every form of virtue between two thieves.'—R. C. Ould."

THE BROAD WAY PREFERRED.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

A SHORT time since while I was in an adjoining County, attending some meetings for preaching and other church work, I was informed of very peculiar proceedings at a revival meeting that had lately been held in that vicinity, where a number of persons, having made up their minds to unite with the church, and the choice being extended, all decided to be baptized by immersion. There were four candidates, and each of them chose to be immersed differently, according to their liking.

In the first case the minister, in the administration, repeated the formula, "I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," and immersed once backwards. In the second case, after repeating the formula, he immersed twice backward. In the third case, after repeating the formula, he immersed the candidate once forward, and so on. In the fourth case he immersed three times forward, and remarked that if any chose to be immersed six times, he would accommodate them, saying further that some people had much to say about the narrow way, but for himself he preferred the broad way.

Strange to say, that in talking to the people on the subject, not a few justified the proceedings, quoting the Scripture, "According to your faith be it unto you."

How poorly the Scriptures are understood, and how fearfully wrong they are often applied! How needful that they should be every-where explained, so that all may understand that if their faith is correct, the result will be a blessing, and if wrong it will be the reverse! I will illustrate by a single Bible incident:

Adam and Eve were placed in the garden with all the comforts and enjoyments necessary to perfect happiness. They were crowned with the personal association of God himself, while they believed and reverenced him, but, alas, the devil interferes, tells his story, widens the way, they believe him, and how terrible the consequences! According to their faith, so it was to them! They were driven out of the beautiful garden; the earth was cursed for their sake. Destruction and death deluged the world, and though the Son of God was sent and came to redeem it, and made the sacrifice that he did, and gave a revelation of his Father's will, clearly enunciating what we must do to be saved, and what we may not do, the devil, through human agencies, is every-where present with the same device,—part truth and part falsehood,—"To unite with (the) a church is all right, but as to which, or whether you obey the commandments or keep the ordinances, is immaterial, whether Greek or Roman, Mohammedan or Mormon, Predestinarian or Armenian, Papist or Protestant, Universalist or fatalist,—either will do." "According to your faith, be it unto you."

The Bible says, "Be not conformed to the world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind." "Come out from among them." Again the devil is on hand, saying, "It is not intended that you should be so particular about these things. You may walk in the ways of your own heart, and in the sight of your eyes. God knows that you will only be regarded as being wiser and more respectable in your associations."

"As your faith is, so be it unto you," and it is true, according to which side of the line you are on. If on the side of "the faith once delivered to the saints," all will be well; if on the side of the faith delivered to Adam and Eve, and handed down to the present day, on the opposite side of the line, the result will be ruin, death, and remorse forever! "According to your faith, so be it unto you!"

THE PUZZLED DUTCHMAN.

SELECTED AND ADAPTED BY HEBER M. HAYS.

It is related that a man who does not believe in immersion for baptism was holding a protracted meeting and one night preached on the subject of baptism. In the course of his remarks he said, "Some believe it necessary to go down into the water and come up out of it to be baptized." But this he claimed to be a fallacy, for the preposition into of the Scriptures should be rendered differently as it does not mean into at all times. "Moses," said he, "we are told went up into the mountain, and the Savior was taken into a high mountain. Now we do not suppose that either went into a mountain but unto it. So with going down into the water; it means simply going down close by or near to the water and being baptized in the ordained way, by sprinkling or pouring.

He carried the idea out fully and in due season closed his discourse, when an invitation was given for any one so disposed to arise and express his thoughts. Quite a number of his brethren arose and said they were glad they had been present on this occasion, that they were all well pleased with the sound sermon they had just heard, and felt their souls greatly blessed.

Finally a corpulent gentleman of Teutonic extraction, a stranger to all, arose and broke the silence that was almost painful. His remarks, in plain English, were as follows:

"Mister Preacher, I am so glad I was here to-night; for I have had explained to my mind some things that I never could believe before. Oh, I am so glad that into does not mean into at all, but just close by or near to; for now I can believe many things that I could not believe before. We read, Mr. Preacher, that Daniel was cast into a den of lions and came out alive. Now I never could believe that, for the wild beasts would have eaten him right away; but now it is all clear to my mind. He was just close by, or near to, and did not get into the den at all. Oh, I am so glad I was here to-night!

"Again, we read that the Hebrew children were cast into the fiery furnace, and that always looked like a big story, too, for they would have been burned up; but it is all plain to my mind now, for they were just cast by, or close to the fiery furnace. Oh, I am so glad I was here to-night! And then, Mr. Preacher, it is said that Jonah was cast into the sea and was taken into the whale's belly. Now, I never could believe that. It always seemed to be a big 'fish story,' but it is plain to my mind now. He was not in the sea nor the whale's belly at all. He was only near by or close to. Oh, I am so glad I was here to-night!

"And now, Mister Preacher, if you will just explain two more passages of Scripture, I shall be so happy I was here to-night. One of them is where it says the wicked shall be cast into a lake that burns with fire and brimstone. O! Mister Preacher, shall I be cast into that lake if I am wicked? or just close by or near to—just near enough to be comfortable? Oh, I hope you tell me I shall be cast only close by, a good ways off; and I will be so glad I was here to-night.

"The other passage is that which says, 'Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.' Say, Mister Preacher, does into mean into in this passage, or will it bring me just close by or near enough to see what I have lost and leave me at last on the outside?"

A REMINISCENCE.

BY D. E. PRICE.

Some time ago, in conversation with a brother, he made the remark that "we must go into the devil's territory in order to fight him successfully," which gave me some thought on the subject, and the more I thought on it, the more I was convinced of the fallacy of the argument. The apostle Paul, in enumerating the Christian armor in Eph. 6, only speaks of one of an aggressive nature,—"the Sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God." All of the others are of a defensive character.

I am under the serious impression that if we, as Christians, succeed in keeping the devil outside of our own territory (the church), we are doing all that the Holy Scriptures demand of us. It is said by some, and, probably comparatively true, that "the darker the place, the brighter the light will appear." But we should remember that all the light we have we borrow from Christ, who is the great source of light; and since the moon which receives all of her light from the sun, coming in contact with the shadow of the earth, becomes eclipsed; so our light, too, when we unite with the world, in its political movements, or otherwise, may become eclipsed also, and Jesus says, "If, therefore, the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness?" Matt. 6: 23. Hence we conclude (since Jesus again says, "We are not of the world, but he has chosen us out of the world," John 15: 19), that we occupy dangerous ground when we venture out into the world, even if we do claim our purpose is to fight the devil and sin.

What we mean by going out into the world is, uniting with the world in order to overpower evil by using compulsory means and also taking part with them in public gatherings, gotten up for the gratification of the carnal mind, but we do not mean that the minister of the Gospel should not go into the dark places of the world in order to preach the Gospel and convince all he can to forsake their evil ways and accept of the Truth and be saved. The Lord, in his wisdom, no doubt knew that we would have all we could do to keep the devil at bay; hence, he does not command nor allow us to follow him into the kingdoms of the world (for he claims the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, Luke 4: 6), in order to make a success of our Christian warfare.

We read, James 4: 7, 8, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you. Draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to you. Let us not venture to follow him too far into his territory when he leaves us, lest we get too far away from our own and he claim us as his subjects. It is quite reasonable that he would, if he finds us trespassing on his grounds.

It would be the safest ground to heed the admonition given by Paul in 2 Cor. 6: 14-18, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness? And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel? And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the Living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you. And will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

Mt. Morris, Ill.

SAD AND TRUE.

"Generation after generation have felt as we now feel, and their lives were as active as our own. They passed away like vapor while nature wore the same aspect of beauty as when she first existed. The heavens shall be as bright over our graves as they are around our paths. The world will have the same attractions for the offspring yet unborn as it once had for our children. Yet a little while and all this will have happened. The throbbing heart will be stilled, and we shall be at rest. Our funeral will wend its way, and the prayers will be said, and we shall be left in the darkness and silence of the tomb. And it may be but a short time that we shall be spoken of, but things of life shall creep on and our names will be forgotten. Days will continue to move on, and laughter and song will be heard in the room where we died; and the eye that mourned for us will be dry and animated with joy, and even our children will cease to think of us, and will remember to lisp our names no more."

"CAN'T" AND "TRY."

Can't do it sticks in the mud; but Try soon drags the wagon out of the rut. The fox said "Try," and he got away from the hounds when they almost snapped at him. The bees said "Try," and turned flowers into honey. The squirrel said "Try," and he went to the top of the beech tree. The snow drop said "Try," and bloomed in the cold snows of winter. The sun said "Try," and spring soon threw Jack Frost out of the saddle. The young lark said "Try," and he found that his new wings took him over hedges and ditches, and up where his father was singing. The old ox said "Try," and plowed the field from end to end. No hill too steep for Try to climb, no clay too stiff for Try to plow, no field too wet for Try to drain, no hole too big for Try to mend. —Sel.

THE BLOOD OF THE LAMB.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

Well Beloved in Him:—

YOUR letter is here. Was long in coming. Was heart-sick for it. Very welcome, as is every fragment that tells of the power of Divine-human Blood to atone sin, deliver from its bondage, and cleanse from its pollution. Justification is judicial and relative; sanctification is God's imputed righteousness made personal, permeating every element, fibre, and function of our being. Depending unduly on justification without seeking still more the deeper work of sanctification, is to fail and stumble and fall, walk in darkness, and bring no fruit to perfection. I was a quarter of a century in the church before I knew the "High calling of God in Christ Jesus." My religion was legal, fluctuating, unsatisfactory, now at noontide, then midnight, now a hallelujah, then a threnody. I knew not the manner, the secret, the rest of faith. Were I not as weak as a "bruised reed," I would expatiate. I have been so long at the feet of Gamaliel, have been so thoroughly indoctrinated with the idea of works, have so much to unlearn, and find it so hard to remove the vail of Moses, that I am only an abecedarian in the study and exemplification of the life of God manifest in the flesh.

Your experience is not singular in one sense; yet very singular in another. Now up, up, where you know not, nor how you got there; now down, down, with no passage in the Bible that fits better than Rom. 7: 24. How little we know about God's own peace which passeth all understanding, keeping our hearts and minds through Jesus Christ. Philpp. 4: 7; John 14: 27. The mind fully stayed on God brings perfect peace. Is. 26: 3. Compare with this the startling language of James 1: 6, 7, 8. A single-minded man has the perfect peace and repose of God. "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways." To cap the climax: "let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." Philpp. 2: 5. You are trying your best to please God, but are never pleased with yourself, and constantly doubt the complacency of God. You see flaws in heart and life daily, and have not learned to confide in the perfection of your Substitute as your rest, but are invariably, though it may be unconsciously, falling back on your own endeavors as the ground of your peace. I am glad you can not find it there. The great deception with many of us is that the only peace we know of is that which we get from the conviction that we are doing our very best to do the will of God. If this very best were adequate, no Divine Incarnation had ever been necessary. The more vivid our apprehension of the Divine Holiness, the more hopeless and miserable our case, if we have nothing to rely on but our most conscientious obedience and most faultless righteousness. God's own righteousness, in our nature, in the Person of Christ, in our stead—this, only this, is the object of faith and the ground of hope. All else is secondary. The Spirit's work in us is based on Christ's work for us, and is the answer of faith and the confirmation of hope. As soon as we lose sight of this, we lose the sense of our true position, our hope dims and our peace vanishes. We must do our best; but our doing will never bring us abiding peace. That God Himself "died for our sins, rose again for our justification," and "ever liveth to make intercession for us," this alone can give us perfect peace in the midst of all our defections and failures.

Pauline saints are rare now. Christendom has largely fallen into the snare of the "foolish, bewitched Galatians." Assurance is by many termed presumption, if not criminal audacity, just as though it were a terrible insult to God to take Him at His word. Had I believed God, as Abraham did, and Paul, instead of, like the bewitched Galatians, turning my back to Mount Calvary and facing Mount Sinai, I would have escaped many a lamentable fall, many a nameless agony, many a furnace of suffering and gloom. The past is irrevocable, and this would be hell to most of us, were it not for the glorious fact that God's past is also immutable. The Blood, the precious Blood, has still all the efficacy to renew and cleanse and heal as when it dripped warm with Eternal Love and Infinite Power from the wounds of the Crucified on Golgotha. No one thinks meaner of himself than when he beholds the Lamb of God; and no one is at the same time more restful, happy, and confident of eternal life.

We are as really saved now as to be Israelites before we cross Jordan, redeemed by blood even before we reach the Red Sea. Christ and Christian are correlatives. Apostolic faith and Apostolic peace are for all saints in all times. "Only believe:" how simple it sounds; how deep, radical, difficult the act. Sin is inbred. It etymologically means "missing the mark;" but behind the Target and behind the arrow lies the wrong bias. It is the tap root of human nature. Right at that radix of our being, our faith must triumph. If not, the sense of sin must needs preponderate the sense of salvation. If our faith in Omnipotent Love goes not as deep as our consciousness of defection and demerit, we are weak and miserable. We can do so little for others because we have so little liberty in God ourselves. Our testimony of the indwelling Christ is awkward and hesitating. Who among us doubts that God gave us Jesus as a ransom for the whole race, His blood as our Atonement for all sin? I trust not one. If that provision is appropriated by faith as God means we shall, we will have just as little doubt as to our personal salvation. It is not to God's credit nor our own to depreciate the Blood of the Lamb by the constant repetition, "Oh my sins, my sins." The nature and abyss and horror of sin are indeed dreadful! Only the plummet of Jehovah can sink to the bottom of the bottomless. But the depth and height, length and breadth, power and glory of redemption by Christ, are superabounding. "There is no fear in Love;" there is no doubt in faith. There is no duplicity, or treachery, or flaw in Christ. Believe and be saved. This is all; but less than this is damnation. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." Doubt and damnation are synonymous. Rom. 14: 23. The Blood is the Life. In every pulse of Jesus throbbed the Life of Jehovah. Faith identifies us with all that Jesus has done and is. It shows our utter ruin and complete redemption, and so accepts the work of Jesus as to share His crucifixion as truly as His resurrection. Faith not only sees that when God is made sin for us, there is indeed an end of sin, both as to condemnation and dominion; but that there is an infinite surplus of merit sufficient for ten thousand worlds if needed and accepted. Not only is "salvation of the Lord," but "God is my salvation." The humanity of Christ is only the vehicle; Divinity is Author and Finisher of the work. No matter what the sins—how many or how aggravated—the blood of Jesus whitens from every stain. It not only cleanses but vivifies. It imparts the very life of God. It cancels guilt, and restores the image of Eternal Holiness. It purges from dead works, and sets very God in the centre of our being. Pardon does not satisfy the truly awakened soul. It is the SIN from which come the sins that we want eradicated. To be born of God is wholly the work of God, filling us with the fulness of God, holy as He, satisfied as He, holding by faith the undeveloped in ourselves as well as the perfect part in Christ Jesus. This makes the believer more than a match for the Devil. The very gates of Hell shall not prevail a soul hid with Christ in God. All the legions of the pit can not pluck the saint out of the hands of the Crucified. How weak and helpless we are when we attempt to fight the hosts of darkness in our own strength; and how few know how to "take hold of the strength of Jehovah." Hunt up these passages for yourself, and see how awful is unbelief, how impotent is man, how wonderful, glorious, all-sufficient is the Love of God. Doubt wrestles single-handed with self and the Devil. Faith, a Holy Ghost faith, is "God working in us to will and to do of His good pleasure." Your letters clearly evince your confidence in my affection. Well, just honor God's declaration as much as you do mine, and you will be so happy that your very sanity might be suspected. "These men are full of new wine." Let them mock. God's drunkards are the only sober folk.

But remember, the righteousness of God by faith not only imparts the merit of Christ, but also His character. It removes not only penalty, but corruption. It not only places all our hope on the one Foundation of finished work in Christ Jesus, it also makes us diligent builders, internal and external. In the all-directing factor of our being we are dead to sin, even if sin still lives in the frontier territories of our Beulah. The serpent is still there, but his head is under the Almighty Victor's heel. Flesh is flesh, but it is servant and not master. We treat it not even as a slave but as an alien. To sin is to die; to believe is to live. We may die to hope while alive with desire, and this always keeps the door of mercy ajar. Watch, pray, trust, rejoice. Trust Jesus as implicitly as He wholly gave Himself to the claims of the law you have violated, and you are safe as He—exactly as secure. As soon as self and our ill desert occupy our thoughts and feelings more than Christ, doubt harrows, fear paralyzes, and we are like Samson shorn of his locks —"weak like other men." "They could not enter in because of unbelief." This bars peace out of the soul, and us out of Heaven.

"Looking unto Jesus." This look must come from the eyes in our being's core. If our consciousness of sin is deeper than our look of confidence, we are not saved. He "became flesh," "was made sin," "was wounded for our transgressions, was bruised for our iniquities," "the chastisement of our peace was upon him, by his stripes we are healed." Wherever these sublime and amazing annunciations appear in the Holy Oracles, there insert your own name. It always means you. So God would have every soul read His word. And until it is so read, it is a letter that killeth. Christ came not to condemn, but to save. Be sure of this, dear sister, God loves you; and Jesus is His Pledge, that what He has shown on the Cross, He will show again at the Bar of Judgment.

"Why are ye so fearful, O ye of little faith?" Just so long as we trust in Jesus, the rolling billows will be rock beneath our feet. As soon as we turn our attention from Jesus to the commotion around and underneath and within, we "begin to sink." "Wherefore didst thou doubt?" Faith brings not only justification, but holiness and confidence and strength. We can not be overbold where the cross of Christ supplies the motive. Search for the word boldness, and see what familiarity with God faith gives. Pi-hahiroth and Marah and Rephidim and Kibroth-hattaavah are dangerous places in our pilgrimage from Egypt to Canaan. But it is our unbelief that makes them dangerous. It is just at such test-spots where God makes His Shekinah most luminous with His smile if we trust Him.

When sense has all it craves, we forget to look at the Pillar of Fire. It is when we "endure as seeing Him who is invisible," that we realize the truth of Rom. 8: 18, and 2 Cor. 4: 17, 18. Every sleep is a Bethel and every step a Peniel, if we live under "the powers of the world to come." Ponder all these great Bible words, and ask the Holy Spirit to interpret them to your heart. You will find every one of them printed in the Blood of the Lamb. There is too little rejoicing in the Lord among us. Nothing is more natural to faith than "joy unspeakable and full of glory." The word "believing" is not only the pivot of 1 Pet. 1: 8, but of "the volume of the Book." It is the one word on which hinges the destiny of the world. Too much of self in many forms, too little dying for each other, too little glorying in the cross, and hence but little of the joy and peace and wisdom and power of God. We must be saved ourselves before we can live and talk Jesus into the consciousness of others. The best sermon is a sanctified man or woman. Life is only a form of death if Christ is not its Alpha and Omega. Whatever we ask God out of this life, we will get. Christ on the Mercy-seat and Christ in the heart never conflict. "Father, I thank Thee that Thou hast heard me, and I know that Thou hearest me always." John 11: 41, 42. So it is still. A Christ-life has always the Divine sympathy and the Divine response. The Blood of the Lamb does it all. Its necessity and efficacy are Eternal. The pæan of Rev. 1: 5, 6, is our everlasting song. It will show redder and better and more glorious forever and ever. It is the life and boast and rapture of the believer now and through all Eternity.

OUR NEIGHBOR.

BY ELMER WOLMBOLD.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."—Matt. 19: 19.

WHO is my neighbor? Many people claim that they can not understand it. Is it the person or persons who may chance to live next door, or do they live many miles away? Is it the person who will destroy our property and kill our stock, or abuse us by many evil deeds? Our neighbor is he who will assist us on our journey through life, that it may not be a hard and laborious task. He will have cheerfulness and kind words for us. He will not discourage us when there is darkness before us, but will endeavor to make life bright and happy. He will warn us of any danger, and ever lend a helping hand.

You may call on such a neighbor at any hour of the night and he will arise to do you a favor. Should you be in need and ask him for help, he will not turn you away. He will watch over you, and should you do anything wrong, he will come to you as a brother and tell you of your faults and help you to overcome them. Should you be upon a bed of affliction, he will call on you and, by his kind words and cheerful voice, comfort you.

Kindness speaks louder than words and good deeds go farther than money. Money will perish, but good deeds will never die. Some may ask, "Why is this person so kind and willing to help his fellow-men?" Because he has the love of God dwelling in his heart, and whosoever has the love of God in his heart, will do his commands, and this is one of them, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

In Luke 10: 25–37 we have the parable of the man on a journey who fell among thieves, who beat him and left him by the road-side. There passed that way three men. Two of them looked at him, and passed on, but the third had compassion on him and took him to an inn, and had him cared for. Who was neighbor to that man? We would say, "The last one." We are commanded to do likewise. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." Rom. 13: 10.

We gather from the parable that we must help the poor and needy and those who are in distress. By so doing we will fulfill the second command,—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Matt. 22: 39.

A FAMILY OF SMILERS.

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

THERE are only four of them,—father, mother, and two little ones, but they always greet everybody with a smile. The best part about it is, they have smiles for one another, too,—tender, affectionate smiles. Ah, they are a happy family, and no one can remain long in their society without imbibing their sunny atmosphere. Their home seems like a type of the sweet home beyond.

Some one may say, "O, those are manufactured smiles. Go there unexpectedly, and you will find something besides smiles." Well, I have tried it, and the children meet me at the gate,—sometimes beyond it,—with sweet smiles and kisses; the mother, at the door, with the same fond greeting; the father with the old smile of welcome that falls like heavenly balm in the heart. No, no, dear friend, such smiles are not manufactured,—they spring from the fertile soil of love and good will to men, and bubble up in sparkling fountains from the heart. Ah, yes, there are some HAPPY families,—some genial souls in this artificial age, who shed bright, social rays around them and make the world better and brighter for their existence. They are the sunbeams of society. What a cheerless void we should feel, were they all removed!

What a blaze of cheerfulness would illuminate the world, if we, as a family of God's creation, would all smile! As such we owe one another this geniality! Then let us each wreathe our face in smiles,—a ready relief in troublous times!

"Your heart is too heavy-laden to smile?" Some of the sweetest smiles we ever see or dream of, cover aching hearts, or sparkle through falling tears, like stray sunbeams caught in an April shower. Besides, sad-hearted mourner, smiles do not only cheer beholders, but the smiler as well. Nothing helps us to forget our own grief and heart-pangs like trying to make others happy, thus verifying the sacred saying, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

PASTORAL VISITS.

BY J. S. FLORY.

LAST Annual Meeting passed a decision that each elder in charge of a congregation should see that a pastoral visit is made to each member of the church.

Some think this means that the elder shall visit each member. This is by no means the meaning of the decision. The elder is duty bound to see that every member is visited as stated,—the ministers, including the elder, to do the visiting. When the work is divided up between all the ministers, it is not such a great task.

It is a matter of great importance,—quite different from the mission of the annual visit by the visiting brethren. The pastor, in his visit, should have special reference to the strengthening of the members in their faith, encourage them to a sense of fidelity to their God, their blessed Savior and to the church. He should reason with them out of a heart full of love, as to the importance of living at peace with all men, and especially with those of like precious faith, to submit in all things to the rules of the church. From a standpoint of Gospel principle he should show them that self-will or individual judgment is the great enemy to the peace and prosperity of the church. I mean "judgment relative to matters of a general nature which apply to each for the good of the body." No one has a right to claim personal liberty where it involves the peace, union or harmony of the church.

These visits may be made seasons of joy and heavenly comfort both to the visitor and the party visited, and be the means of bringing many a weak wanderer back near to the side of Jesus, and add much to the prosperity of the church in general.

If canvassers, in plying their vocation to make a few paltry dollars, can thoroughly visit from house to house, through heat and cold, over rocks, mountains, and vales, surely the canvasser for souls—the duly-appointed agent to work for Jesus, ought to be inspired by a spirit so noble as to never tire in hunting up the scattered sheep of our Great Shepherd, and feeding them on the life-giving food from Immanuel's ground.

PLAINNESS A NECESSITY.

BY ANNA E. NETTROUR.

THERE has been much said and written on plainness of dress, and still not enough to convince all of our members that it is a Christian's duty to dress plainly. It took me a long time to see that Christ cared how his people looked, but finally I decided that a Christian had no desire to look like anything else than a Christian, any more than he had to join in any of the different amusements of the world, which no true Christian will do.

The willingness to be a peculiar people by our dress is nothing more or less than taking a firm stand, always and every-where, for Christ, since we must always be seen, though we seldom need give expression to our feelings, and when we shrink from this, it does seem that, after all, we are not quite willing to come out from among them and be separate.

If Christ's people are to be "a peculiar people," it would seem necessary to take a firm stand on the side of right. How can we expect to convert any one to our principles, if we do not practice what the Scriptures teach us? The world at large knows that the Brethren church professes to be a plain church, and as soon as our members dress like the world, they belong neither to the world nor church. If we truly love the church of our choice, we will be loyal to all of her regulations. If we are not sure we are doing as we should, the sooner we find out what our duties are, the better for us in the end.

It is no more right for Christians to dress like the world than it would have been for the soldiers of the different armies in our late war to dress alike. We all know they had two different uniforms, and no Northern soldier would have thought of wearing a Southern soldier's uniform. And why, let the reader answer.

All different worldly organizations are known by their different badges. In traveling, any one acquainted with their different badges can know if those he meets belong to the Masons, Odd-Fellows, or any other organization. So we should be known wherever we appear, so every one may know whether we belong to the Brethren church or to the world.

SISTER SALOME WATKINS, of Ladoga, Ind., reports three additions to the Little Walnut church recently.

WE are sorry to note that Bro. R. H. Miller returned to his home from Waterloo, Iowa, where he labored on a committee in church work, quite unwell. We hope he may soon be restored to health.

THE school at this place opened on the 4th inst. with good prospects for a larger attendance than usual. The Brethren in charge of the work are encouraged and feel that their labors are appreciated.

BRO. GEO. J. ROYER and his son, Charles D., of Alpena, South Dakota, have been visiting at this place during the last week. Bro. Royer formerly lived at Mt. Morris and he was welcomed to his old home by his many friends.

BRO. NOAH OHMART, of Collins, St. Clair Co., Mo., wishes to learn the whereabouts of his nephews, Simon K. and Ezra Ohmart. Any one able to do so will confer a great favor by sending their addresses to Bro. Ohmart as above.

BRO. D. BURKETT, of the Huntington church, Ind., writing under date of the 1st inst., says that Bro. G. L. Studebaker, of Shideler, Ind., was to begin a series of meetings in that church on the evening of the 1st. We hope the meetings may be blessed by the Lord to the conversion of sinners.

BRO. I. M. GIBSON'S address is now 850 Franklin Street, Philadelphia, Pa. He reached his new home Aug. 28, and so far is well pleased with his surroundings. At the first prayer-meeting he attended in the Brethren's house in Philadelphia, an invitation was given and two came out on the Lord's side.

WE still have on hand a number of copies of the full report of our last Annual Meeting. Any one desiring a copy can secure it by sending 25 cents to this office.

BRO. D. K. REASY has moved to Lincoln, Nebr., and he cordially invites Brethren passing through that City, to call on him. His address is 1428 S. Street, Lincoln, Nebr.

"ONE of the proofs of the divine origin of the Bible is its capability of enduring the test of close and thorough study in its every portion. The more a man knows about the Bible, the more he values the Bible; and the more a man studies the Bible, the more he finds in the Bible that is worth studying. There is always something that is fresh and that is deserving of fresh attention to be found in any and every text of the Bible that is brought under fresh examination. This is the unvarying testimony of every intelligent Bible student; and the fact that this is so is an added reason why the Bible should be studied systematically and persistently."

IN a recent sermon preached by Sam Jones on "Fighting the good fight," he said in part, "There is no such thing as fighting without an issue. Draw the line, then the trouble begins. There was a line drawn called Mason and Dixon's line, and soon Fort Sumter was fired on. Then Northern men came North and Southern men went South. How long would it have taken to conquer the South if half the Northern soldiers went lounging, drinking, and dancing with the Southern army?—just what the church is doing? Don't ask God to turn his guns on the Devil, and kill half the church at the first lick. Joshua drew the line and said: 'Come over on the Lord's side.' He who does this leaves the Devil's territory. If you run your business as you run your church, the sheriff would sell you out in six months. So the devil would sell out your churches—for he has a big mortgage on them—only they won't bring anything in the market of this world or the next." There is a good deal of sound theology in the words of the Southern Evangelist as quoted above, and we submit them to the careful consideration of those who oppose drawing lines between the church and the world.

BRO. J. G. ROYER returned on the 2nd inst., from Rockingham, Ray Co., Mo., where he spent one week in laboring for the church in preaching the Word of Truth. His labors were most abundantly blessed by the Lord, and twenty precious souls were brought into the fold of Christ by baptism. It was felt that, could the meetings have continued a week or two longer, many more who were almost persuaded would have been gathered in, but Bro. Royer's duties at home, connected with his school work, demanded his immediate attention and, with a good deal of reluctance, the meetings were closed and he returned home. There is much to encourage our Brethren in the Rockingham church. They have a goodly land and the Lord is blessing them both spiritually and temporally. May the Lord bless those who have so recently taken up the cross, and make them valiant soldiers in his service. Victory is sure if we but fight the good fight and keep the faith. The Miller and Sommer Debate was held in the Rockingham church, Ray Co., Mo. Only a few months have passed away since its close, and yet, in that time, twenty-eight have been added to the Brethren's church by baptism where the debate was held. Comment is unnecessary. These results speak louder than words and they show that our cause lost nothing in the hands of its able defender, Bro. R. H. Miller. The Truth will stand and its opposers will fail in the end.

THE meetings in Chicago are held in a small house belonging to the Christian friends, on Oakley Avenue, between Van Buren and Jackson Streets. Services every Lord's Day at 3:30 P. M. Sunday-school at 2:30. Prayer-meeting at 7:30, Thursday evening.

"A MAN'S life may be told in his prayers at least as truly as in his actions. Indeed, we never know people aright unless we know whether they pray, and what things they pray for. It is rightly said that 'actions speak louder than words,' but even actions are deceptive. We often do the things we would not, and find not how to do the things we would, but who can understand our faults or virtues, our failings or our victories, unless they know how we deplore the evil and disclaim the merit of the good before the Great Heart-searcher? Men's actions are often inconsistent with each other, and often ambiguous, often at variance with their most cherished purposes; but their prayers, honestly told, reveal the essential qualities of their spirits."

BRO. WILBUR B. STOVER who has been spending the summer with his uncle, J. M. Stover, of Edgemont, Md., and making himself useful by assisting in shipping peaches, has been working in the Sunday-school. He writes under date of Aug. 26th as follows: "It is with a joyful heart I write you to night. As the Lord's work advances, let every heart sing and be glad. On Saturday afternoon we had our harvest meeting, Bro. D. D. Bonsack doing the preaching. The good brother also preached for us on Saturday night, Sunday morning and Sunday night. A week previous we had announced that yesterday's Sunday-school collection would be for the missionary work. Enclosed please find check for full amount, $18.86. Please place it for the General Mission and Church Erection Work, the offering of the Welty church Sunday-school. We are all so pleased with the result of our first missionary effort in this particular direction, that I know we will soon try again. Who does not love to give? It is he who never gives."

THIS is the season for the so-called County fairs, or, as they have been more fittingly named, "Agricultural Horse Trots." The one important feature of the modern agricultural meeting is the horse-race; and pool-selling and gambling are the order of the day. The Polo Press, one of our County papers, and, by the way, it is one of the best papers in the County, being noted for the high moral ground it takes on all questions of public interest, says: "It is easy to see why a certain class of people patronize fairs and races, when the Aurora Beacon explains that one man paid $800 for the exclusive privilege of running a wheel of fortune at the races there, and carried out of the town at least $8,000. Races and gambling of all sorts seem to go together naturally, and when they absorb the funds and overshadow the other features of a County or State fair, it is time to close that fair." The Press is right. "Races and gambling of all sorts go together naturally," and it is because the managers of County and State fairs make the horse-race the prominent feature, that the fair becomes simply a place where all sorts of gambling are carried on. Were it not for the deplorable fact that men and women, who profess to follow Christ, attend these fairs, they would soon close. It is the money of professed Christians that keeps them alive. It is the money of professed Christians that goes to make up the purses for the race. We trust that none of our members will attend these gambling affairs. Shun them, for surely you can not afford to compromise your Christian character by paying money for horse-racing and gambling.

Bro. D. R. Prowant, of Dupont, Ohio, reports the baptism of Bro. Jacob Warner at the age of eighty-four years. The ordinance was administered by Eld. John Prowant who is in his sixty-eighth year. It is encouraging to know that both the old and the young may find Christ if they will but seek after him.

Bro. Joseph B. Early, of Salem, Ore., brought to our office last week a sample of Oregon fruit,—plums, pears, and apples. They were beautiful to look at and of most excellent flavor. Bro. Early says that Oregon is a splendid fruit country and that apples, pears, plums, and in the Southern Counties, peaches, grow to perfection. The specimens he left with us bear him out fully in his statements. We like good fruit, and, were we looking for a home in this country, we would be strongly tempted to take a look at Oregon.

Bro. J. E. Young, of Beatrice, Nebr., says: "We know you love to hear of the Lord's work prospering. We love to tell you what he is doing for us. Another lamb was added to the flock in Beatrice on Sunday. Our dear Bro. W. C. Teeter stopped with us over Sunday on his way to his home at Sidney, Nebr. He preached for us Sunday morning very acceptably, for the establishment of the saints and the upbuilding of the Lord's kingdom here. Bro. Teeter seems like one of our family here. We hope he will pass by this way often. Let others not forget the lambs in Beatrice and everywhere."

LEAVES FROM OUR NOTE-BOOK.

In our last we promised to say something about the cause in the North Beatrice church. Our readers, perhaps, remember that two meeting-houses have been erected within the last year,—one in Beatrice and one about seven miles from town. This has been done with much labor and sacrifice on the part of the membership. In town the burden rests mainly on three brethren who determined to build the house and get what help they could. As a result, each of them has had to pay out of his own pocket a little over $500. One of these brethren is J. E. Young, the minister, and rather limited in means. Besides all this he is giving a good portion of his time to the work without remuneration. How he is to get along in this way, we do not know. We hope the brethren and sisters of Beatrice will read carefully the 9th chapter of 1st Corinthians. You should remember that the financial part of the work is the smallest. He who superintends your Sunday-school and preaches twice for you every Sunday, and has the care of the church, to some extent, resting upon him, has the greater burden.

But we want to notice a few of the encouraging features of the work here. Merely building a meeting-house and paying for it is not success. We can not now recall the exact number that have united with the church, but three dozen or more have been added. Most of these have become earnest and active workers. A few, of course, have grown cold, and, it may be, will fall back to their old habits and ways. And this is just what we may expect in our efforts to build up the church in new fields, and especially in towns and cities. There is a class of unsteady, wavering persons who are always on the look-out for something new, and these are likely to come into the church first. If we can, by care and proper teaching, succeed in settling some of these, it will commend our work, and the more thoughtful and steady will be led to investigate our cause. Of course we do not mean that all who come into the church in these places are of this class; often our own Brethren's children and those long acquainted with the church come and make good, substantial members. We are only speaking of the general tendency, to show the necessity of patience, care, and judgment in dealing with members brought into the church possessing such characteristics and having but little previous knowledge of it. The same rules for church government in old and well-established churches will not always apply in these new fields. More teaching and more earnest and well-directed work must be done.

Another encouraging feature in the work here is, the elder in charge is heartily in sympathy with it and exercises good judgment in reference to church work in towns. Just here is where the cause often suffers. Some who have charge of the work in town, insist on things being done here as in the country. Such a state of affairs can never be attended with success. There is a vast difference between city and country work and this difference must be recognized before we can make much headway. We are glad to notice, however, that this hinderance is not in the way in Beatrice, and it adds considerably to our hope for the success of the work there. In short, we think the outlook in Beatrice is good, and we hope Bro. Young and his co-laborers there will have the sympathy and prayers of our people. Then, too, more financial aid would be a help. Bro. Young can not really afford to invest so much of his means, and in addition give so much of his time to the work.

At the meeting-house out of town is where father-in-law Archy Van Dyke, Jacob Kelso, and Levi Shaffer labor. The cause seems to be prospering. There have been a number of additions within the last year. They have a prosperous Sunday-school, superintended by deacon Charley Price, and preaching every Sunday morning. On the whole we observe quite a growth in the church since our visit here six years ago. Of one thing we are very forcibly impressed, and that is, more consecrated laborers are badly needed in this western field. The great and predominating spirit here seems to be to get property, make money, and too many of our ministers have imbibed this spirit. Too many are land agents and preachers. Perhaps there are not as many in this business as there were a few years ago, but it does seem to us that there is a lack of consecration. The mind is too much occupied with the business affairs of life. But when we come to think of it, our ministers are not so much to blame after all. The poor fellows must live, and as it requires just as much effort for them to make a living as other people, and as they have the ministry laid upon them in addition, is it much wonder that they get business and the ministry mixed a little sometimes? To our mind a poor man in this western country, with a family and the ministry, is a genuine object of pity, and if he faithfully struggles through it all, a very bright crown will surely be his. Just now it occurs to us that the ministers of this Beatrice church may think we got our impressions of a non-consecrated ministry from observations here, but not so; our observations have been more general.

DOWN INTO KANSAS.

Last week we went down to McPherson and Newton, Kansas. We stopped at McPherson on Saturday evening, Aug. 10, and remained with Bro. Sharp and family until Sunday morning when we went with Bro. John Keeny down to Newton. Brother and sister Keeny have been stewards at the college for the last year but have now accepted the position of janitor in a Newton school. Sister Keeny had already gone to Newton and we found her living, as she has so long desired to do, quietly with her two daughters, Laura and Emma. In a short time Bro. John Keeny and his family were with us and we truly felt that we were among old friends. In the afternoon we went to a little chapel where we tried to preach to a very small congregation. It had been very rainy all day which, our Bro. Andes said, made it smaller than usual. Bro. L. Andes moved from Mt. Morris, Ill., to this place several years ago and since then has been called to the ministry. He is the only minister here and, we believe, is doing the best he can for the cause. All men are not eloquent preachers, neither have all men the gift of managing a church, but a manifestation of a little of that love that "thinketh no evil" on the part of the membership will help any man most wonderfully. Then, too, my brethren and sisters, if your minister, or some one else in the church, doesn't do right, how much better are you if you do wrong? It is hardly consistent to censure your fellows when you are in the same boat.

We remained with the Keeny family until the next Saturday. Everything possible was done to make us enjoy our visit, and we have not spent a week more pleasantly for a long time. We gave them the parting hand reluctantly and with a sad heart. We have been in the past closely associated. The family lived in our house; we ate together, we prayed together, and our great concern is that we may all meet again in the better life.

But we want to say a little about our visit to McPherson. We spent Sunday, Aug. 18, at this place. Bro. Keeny had returned to finish some work before his final departure, and now became our companion in making visits to some of the Brethren. We had visited Bro. Sharp's the Saturday evening before and found them pleasantly situated, and, as ever, brimful of zeal in their church and educational work. Sister Sharp is one of the Marys in the church, and Bro. Sharp's ability as a preacher and teacher makes him an important factor in our church and educational work. Bro. Samuel Miller and wife, formerly of Dry Valley, Pa, also live on College Place. They have a pleasant home and, as far as church and educational advantages are concerned, we should think they are well situated. In close proximity to the college grounds lives sister Lydia Reiff, formerly Lydia Clapper, of Hopewell church, Pa. She has a beautiful home and is certainly well situated in life. Sunday night we spent with Eld. D. Vaniman who is now located at this place and is General Business Manager of the College. We have known of Eld. Vaniman for years and were glad for the privilege of meeting his family and forming their acquaintance. We hope he may be able to steer the College through successfully and that it may become an honor to the church. But to do this will require hard work and self-sacrifice on the part of more than one.

We attended Sabbath school and preaching twice in the College chapel. The services were well attended by the seemingly interested congregations. Sister B. joins us in an expression of gratitude to our brethren and sisters at McPherson and Newton for their genuine hospitality and marked kindness.

WATCH.—Christianity has no greater or more insidious foe than hypocrisy and false religions,—holding for doctrine the commandments of men and worshiping the gods of this world,—Fashion and Opulence,—more than the God of the Bible. Infidelity, although a blighting curse to humanity, is, however, not necessarily deceptive.—S. W. Hoover.

"OUR TRACTS" form a line of gratuitous reading matter, embracing both faith and precept, that in reality and essential, combined instruction, worth, and sterling characteristics, outweighs all the imaginations of inventive genius or the unregenerate mind. The faith of the Bible is the faith of God, and of the pure word,—a faith, persevering and humble, yet resolute and aggressive,—a faith that makes devils fear and tremble, but men of God firm and strong, and which carries with it an influence and power in the life and character of its possessor, that is both superhuman and divine. Man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.—S. W. Hoover.

MUCH NEEDED.

BY S. W. HOOVER.

WHILE preaching at a place recently where a small number of members are located, but somewhat remote from the main body or congregation, I was very forcibly brought to realize the importance—may I say necessity?—of having hymn books distributed among the members, or, better still, placed in the hands of some active brother or sister, or other person, to distribute among the congregation at such places and meetings.

There are almost always some persons present, who, if invited and furnished with a book, will cheerfully show their appreciation by taking an active part in the singing. Good singing is necessary to spirited and successful meetings, and we cannot have it without books. I, therefore, suggest to all the brethren, and especially those entrusted with missionary work, to endeavor to supply or have all such points supplied with the necessary books. Such will be of great help to the minister, cause, and congregation. Singing is a part of the divine service, and I believe that this matter is as necessary, and as much a part of the work of congregations and our mission committees, as any other.

EVIDENCES OF THE TRUE CHURCH.

BY J. S MOHLER.

Chapter Three.—Church Succession.

By church succession is meant an unbroken chain of physical, organized succession of the church, back to the days of Christ and the apostles.

Many persons rely solely on the ground of succession as a sure test of the validity of the church referred to by Christ. Some ministers make a hobby of church succession for proselyting purposes, as though a mere line of succession were paramount to the doctrine of life and salvation.

We remark that if Christianity depended on physical conditions, and were wholly a physical, instead of a spiritual work, then the claims to physical church succession might be entitled to some weight, but, inasmuch as Christianity is primarily a spiritual work, physical conditions, as direct factors in the work of salvation, are of a secondary consideration. Physical conditions bear the relation of servants to the spirit, through which our obedience is made manifest, and our light to shine.

Among the many churches in existence are some that can trace their succession, physically, back to the apostolic age of the world; yet, these same churches, doctrinally, and practically, have deviated far from the simplicity of the Gospel.

There is, however, one kind of succession that is absolutely necessary in order to building truly upon the Rock. It is the true doctrinal succession, after the Gospel pattern. With this succession we are safe, even if some breaks have occurred along the physical line.

To extend this thought a little farther, we use the following illustration: Suppose a man has occasion to go into a far country, perhaps, as an ambassador to represent his country at some foreign court. Before bidding adieu to his companion, he places upon her person, as a mark of his high regard for her, ornaments to be worn by her, as a token of his love, until his return. But during his long absence his wife is compelled, from the force of circumstances, to shift from place to place that she may live. On his return he meets his companion far away from where he left her, but it is not necessary for the husband to ascertain the route his wife traveled during his absence, to learn whether she is really his lawful bride. He at once recognizes her as his true bride by her appearance, voice, gestures, and especially by the ornaments he gave her.

So with Christ,—the Bridegroom of our souls! He has gone into a far country to represent his kingdom on earth at the court of heaven. Before parting from his bride he promised to come again. He left his bride here in the wilderness of sin. He has been absent nearly two thousand years. His bride has shifted from age to age and from place to place, that she might find a resting-place for her weary feet and be nourished in the divine life.

When her Lord comes, the line of physical church succession will not be the test as to being his true bride. If we have the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit which is in the sight of God of great price, the ornament of charity, of obedience, of patience, of humility, of forgiveness, of faith, etc., we will at once be acknowledged as his true, chaste, lawful, and trusty bride.

This is the true, doctrinal succession,—building on the Rock! That will be a building that will stand, though heaven and earth pass away. Thus we see that to make a test of church succession as evidence that we are standing on the Rock, is a very insecure foundation on which to rest our heavenly hopes. Indeed, it is very unreliable, and rather an evidence of building upon the sand. May the Lord help us to dig deep and build on the "Solid Rock," that when the storms come, the building may stand to the honor and glory of God!

GIVING TO GOD.

BY LANDON WEST.

THE thought of giving to God is presented most clearly to the reader in the account given us of Abram's meeting with Melchizedek after his battle with the kings. See Gen. 14: 18, 20.

The battle was over and the victory won. Abram had done his part and he had all the spoil, but he felt that it was not all his own, and he wanted to share it with his helpers. The priest of God had helped in prayer; the Lord had given the victory, and Abram had the result, and he wished to share it with all his partners. He wished none of it for himself, but to devote it all to the cause of God. One-tenth he gave to the priest (to the church) and the balance to the world,— to the king of Sodom, reserving only what the young men had eaten and the three young men he named, that they might take their portion, but not any more. Abram took nothing for himself, lest it should be said he was fighting for this world, and, hence, like the world. He gave it all to the Lord. What a noble example for the church of our day, and would to God, we could all see it and all follow it!

Abram felt that the Lord had helped him in his work, and he felt that he ought to help the Lord and his work. He recognized the truth that the Lord, Melchizedek and himself were all partners in the work, and he resolved that each should have his share. The tenth given to the Lord's service showed him devoted to his God's house, and all the remainder given back to the world, showed him a man of a pure heart, and that his religion was the highest and best that the world had. It was the best way to lead all men to worship the God whom Abram served that could be shown. It was a light to the world in that day, and it is a light yet.

In our day we need men of pure hearts, and they are the blessed ones, for they shall see God. To show that our hearts are pure, that our religion is pure and undefiled, we must give to the church, and to the world, to the poor and the sick, yea, to him that asketh of us, something of what the Lord hath given us. In this way we show the light to the world, and make not only friends to ourselves when we fail, but it recommends the faith delivered unto the saints, shown forth by Jesus Christ, even for his enemies, and down to the end of time by us; if we only give our lives and all we have and are unto God.

"YOUR day, my day, the world's day, the day of opportunity, the day of grace, the day of salvation, all days are swiftly passing away; and the great day, the last day, will surely and speedily come. While it is day we may work the work of God, and do what he has commanded us. But if we idle this present opportunity away it will never return, and the neglect of to-day may never be repaired. To-morrow will bring the work for to-morrow, and every day and every year will bring its appropriate duties. Let the work of to-day be done to-day."

"FASHION NOTES."

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

PERHAPS this is a rather objectionable title for an article in the MESSENGER. I think, however, that it is very necessary to sound a note of warning once in a while.

When we see the above title in print, we naturally think at once that it refers to fashions in dress. But it is a very different fashion and an alarmingly prevalent one to which I refer,—the fashion, or habit, of backbiting or tale-bearing. This fashion is not confined to any particular season of the year, nor followed especially by women, but is found among all classes of people. It seems to be a natural outgrowth of jealousy and self-esteem, and displays itself in various ways. The one to which I refer in this article is the disgusting fashion of pouring into the ears of strangers uninteresting and, perhaps, greatly exaggerated tales about our neighbors or their children,—unearthing and parading before them all the details of their follies, mistakes, and even old scandals. This is not only repulsive to all well-thinking people, but it is a very low and degrading fashion, and displays a lack of self-respect and good morals.

Not only is this fashion prevalent in communities but it is shamefully prevalent in the church. It seems that there is always some self-delegated person to dig up and ventilate old troubles that might and ought to be undisturbed and forgotten. How much better it would be if we would all attend strictly to our own business, "do all the good we can and as little harm as possible," instead of always complaining that "somebody" fails to appreciate us properly. "Sister A. does not exactly meet my approval; or Bro. B. is more influential than I am; or, perhaps, can preach a little more acceptably than I can," etc.

"BEHOLD, I THOUGHT."—2 Kings 5: 11.

BY A. FLORY.

NAAMAN, the leper, was a great man. He was captain of the host of the king of Syria, but he was like many of the great men in this day and age of the world, when the prophet of the Lord told him what to do to be cleansed of his leprosy, he did not like to do it. He thought some easier way would do just as well. His servant told him, "If the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldest thou not have done it?" 2 Kings 5: 13.

It is now like it was then,—the common people are more ready and willing to obey than the great and the noble. Paul, in writing to his Corinthian brethren, says, "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many noble, not many mighty are called, but God has chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise." 1 Cor. 26: 27. Naaman had already made up his mind how the prophet would cure his leprosy before he heard what the man of God wanted him to do. He thought surely he would come out, strike his hand over the place, and heal the disease. His next thought was, "Are not Abana and Pharpar, rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel? may I not wash in them, and be clean?"

He went away in a rage. He did not like to give up his opinions. It seemed as foolishness to go and wash in the river Jordan when it could have been done with so much less trouble at home. Dear reader, never violate a command of God in order to save trouble! How many millions of people are trying to go to heaven on the short and easy road! How many spend all their days thinking, thinking, thinking! How many, when they are told in the Gospel of Christ what to do, think something else will do just as well! How many great doctors of divinity, like Talmage and, perhaps, numbers of others, think that a good, hearty handshaking will do just as well as the holy kiss!

Dear reader, we are safe to do what the Gospel of Christ tells us! If you are smitten on one cheek, and it tells you to turn the other also, never think that a blow in return will do just as well! If it tells you to abstain from every appearance of evil, never think that it makes no difference if you are seen at places of questionable propriety. Never think, when God's Word tells you not to be conformed to the world, that a ruffle, a ring, or a feather will do you no harm. Where are your peculiarities, spoken of by Paul to Titus, 2: 14, if you look like the world and act like the world? Christ says, "I know my sheep." All sheep look like sheep. They never look like goats or something else. The true Christian never uses slang or unmeaning words. Christ says, "Every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." If you do turn away, dear reader, like Naaman did, will you be persuaded like he was?

J. H. BEER, Sec.

From Kearney, Nebr.

WE held our council Aug. 17. All business was disposed of in brotherly feeling. Four were received by letter. We will hold our love-feast Sept. 14 and 15, the Lord willing.

At this writing, our dear brother, M. Y. Snavely, is suffering severely from the effects of a kick by a vicious horse. Our prayer is that God will spare him, and raise him up again to his family and to us!

JOHN HELSER.

From Cartersville, Virginia.

BRO. GEORGE GRAYBILL commenced preaching for us on the evening of Aug. 17, and remained until this morning. He preached the funeral of Bro. Alfred Painter, who died May 31. His text was John 11: 25. That night and the next he preached for us, seven miles from Bro. Painter's, at our little church in Mt. Hored. The attendance was good.

We, as a little flock, need some one to help us build up our little church. There can never be a flourishing church without a leader, and the most important fact is that love and union should freely exist before any good can be done. If we do not try to work together, and all try to help build up our church, it will finally die.

We all have something to do. We can not expect to prosper if we sit on the stool of idleness, with folded hands, neither should we murmur when we see one trying to build up Zion; but we should help to bear the burden, and not pull down what has been built up. We should do all that is in our power, and not expect one to do all, and some nothing.

We sometimes think we will do too much, but we can never do too much for the cause of Christ, if we do our whole duty, but we can do too little if we are not very careful.

We would be happy to meet Bro. Graybill again, and all others who come to preach the Everlasting Truth, that sinners may come flocking to Christ. It requires a great responsibility on our part to set a good example before those who are not following in the footsteps of Jesus. It depends much on our conduct, our walk and conversation. If they see we are not what we profess to be, our profession will be in vain. People watch us when we think they are not.

My prayer is that we may prosper in some future day. It makes my heart sad when I reflect over the matter, but God only knows the hindering cause, and we leave it with him. We can only pray and trust God for the future, that the hinderances may be removed in his own good time. Let us try to do our part, that we may not be held responsible for not doing our part. Let us take the advice of our dear brother,—"Choose you this day whom ye will serve."

We all want a home in heaven's happy land. Even the vilest sinner wants to reach that blessed abode, but he can have no assurance of ever obtaining it as long as he lives in wickedness. May we all live faithful to our profession, that we may obtain that rest that remaineth to the people of God! Search well the Scriptures; reflect seriously and earnestly, that you may find peace with God before it is too late.

"Now is the time to serve the Lord,
The time to insure the great reward."

FLORIDA ETTER.

August 20, 1889.

Our Visit to the Cottonwood Church, Emporia, Kans.

AT our last District Meeting it was decided that Bro. Hope and the writer visit the above-named church, upon request of delegate from said church to inquire into its wants, and to arrange matters, if possible, for the future prosperity of the church.

Wednesday, Aug. 7, was the day appointed to begin meetings. The writer met with the church on time, but Bro. Hope failed to meet with us for some cause. The services were held in Emporia, in the Baptist church. The attendance, at first, was small but gradually increased from evening to evening till Sunday night, when we had quite a large attendance, with good interest.

On Saturday, Aug. 10, the church was called together in council. Bro. Flack, the resident minister, was present; also Eld. Stouder, of the Verdigris church. The church was fairly represented.

The business was all amicably adjusted. Bro. Flack being alone, and the members much scattered, he can not minister to the spiritual wants of the church as much as would be desirable.

We found no serious charges resting against any one. True, there is some disorder, which, I believe, will be properly adjusted in course of a little time.

What the church there needs, more than anything else, is a live, active elder among them,—a shepherd to look after the lame and wandering ones, and to feed the sheep and lambs of the fold out of the rich treasures of God's Word. The church seems to be famishing for more spiritual food.

Their love-feast is appointed for Sept. 21. Ministering brethren in adjoining churches will please bear this feast in mind and lend a helping hand! Elders and ministers, in good standing, seeking a location in the West, should remember this church. Address Bro. L. Flack, Emporia, Kans. J. S. MOHLER.

Through the Hills.

THE Mission Board of Southern Ohio had made arrangements for Eld. Landon West and the writer to pay a visit to the scattered members in Adams County, Ohio, about the middle of August, but before the time for starting had arrived, Bro. West's health would not permit him to make so long and rough a journey as one is compelled to make among the hills.

Bro. Jonas Horning very reluctantly consented to make the trip, and let Bro. West drive through with Bro. Jacob Garber a week later. Accordingly I took the early train at Camden on the "Pan Handle," and arrived in Cincinnati about 8 A. M. Bro. Horning came over the C. J. & M., arriving about noon. Here we parted company with Eld. J. S. Flory, God only knows when to meet again.

Having several hours in the city I concluded to visit the Zoological Gardens, about six miles from the Grand Central Depot. The "Zoo" is one of the principal attractions in our country. Few people get time enough to see it as they would like. I can not attempt a description, but let it suffice to say that the grounds are beautiful and fascinating, and one may see almost every species of animal,—bird, reptile and fish known to naturalists.

The Custom House, Exchange and Tyler-Davidson Fountain are pleasing structures, but one regrets the extravagant expenditure of money in the superfluities on these buildings.

Our route was the Chesapeake and Ohio R. R. Crossing the great iron bridge a few hundred yards above the noted suspension bridge, we pass through Covington and Newport, Ky., and then, for eighty-five miles, all the time in sight of the Ohio, we steam along the "Old Kentucky Shore," and arrive at Rome a little after dark. The town is on the Ohio side, and a quiet little place of some three hundred industrious, good-hearted people.

The river at this place is about a mile wide, and the view we get of the river and mountains, from our hotel, is grand. The next day we were obliged to hire a hackman to drive us ten miles, as those we had expected from the country did not arrive. Our first meetings were held on Churn Creek in a union church house. We had five meetings with them,—all well attended, and much interest manifested. The ministers who had visited them, and the members who had been converted under their ministry, had left their lights burning, but death and distance stood between them, and much of the good work, done in the days gone by, is thus lost.

From there we went to Turkey Run and held three meetings in the Shawnee school-house. These were also well attended, and the tracts we distributed were eagerly read. Seven sisters and two brethren met with us here, and all were much revived.

They are making an effort to get a house built for worship, and I pray God's blessings upon their work.

They evidently need that, and then they need a resident minister. There is a grand opening for our people there. Who will go over to possess the land? We held meetings at a private house for the especial benefit of a poor, afflicted sister, poor in this world's goods, but rich in good works.

I suppose the oldest woman in the County attended this meeting. She was ninety-four years old, yet her mind was active and strong. One poor, crippled sister we did not get to see. Here Bro. Horning and I parted company,—he to join brethren West and Garber at the Marble Furnace, and I to Rome. Having to remain till a late hour in the night for a boat, I had sent an appointment for a meeting. The Methodist church was kindly furnished, and a large crowd assembled.

Tracts had been distributed when we came up, and the reading of them had awakened an interest. The house is open at any time.

At 4 A. M. I boarded the "Big Sandy," and at high noon we were steaming into the "Queen City." At 4:30 P. M. I left for Barnett's, and by eight was at home with my family. The Lord had tenderly cared for them and me during our separation. "May the good ship of Zion sail on!"

A. G. CROSSWHITE.

Gratis, O.

From the Pan Handle of Texas.

AUG. 7, at 6:14 P. M., I met Bro. E. Eby at the train at Higgins, Texas, and conveyed him to my home,—twenty miles away,—at Lipscomb, Texas. Next day we went twenty-five miles north-west to the place where the Brethren have settled. This was Thursday. On Friday a council was held with the Brethren. Three brethren and four sisters presented their letters, which were read. All agreed to be subject to our General Brotherhood.

To more fully organize the Lipscomb church, there was a choice held for deacon, which fell on Bro. Samuel Fager, who was installed according to the usual order of the church by Bro. Eby, amidst great solemnity. May God sustain him in the discharge of his duties! This leaves the Lipscomb church in good working order, with two ministers in the second degree, one deacon, and twelve members. A letter was granted to the writer who intends to go to a new field of labor.

On Saturday we returned to Lipscomb. We stopped on the way and took dinner with sister Burger and her two sons. On Sunday brother Eby preached twice to small but attentive congregations, at Lipscomb. On Monday we journeyed in its toward the Cimarron church. We staid over night near the Beaver river and continued our journey the next day. We arrived at Bro. Moore's before noon and found them all in good health, excepting sister Brown who is much afflicted, and desires the prayers of God's children every-where in her behalf.

The Cimarron brethren had appointed a meeting for every evening during the week. Bro. Eby preached on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings to fair congregations with good attention. On Thursday was their council, preparatory to their love-feast on Saturday. The business of the council passed off pleasantly. Having had the oversight of the Cimarron church, and being about to change my residence, I proposed to the church, after the proper council, that they ordain one of their number to the eldership. To this the church agreed by choosing Bro. Elihu Moore, — he being the oldest in office. He was installed in the usual manner by Bro. Eby, assisted by the writer. May God give him grace sufficient for his day and trial. One was received of the council by baptism,—an old lady, aged sixty eight years.

The writer preached to the little flock on Thursday evening, and on Friday Bro. Eby left us for his home, so we enjoyed a week of pleasant intercourse and labor in the churches with him and the brethren, that gives us a foretaste of heaven. We continued the meeting on Friday evening, and on Saturday at 10 o'clock. At 3 P. M., Bro. Ennis preached, and in the evening the usual services were had. On Sunday, at 10 A. M. and 3 P. M. we had preaching again, with increasing interest. The aged sister, received on Thursday, not having been able to be present at the love-feast, on Saturday, on account of sickness, and having a desire to commune with her brethren, a private communion was held on Sunday evening for her benefit, which was greatly enjoyed by all. Then the parting hand was given, and on the morrow the writer returned home.

WASHINGTON WYLAND.

A Sad Accident.

ON Saturday afternoon, Aug. 24, two little girls, aged respectively about five and seven years,—daughters of Bro. Daniel and sister Mary Wysong, living near Nappanee, Ind.,—accompanied their brother (a young man), to a field on the back part of the farm, where he was engaged in burning some stumps. While he was engaged about thirty rods distant from the little girls, little Nina, the youngest of the two, set fire to corn-stalks, with which she intended to light another stump. From the burning corn-stalk her clothing became ignited, when she and her little sister, screaming, started to run to their brother. Before he could reach them, however, her clothing was all burned off excepting a small portion about the neck and shoulders. Her body was so badly burned that death followed in a few hours,—about eight o'clock the same evening. The shock upon the young man, who had taken his little sisters with him to the field, was so great, that he has been lying in an unconscious and critical condition, since the fatal results of the accident, up to the present writing, — about forty-eight hours. He seemed to take all the blame upon himself, because he had invited the little girls to go with him to the field. Little Nina remained conscious until just a few minutes before she died, and was able to tell her parents all about how the sad accident occurred. She would frequently call for some member of the family to come to her, especially the oldest son of the family, to whom she seemed to be especially attached. As he is yet in an unsaved state, I wonder whether little Nina is not calling from the other side of the river, "Where is Mell?"

She asked her mother a little while before her death, whether she would die soon, and when told, she thought not, he said, "I'll try not to." The last act in which the children were noticed to be engaged before the accident, was in the forenoon of this day, when, at a neighbor's house, with other children, they were having meeting, and were noticed to sing, in an earnest manner, a few lines of the hymn: "Farewell, vain world, I'm going home," with the chorus: "When the last trumpet sounds, I'll be there."

Little did any one think that so soon little Nina would indeed leave this vain world and cross the river to greener pastures!

This sad circumstance, with its surroundings, has not only caused the family to be broken-hearted, but has cast a gloom over the whole community, but, bless God, there is one who came into the world to heal the broken-hearted. The funeral was said to be the largest ever held in this part of the country on the occasion of the death of a child. The services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Bro. Peter Stuckman. Nina Wysong's age was five years, six months and ten days.

In writing the account of this sad circumstance, as is usually done, I have been calling it an "accident." Was it? Is it an accident when a soul is called into eternity? The Master says, "The hairs of your head are numbered." Was not the finger of God somewhere in this circumstance? Might it not have been to warn you, dear unconverted friend, to prepare for a higher and a nobler life? Might it not have been to us, dear brother and sister, a call to a closer walk with God? Let us, at least, make an application that will be beneficial to us in time and in eternity!

From Argos, Ind.

I MET with the Brethren in worship near Argos, Marshall Co., Ind., in the Walnut District. We had a pleasant Sunday-school before preaching, conducted and superintended by brethren Aaron Swihart and Edmund Beckner.

We had meetings at 10 A. M. and 4 P. M., after which we had the privilege of helping two persons to put on Christ by baptism. The Walnut District has a bright prospect before her. Her troubles seem to be over. The church now has a quiet time, and is beginning to work again. Our brethren should try to build up such places, and strengthen the cause! J. H. MILLER.

From La Porte Church, Ind.

UNDER the above caption, I had prepared a short notice of our harvest meeting on the 17th, and the meetings immediately afterward, for publication in GOSPEL MESSENGER. The notice was withheld and the reason assigned by the editor is, that he feared somebody might construe it into "self-praise," because it would go in with his sanction. Self-praise I abhor, and regard it as evidence that one "thinks more highly of himself than he ought to think." In preparing the article referred to, however, this point was not overlooked, and the language was as sparing as the truth would admit of. Indeed, I thought the MESSENGER columns were to "tell it unto the churches," when something good was offered, and if it hit the editor, he must either submit or vacate the "sanctum." I yield, however, to his better judgment, and ask pardon for the intrusion.

This much I offer as an explanation for the non-appearance of a notice of our meetings in the MESSENGER, and hope it will be satisfactory to those who were anxious to have it appear.

AUGUST 2, in company with Eld. H. P. Hylton, we started for St. Paul, Carroll Co., Va., on horseback, a distance of forty miles, to hold some meetings. We held one meeting on the way, and on Sunday morning, the fourth, we commenced meeting in a new church that Bro. Jacob Whisler, with some assistance, had built with his own means. This house is quite roomy, well lighted, with good floor and seats. I am inclined to believe that if we had more brethren like Bro. Whisler, we would have more church houses in the land than we have at present.

At the time, mentioned above, we preached two short sermons in the forenoon. At 4 P. M. we met again and preached the dedicatory sermon of the new church. On the fifth we met again and held two meetings. The congregations were not so large, but the interest was good. There are only eight members here. The prospect is that others will come to the church in the near future.

On the morning of the 6th we left for Glenwood, same County, a distance of twenty miles. Here we remained five days, and held ten meetings. Part of the time the audience was small, as the farmers were so busy with their oats and hay crops. The best of order and good interest were manifested. At this place we have several members. They have no church house, and are too poor to build one themselves. They have three kind friends, however, who are willing to help, and now they have a house on the way, of which the frame work, — twenty-seven by forty feet in size—is already finished. Providence permitting, all will be finished by November next. This house is to be free for the various denominations. The Brethren will have their part in it.

We think the prospects are that many more can be gathered into the fold in the near future. We returned home on the twelfth day, and found all well, for which we thank the Lord.

From the Valley Church, Botetourt Co, Va.

THE Brethren who have the oversight of the church in Botetourt, we feel assured, have the cause at heart, and are trying to keep house in the fear of the Lord. We are in union, as was manifested at our last church council, when everything passed off pleasantly, and all seemed to feel that it was good to be there. Several have been added to our force in the last two years, and still they come. May God help them to continue to come and make faithful soldiers of the cross! We contemplate holding our love-feast Oct. 5.

Bro. J. H. M. Beahm, of Bridgewater, was with us Aug. 25th, and gave us an able discourse from Gal. 6: 4. He has many warm friends here and all were glad to see him. WM. S. GREENWAY.

Cloverdale, Va.

From Chippewa Church, Wayne Co, Ohio.

A GOODLY number of the members of the old Chippewa church convened in council on Saturday, Aug. 10. Elders Cyrus Hoover and Samuel Garver were present from adjoining churches.

At the request of our elder, Bro. Garver acted as Moderator. A good deal of work was before the meeting, but everything passed off pleasantly. We were very sorry, indeed, that several of our number had become tired of serving God in the good old way, and wanted to turn back to the fleshpots of Egypt. They had been kindly admonished by the brethren, yet seemed to think there was more pleasure in the service of Satan than in that of God. Oh! poor deluded souls that we are! Who shall protect us from the wrath to come?

The missionary cause was not forgotten, and we hereby give a short account of our method of working. Two years ago we began with the plan recommended by our Brethren at Annual Meeting, viz., the "Penny-a-week system." Two sisters were appointed by the church to solicit each member at least once a year, thereby giving all an opportunity to give who wished to do so. The result was very encouraging. The proceeds of the first year were about $65.00. The second year they were in the neighborhood of $75.00. Our membership is about one hundred and fifty, or perhaps more.

We do not give these figures to boast, but to show what can be done if the plan laid down by our brethren is carried out.

In soliciting an opportunity is given to each one to give as the Lord has prospered him,—a penny a week, more or less. Many give more than a penny a week; some few, less; while there are yet others who fail to give anything. We are, nevertheless, encouraged that we are making progress in the right direction, even though we are not yet doing all that is required of us.

May God awaken us all to a sense of our duty, that we may go forth in the discharge of our Christian duties more faithfully than ever, realizing within ourselves that "the Lord loveth a cheerful giver."

The brethren also appointed a love-feast to be held at the Beech Grove church house, Oct. 12, commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

On Sunday, July 28, a husband and wife were received into church fellowship by baptism. A young brother was also received at our quarterly council in May. May the Lord bless them and all of us, that we may live faithful until death and finally enjoy the home prepared for us at God's right hand. FLORA I. HOFF.

Field Notes.

AUG. 16 Eld. J. B. Hylton and I left home to visit some isolated Brethren in Carroll and Grayson Counties, Va.

Tidings had been received from Elk Creek in Grayson Co, that a man desired to unite with us. He had been a member of the M. E. church for seven years, but, on hearing the doctrine of the Brethren, he decided that IT was apostolic.

A ride of fifty miles over mountains, and rivers, and valleys brought us to the desired place. Here we met with a small congregation on Saturday afternoon where our elder brother spoke to the people about the yoke of Jesus, and insisted on the people to get under that yoke.

On Sunday a very large crowd assembled from far and near, to witness the apostolic mode of baptism. We tried to tell them something about faith, and how they might prove to the world that they were in possession of faith.

After services we repaired to the water side, and there, in the presence of one thousand witnesses, perhaps, our young brother was buried beneath the liquid waters of Elk Creek.

Here we have now five members, which, we hope, will be a nucleus around which many others will gather, until sufficient material is gathered to organize them into a working body.

On Wednesday we left the little band to hunt for other sheep in the mountains of Carroll. We found a few here and there, and, with one exception, all said they were in the same faith as when they united with the church, and willing to labor with the church for an increase of holiness both in themselves and others.

We spent ten days with them and in traveling, preached thirteen sermons and traveled about one hundred and fifty miles. My fellow-traveler got very sick and was unable to work one day, but the Lord gave him strength again.

WE, the Brethren of the Tippecanoe church, Kosciusko Co., Ind., held our harvest meeting, Aug. 11. We had a good meeting, large congregations, and good attention to the Word preached. One was received into the church by baptism, to walk in newness of life. The missionary cause was also remembered, and a collection held for that purpose. This is as it should be. We receive such bountiful blessings from the Lord that we should freely give him that which belongs to him. The earth and the fullness thereof belongs to him! DANIEL ROTHENBERGER.

"NOT only strike while the iron is hot," said Cromwell, "but make it hot by striking."

From Holyoke, Colo.

I JUST got home from Sherman County, Kans., where we had a very pleasant council-meeting Aug. 3. We also enjoyed some pleasant visits with the members and others, the week following. We held some meetings with good interest. On the 10th the members of the Fair View church came together to commemorate the sufferings and death of their dear Savior. They were made to rejoice to see members from Quinter church, also from Thomas and Cheyenne Counties, Kans, and from Good Hope church, Colorado. Forty members communed and many spectators were present. The ministers from abroad were B. B. Whitmer, Charles Brown and J. I. Smith. All expressed themselves as being much built up in the faith once delivered to the saints. On Tuesday evening we met with the members of the Cheyenne church in council. They set the time for their feast for Sept. 21, at Bro. Esrom Slifer's, nine miles south-west of Bird City. I then made my way to Dundy County, Nebr., where I had one meeting near Max with good interest. Next day I went to Necl, same County. We had quite a large audience in the hall, with marked attention and good interest. Next morning, in company with Bro. Richard and sister Short, we made our way into Chase County, Nebr., to Bro. Charles Travis' and met with the members there in council. We had a pleasant interview, and on Sunday had two meetings with deep interest. We had Sunday-school in the morning, which seems to be quite interesting. Bro. J. K. Sharp is their Superintendent.

JOHN S. SNOWBERGER.

From Nocona, Texas.

I HAVE often been encouraged by reading the news from the churches, and especially since we came here from the East. We have been south of here and labored in the cause of our Master in Parker and Erath Counties. In Parker we met some very faithful members,—nine in number. Bro. Ira Buckley is their minister. Two were added to their number by baptism while we were there, and Bro. K. G. Tennison was elected to the ministry. Hope he will be able to do great good for the cause of the church. I would say, the little flock there well deserves the prayers of the church. They have had great persecutions and trials to pass through, but they trusted in God and a brighter day appears to be dawning for those dear brethren and sisters. We were with them, in worshiping our kind heavenly Father, some eight times. We then went to Erath County, where we met four of Father's children,—Bro. George Snapp and wife, formerly of Virginia, and Bro. Hall and wife, whom Bro. Albert Vaniman baptized about a year ago. He is the first and last one of our ministers to that County until we went, so those of you who are isolated can appreciate a little of the joy. These members are workers. The MESSENGER and tracts are kept in circulation all the time. Bro. Hall and wife gave us an account of how they were brought to Christ by reading tracts and papers furnished them by Bro. Snapp. They at first read them to laugh over, then laid them away for a long season. Finally they read them again for curiosity's sake, commented upon them and at last looked for the Scripture references and found them in keeping with the tracts and papers. By the teachings of the Sacred Word and brother and sister Snapp's influence, as living epistles, these inquirers were converted to God. I speak of this to encourage our tract and MESSENGER work, and our faithful brethren and sisters who, by their influence, work for the Master. We held eight meetings here but there were no additions to the church. One may plant, another water, but God only can give the increase!

After being absent from loved ones seventeen days, I returned and found them all well. Bro. Henry Brubaker, whom we left very sick, is well again. All the praise be to God!

ABR. MOLSBEE.

An Impostor.

DURING the month of June last, a very suspicious person passed through our section. He gave his name as B. F. Slateson, a native of Switzerland, claiming to have been educated for a priest, at Rome, and as having emigrated to America about three or four years ago. He said that he entered the Brethren's school at Huntingdon in order to acquire a knowledge of the English language, and he claims to have been at Huntingdon for two years, that he was baptized there October 1, 1888, and licensed to preach soon after coming into the church.

While at school at Huntingdon he claims to have defrayed his expenses by lecturing and preaching in the surrounding neighborhood and vicinity.

He was a man, small in stature, of light complexion and smooth face, and gave his age as twenty-six.

He traveled afoot and carried a Bible and singing book. He lectured and preached three times while at "Top of Alleghany." His delivery is very good and his discourses are directed to the exposure of the Catholic doctrine. His memorandum book was filled with notes of lectures which he delivered about Huntingdon and elsewhere.

The above is a brief history of the man who claims to be a minister of the Gospel of Christ. After conferring with the Principal of the Huntingdon school, who informs us that such a man never attended school there, and other facts, brought to bear in the case, we are convinced of the fact that he is a wolf in sheep's clothing,—an impostor and a deceiver. The above is given in order that the Brethren, as well as others, may not be imposed upon by an individual of such description.

Literary Notes.

INFIDELITY REFUTED BY INFIDELS. By Samuel P. Sprecher, D. D. 12mo, 92 pages, paper, 25 cts. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

As implied in the title, the object of this treatise is to array infidels against each other, and, in their fruitless effort to demolish Christianity, observe how they demolish themselves. It is interesting to watch the development of infidel theories—so various and contradictory—to explain the facts of the Christian religion and to properly dispose of its author, without admitting the existence of a supernatural element. Dr. Sprecher takes up the old theories of Imposture, Self deception, Rationalism, Myth and Legend, and shows how they were successively exploded by skeptics who had some fancied improvement to offer. He then shows that modern infidelity, as represented by Robert Elsmere, is an unsatisfactory rehash of an old attempt to give Christ a good character, while denying his divine nature, his miraculous power, and his resurrection-life. Finally, he gathers some glowing infidel testimony in commendation of the person of Jesus and the benefit of his religion, and shows that this admitted fact is the Gibraltar of Christian evidences.

MATRIMONIAL.

"What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder."

BECKNER—HULLINGER.—In Rossdale, Kansas, at the residence of the undersigned, Aug. 14, Bro. Henry A. Beckner and Sarah A. Hullinger, all of Olathe, Kans.

WM. HOLSINGER.

FALLEN ASLEEP.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

LUTZ.—At Shannon, Ill., July —, Catharine T. Lutz, aged 39 years, 1 month and 19 days.

The deceased was the wife of Bro. John B. Lutz and a daughter of Bro. Peter Bowman, of Lena, Ill. After a sickness of two weeks her spirit was called home to her God.

Her last prayer was, "Oh Lord, we can not understand why all this is, but thou knowest. Look down on us this morning. I know I have come short of doing thy will, but thou will forgive. Help us to do thy will. Take me near thee, and to my home in heaven. Amen." She had obeyed the command of the Lord and called the elders and was anointed. Funeral services by Eld. D. E. Price.

The deceased left two infant babes,—Flora and Laura. Aug. 14, Flora passed to rest and was interred by the mother's side, aged 1 month. Laura passed to rest Aug. 19, aged 1 month and 5 days. D. ROWLAND.

PENROD.—In the Pokagon congregation, Mich., July 31, of dropsy of the heart, Bro. Isaac Penrod, aged 85 years and 1 month.

Deceased has been a member of the church about 34 years, and was loved and esteemed by all his neighbors. Three days before his death he was anointed in the name of the Lord, and then expressed himself as having, to the best of his knowledge, fulfilled God's holy commands. He then was anxious to depart this life and be forever at rest. He leaves a wife (a consistent sister), and three children to mourn their loss. The church feels that a loving and zealous brother has been called from labor to reward. Funeral services from John 11: 23, by J. Stretch and the writer. A. A. MUNSON.

OXLEY.—In the Buck Creek church, Ind., infant son of Rebecca Oxley, aged 26 days. Funeral services by Bro. David Replogle from Matt. 19: 14. ISAAC B. WIKE.

EUCHELBERGER.—In Churchtown, Pa., June 13, Mary Jerome Euchelberger, aged 1 month and 7 days. DAVID NIESLEY.

BAHNEY.—Within the limits of the Roann church, Ind., Aug. 22, sister Louisa Bahney, aged 19 years and 14 days.

She passed away peacefully and said she was going home to God. Funeral services conducted by brethren D. Swihart and Isaac Deardorff from Jer. 7: 3. JOSEPH JOHN.

BRYANT.—In the North Beatrice congregation, Nebr., Aug. 13, sister Susan Bryant, aged 34 years, 9 months and 9 days.

She leaves a husband and six children to fight on till death. Three of the little ones are quite small and will need the help of some of those good mothers in Israel. Sister Bryant was one of those Christians who could bear much suffering patiently, and never spoke ill of any one. God send us many such! Funeral services by the home ministers. J. E. YOUNG.

PAINTER.—In Cumberland County, Va., May 31, Bro. A. L. Painter, aged 57 years, 6 months and 27 days.

The deceased has been a member of the Brethren church for four years, and lived an exemplary life before all, thus showing by his works that he had been with Christ, and learned of him. Our brother was zealous in the cause of his Master, and loved by all who knew him. This was manifest on the day of his funeral. Services by Eld. George Graybill, of Botetourt County, Va.

The deceased leaves an affectionate wife, four daughters and one son, to mourn their loss. The writer was with him a few days before his death, when our brother expressed himself as being resigned to the will of God.

GANGER.—At Wakarusa, Ind, June 30, sister Mary, daughter of Bro. John and sister Bettie Ganger, aged 18 years, 10 months and 13 days.

She had been sick for several months and endured the most terrible agony and pain that human beings can suffer, but notwithstanding all this, she bore all in great patience.

She called for the elders of the church and was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. She was anxious to depart and live with her God, and could scarcely wait till death would come.

She, occasionally, had glimpses of the home beyond and admonished those around her to live faithful and meet her in heaven.

She united with the church at the age of fifteen and was a bright and shining light. Although we all feel that a deep gloom is cast over the church, yet we glory in the victory she has won. The high esteem in which she was held was manifested by the large concourse of friends at her funeral.

Let us all so live that when we must pass over the river of death we may be as ready as our dear sister was! ELLEN ROOSE.

HOSTETTER. In the Ridgely church, Caroline Co., Md., sister Amanda, wife of Samuel Hostetter, aged 39 years, 3 months and 17 days.

Deceased was a faithful member, a pious wife, and a Christian mother of eight children. They moved from Lebanon County, Pa., to this place, about four months ago. About ten days previous to her death she was taken down with malarial fever. After eight days' illness she got paralysis of the heart, which ended her life July 23. Before she died, she called her husband and children to her bedside and admonished them. Her remains were taken back to Pennsylvania. Funeral services by brethren Jacob Longanecker, Cyrus Bomberger, and the writer, from Rev. 7: 16, 17. J. Y. KING.

RIBBLETT.—In the Conemaugh congregation, Cambria Co., Pa., sister Sarah Ribblett, aged 49 years, 5 months and 12 days. Services by the writer.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.

"Set for the Defense of the Gospel."

Vol. 27. Old Series. Mt. Morris, Ill., and Huntingdon, Pa., Sept. 17, 1889. No. 37.

The Gospel Messenger.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH, Editor,
And Business Manager of the Eastern House, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

ELD. J. T. MYERS, of Oaks, Pa., is in town, visiting his mother-in-law and family. He will remain only a few days.

THE good work with us is still moving slowly forward. Last Sunday two weeks ago an aged father was baptized, expressing a strong desire to lead a better life. On last Sunday a mother and young son were baptized. Thus our number is still growing larger, and our hope is, that, with our growth in number, we may have a corresponding growth in grace and truth.

THE tendency of the age is world-ward and for change. To change sometimes is all right. Indeed, change is often desirable,—from wrong to right is always commendable. But of the right we should be certain, and when right is the desire, we can well afford to take time for thorough investigation. Things are not always what they seem to be, and, to avoid disappointment, we should know what they really are before we embrace them.

IT is now after harvest. The crops of the year have been largely gathered, and the time for seeding and sowing is again here. A large acreage will, no doubt, be sown. How will it be with the spiritual sowing? The farms are large, and every man, woman and even child can have a good field for sowing. A large acreage should be sown, as in this sowing there need be no disappointments. No storms, no fires, no floods can enter in and destroy the work done on the Lord's farm.

THE Normal Opening, on Tuesday morning, Sept. 3, was unusually encouraging, and the prospects for a successful school year are good. The percentage of members and members' children is large, and will be increased by those who will yet come in. This is especially encouraging to us, as our wish and prayer is that our school shall be made worthy of our church patronage in every respect. We are laboring to this end, and ask the sympathy and prayers of all who are interested in having our children provided with schools wherein the principles of the truth and the church are inculcated in connection with their literary attainments.

SOME people don't sleep well or rest easy unless they can give forth for public view the bitterness they entertain against such as are not exactly as they are. We don't wish to meet a Pharisee with his own manner of expression, but we are sure we don't care to be like him whose only prominent characteristic is fault-finding, and whose motes are quite as large as those which he is trying to pull out by the use of unkind insinuations. The world don't need much of such Christianity. Instead of helping along that which is good, a stone is thrown in the way, and then the wonder is, Will it be understood? Yes, sour milk will always make its whereabouts known.

THE Brethren of the Coventry church, Pa., expect to set apart for worship a new church house during the present month. The building of church houses during the present summer does not seem to have been as active as in former years. Why this should be so, we don't know, as many of our churches have been abundantly blessed with this world's goods, and therefore it can not be for lack of means.

THE unsightly bustle that lately was such an important appendage to the female costume, has gone out of style, and all good people are glad of it. We don't wonder at the worldlings being subject to the Goddess of Fashion, because they are subjects of that kingdom, but it does seem strange that those who have been delivered from the bondage of sin, and have become subjects of the better kingdom, should, willingly, and in open violation of the law of the Kingdom of Christ, turn back again and be made servants of the evil one and his rulings. This wonder pertains not to our sisters alone, but to our brethren as well. Let us all show our loyalty to the church, to the truth, and to good common sense by standing aloof from all such things as have no value or merit outside of style and fashion. There is no reason why the devil should make dupes of us to our eternal shame and misery.

IT is with deep sorrow that we chronicle the death of our much-esteemed young brother, Francis A. Stiles, of Belsano, and, lately, a student of our school. Bro. Stiles was a young man of exceptionable moral and Christian character, and a close student. He had passed the Junior examination, and intended to enter the Senior class at the present Fall Term opening. He was home during the vacation, and, during this time, took sick and died. He had his home with Bro. Good, of Belsano, where he was held as a son, and where his loss is deeply felt. The following we extract from a letter received from sister Hannah Good:

> My heart is laden with sadness and overflowing with grief over our loss on one hand, and on the other hand I feel that he was a sheaf ready to be gathered into the heavenly garner. I feel it a wise arrangement of Providence in calling him so early in life, thus securing him from the many trials and temptations that beset us in life. Many times during his pilgrimage here, he would sit by my side, open his heart, and relate his experience, and tell how he was made to rejoice in trying to follow his Redeemer. I knew him often to anoint his head and fast. And when he got to earning something for himself, he would count out one-tenth of his earnings for the Lord, and when he saw a place of need, his money would go. I feel that it would be a benefit to many of us to take lessons from his experience and schooling in Christ. When I think over the many virtues of our darling boy, I am made to wish that his life could be more fully known, that it might make impressions on the characters and lives of others. He was much delighted at the thought of returning to Huntingdon, where he had formed so many pleasant associations. * * Letters are still coming to his address from students who expected to meet him at the opening of the Fall Term. * * In our estimation, Francis was one of those whom as you learned to know, you learned to love. He came to us in his thirteenth year, and in his seventeenth year he united with the church, and remained faithful till death. He died on the eleventh day of August, aged 22 years, 2 months and 11 days. Funeral services conducted by Eld. David Hildebrand."

It is with pleasure that we give this tribute to Bro. Stiles as a good student and a consistent Christian while with us, and assure the stricken family that they have the sympathies of us all. And our prayer is that God, who is the great Healer, may greatly comfort them in this, their time of bereavement.

CHURCH DECLINE WHY?

AN elder writes us that his church seems to be on the decline, and that the members don't seem to have any life in them. He wants to know what to do. As we don't know the elder's personal circumstances, it would be a difficult matter to suggest a remedy.

But let us suppose a case—one as it may exist. This elder is a well-to-do farmer. He owns, side by side, two or three good farms. He has a family of boys and girls who are "brought up to work." Early in the morning, while the stars are yet shining, they are called from their slumbers to begin the work of the day. The mother and the girls, in haste, prepare the breakfast, and without family worship, they are hurriedly called to the table. After a short offering of thanks by the father, that they have heard repeated in the same words from childhood up, the meal is eaten, and all are off to the fields, as if life and death depended on the amount of labor performed during the day. The noon and evening meals are disposed of in the same way. After this the plans for the next day are rehearsed, and then the children are told to go to bed early so that they may be ready to get up early in the morning.

On Sunday morning the same rush and push is shown, until all the feeding, etc., is done, and the horse gotten ready for the elder to go to church, while the family is unprovided for, and left to spend the day as circumstances seem to favor. Thus day after day and week after week is spent, until the children get the idea that father's business is to boss during the week, and preach on Sunday to the old folks who are members, and that it is their privilege to do as they please when they can, and help father to make money the balance of the time.

When a father, a minister, an elder, shows conclusively that his heart is set on making money more than on his ministry, what kind of an influence can be expected to go out from him? What will his children think about his religion, and how many will embrace it, and become efficient workers in the church? Like father, like children; like preacher, like members. If an elder can not win his own children to Christ, why should he expect to win others? And if he is more concerned about his farming and farms, why should not his members be the same? Some of the children of our members, deacons, ministers and elders are sad commentaries on their Christianity. And if what the Wise Man said is true—"Train up a child in the way he should go," etc, — there must be some notable exceptions to this general rule, or else the training is not in the way they should go.

Of course, elders and ministers are not always the cause of cold and declining churches, but in seeking after the cause, they should examine well first at home, because this is the nearest place to find at least some of the causes for such troubles.

EARTH WEARY.

I once desired a robe and star-gemmed crown,
To wear in blissful mansions of the blest;
But only now, to lay my burden down
And have a place at Jesus' feet to rest,

Where I can hear the murmur of the stream,
Which glides in silvery ripples from the throne,
And listen to the music, like a dream,
That fills all heaven with melodious tone.

My feet are weary with the toils of earth,
Yet I have scarcely passed the morn of life;
The joys we know are of such transient worth,
And even in our pleasure pain is rife.

Our songs are changed to sighs, our smiles to tears,
And friends forsake us for a trifling toy:
All vernal blooms and summer verdure sears
In autumn frosts and winter's stern alloy.

Bright prospects fade like shadows of a cloud;
Desire by non-reality is chilled;
Hope vanishes, by doubts and fears that crowd
The care-worn heart, with sad temptations filled.

Death clasps our loved ones in his strong embrace,
And lays our cherished treasures in the tomb.
Thus all earth-joys with sorrow interlace,
And fade, as fragile flowers shed their bloom.

O, world of vanities! O, world of gloom!
I turn away from all thy trifling toys,
And seek a fairer clime, where fadeless bloom
Clothes hill and dale in everlasting joys.

O, Father, I am weary! Let me lay
My burdened spirit at thy blessed feet;
Shed o'er my soul a beam of perfect day
From Christ's enrapturing face, divinely sweet!

Then, Lord, when I have bathed my earth-worn soul
In love's enchanting fountain heaven affords.
Through all thy courts a song of praise shall roll,
To thy eternal name, in angel chords!

MELCHISEDEC.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

Melchisedec is historically presented to us in Genesis as king of Salem, and priest of the Most High God. He brought forth bread and wine, and blessed Abraham on his return from the slaughter of the kings. After the lapse of nearly a thousand years, his name appears in Psalms, associated with the Messiah, typically as follows: "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." Another thousand years rolls by and the writer of Hebrews brings Melchisedec again before us as being "without father, without mother, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a priest continually."

The writer of Hebrews founds an argument on what is said of Melchisedec in Genesis and in the Psalms, to prove the superiority of Christ's Priesthood "after the order of Melchisedec," to that of Aaron. The silence of Scripture concerning his genealogy explains what is meant by his being "without father, without mother, without descent." His typical character is seen in his name, "King of Righteousness, King of Peace;" and that he had an unchangeable priesthood.

He was greater than Abraham, because he blessed Abraham and received tithes of him. For this cause he was greater than Aaron, and the Levitical priesthood, who were made priests "after the law of a carnal commandment." "But the word of the oath, which was since the law, maketh the Son, who is consecrated forevermore." Heb. 7: 28.

Christ is, then, priest forever after the order of Melchisedec. He offered himself once for all, entered into the Holy Place, the true heavens, to make intercession for us. Melchisedec was king as well as priest. So is Christ. He was born king; and the 110th Psalm declares, "Thou art priest forever." Christ reigns as King of Peace, and intercedes as priest forever.

Speaking of the priesthood, the writer of Hebrews says, "Every highpriest taken from men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for sins." But Melchisedec appears before Abraham without any sacrifice save the offering of bread and wine, which seemed to be typical of the higher offering of the Son of God, and of the communion bread and wine, of which it is said, "As oft as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye do show forth the Lord's death till he come."

A FEW THOUGHTS.

BY ABR. MOLSBEE.

We have had articles headed thus before, and one of them has caused me to choose this heading. One thought is, Why do not brethren and sisters, writing for the Messenger, give their address? A very interesting part to the reader is left out, as he does not know where it is from. The name of place and State will make articles more interesting. Sometimes we wish to ask some question on a subject, and to ask it through the Messenger would not be well as it probably would lead to different views or, rather, controversy.

I have thought that the wives of poor ministers (financially poor), often feel sad when they see that so many notes of travel are headed in the Messenger, "Wife and I left for," etc. It makes the poor wives feel sad in their lonely condition, husbands gone nearly one-fourth, or more, of their time, and they are so poor that their wives have to work and take care of their families the best they can and stay at home all the time. I have often thought of the poor minister's wife. She works hard all the week and then encourages her husband to go and fill his appointments, warning sinners and encouraging saints, saying, "I'll do the best I can until you come back." I like to see preachers' wives traveling with them,—but let the wives tell about it.

I have thought it strange for brethren and sisters, writing for ministerial help, to say, "We want an able minister, one able to defend the doctrine of the church," "We want a faithful minister," etc. When such qualifications as these are asked for (as it is said, but probably meant differently), we can hardly find brethren who will offer their services; and those who offer their services, we fear, feel a little egotistical; for a minister who answers a call that is made for an able minister will be looked upon with a little suspicion by some. I have thought that if we would say, "We want a good preacher," or, better yet, "We want a preacher; come and help us," it would be better. I would feel very loath to fill a call like the former, but would freely respond to one like the latter. I have had an experience of nearly thirty years in preaching, and I think such adjectives or expressions as "able," "faithful," "able to defend," "well qualified," and the like, would be good to use after the minister has been tried and has proved his ability, if used at all. Some ministers whose grammar, logic, and rhetoric may not be the best, are great workers for the Master and his cause.

I have thought that if our brethren, in doing business in the church, especially trying cases, were true to the cause and would try the case instead of the brother or sister, it would result in doing all our church work at home, instead of at District Meeting and the Annual Conference. In our church work we should try the case, and convict whoever is guilty and acquit whoever is innocent. I think that poverty or wealth, relationship or high position in church should have nothing to do with the case. Let us try this plan and we will settle our business at home, where it ought to be settled.

WHAT WILL HEAVEN BE TO US?

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

What will heaven be to us? All that we desire, all that we have hoped for, and a great deal more. We do not know whether all memory of earth-life will be taken away. But "there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away." Hence we know that the sadness of death will trouble us no more, for God has said it will not. And though we meet and recognize the loved of earth, we shall not miss the absent ones, for there shall be no pain nor parting there. We may have friends there, but no foes, for it is a kingdom of eternal peace. No tears shall mingle in our praise, for "God shall wipe away all tears" from our eyes. There we may shout glad hallelujas till the courts of heaven ring, for never a sigh shall break that anthem of harmonious chords.

But, in order to have heaven around us, we must first have it within us; and if we would enjoy heaven above, we must enjoy it below, for long before our tongues had lisped a word, or our brains conceived a thought, the Holy One declared, "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: neither shall they say, Lo here! or, Lo there! for, behold, the kingdom of God is within you." Luke 17: 20, 21. And Rom. 14: 17 tells us, "The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost," thus representing a heaven within us. In numerous passages of Scripture, "the kingdom of God" and "the kingdom of heaven" are used as synonymous terms; and this is why we combine heaven and earth, because we must have the kingdom of heaven within us before we can enter the everlasting kingdom above—must "put on Christ" (Gal. 3: 27) before we can hide our life with him in God, Col. 3: 3. Thus the kingdom of heaven and earth is but a foretaste of the joy above.

We pass through the former to gain the latter, as we pass through the conflict to gain peace, and fight the battle to win the victory. We do not forget the conflict and the battle when peace and victory are won. Ah, no! but the pain and toil are past—exchanged for serene and calm joy. Therefore we fancy that, when the old heaven has passed away for the new, though we shall vividly remember each toil, tear, sorrow, tribulation and affliction endured on earth, there shall be no sadness connected with it, for we shall realize that the blissful state we enjoy is but the sequel of our former pain and woes. O, what a thought! The mystery how great, how measureless, how grand!

As David consoled himself with the thought of going to the little son who could not return to him, so we look forward to the happy time when we shall be joined to the dear ones forever gone from earth by a bond that can not be severed. And when we stand in the celestial courts and look over the glorified throng and there recognize one whom on earth we had known only as a foe, a rapturous shout will burst from our holy lips that he was counted worthy of immortality, and is united with us in everlasting love. Ah, blissful thought! there may be friends in heaven, but no foes!

Before the Blessed Shepherd placed me in my mother's arms, she laid my baby sister in his tender bosom for all eternity. When I could move about and understand that a darling from our household band had gone to the home beyond, I sat at mother's feet and questioned, "What hair, and eyes, and lineaments adorned that cherub face?" And even from that bereaved heart came the answer, "Some time you may go where she has gone, and then you shall know." One of my cherished dreams is to greet that angel sister in celestial glory. And, by faith's lustrous sight, I pierce the vail that hides that world from this, and view, amidst a multitude of baby worshipers before the great white throne, a little brother freed from suffering and deformity and clad in the glorious habiliments of heaven. The speechless tongue is loosed and tuned to angel melodies! While here he was my special charge, and shall I not know him there? "Ah, yes," the Infinite replies. But there are dearer, sweeter ties than those of brother and sister, severed here that shall be reunited "over there." Not after the flesh as we know them here. No, no! but in God's own appointed way. We need not know how. It is enough to be assured that we shall be "as the angels in heaven."

We stand beside the coffined form, weeping the bitterest tears that ever fell on ice-cold brows, because we feel that the slumberer must awake in gloomiest night and death. How shall we be consoled for those absent faces in the eternal heaven? By the sweet remembrance that a loving God did all to save them from their woeful state that even GOD could do. Never a pang of grief shall mar our bliss, for with glorified wisdom we shall understand, with God, that their reward is "the wages of sin," hence justly given.

Another thought presents itself. A numerous host of God's faithful ones have crossed over the dark river; many more are crossing now, and many are yet to follow. Will they have forgotten that they were brethren of one common faith, followers of one glorious Leader and meet as strangers on the other side? Will they gather around the sumptuous board spread with the delicious Marriage Supper and remember no more when they sat together at the Lord's table in the earthly kingdom and partook of a supper in anticipation of a heavenly supper in the evening of the world? Will they not rather remember that their labor is done, the victory won, and that they are gathered home to enjoy the blessed promises of a loving Father? He who girded himself and served is none other than the blessed Christ, who purchased all this glory by the shedding of his blood on Calvary? Truly they will not forget Calvary. Their rapturous hearts will overflow with praise that they are counted worthy of so much joy, bliss, love and peace in an eternal habitation not made with hands, where sorrow, pain and conflict never more shall trouble or affright. And we fancy that song of praise will be a sweet verification of Eph. 1: 3–12. Thus we pass from the sweet anticipation to the glorious realization, from a heaven begun on earth to its completion in the kingdom on high, "whose Builder and Maker is God."

HONORING SELF.

BY JOSEPH PENCE.

In our Sunday-school lesson for Aug. 17 we find at the heading, "Saul Rejected by the Lord." If we go back a few lessons to the time when Samuel anointed him king over Israel, we will learn with what humility he received this message. Now, when we see how humble Saul was and how willing to do God's will, we are made to wonder why, in so short time, he should be rejected and deprived of his kingdom. But if we study closely what is embodied in the lesson of Aug. 17, we will clearly see that he honored himself more than God. It was because he deemed his way better than God's and thereby thought to gain honor from the people. We now see that he has lost his humility, and self is more than God.

Do we see people to-day following in the footsteps of Saul? I would answer, Yes, numbers of them. We have but to look around us, and our eyes will behold many who would rather have the praise of men than the approbation of God. Go to the popular churches of to-day and what do you see? In the majority of cases you will find self more prominent than God. There we see the minister whose solemn charge it is to deal out the Bread of Life to his congregation, trying to please the people more than to save their immortal souls. Why does he do so? What is he afraid of? Is he afraid of God? No; he is afraid that he will not be popular with the people unless he preaches to suit them. Thus we see him explaining the parts that best suit the people, and passing over the rest. Will God accept such service? Was not Saul punished for passing over part of God's command? Thus we see we can not obey part of his Word and still be acceptable with him. He will have our whole service, or he will have none of it.

We not only find self prominent among the clergy, but others, professing to be followers of Christ, show, by their actions and conversation, that they think more of self than of God. Many think more of sacrificing themselves at the shrine of fashion than of reverencing God's name.

I fear our own dearly beloved Brotherhood is not entirely free from this great sin. Some of us may, if we probe to the depths of our hearts, find some of this old Adamic nature about us. Let us throw off the yoke of pride, and put on the robe of humility so that we can follow in the footsteps of the meek and lowly Nazarene!

RIGHT LIVING.

BY A. HUTCHISON.

Do we realize what a fearful thing it is to live in this world? It is not uncommon to hear persons speak of death with some degree of feeling, indicating the magnitude of the question. But why refer to death with a greater sense of feeling than to life? Life is really the more important of the two; for if we live the life of the righteous, then we will find death to be only the medium by which we will be transferred from scenes of sorrow, suffering and affliction to scenes of joy, peace and happiness. We can not enter into the joys of our Lord in their full perfection until we have tasted death.

When our blessed Redeemer was in the very throes of death he said, "It is finished." So may his followers say of this life when it is ended and we are ready to be offered. We may truly say, and say it like Bro. Paul, with feelings of exultation, "It is finished." Our imperfect life is finished. And we will then begin a new life, one of unalloyed bliss; for we shall see our glorious Lord and Master and be like him. This can not be without we first pass through that ordeal called death. Therefore we can not see why death should be so dreadful. It is true that death is not inviting to this mortal body. But when we look at the case properly, it seems to me it would greatly help us to meet the monster.

But the fearful part is the living; for, upon the life we are now living depends all the rest. Therefore it is a fearful thing to live. What is true of dollars and cents, is true of life and death. We frequently hear it said, "If you will take care of the cents, the dollars will take care of themselves." So if we take care of our life here, death will take care of itself;—or, rather, if we take good care of Jesus and his work and character here, he will take care of us over there. We learn that God is a jealous God. He is jealous of his holy name; and our great business here is to so live as not to bring reproach upon the name and character of our great High-priest. We learn that he says, "He that is ashamed of me in this world, of such I will be ashamed in the world to come." Then, if this be true, and doubtless it is, well may such a one shudder at meeting death; for after death is the judgment. Then a realizing sense of the true worth of life will force itself upon that one with an awful power. Oh, what have I lost? This question will come then with a meaning never before realized. An eternity with all its blessedness is lost. And what have I gained? I have lost all the pleasures of a Christian life here, and the privilege of dwelling with Jesus, my blessed Redeemer; and I must forever be denied the pleasure of meeting my saved friends in a world of bliss. I have lost the privilege of dwelling with my little babe in heaven. Oh, what is there that I have not lost! And all this for a few short-lived pleasures in the service of sin! I heard the notes of warning proclaimed with no uncertain sound. I thought I would yield to the call and give my life to the Lord, but I found myself bending to the insinuations of that old enemy who is ever ready to deceive. I said to the Holy Spirit, Go thy way for this time. I am not quite done serving sin yet; have me excused this time. I will call for thee after awhile. But O, I am sick now, my physician says I must die, and now it is a fearful thing to die!

THE SECOND BEAST.

BY W. F. GILLETT.

Number Four.

"And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone."—Rev. 19: 20.

In the midst of this persecution, when both Jews and Christians are about to give up in despair, the Lord will make his appearance and deliver them out of the hands of their oppressors. See Zech. 12: 8; also 14: 3–5. He will also punish the beast. It seems that all the wicked and all nations will wander after the beast, Rev. 13: 3, and will be fighting for the beast when Christ comes. Great will be their surprise when the Lord comes to punish them, insomuch that they will cry for rocks and hills to fall on them and hide them from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb, for the great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand? Rev. 6: 16, 17. "A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth; for the Lord hath a controversy with the nations: he will plead with all flesh; he will give them that are wicked to the sword, saith the Lord." Jer. 25: 31. "Hear the word of the Lord, ye children of Israel: for the Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land." Hos. 4: 1.

The third angel said with a loud voice: "If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, the same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb." Rev. 14: 9, 10.

The above Scriptures ought to be enough to show that the fate of the beast and those that worship him and receive his mark, is terrible. Who can imagine the horrors of the lake of fire and brimstone? The prophet Daniel saw that the beast was slain and his body destroyed and given to the burning flame. Dan. 6: 11. "The remnant were slain with the sword of him that sat upon the horse, which sword proceeded out of his mouth: and all the fowls were filled with their flesh." Rev. 19: 21.

This beast has killed a great many Christians with the sword, and he that killeth with the sword, must be killed with the sword. Rev. 13: 10; Matt. 26: 52. This beast Paul refers to when he says: "And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth." 2 Thess. 2: 8. Hence we see that, when the Lord comes without sin unto salvation, the beast will be slain, and they shall fall upon the mountains of Israel, and their bodies will be given unto the ravenous birds of every sort, and to the beasts of the field, to be devoured. Ezek. 39: 4; 33: 27.

Further on we read: "And I saw an angel standing in the sun; and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the fowls that fly in the midst of heaven, Come and gather yourselves together unto the supper of the great God; that ye may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of captains, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all men, both free and bond, both small and great." Rev. 19: 17, 18. "And, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord God; Speak unto every feathered fowl, and to every beast of the field, Assemble yourselves, and come; gather yourselves on every side to my sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh, and drink blood. Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth, of rams, of lambs, and of goats, of bullocks, all of them fatlings of Bashan." Ezek. 39: 17, 18.

We have noticed now what the fate of the beast will be. The prophet Jeremiah says that the "slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth even unto the other end of the earth: they shall not be lamented, neither gathered nor buried." Jer. 25: 33.

THE TRIUMPH OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

BY H. W. STRICKLER.

Number One.

"And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure."—Dan. 2: 44, 45.

In these words we have a prophetic description of the kingdom of Christ, as the fifth empire that should arise from the date of this prophecy. This empire is spiritual in its nature, universal in its extent, and eternal in its duration. A certain author, in commenting upon this text, says, "This monstrously huge and most wonderful image which so terrified and alarmed the king of Babylon in his dream, and produced so much anxiety when he awoke, denoted four of the great empires of the world. Its head of gold was a representation of the kingdom of Babylon. Its breasts of iron pointed out the Medes and Persians. Its belly and thighs of brass exhibited the Grecian empire, which was to succeed the Medio-Persian empire under the reign of Alexander the Great. Its legs of iron were descriptive of the Roman empire in its glory; and its ten toes, of iron and earth mingled, represented the same empire when its glory had, in a measure, departed and it became divided into ten kingdoms of Europe. This latter description was intended to represent the same circumstance as the ten horns on the head of the Roman beast in the book of Revelations."

Whether the above conclusion is correct or not, it is certain that the Roman empire was once so great that it crushed beneath its iron sway the different kingdoms of the earth, bringing them all into subjection to its supreme authority. This great Roman beast with its voracious teeth, most cruelly and inhumanly devoured thousands of the followers of Christ.

The kingdom of Christ is here represented under the similitude of a little stone, cut out of the mountain without hands,—without human power or wisdom,—but by the power of the holy spirit of the Living God. This stone proved more than a match for the great image of gold, and of iron, and of brass.

The Messiah appeared in the form of a servant and was born of a virgin in the town of Bethlehem. He lived a life of poverty and persecution from his cradle in the stable, to his sufferings on Calvary. He died a painful and ignominious death and was buried in the grave, but his flesh was not permitted to see corruption. He arose from the grave the third day and ascended to heaven, having first delivered his divine commission to his disciples,—to "go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." After his ascension to heaven, he sent the holy spirit to give efficacy to the preaching of the Gospel,—to prove the authenticity of the Christian religion, and to "convince the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment."

The apostles immediately commenced the work committed to their charge. They persevered and prospered in their divine employment, for the hand of the Lord was with them. The stone cut out of the mountain began to roll from Judea toward this great golden-headed image with a fearlessness that was truly wonderful, so that it bruised most fearfully the legs of the image. This "little stone" is yet on "the threshing-floor," and there it will continue until it has beaten to powder the golden-headed, iron-legged image. Finally the little stone will become a great mountain, fill the whole universe and abide forever.

1. The certainty of the accomplishment of this prophecy, in the first place, is founded on the promise of the Father. "For thus saith the Lord, I have set thee to be a light of the Gentiles that thou shouldest be for salvation unto the ends of the earth." Acts 13: 47. "I, the Lord, have called thee in righteousness and will hold thine hand, and will keep thee, and will give thee for a covenant of the people, for a light of the Gentiles; to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness out of the prison house." Isa. 42: 6, 7. "And he said, It is a light thing that thou shouldest be my servant to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and to restore the preserved of Israel: I will also give thee for a light to the Gentiles, that thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth." Isa. 49: 6. "Ask of me, and I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." Ps. 2: 8. "All nations shall come and worship before thee." All that the Father hath given him shall come unto him, and the gates of hell shall not prevent or hinder them.

2. The certainty of the accomplishment of this prophecy is founded on the Son's qualifications to perform the work the Father had given him to do. No one knows the Father in all the perfections of his attributes, in all the wisdom of his councils, and in all the immutability of his purposes but the Son, and no one knows the Son but the Father, as he is the same with the Father in his divine nature. To him, then, belongs the same divine nature and glory as the Father, for he is the brightness of the Father's glory and the express image of his person. Heb. 1: 3.

None but a divine person could make such a promise, and none but a divine person could receive such a promise as is contained in the eternal life and salvation of the countless millions of the human race. Therefore the knowledge of Christ is as necessary to eternal life as the knowledge of the Father. "And this is life eternal that they might know thee, the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." John 17: 3. He is the faithful witness, the first begotten from the dead and the prince of the kings of the earth,—the "Alpha" and the "Omega," and the Creator of all things. He must, consequently, have been in existence before the first creature was made, and hence must be eternal. He is before all things, and by him all things were made. He is God over all, blessed for evermore,—the eternal, infinite, and immutable God, hence he is perfectly able to accomplish the glorious and magnificent work which he has undertaken. He is not only able to set up his kingdom according to prophetic representation, but also to support and maintain its glory, for it shall stand forever, and never be destroyed. It shall not be left to other people but it shall break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms.

The kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our God and his Christ. Rev. 11: 15. It is our most reasonable service to render obedience to him. Then, dear brethren, let us take fresh courage. Christ is able to conquer all our enemies. We shall soon be more than conquerors through him that hath loved us. Oh, brethren, let us all submit to his government, and bow to his scepter! Zion's king is adored by men and angels. All the combined powers of darkness have not power or wisdom enough to impede the progress of Immanuel's kingdom, for he will do all his pleasure and his counsel shall stand forever!

Zion's advocates, be not discouraged; quit you like men! Behold your king holds the seven stars in his right hand, a sharp, two-edged sword proceedeth out of his mouth, and his countenance is as the sun shining in his strength. He is clothed with a garment white as snow and girt about his loins with a golden girdle, and his eyes are like a flame of fire. His voice is as the sound of many waters and he has the keys of hell and of death. He is able and fully determined to reign triumphantly from sea to sea, and from the rivers to the ends of the earth. "The government shall be upon his shoulders, and of his government and peace there shall be no end."

LIFE AND IMMORTALITY.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

"Who hath brought life and immortality to light." 2 Timothy 1: 10.

Let our minds be drawn to our real interest in this momentous theme! Do we indeed believe in immortality? See the thoughtless multitude! Do we see the true faith? No, never! Faith engages man's mind far otherwise.

Let us think a moment! We are engaged in a solemn struggle. Nothing concerns us so much as the life beyond. Soon we shall pass into eternity! Eternity,—what are its mysterious, countless, impenetrable ages? Do I know myself? I want to know one thing,—how I may land safely on that eternal shore! May God help me to leave this poor, stranded wreck of time and pull for the shore of eternity!

Why is man so much in love with the flesh-pots of Egypt? What is earth that it should so engross our minds? Is human life so insignificant that we can recklessly thwart God's high purposes? Do we not know that the period of human existence does not terminate our being? In order to secure the future and eternal life, we must comply with the terms of God's infinite Word.

An inspired man understood well our interest in life and immortality. How impressive the language: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments; for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil." Eccl. 12: 13–14.

O, how high the mandate! How much God is to be feared! Do we thus know our duty? Shall we thus be judged? Let us, by all means, keep God's commandments, that we may enter into eternal life.

We are under many obligations to serve our Creator. He is rolling our earth on its rapid course round the sun, giving us day and night, seed-time and harvest. He keeps the beautiful moon in her appointed place, that she may give light by night in due season. He watches over every living thing, not man only, but each one of his creatures, beast, bird, fish, or insect, and gives life and food. Without him not one of us could live a second. In him we live and move and have our being. Not a tree could put forth a leaf, not a blade of grass, ear of corn, fruit, or flower, could grow without his almighty care. He must be present, then, always present, and always at work.

God's greatest manifestation of mercy was in our redemption, in bringing life and immortality to light through Jesus Christ. In the beautiful language of the Psalmist, the true Christian may exclaim: "I am poor and needy; yet the Lord thinketh upon me." Dr. Cullis tells, in one of his reports, of an aged Christian who, lying on his death-bed, in the "Consumptives' Home," was asked the cause of his perfect peace, while in a state of such extreme weakness that he was often entirely unconscious of all around him. He replied, "When I am able to think, I think of Jesus, and when I am unable to think of him, I know that he is thinking of me." Oh, the tender mercy of our Loving Father, who has anticipated every emergency in our journey! When our pilgrimage is ended, we shall sleep a sweet, a holy, a heavenly, a resurrection sleep, and then arise and soar away to the "mansions of light." "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable Gift."

THE SIN AGAINST THE HOLY GHOST.

BY FRANK STEVENS.

We read that the sin against the Holy Ghost is "blasphemy." Matt. 12: 31; Mark 3: 28; Luke 12: 10. Now, what is blasphemy? "Attributing the miracles of Christ to the agency of Satan," I hear several say. Very good, as far as it goes, but may it not comprise a broader field? We read in Ezek. 20: 26, "Your fathers have blasphemed me in that they committed a trespass against me." So a trespass against God is blasphemy; also, "sinning" and "trespassing" are the same, Lev. 5: 15; therefore one blasphemes God in disobeying his law. Tit. 2: 5. Again, "For it is impossible for those who were * * * made partakers of the Holy Ghost, * * * if they fall away to renew them again unto repentance." Heb. 6: 4–6. In so doing they disobey the divine law, trespass against God, and blaspheme the Holy Spirit.

But we can not justly refuse to receive expelled members. They may have failed in some way and never have received the gift of the Holy Spirit. Acts 8: 23. Then, if we refuse them, we are guilty in the sight of God and will have it to answer for on that last great day. If they are guilty of blasphemy, we are not to judge, and the matter is between them and their God.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS AS A HELP TO THE CHURCH.

BY J. T. ELLIS.

In looking at the work of the Sunday-school and its benefits, I am made to wonder why so many members of the church are not more interested in the work! Looking at other churches, so earnestly at work, and some of our Brethren's children attending their schools, I come to the conclusion that we are neglecting a sacred duty by being inactive.

It is our duty to raise up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and to instill into their young minds the true principles of the Gospel, so that false doctrines can make no inroads upon them. Oh, that I could impress upon the mind of every brother in the church the importance of going to work for Christ! We would not see so many of our Brethren's children joining other churches. If we were filling our mission as we ought, we would see every brother at work. We would not drive four or five miles on Sunday to visit some friends, and keep them from attending Sunday-school or meeting.

We do not realize the influence we exert on those around us as members. I have been noticing the impressions made by some of our aged members on the minds of the children under their training. I will mention one case in our school. Sister Hardman, a sister three score years of age, has had charge of a primary class of little girls for the last two years. She adapted herself to their little minds and has their full confidence. If the proper influence be exerted, the result will always be in favor of Christ and his cause.

When, in looking over the world, we see so many poor children who have no Gospel privileges such as we enjoy, we are made to realize our neglect of duty to fallen humanity. Let us not be satisfied with salvation for ourselves, but labor to extend its blessings to others!

KINDNESS.

BY MARY A. SNELL.

That we should obey our parents is a command from High Heaven, but that we should treat them kindly, is no less a command. This applies not only to those near and dear to us, but to all with whom we may meet in our every-day life.

How often, though, when enjoying health, and the pleasant associations of our friends, in an unguarded moment, do we speak an unkind word, or cast an angry look of reproach at, perhaps, our best friend! It may seem small at the time, but it has its sting, and we must, sooner or later, pay the penalty. It will bring sorrow to our hearts and, perhaps, wakeful nights, of which our Heavenly Father only knows the pain. Then, what would we not give, could we only recall that one word or look! We can ask our friend to forgive and forget our unkindness, and they may readily do so, assuring us that all is forgotten! How sweet those kind words, so softly spoken! But oh, the sting of remorse that they have left!

Kindness from one who has felt our unkindness should cause us to think more sorrowfully and be more careful! I think we could more fully realize the importance of kind acts, should one of our dearest friends, whom we have loved and cherished, give us an unkind word with an angry frown,—such as would chill our very heart. Then could we realize, to the fullest depths, the importance of ever bestowing kindness upon all. This may sometimes seem a hard task, but, by the help of our Divine Father, we can accomplish it. Kindness will make friends in this world when all else fails, and will help to smoothe the dark and turbid waters when we are called to cross the river of death.

THE CARCASS.

BY JAS. Y. HECKLER.

"Wheresoever the carcass is there will the eagles be gathered together."—Matt. 24: 28.

There are so many different opinions about this passage of Scripture that there can be no harm in giving some explanation on it, for we all know that a carcass is a very disgusting and offensive thing. The different opinions of people about this Scripture, when compared with each other, do more to confuse than to enlighten the mind on this subject. Now we want to know what the Savior meant by it, for that only can be the true meaning. Not a few people among the different denominations of professing Christians are of the opinion that the Savior meant himself to be the carcass, and the saints to be the eagles, and by their ways of explanation they can make it appear quite plausible. But this will never do; we all know the nature of a carcass, and the Savior would not compare himself to such an offensive thing.

A certain minister in converesation, recently, said he could not believe that the Savior meant himself to be the carcass, but he believed that he meant it to be the city of Jerusalem, and all those wicked Jews the eagles; and he braced up his opinion with considerable Scripture too, but he also is wrong. We all admit that the Savior was, at that time, speaking prophetically of the destruction of Jerusalem. He knew what he was saying and his language at that time was to be understood partly in a metaphorical or allegorical sense. He had just been telling his disciples of the false Christs and false prophets which would arise at the time spoken of, of the performance of their great signs and wonders, of their powers to deceive and lead astray, and then brought in this simile, "Wheresoever the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together."

Can there be anything more disgusting in the ears of the true Christian than the hollow sound of the false prophet's trumpet? Real and true Christians have the spirit of Christ, and if false prophets are offensive to them, how much more so must they have been to Christ, who was the true Prophet? He could well afford to compare those false prophets to carcasses, and their followers to eagles or vultures. And this, we say, is what the Savior meant by it, for wherever the false prophet is, there will his followers be. Wheresoever the carcass is, there will the vultures gather. The Jews did not know that their desolation was at hand. They were then blindly seeking to free themselves from the Roman yoke, and to have the kingdom restored to Israel, as the disciples of Christ already had supposed the Savior would do. Josephus tells us of a false prophet in those days, who gained thirty thousand followers. Here was an instance where the vultures gathered around the carcass in fulfillment of Christ's prophecy.

BY WM. M. LYON.

Number Three.

We have already pointed out two different kinds of slavery among the clergy, and now we wish to notice another form of servitude to be found in the ministerial ranks. The class to which we now allude is a large one. They would like to be free, many of them at least, but they are almost compelled to drudge constantly six days out of seven in order to make a living of some kind for their family, while the spiritual work that claims and should engross their attention, must be left undone, and, too frequently, almost unnoticed by them. This is a burning shame, and a disgrace to any church, yet we know whereof we affirm, and these assertions are only too true. In my imagination, I can see thousands of these poor preachers standing before the judgment bar of God, testifying against those who have kept back what belonged to the Lord, the withholding of which made slaves of those whose time should have been spent in attending to divine things instead of temporal affairs.

In our last article we referred to those who, through fear, failed to preach the duty and necessity of giving for the support and preaching of the Word of God, and now we see the result,—a feeble, puny, poverty-pinched set of preachers,—slaves, and a congregation with but very little spiritual life in it. This is slavery of the meanest kind. This ought not so to be. If the congregation would retain life and vigor, it must have the necessary Gospel food administered. To do this requires the steady, earnest, persistent efforts of the minister, therefore he must have time. But if the congregation fail to supply his temporal wants, if they are not willing to exchange carnal things for spiritual (1 Cor. 9: 11), if the time that should be spent by the minister in preparing spiritual food for the congregation must be taken up in securing the comforts and necessaries of life for his family,—in other words, if they close with their own hands the door of liberty against the poor preacher, and thus force him into slavery to serve his own family, how dare they expect him to be able also to serve them? Is this the freedom that the Lord of glory has promised to give? "If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."

When Jesus Christ does a work, it is a perfect one; if he once loose the fetters, then comes perfect freedom. The full liberty that the Son gives, gives the minister time to attend to the "Father's business."

Our Savior teaches us that as he did the will of the Father, so shall we do the will of the Son. This makes us free and we can then abide in his love. John 15: 10. Then, if the preacher has been made entirely free to do his Master's will, surely then he will have some time in which to look after the work; or is this work of so little consequence that it only requires a fractional part out of every seventh day?

The Great Liberator was constantly engaged in the great work of salvation, going "about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed of the devil, for God was with him." Acts 10: 38.

When we take into consideration the infinite worth of the soul, and the price of its redemption, when we consult the will of God and learn that our spiritual interests are not to be compared with temporal concerns, and then take a glance at the church and see the desperate struggle going on,—not a struggle for the saving of souls and for the building up of the walls of the heavenly Jerusalem, but a mighty striving, and pushing, and managing to heap "treasure together for the last days," Jas. 5: 3; when we see that "the love of money is so great that, instead of providing ways and means for the heralding of the Gospel, instead of loosing the preacher's hands from the necessity of having to toil continually to keep his family above want, instead of the church saying to him, "Jesus Christ has made you free, go, work, teach, preach," she virtually says, "You are not free, look first after temporal things; then, if you have any time left, you may devote that to the work of the ministry."

Ah, my brethren and sisters, is not this a sad picture and, nevertheless, is it not a true one?

Perhaps some may think slavery too strong a term. If so, please give me a better name for it. If Christ has not made us free, surely we are still in bondage.

God's plan alone can make us free. The church must pay the cost of redemption. Is she willing to do it? May God help her to set her captives free!

"THE WORD MADE FLESH."

A LAY SERMON BY GEO. L. JENNINGS.

"The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, * * * full of grace and truth."—John 1: 14.

Glorious word! What can Unitarians do with this first chapter of John's Gospel? God spake, the Word (Son) executed through the Holy Spirit.

I shall not attempt to picture the wondrous love and condescension displayed in the life of Jesus, the Godman. Many pens, more eloquent than mine have failed in the task. Men hope to be able to put on immortality, but who, having immortality, would desire to put on mortality? The Word did this. Christ became mortal and gave up, for a time, the glory of the Father. He became the most lowly of mortals, and why?

Mortality seems to be repelled by immortality. It is drawn down, down by the attractions of earth. The little spark of spirituality that exists in man is overwhelmed and almost in some cases, entirely smothered by the mass of earthly dross that weighs it down.

God sent his servants, the prophets, to reason with man during thousands of years, but it was in vain. Mortality could not do the work. They were themselves but mortal, and could not reach "within the vail." After they had reached their highest point, there was yet a space to be bridged over!

Angels could not do it. They could come down from heaven, but they were not mortal, they could not live as examples for man, and their precepts were lost in the mass of dross before mentioned.

So it became necessary for an immortal to put on mortality, that God might commune through a Mediator with humanity and lead them Godward by his example. This is the scheme of redemption. "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." This being the case, if we wish to profit by this most excellent offer,

WHAT IS OUR DUTY?

The condition is stated in the text above, belief. We must "believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of those that diligently seek," and put their trust in him.

Simply believing is not enough. We must believe that it is our duty to seek the Lord diligently if we would be saved. Under the old dispensation we were taught that our God is a jealous God and would suffer no rivals. This is equally true of Christ. He will tolerate no other religion and, thank God, there is no need of any other. "In this world an hundredfold, and in the world to come life everlasting." Brother, is not that enough? Sister, what more is there to desire? What is there for which we would exchange Jesus? Jesus our Savior, Shepherd, King!

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly,
While the nearer waters roll,
While the tempest still is high;
Hide me, O my Savior hide,
Till the storm of life is past;
Safe into the haven guide,
O receive my soul at last!"

So sang the poet and the true spirit of Christianity re-echoes in the song. But how about the new religions that are springing up around us? A man may be a Mason or an Odd-Fellow, and yet be a member of one of the popular churches. I verily believe that after all he must choose between Christ and his order. These orders are not consistent; they will not go along together, hand in hand. The lodge may teach brotherly kindness, but not charity — Christian charity. They are unchristian; they accept all men, of whatever belief or character as brethren, and if a Christian should so count himself, he would be "unequally yoked with unbelievers."

It is a sad thing to see, as I have seen, a Christian minister preach a sermon and leave Christ out for the sake of pleasing the brotherhood to which he belongs.

A man who joins a lodge and lives up fully to its teachings, does well as far as it goes, but he must not expect any credit for it in the Book of Life. Man-made institutions do not reach far enough to influence the Book-keeper there.

I have heard men say that Freemasonry was all the religion they wanted. It may be a little religion will go a long way with some men, but though such religion will do to live by and answer all the requirements of earth, at the dying hour we want something better,—something that will reach over the chasm into the unknown. I defy any man to produce a man-made institution that will afford comfort in the hour of death. If these associations are all that are necessary, why was it necessary for the God-man to come and suffer and die to save man?

Brethren, let us not be deceived. Peter said to Christ, "To whom can we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life." Let us lay hold on the promise of the Savior, and never depart from it. Not one of these lodges has anything good to add to the Christian religion. Then, why divide our forces? Can he be accounted a true Christian who enters the Christian warfare with so little confidence in God that he must cast an anchor to the windward so that, in case of failure, he may recover himself!

The old law, as quoted by the Savior said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind and with all thy strength." If this commandment were kept in the spirit, all our religious vitality would be given to Christ and his church. She needs it, and it will be a good investment for us. If following Christ does not employ all our talents, let us go out and tell the good news to others,—those who are wandering in the wilderness of this world!

THE WRONG BOOK.

BY A. FLORY.

The Apostle Paul, in preaching the Gospel of Christ to the Gentiles, met with much opposition. He says, "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Eph. 6: 12.

Spiritual wickedness is doing more in keeping persons in darkness in this age of the world than any other power. Bibles, almost innumerable, have been printed and scattered broadcast over the United States and many parts of the Old World, and yet this darkness prevails? Why? Simply because those Bibles have been distributed largely by evangelists or spiritual advisers, who neither preach nor practice the whole Gospel?

I once heard it related that one of those missionaries, when ready to return to his native land, distributed Bibles in a locality among the heathen, and told them to practice the things they found written therein. When he returned to them again he wished to know if they did the things they found in the books. They said they did, and in giving a detail of the things, they said they had washed one another's feet. He said to them that that was not necessary. Their reply to him was, "You have given us the wrong book."

This is not unreasonable. Persons would readily obey the Bible if it were not for this ruling power. Christ reproved the Pharisees for doing this kind of work. He says, "Woe unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in." Matt. 23: 13.

Is this kind of wickedness less prevalent now than in former days? I think not. The rulers of the darkness of this world are numerous. They administer in high places. The higher they rank, the greater their influence. Popular religion every-where is controlled by them. Thousands and, perhaps, millions of people, living in this land of Bible liberty know but little of the contents of the sacred Word, as a result of their own investigation. They depend largely on their minister for their information.

A few years ago, at a revival meeting of one of the popular denominations, a number were converted. Among the number one requested to be baptized by immersion, and as the minister did not like to do this, he deferred the matter. He went to her house and talked with her and read a few texts on the subject of sprinkling, that had no reference to baptism. As a result he convinced her that sprinkling would do just as well. If all persons would read the Bible and heed the warning given by Christ, where he says, "Take heed that no man deceive you," no doubt numbers would obey Christ's commands, that otherwise do not.

Dear reader, if you believe the whole Gospel of Christ, how does it agree with the practice of the popular churches in modern times? Are they not using the wrong book? If they are not, they are perverting the right one. If this condition of things did not exist, no doubt numbers of common people would accept and obey the whole Gospel that now are obeying only part of it. This power will rule till Jesus comes, when Satan will be bound, and the knowledge of the Lord will cover the earth as the waters cover the sea. Then this power will exist no more!

THE LORD'S ORDINANCES.

BY JOHN FORNEY.

"Now I praise you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things, and keep the ordinances, as I delivered them to you." —1 Cor. 11: 2.

How shall we know how Paul had delivered the ordinances to them? By what rule may we determine this matter and be on safe ground? I can see only one safe way to do so, and that is to take Paul's advice, "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ." So we see Paul had to learn it from Christ, and had no choice of his own in this matter, for it was told him, "Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do." Acts 9: 6. Paul could not manufacture anything to his own liking; but he had learned it of Christ, and Christ had learned it from the Father, for he said, "The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise." Jno. 5: 19. "For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know his commandment is life everlasting: whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak." Jno. 12: 49-50. Then our way is open and clear; for Christ said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." John 14: 6.

This, then, brings us right where we have to learn the ordinances — to Christ — where Paul learned them. And I do thank my God that he has sent his Son into the world to be our way and example in all things; for if we had to learn the ordinances from man, we would be at a loss to know how many there are or what they are, or how to keep or perform them.

We understand that any established rule or order given by God, through Jesus Christ and his holy apostles, to the church, for God's children to practice, can properly be called an ordinance, such as baptism, prayer, anointing the sick with oil in the name of the Lord, James 5: 14, the salutation of the holy kiss, feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion of the body and blood of the Lord. In fact, anything that God has commanded his children to do, as divine service, belongs to the ordinances, and must be done just as the Lord ordained it to be done.

The Old Covenant had many of this kind of services that were called ordinances. Heb. 9: 1-10. Some professed Christians only acknowledge two ordinances or sacraments in their churches, as they call them, namely, baptism and the Communion; and then they do not keep them as Paul received them from the Lord and gave them to the church. So, my dear brethren, let us look to ourselves, that we lose not those things which we have wrought, but that we receive a full reward, "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God." See 2 John 1: 8, 9.

My dear brethren and sisters, be not deceived, for God is not mocked. Jesus said, "Take heed that no man deceive you." "And many false prophets shall arise, and shall deceive many." Paul says, "Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch." Acts 20: 30, 31. Many have gone out since these warnings were given to the church, but where is the church now that keeps the ordinances as they were delivered by Christ and the apostles to the churches? All the ordinances but two are dropped out of some of the churches, and they are so changed and so differently used from what they were when delivered to the churches, that there is very little left but the name any more. Paul could no longer address them with a letter of praise that they have kept the ordinances as he had delivered them unto them.

When we examine historians they tell us that the churches, in the first four hundred years of the Christian era, kept the ordinances, such as feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the Communion of the broken bread and the cup of blessing in memory of the body and blood of the Lord. Doctor Smith says, in his Bible Dictionary: "At some point in the feast, those who were present, men and women sitting apart, would rise to salute each other with the holy kiss." Page 488 of the edition of 1868. And if there is no church any more in the world that keeps those ordinances as they were delivered to the church, they will stand as a monument and as a witness against all the churches in the great day of judgment.

Let me say to you, beloved brethren and sisters in Christ, "Be ye steadfast, unmoveable." You need not fear that the God of heaven will complain that you have followed his Son Jesus Christ too closely in his examples, and that, in so doing you lived and walked too close to the rule of the letter at the expense of the spirit. Let us all be so filled with the spirit of Christ that we may be able to run the full length after the teaching of the letter in all the ordinances and examples of Christ. We need not apprehend any danger of falling under the displeasure of God, because we walk step by step in all the ordinances blameless, like Zacharias and Elisabeth of old.

Let not the child of God feel alarmed if he should be told that in his conduct, in being so precise in his practice there is too much mimicry to retain the spirit. Let us remember that the Lord said, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life. But there are some of you that believe not." John 6: 63, 64. Therefore, my brethren, let us be sure that we follow the teachings of his Word, and then we are sure to retain the spirit also. All the ordinances must be obeyed as the Lord has given them, no matter what name we may give to the services, whether we call it a mechanical action through which we must pass, or an act of choice on the part of the members.

It is very clear that feet-washing at one time was not a choice with Peter, but he had to submit to it nevertheless, or have no part with his Lord and Master. The church at Corinth kept the ordinances for which they got praise; but, for the disorder in which they kept them, rebuke and reproof took the place of praise amongst them.

I will say to you, dear reader, whoever you are, you may go and examine your Bible, from one end to the other, and you can not find one case where God rejected or condemned a man because he followed the instruction of the letter of the law, which God had given him to do, too closely. But it was always for not doing, or for doing differently from the letter of instruction.

We will look at a few examples in conclusion:

1. Remember Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden.

2. Remember Lot's wife.

3. Remember King Saul when he was sent to destroy the kingdom of the Amalekites.

None of the above lived up to the letter of the law, as they were called upon to do, and so, then, had to suffer the penalty of the law. In fact, the Bible is so full of such examples that it is not necessary to use any argument. No difference what the nature of the command or ordinance was, when men obeyed, the blessing promised followed, and when it was violated by man, or changed in the least, the curse was sure to follow. Paul well said, Heb. 10: 28, "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses." And again, Heb. 12: 25, "See that ye refuse not him that speaketh: for if they escape not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven."

We can never be too particular in following the footsteps of Jesus. The nearer we can imitate Christ's example, the better for us; for "whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son." 2 John 1: 9.

Mount Morris, Ill., - - - - Sept. 17, 1889.

ONE was baptized at Stuttgart, Ark., recently.

FROM Bro. D. H. Replogle we learn that two were added to the Buck Creek church, Ind., Aug. 25th, by baptism.

WE are glad to learn that the labors of the committee, sent by Annual Meeting to the Washington church, Ind., terminated successfully.

IN this issue of the MESSENGER will be found one hundred and fifty-nine announcements of love-feasts, to occur during this and the next two months.

BRO. GEO. L. STUDEBAKER, of Shideler, Ind., is laboring for the Brethren in the Salimony church, Ind. We hope to have a report of the meetings next week.

BRO. ABRAM BOWMAN, of Hagerstown, Ind., has been visiting at Mt. Morris during the past week. He expresses himself as well pleased with our little town and surrounding country.

BRO. A. W. AUSTIN, of Reed, Cook Co., Tex., reports one applicant for baptism at a point where the Brethren have not preached before. He says, "Now is the time for work. Come, brethren, send on your workers. We will furnish the congregations."

AT the reorganization of our Sunday-school at this place on the 5th inst., Bro. O. P. Hoover was elected Superintendent with Bro. T. T. Myers and Bro. G. N. Falkenstein as Assistants. May God bless these brethren in the important work placed upon them by the church! The school is in a flourishing condition and is doing a good work. Last year the school raised and paid over to the General Mission fund $70.75. This shows what may be done by making an effort. The expenses of the school are met by private donations, and the penny offerings go to the Mission fund.

BRO. C. C. ROOT recently visited the Wolf River church, Kans., and held some meetings for the Brethren. One was added to the church by baptism, so reports sister Fanny Root.

IN the Nettle Creek church, Ind., there are on the ministerial list the names of four brethren, the youngest of whom is seventy-eight years. It is not often that so many ministers are found in one church who have all so nearly reached the great age of four score years.

IT is stated that during the year 1888, nearly five hundred works on theology were published in the United States. With so many religious books to read, we, as a people, ought to be getting better. Perhaps a little less modern and speculative theology, and a little more of the simple teaching of Christ would be just as good for the people.

AN exchange says that in the State of Texas there are forty-nine county-seats in which the Gospel is not preached. Here is work for forty-nine men of God,—to go where the Word is not preached. Who can say, in view of this statement, that there is not work for the Missionary and Tract Committee? May the Lord open our hearts and our pocket-books so that the Gospel may be preached!

BRO. J. P. STUDEBAKER, of Litchfield, Ill, writes, under date of the 4th inst., that they are having an excellent meeting at that place. Bro. David Troxel is preaching for them and the spirit of the Lord is being made manifest in their midst. Three have come out on the Lord's side and others are near the kingdom. May the good work continue until many sons and daughters be born into the kingdom!

THE churches in the Northern District of Illinois are being solicited for money to purchase or build a meeting-house in the City of Chicago. The amount required will be about $4,000. This seems like a large sum of money, but when the importance of the work is taken into consideration, the money is as nothing. Knowing the liberality of the District we have no doubt but that the money will be raised and a meeting-house secured in Chicago.

ONLY those who have had the experience know the amount of labor required to read over all the manuscript that comes to the MESSENGER office and to get it ready for the compositor. The work is exceedingly trying to the organs of sight, and ever since the office editor's eyes partially failed, Bro. L. A. Plate, our efficient foreman, has been rendering him valuable assistance in this work. He has read manuscript and prepared it for the paper for some time, and that he has done it well we only need refer our readers to the columns of the MESSENGER.

BRO. GRANT MAHAN and his wife, sister Emma, left us on the 7th inst., to visit for a short time with sister Mahan's parents near Warren, Ill. From there Bro. Mahan goes to Michigan University to finish a course in English and Modern Languages, commenced three years ago, but given up on account of ill health. He has been engaged for several years in the MESSENGER office and wrote an occasional article for the paper. During his stay with us, Bro. Mahan gained the love and esteem of all with whom he came in contact, and he takes with him the good wishes of all who know him. We shall miss him from the office and in the Sunday-school where he was an efficient teacher. We pray that the Lord may bless our brother and sister in the work that they have undertaken, and make them a blessing to the church and to humanity.

THE Brethren's Quarterly for the fourth quarter of 1889 is now ready to send out. The very instructive and interesting lessons, together with the copious and suggestive notes, render the Quarterly a very desirable help in Sunday-school work. Price, single copy, 10 cents; three copies 25 cents; eight copies and over, five cents each; fifty copies and over, four cents each.

THE oats crop of the State of Illinois is placed this year at 130,000,000 bushels. If the Lord's tenth of this immense crop would find its way into the mission fund, there would be over two and a half million dollars for the work of spreading the Gospel. What a grand work might be done if God's people would but give the one-tenth of their increase to the Lord!

THERE are many things in this world that are not worth knowing; indeed it may be said that there are many things that it is better never to know. There are depths of useless knowledge that it pays no one to sound. There are thousands of books printed every year that are not only useless but harmful. To read them is not to become better but worse. The world would be better off if a grand conflagration of its useless books would take place. There would be less evil in the world than there now is.

"IT is an excellent thing for any person to realize the fact that the world is not all contained within the limits of his own horizon. Some horizons shut in nothing but mountain and valley; some, nothing but miles of plain; some, nothing but leagues of sea. An amusing instance of the kind of mistake that is made by people who are ignorant or forgetful of this simple fact is given in the recent experience of a lady traveler in Asia. One of the Malay rajahs confided to her his willingness to learn English. 'But,' he said, 'there is this objection to English, that it is only spoken by about a dozen people in the world, even counting the Governor of Singapore and his followers; while wherever you go—to the north, south, east, or west, or beyond the wind—you find Malay spoken.' That Malay was right so far as his own horizon was concerned; but what infinite horizons lay beyond him! And what infinite horizons of truth lie beyond many a prim Anglo-Saxon who mistakes his own little horizon of personal knowledge for the boundaries of God's everlasting universe!"

RECENTLY, a man by the name of Brodie, dressed in a rubber swimming suit, swam, or rather, was carried over the Niagara Falls. He was taken out of the water below the Falls in a state of unconsciousness, but was soon restored to consciousness, and it was found that he had not been seriously injured. It does seem singular how men will risk their lives to gain notoriety in this world. In Brodie, Graham, and others of their class, who, in their foolhardy attempts to gain a cheap distinction, risk their lives, we have an illustration of what men will do to gain the applause of their fellows. These efforts are simply a love of ambition which leads men into the very jaws of death, and that, too, only to enable them to say they have accomplished something that no one else has ever tried to do. The worst feature about it is that no good comes from it. The world can never be made better, and the sum of human happiness is not one whit increased by these performances, and to risk life in this way is absolutely sinful. What is to come out of it for the man who performed the feat? In a few weeks some cheap city museum will advertise, as one of their attractions, the man who swam over Niagara Falls, and the dimes and quarters of many professed Christians will go to enrich the museum man.

MAKING THE CHURCH POPULAR.

THE religion of Jesus Christ is founded upon the eternal Word of God. "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." God's Word is immutable and unchangeable, "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever." This proposition being true, it follows without argument that a commandment given, or a precept laid down, or a principle of truth established by God's Word can not be legally changed by men, and they who undertake to make a change or set aside a principle, will justly fall into condemnation.

It is not to be presumed that God has given his Word and his truth into the keeping of any one man or set of men, for every one that thirsteth may come to the Waters of Life, and all who obey Christ and continue in his Word are his disciples and to them is given the spirit of truth. "If ye continue in my Word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

But how strangely out of harmony with the proposition laid down above is the modern idea of God's Word, and of the relation of the church to the world! The popular notion of the day demands that the church must conform to the spirit of the age in which we live, and that her usages and practices must be changed to suit the times and the people; that many of the commandments did well enough in the days of the apostles and in the early days of the church, but now we have advanced, we have made many improvements, we have progressed, and these things must be dropped and set aside as non-essentials. Little by little these demands have been acceded to by the churches, until in many of them to-day the commandments are mostly set aside.

The old cry that has been heard for centuries is heard none the less to-day, and its plea is, let the church adopt popular methods so that she may induce people to come into her communion. If you draw the line too rigidly you will keep the people away from the church. This is and has been the plea for years on the part of those who feel that they are called to reform the church. The idea that the religion of Jesus Christ is based on the fixed and unchangeable laws of God, is lost sight of, and the modern theological reformer insists upon a creed with sufficient elasticity to meet the various wants and demands of the age in which we live.

Take for example, the question of secret societies. In the olden times it was held that the religion of Jesus was broad enough, high enough and deep enough to cover every want of humanity. The church had such old-fashioned notions about things in general that she actually taught that it was her duty to visit the sick, feed the hungry, clothe the naked, and care for the helpless, but modern thought has grown beyond the limits of such notions and the work of the church now must be supplemented by oath-bound, secret societies, whose duty it is to look after the wants of those who join in with them. When this supplemental device was first brought up, many of the churches opposed it. They argued that Christians should love one another, that it was the duty of the church to care for her poor, but, one by one, the different denominations dropped these ancient notions as relics of superstition and joined heart and hand with the more advanced thought of the age.

Only recently a large and respectable Christian organization, that had clung with considerable tenacity to its opposition against secret societies, changed its constitution to conform more nearly to the demands of the age in which we live, and now they admit the secret society as a supplement to the church of Christ.

The change was not effected without considerable opposition and it took a long time for the modern reformers to get in their work, but by the use of the old arguments, they at length succeeded. They said, "Our opposition, as a church, to secret societies hinders our work. Especially is this true in the towns and cities. We can not successfully compete with other churches who admit all classes. Our efforts are crippled, and the work of gathering in souls, hindered. We must bring the church to conform to the age in which we live and to the conditions by which we are surrounded. It is useless for us longer to set ourselves against popular opinion; let us change and then we shall grow great in the world." These arguments prevailed and while a minority of the church entered its protest, yet the measure was carried and thus the church moved a long step worldward and became one of the popular churches of the day.

Many years ago such old-fashioned men as Calvin, Knox, John Wesley, Roger Williams and others, preached strong sermons against the folly and sin of fashionable dressing, and the churches, which they were instrumental in building up, listened to their teaching, and obeyed and carried out the principle of plain dressing, taught in God's Word. But times changed, and popular taste and the wants of the age demanded that the churches must open their doors to those who wear gold and pearls, diamonds and costly array, and popular taste carried the day, and those churches are as fashionable now as the world can possibly desire them to be. The old fogy notions had to go. They hindered the progress of the church. You could not get people to come into the church unless you would allow them to do as they please in matters of taste. Fashionable people must be saved. They won't give up their gold and jewelry and costly array and so we must take them in any way. Paul's notion about dressing don't suit this age and it must go, and go it did so far as some of the churches are concerned.

This plan of popularizing the religion of Jesus Christ began many centuries ago, and, if age can give respectability to a custom, this ought to be respectable for it is nearly as old as the church itself. The apostles thought it right to obey the Master in all things, and, being led by the Holy Ghost, they established the church and gave such directions as were needed for the guidance of God's people in this world. They spake and wrote by inspiration of the Holy Ghost. Their successors followed in their footsteps, but only a short time elapsed until some would not endure sound doctrine, and they set about to change some of the simple commandments of the New Testament, doubtless because they did not seem to suit the popular taste, and were a hinderance to the cause.

The early Christians, in imitation of Christ's example and in accordance with the practice of the apostles, partook of the Communion, in connection with a full meal, which they called the Lord's Supper. They washed one another's feet, they saluted each other with a holy kiss, they distributed to the necessities of the saints, they lived lives of simple, unostentatious piety, they walked with humble boldness in all the commandments of their Blessed Master, considering that his was the right to command, theirs, the duty to obey. But after a time these things became unpopular; changes and innovations were made. The Supper was abused and set aside by the Roman church and many other of the simple commandments shared the same fate, and so the work of changing the practice of the church has gone on until, at least in some of the churches, there remains but little of Christ's teaching.

Imagine, if you can, the apostle Paul coming into one of our fashionable city churches to-day. The minister arises to preach from the apostle's own words: "In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array." As he arises from his cushioned chair you may see a diamond flashing on his bosom, and as he lifts his hands toward heaven and utters the solemn words, "Let us pray," gold buttons, richly set with pearls, glisten about his wrist. Around and about him are the leaders of fashion, members of his wealthy congregation. Diamonds flash and silks rustle as stately heads recline slightly in prayer. The minister preaches twenty-five minutes. He tells his congregation that the apostle's meaning is that they should not put their minds on fashionable dress. "You may wear gold, diamonds and pearls, but you must be careful not to put your minds on these things; if you do, you will commit a sin. As long as you are humble you can wear these things, but if you grow proud, and humility is not in your hearts, then you had better lay them off." And so the congregation comes to look upon their diamonds and silk as so many evidences of their humility, and they say, "There is more pride in plain dressing than in fashionable."

What think you Paul would say were he permitted to stand up and speak to that audience? Think of him and of his life work, of his suffering, of his stripes, of his chains, of his prison life, and, most of all, of his teaching! Do you think he would be allowed to fill the pulpit in that city church for a single month? Nay, verily. A council of the official board would be called at once and he would be notified, that, owing to a dissimilarity of views, his services were no longer required by the Crœsus church. They would inform him that the views held by him in regard to the church ordinances, and on dancing, theater going, card-playing, wearing of gold and pearls and costly garments are not in accord with the demands of the present age. They were doubtless all right 1850 years ago but the world has advanced. Progress has been made, and the church must meet the demands of the age. If these sentiments and doctrines be insisted upon, it will break up the church; can't keep up a church in the City on any such principles, and, therefore, to avoid trouble and discord, they, with many regrets, ask the apostle to look for another charge. In closing, they kindly suggest that he may possibly be able to find a charge in the country, where the conditions are somewhat different.

Reader, is this picture a figment of the brain? Is it not drawn fully in accord with the facts in the case? Search the Scriptures and see if these things are not so. Compare the churches of to-day with the apostolic church and draw for yourselves the contrast, and then remember that God's Word is unchangeable, "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."

Missionary and Tract Work Department.

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor. 16: 2

"Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give: not grudgingly or of necessity, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor 9: 7.

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." 2 Cor. 8, 12.

GIVING TO GOD.

BY LANDON WEST.

Number Two.

ONE of the strongest reasons why every servant of God should aid the church and work with his best effort is, because to do so is to secure a guardian for ourselves and also for our children. Our time, our gifts, and the burdens borne for the cause and for the church are never lost. If we give to aid the poor, to feed the hungry and clothe the naked, and to spread the name of Christ, it is lending to the Lord, and to make friends both for ourselves, and also for our children. If we fail in health, or in property, we have friends both on earth and in heaven, and we will suffer no want that can not be supplied.

What we give to the Kingdom of God and the spreading of his Truth will yield more for our children than the treasures we give them direct, and if our children should ever come to want, the work we have done for Christ, and the gifts by us to his Kingdom, will yield more for our own offspring than if given directly to them. It is a bequest they can not spend so long as they show any respect for the house and the people of God. It can not be lost. Then let us all do something for his name by giving to others of the blessings the Lord has so freely given to us, that we may all have store laid up in Heaven!

EVIDENCES OF THE TRUE CHURCH.

BY J. S MOHLER.

Chapter Four.—The Doctrine of Election.

THE doctrine of Calvinistic election teaches that God from all eternity, predestinated a certain part of the human race to be saved, and the other part to be lost. We have learned that those who believe this doctrine generally find themselves among the saved ones, and plead "election" as the test.

If this doctrine were true, then free moral agency, or the power of choice finds no place in the human family, as a condition of salvation. According to this doctrine it would be no shame on the part of the wicked to be cast away, since they could be no party in their condemnation. On the other hand, there would not, necessarily be any just cause of rejoicing among the saved, since they were perfectly passive in the whole matter.

The truth is, that the place of torment becomes additionally grievous to the wicked, because of wasted opportunities. While they lived in the world, they might have escaped that place of torment, and secured heaven; but, they would not, and the result is they are self-condemned. Justly so. It is the remembrance of the happiness they might have secured, but which they forfeited through negligence, or willful disobedience that makes the sufferings of the wicked doubly painful.

On the part of the righteous it is the pleasing remembrance in glory, that, when the Savior called, they obeyed. Like Mary, they made that good choice that shall never be taken from them. They also remember that they chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season.

They lived, suffered, and died for Christ. This, after victory is obtained and heavenly rest is secured, makes heaven so joyous and rest so sweet!

God has endowed us with moral faculties sufficiently clear, whereby we can discern between right and wrong. We also possess the power to choose the right, or the power to choose the wrong, and as we choose so will our condition be,—whether happiness, or misery.

There is a sense, however, in which the doctrine of election is consistent and true, i. e., by choosing the Truth as it is in Christ. By this rule we may all become of the elect. This is true Gospel election, but the Calvinistic doctrine of election is an unsafe test to rely upon, as to building on the Rock.

WORDS AND ACTIONS.

BY JAMES WEIMER.

OUR actions should always agree with our words. Our words should be of such a character that we need not be ashamed when they are spoken of.

Will telling the people that we are working for the Lord, and that we are Christians, make us such? How often do we hear the words, "I am a Christian?" We have seen acts of such people that did not correspond with their words. I once heard a professed minister of the Gospel say, "I want to do what is right, and I am doing what is right. I want to be a Christian, and I am a Christian. I want to go to Heaven, and I am going to Heaven." His actions and words, however, are of such a character that we are made to doubt. Why? Because he denies by words and acts the commandments of Jesus Christ.

Actions speak louder than words. What the world is looking for, and what they should see is more noble Christian actions, even though there be fewer words. If the Christian world would live out their profession and show to the world by their actions that they are what they profess, then it would require but few words to accomplish a great work. Ministers of the Gospel would not need to labor so hard and wear out their mental faculties, without any effect, if there were true consistency every-where.

While the minister should live out every principle that he teaches, the members, also, should adorn themselves with the helmet of righteousness, lest the minister's labors be in vain. If all work together in peace and harmony,—for Christ, the interest of the church, and in exemplification of the life of Christ in daily walk and conduct, there will be a mighty work done for Zion!

We need not wonder if the world does not become Christianized, while the professed Christian does not live a life to correspond with his profession! The Christian is "known and read of all men." He need not tell the people that he is a Christian. They know it. He can not hide it from them.

If we were required to openly announce our evil deeds or not speak at all, we would quite likely not have much to say. Let us put on the robe of righteousness that the world may not only hear but also see. Let us live in peace by being submissive to the church, and following the Master. Then we may be "living epistles known and read of all men."

Oh, that unruly member of ours that conveys to the people the thoughts of our minds! It is a source of so much harm, if we have not the controlling power over it that we should have! If properly controlled, it may be the source of joy and comfort in this life and that which is to come. But we find it the hardest task to control the organ of speech. It is a work of a life-time!

If Christians would always think, speak, and act as though they were in the immediate presence of God in person, their light would shine so brightly that the world would rejoice and believe. But while we are not in the presence of God in person, he knows our thoughts, hears our words, and sees our actions.

Then, let us ever remember, Our actions must correspond with our profession! Then we may be lights to the world as the Savior would have us to be!

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—Under date of Aug. 31, Bro. Michael Keller, of Great Bend, Kans., writes: "The brethren and sisters held their harvest meeting on Saturday, Aug. 24, in the Walnut Valley meeting-house. Bro. Lewis Fahrney did the preaching for us."

—"The quarterly council in the Woodland church, Mich.," writes Bro. S. D. Katherman, "occurred Aug. 31. We were all made to feel glad that one who had strayed from the fold returned again, and was reinstated in church fellowship. We also decided to have our next Communion Oct. 3, at 10 A. M. Our church seems to be in love and union, for which we feel thankful to the Giver of all good."

—Under date of Aug. 27, Bro. Willis White, of Washington, Kans., writes: "Aug. 24 our love-feast was held at Bro. Jacob Merkey's. The weather was most beautiful for the occasion, and we had a glorious feast indeed. Brethren Samuel Holdeman, Levi Eby, William Lugenbeel, Albion Daggett, I. L Conner and Daniel Smith were the ministering brethren that came to our assistance. The Word was ably held forth to a large congregation."

—"A Few Thoughts on Preaching," is the title of a short essay by Bro. D. R. Prowant, from which we glean the following: "Ministers should be on hand at the appointed hour, so that the meeting may be opened at the proper time. Preliminary remarks, before prayer, should be short. After Scripture reading, enter upon your discourse with the energy of a Peter, the zeal of a Paul and the loving-kindness of a John. Do not expect to tell all you know in one sermon. Forty-five minutes is quite long enough, and if you have spoken by the Spirit of God, he will do as great a work through your instrumentality as if you had talked longer. Above all, when through preaching, do not cease praying. Pray mightily that God may bless the seed sown, and water it with your tears!"

—Bro. Horace Whisler writes: "In GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 33, I read an essay, entitled, 'Are We Ready To Meet Jesus?' I was deeply impressed with these words. Yes, dear brethren and sisters, may we all ask ourselves the question, 'Are we ready in our present condition?' If our Redeemer were to come to this world, with all his holy angels, to receive his own, would he say to us, 'Well done'? May we search the Scriptures, and endeavor to prove faithful to our baptismal vow."

—Bro. J. D. Showalter writes: "The Peabody church held its quarterly council Aug. 17. There was but very little business on hand, so the most of the time was occupied by the ministers in giving good and wholesome instructions. The church was in favor of having a love-feast this fall. On Sunday morning Bro. M. M. Eshelman preached the Word of Life. Brethren and sisters, it seems to me as though our hearts should be lifted up in praise to God who gave us such a bountiful harvest!"

—Under date of Aug. 29, Bro. John H. Topper, of Auburn, Dekalb Co., Ind., writes: "Our quarterly council, at the Cedar Lake meeting-house, occurred Aug. 24. There was considerable business before the meeting, which was settled to the satisfaction of all present. Our congregation, I believe, is now in good working order. Bro. G. I. Patterson is Superintendent of our Sunday-school, assisted by Bro. David Hoover. Our Communion meeting will be held Oct. 3, to begin at 10 A. M. Brethren coming by railroad will be met at the trains."

—Under date of Sept. 2, Bro. S. B. Shirky, of the Wakendah church, Ray Co., Mo., writes: "Aug. 24, Bro. J. G. Royer commenced a meeting in the Rockingham meeting-house. He preached in all fourteen discourses. As a result, twenty souls returned to God and acknowledged Christ in baptism, we hope to walk with him. Many of them were our children, yet young, who, in their tender years, gave themselves to the Lord. This, with the meetings Bro. Hillery held, makes in all twenty-eight since the Miller and Sommer Debate. The cause has not suffered in Bro. Miller's hands. The meetings closed with good interest."

—Under date of Aug. 21, Bro. D. S. Clapper, of Yellow Creek, Pa., writes: "The Brethren of the Licking Creek church held their harvest meeting Aug. 16 to 18. It was largely attended by the Brethren. The ministers present were, Eld. N. Martin, William C. Koontz, Samuel Ritchey and D. S. Clapper. Brethren Absalom Mellott and Jacob Weller were ordained to the full degree of the ministry during the meeting. They have now become the successors of the aforesaid N. Martin, who had charge of this little band heretofore. My prayer is that those brethren may have the blessing of the Lord upon them!"

—"Why is it?"—says Bro. Uriah Fink,—"that railroad companies and other incorporated bodies are so particular about the men whom they hire to fill some important position in their business, and why do they always prefer such as are total abstainers? Not long ago a little incident occurred in my presence which impelled me to write these lines. An inquiry was made by the representative of a certain incorporated body, about to transact some business with an acquaintance of mine. Among other questions one was, 'Is he a total abstainer, or a moderate drinker, or an habitual drinker?' Now, dear reader, to which class would you rather belong, had the same question been asked about you? Remember, moderate drinking often leads to habitual drinking, and habitual drinking leads to drunkenness and a drunkard's grave. Total abstinence is always safe and preferable!"

—Bro. D. C. Moomaw writes: "By special request, I expect to go to the City of Altoona, Pa., in October, to assist the Brethren in a series of meetings. About Nov. 1, I will visit the Lunenburg, Va., congregation and remain several weeks. The field of my succeeding operations in the revival work, will be confined to the First District of Virginia. If nothing prevents, I hope to visit the Bedford congregation, near Liberty, in December. May the Father's blessing attend all our efforts!"

—Sister Louise Moore, of Shelby, Iowa, writes: "As mother and I are sitting alone this beautiful Sabbath afternoon, I can not help but express our loneliness through the MESSENGER. We are living here without a brother or sister near us, and hardly ever get to hear the Word preached, as we live eighteen miles from the nearest place of meeting. Father being dead, circumstances are such that we can not get to meeting very often. We would be glad to have some of our ministering brethren come and preach for us. We live within forty rods of the school-house, that can be had at any time for public worship. Brethren, do not forget us! It is hard to live without meeting-privileges."

—From the White church, Ind., Bro. D. C. Campbell writes: "We are glad to say the good work is still moving on slowly at this point. One more has been added to the fold since our last report, making in all, since February last, twelve by baptism. We hope the cause will still move on! Let every brother and sister hold up the banner of King Emmanuel! Let us show to the world that there are hearts that are yet loyal to him as king, and may the lambs of the flock be found faithful to the cause which they espoused, that some of their former associates may be yet brought into the fold! May the care of the divine Father ever be with all, and may his good Spirit lead all safely home to the haven of eternal bliss!"

—Some of the inconsistencies of Seventh-Day Adventism are exposed by Bro. E. Hopkins in the following: "Seventh-Day Adventists have been preaching for years that the United States Government is to make a Sunday law. Why? God revealed this to Ellen White. Now they set themselves to work (claiming to be the Lord's only people on the earth) to defeat the predictions of Almighty God, as revealed by the mouth of his only prophet in the latter days. Do these men really believe what they say? Do they hope to accomplish their task? They also tell us that God has shown Ellen White that his coming is near. Would it not be just as sensible for them to get up a petition to prevent Christ from making his second advent? What do they mean? If they can prevent, or make worthless, what God has said in one prophecy, can they not in another?"

From Herington, Kans.

I WILL try to write a little about what a loving Heavenly Father we have, and how good he has been to me. Last summer I was very sick. I had nearly passed over the river. All hope of my recovery had been given up. I called for the elders of the church, to anoint and pray for me in the name of the Lord. I thought the Lord would take me home to rest with him, but I wanted to be anointed, because of that blessed thought, to have my sins forgiven. I knew I would get home and live with Jesus. But Jesus would have me well again, and so he made me better after that, and when I was fourteen years old, I was quite well again.

I am so glad that I have such a good Heavenly Father who hears us and gives us all we ask for. O how I wish all people would serve their Father! Let us not be afraid to show a good example for the world. Dear sisters, let us not be afraid to let our friends or the world, see that we wear a cap, but let us do as Jesus tells us to do—wear it whenever we pray. Let us all work for Jesus, for soon he will come. Can we, then, say we are ready to go with him? If not, then, come and let us get ready, and be up and working for Jesus. He has something for us all to do.

There are many who have not yet heard anything about Jesus. They ought to know something about him. Do not let this world keep you from doing the things that Jesus wants you to do, for soon all these things will be gone, and then what will become of those who would not do as Jesus told them? It makes me feel very sad to see people put on so much style and not think of the poor people who have nothing.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us all do what we can to get poor sinners to Jesus! Jesus will soon be here. We do not know when he will come, but let us all be ready to meet him. Let us all thank the Lord for all the kindness he has bestowed upon us!

SINCE my last report we have enjoyed some very happy meetings. At Bethel four have been added to the fold of Christ,—one of our children, a dear sister in the flesh, and two cousins. I feel that our prayers are being answered in impressing these dear souls to search the Good Book and to come to Christ ere the dew of the morning is gone. The oldest was only fifteen, and the youngest scarcely twelve years of age. These dear children do not live without prayer, and may their prayers, with ours, be heard in behalf of those that are not yet ready to come!

THE little flock at this place was made to rejoice, and why should not we rejoice when Christ says that the "angels in heaven rejoice over one sinner that repenteth!" Luke 15: 10. Even so we were made to rejoice at our last regular meeting at the Brick church. When, after meeting, an invitation was given to come to Christ, one came forward and, like Ruth of old, said: "Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." Ruth 1: 16. We then went to the waterside where prayer was wont to be made; and "buried him by baptism with Christ into death," we hope, to "walk in newness of life." N. B. CHRISTNER.

Notes by the Way.

AUGUST 21st I met elders David E. Price, David Eby, Ed. Forney, and M. Newcomer in the Woodland church, Fulton Co., Illinois, to complete our work as a committee. We were kindly received by all. After two days' reviewing previous work, on the request of those who as yet had not accepted our former work, I am glad to say that, with four or five exceptions, the work was accepted. We were pleased to see the kind, Christian spirit that prevailed during the time we were there, and especially at the close of the work. While some of the brethren and sisters realized that they must make some sacrifices for the good of the church there, we rejoiced at their willingness to make those sacrifices, and believe they will be greatly rewarded for making them. The spirit under which they took hold of work, looking to the future, shows their earnestness and sincerity in accepting the work of the committee. It speaks well for the cause there, and we hope all of the brethren and sisters of that church, and other churches will continue to labor harmoniously to build up the cause, as they seemed disposed to do.

Leaving there August 23, we met with Eld. Robert H. Miller, and Isaac Barto in the Waterloo, Iowa, church, August 24 and completed our work on the 27th. Here, too, with one or two exceptions, our work is accepted, and we were made to rejoice at the excellent spirit that prevailed during the work, and particularly so at the close.

From here we went to Mt. Morris, August 28th. Meeting with Eld. E. Forney on the train, on the morning of the 29th, we went to the Washington church, Indiana, where Eld. Jesse Calvert resides, and we there met Eld. Jacob Rife, a member of the committee. Our work began on the 30th, and closed after a four days' hearing of their difficulties. The proceedings here were marked with a kind spirit through all the work. The best of order prevailed all the time, and the meeting ended by all present accepting the work. The arrangements entered into, and the expressions of faithfulness to the principles and work of our Brotherhood gives assurance that a brighter day is dawning on the church at said place. We were pleased with Eld. Calvert's disposition, and with the disposition of the church and adjoining elders to give the Committee every possible facility in its work. Our labors here closed under such favorable aspects that we feel if all will labor together, as they so sincerely seemed to desire to do, they, too, will rejoice with us.

At all the places, visited by us, there were strong evidences of love to the Brotherhood. These, while very encouraging to us, also promise strength and comforting results to them. To love the Brotherhood is one of the commandments of the Lord. After awhile, dear brethren and sisters, we are going to have a reunion in our Father's glorious kingdom, and it will be a reunion,—not of the feeble, pain-stricken, dying, or aged,—but of those in the vigor of eternal youth. Happy day! Only be faithful to God and to each other!

We enjoyed our short call at Mt. Morris, indeed, with the family of Bro. Joseph Amick and in the MESSENGER office, with Bro. D. L. Miller and Bro. Amick. I believe it is generally accepted that they are the right men in the right place, and yet theirs is not altogether a rosy path. Splinters fly at them with a "vim" at times, and they frequently are advised that they are not perfect. But I imagine they are in a situation favorable to broaden their philosophy, and to make their charity very elastic. What is the use, anyhow, of having a charity as frigid as an iceberg,—that will fly all to pieces, and pieces so little, too, that they are entirely lost to view, when touched ever so little? Well, in respect to attaining the grace of charity in an enlarged form, I suppose to be an editor is just the thing, but then, you know, that we would all prefer that somebody else might get the drilling necessary to make that trait flexible. What a lazy set we all are, anyhow! We want the blessing, but then we want the Lord to let us have our own way. If that is the way to be a Christian, who can not be one?

Incidentally the brethren at the Mount said to me, talking on the Minutes of Annual Meeting, that some Minutes, ordered a year ago, have not been paid for yet,—that something like one hundred dollars is back yet. Well, I felt sorry to hear this. Now, brother, if you got any and did not pay for them, how do you feel about it, anyhow? Now, you know that is not at all right to do that way. You just sit down now before you forget it again and write an apology to Bro. J. G. Royer, and back up your apology with the money you owe. Just try it once, and see how good you will feel over it. You will feel fifty per cent more like a man after you have done it. Just quit making yourself feel ashamed by not paying those whom you ought to pay, and if you do not feel better after you have paid it, let me know and I believe I can tell what's the matter.

Another thing. Brethren have said to me that Bro. Robert H. Miller ought to have the proceeds of the sale of his Debate book, instead of them going into the Missionary Fund, as he is getting old and feeble, and has not much property. These brethren thought it would increase the sale of the book, as many would buy it in order to benefit Bro. Robert. Well, this strikes me as about right, and I would move that our Editors and Mission Committee put the matter in that shape. Who will second the motion? Let us have word all along the line on the subject. What do you, brethren editors, say on the matter?

S. S. MOHLER.

From Hartley, Texas.

THERE are very few members here,—not nearly as many as we would like to see, and those who are here need much encouragement, and the prayers of our dear Brethren.

Bro. J. R. Gish's "Notes from the Highways and Hedges," have the right ring, and should be sounded long and loud. If the Brethren could see and fully realize the condition of the many thousands, here in the South, who have never as yet heard the Word, as preached and practiced by our people, they surely would make more effort to spread the Truth where it is so much needed.

If you do not know just where to go, ask the Lord, and you will soon see the Hand that is beckoning you to Macedonia.

Those of the readers who have read Bro. Flory's article in No. 34, have seen that I am going to leave the Pan Handle of Texas to settle in Southern California. I have been here nearly six months, but my health is still failing me, and I have lost twenty-five pounds in weight. My disease is catarrh of the head, and while this is a good climate for some diseases, it does not suit mine. I am not weary of this part of God's heritage, but for my own good, and that of my family, I must seek another climate. My friends will, from this date, address me at Los Angeles, California.

I have had many enquiries since my return from California in July, and will say that should any one wish information, I will be pleased to give such data as I may have at hand, by enclosing stamp. We expect to locate quite a colony of Brethren near Buena Park, about fifteen miles south of Los Angeles. I am surprised that so few of our Brethren are in the State.

Since my return from California, I am informed that a large Congregational House of worship is being erected, where, four weeks ago, there seemed to be but a vast plain. Brethren, can we not unite our forces,—live more for others and the Gospel, and not so much for our comfort and pleasure? God wants volunteers, and men who are not ashamed to practice what they preach. Bro. Flory says that we "should go in and possess the land." We are loth to leave the dear brethren and sisters in Texas, but hope and pray that God may soon fill the vacancy. T. J. NAIR.

From Floyd County, Georgia.

As it is evident that portions of the South will, ere long, be occupied by members of the Brethren church, I would, as a friend and well-wisher to them, and to any enterprise they may feel inclined to undertake, whether of a moral or material order, refer them to the Dykes' Creek region in Floyd County, Georgia,—six miles east of the City of Rome. There is, at present, by a combination of circumstances, a body of land in the market, comprising about two thousand acres, which might be secured and "colonized" by those wishing to settle in the healthy regions of the fast-improving, Southland.

Knowing as I have all my life the great moral worth, the industry, the thrift, and the peace-loving qualities and sentiments of the Brethren, and the benefit which their religious and industrial worth would confer upon a community, I, with many others, give any who desire to settle in our mild, genial climate, and among our social, generous people, a most cordial invitation to "come and see." I can refer you to Eld. Isaac Long, of Rockingham County, Virginia, Eld. Fred Sherfy, of same County and State, to the Reeds, Brubakers, Arnolds, Kleppers, Neads, and others, of Eastern Tennessee, as men who know me, and who have seen and heard enough of the great field of the New South, now ready for the reapers to enter, and do good work for the benefit of themselves, and for the Master's work of peace and love. T. F. JEFFRIES.

From Yellow Creek Church, Pa.

AT our late council-meeting we decided to hold a harvest meeting on the first Sunday of September. Bro. James Sell was present on that occasion and preached on Saturday evening, and Sunday morning and evening. The attendance was good, and our children's meeting in the afternoon was also well attended. Quite a number of children were present, and all seemed to be interested. Three or four brethren spoke to them, and gave them good instructions. Bro. Sell spoke on the subject, "Children, Obey your Parents in the Lord for this is Right." If children would all obey their parents, parents would not have as much trouble as they sometimes have. Sometimes parents may do all in their power to bring up their children in the right way, and yet fail.

Among these children was a six-year-old boy who was carried away a distance of about two miles by the waters of the Johnstown flood. Our sympathies are drawn out for the many poor little children who are left without parents. The father of this little boy was saved, but his mother was drowned. BARBARA HOLSINGER.

"YET there is room! Still open stands the gate,
The gate of love; it is not yet too late
Room, room, still room; oh enter, enter now."

A FEW weeks ago, while standing on the grassy banks of the Franklin Creek, in the beautiful grove of Franklin, witnessing the baptismal scene of four maidens in the bloom of youth, and noticing the solemnity which seemed to pervade the vast assembly, a question arose in my mind something like the poetess, Annie S. Hawks, expressed

"Who'll be the next to follow Jesus,
Down through the Jordan's rolling tide."

To-day, September 6, a young man and his wife, were made willing to enter the "gate of love" and of proffered mercy. I fondly cherish the hope that they may ever walk in newness of life,—worthy of the vocation whereto they have been called.

I hope all the readers of the MESSENGER have read the editorial in No. 33 of present volume: "After harvest." It is so applicable and appropriate! C. H. HAWBECKER.

From the Powell's Valley Church, Oregon.

THIS little band of members met in council August 24 Our dear elder, M. M. Bashor, was here to conduct the meeting. Our dear elder, as a true shepherd, admonished the flock to stand firmly on the foundation of Christ, and always to forget the past, and press onward and upward to the mark of the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus! Dear brethren and sisters, let us try to live nearer to our blessed Master, and ever strive to walk in that strait and narrow path that leads to glory. In the evening and Sunday following, we had two excellent sermons by Eld. M. M. Bashor. Being deprived of preaching by the Brethren for six months, the words spoken were as a refreshing shower of God's blessings, and we feel that the members were built up, and sinners made to see their condition. May the Lord bless the labors of our dear brother!

The GOSPEL MESSENGER, to us, is a great comfort. Our hearts have been gladdened in reading of the progress and success of the mission work. We hope there will be a universal response to the appeals for aid, that the cause may not suffer and that God's holy name may be glorified!

IN reading the MESSENGER we learn that the churches generally are holding harvest meetings, or special thanksgiving services for the bountiful harvest with which God, in his goodness and great love, has blessed us. The members of the Manchester church have enjoyed the benefits of two such services. August 15th, Bro. Alexander Miller, of Nappanee, Indiana, came to us and preached an interesting discourse, appropriate to the occasion. This service was held in what we call our "West" house. Ten days later Bro. W. R. Deeter, of Milford, Indiana, held a like service in our church house in town. O, how forcibly were we reminded of our indebtedness to God for his rich blessings, and how our hearts should go up in gratitude to him from whose great store-house we receive the bounties of life! Surely, God has remembered us! Let us praise his holy name!

A. L. WRIGHT.

From Waterloo, Iowa.

THE South Waterloo church is moving along in love and union. We have great reason to be thankful to the Lord for his great blessings, as he has greatly blessed us both temporally and spiritually. Bro. T. T. Myers, of Mt. Morris, Illinois, came to us June 16, and held a series of meetings for us. The Lord blessed his labors to the conversion of twenty-eight souls. Two more were baptized shortly afterwards, and three more since.

About the same time, Bro. J. G. Royer preached at Spring Creek, which also belongs to the South Waterloo church, and four were baptized there, making, in all, thirty-seven baptized and one reclaimed. Two young brethren have since handed in certificates of membership.

We have a prosperous Sabbath-school, which is a great help in our church work. May we all try to be faithful workers in the Lord's vineyard! There is a work for us all to do!

SUSAN IKENBERRY.

To the Churches in the Southern District of Iowa.

I TAKE this method of informing you that the funds in the District and Home Mission Treasury are exhausted. The Minutes of District and Annual Meetings must be paid out of said fund, besides Annual Meeting made a levy upon us, which we have paid. The time is now here to make our arrangements for the prosecution of active mission work through the winter. We are at present doing some work at three different places, and the reports are encouraging. There are also many other places where work should be done, throughout the district. God has surely blessed us temporally the last season. Will we let souls perish almost in our midst for the want of the Bread of Life, when we have abundant means to send it to them? "Let us make FRIENDS with the mammon of unrighteousness, that when we fail, they may receive us into everlasting habitations."

The Savior says, "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." The word "friends" here has a much deeper meaning than what we generally understand by that term.

Send all contributions to A. J. Wine, South English, Iowa, and pray that our mission work may be the means of salvation to many precious souls! PETER BROWER.

From Quinter, Kans.

A VERY sad mistake occurred sometime in July, which resulted in the death of Bro. Alfred Thompson. Our brother was employed by a cattle man in the southern part of our County. Not feeling well he procured some medicines in capsules,—quinine and calomel. By some means he made a mistake and took two capsules of calomel instead of the quinine as he should have done. The result was, he was badly salivated, and barely escaped bleeding to death. After a week he took to bleeding again, and, upon meeting an attack of malarial fever, in his emaciated and weakened condition, he died Aug. 15. He was buried on the 17th, in the cemetery at Quinter.

Bro. Thompson was a young man of promise, and by his good, moral habits, had gained many friends. He had his home with our dear brother and sister Peek, in the bounds of the Quinter church, who did all they could to make him comfortable during his last days. B. B. WHITMER.

THE Brethren held their quarterly council Aug. 30 and 31. The meeting passed off quite pleasantly, and our hearts were made to rejoice with the angels in heaven, to see one dear sister and two brethren follow Christ in baptism. This morning another brother confessed his sins, and was baptized. This makes eleven precious souls added to God's family within the last month.

We have preaching on the first Sunday of each month. We also have a prosperous Sunday-school. Our Superintendent is Bro. S. W. See. Bro. Beam, of Bridgewater, Va., on his return trip from the West, stopped with us, and preached one interesting sermon for us. J. R. MATHIAS.

From Bear Creek Church, Montgomery Co., Ohio.

TO-DAY, September 4, was the quarterly council-meeting in the Bear Creek church. All business before the meeting passed off pleasantly. The church being in need of a minister, decided to hold an election, which resulted in the choice of Bro. Josiah Eby to the ministry. May he be a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed," so that when his labors in the church are ended, it can be said of him, he has done what he could. The church at this place is in love and union, for which we are thankful. HETTIE A. LONG.

From Union Bridge, Md.

THE Committee to George's Creek,—D. Long, D. B. Arnold and E. W. Stoner, accompanied by Uriah Bixler, who were also to go to Elk Lick and Markleysburg, performed their mission between Aug. 17 and 25, and the churches in the Brotherhood have the promise of the much-needed reform in the two latter churches. In the former, I am sorry to say, the elder, rather than accept our advice, took a course by which he is no longer a member of the church, and Eld. Valentine Blough now has the oversight of the George's Creek church, Fayette Co., Pa.

I reached home Aug. 26, and found all well, thank the Lord! E. W. STONER.

From Lingleville, Erath Co., Tex.

AUGUST 12 Bro. Abe Molsbee arrived at our place for the purpose of holding some meetings with us. He labored with us until the 16th, preaching, in all, eight sermons. Although there were no immediate results, we trust the reaping will begin in the near future. Come again, Bro. Abe!

I take this method of returning thanks to all the dear brethren and sisters who sent me back numbers of THE GOSPEL MESSENGER. I will distribute them, and hope they may be the means of bringing many souls to Christ. MAMIE HALL.

Aug. 31.

In Memory of Emma Love.

AFTER some weeks of wasting sickness, our much-esteemed sister Emma has gone,—just as she had entered the harvest-field of Christ! She was called home before the tempter could bring to bear any of his artful ways, which tend to draw one away from Christ, and back into the world. This should be a consolation to the grief-stricken parents and brothers and sisters.

Sister Emma was so kind and charitable, not only to the family, but to all around her, that we can not help but weep at her departure. Yet we know that it was God's will, and we are disposed to yield always to his ways, even though they may seem mysterious to us. In that beautiful land to which she has gone, she is free from the pains she endured while here. When we "gather at the river," is it not a sweet consolation to think that among the loved ones gone before, we will meet her on the other side?

Sister Emma was the daughter of brother and sister Love. She was twenty-one years of age, and died on the morning of Aug. 19. Funeral services by brethren J. E. Eikenberry and S. F. Brower, assisted by our neighbor, Eld. Wilson, on the afternoon of Aug. 20.

She died, surrounded by the family, and, during her last week on earth, spoke frequently of her faith and trust in her Savior, and longed to be at rest. To the God who gave and the God who took away, let us look for consolation, through the medium of Jesus Christ, the world's Savior!

O. D. LYON.

From Manassas, Prince William County, Va.

WE had our council-meeting last Saturday, Aug. 24, at 10 A. M., in the Valley meeting-house. The business passed off very satisfactorily. After all common business was disposed of we held an election for a minister and two deacons. Bro. M. G. Early, of Nokesville, Va., was elected to the ministry, and Abram Hinegardner and David Kerlin to the deacon's office. The three are worthy brethren and good workers, and, no doubt, will fill their offices to the glory of God and the building up of the church of Christ.

At 2 P. M., same day and place, we had our harvest meeting. Eld. John Flory, of Bridgewater, Va., was with us; also Eld. Jacob Hedrick, of Midland, Eld. Dennis Weimer, of Bealton, Va., and A. Conner, of this County. Bro. Flory preached a very good thanksgiving sermon to an attentive audience.

On Sunday, at 10 A. M., Bro. Flory preached in the grove at the Nokesville school-house to the largest congregation I ever saw there. At 3: 30 P. M. there was meeting at the Valley meeting-house. It was the hour for Sunday-school. The Superintendent told the children that Bro. Flory would teach them that day. He told us many good things that afternoon, as he had in the forenoon in the grove. We say, Come again, Bro. John; it does us good to have you here; it gives us more zeal and love.

We rejoiced at the last-named meeting, to see a brother, who had been standing outside for some time, come to the church. He said he wanted to be one of us, one among us, and would work with us in the church of Christ. I saw and felt the tears stealing down the cheeks for joy to see him come into the church, where we all have a promise if we hold out faithful to the end. Brethren, remember us in your prayers! We are trying to build up churches here in Eastern Virginia, where, a few years ago, our church was not known. O, how glad we would be to see members move in here! We need more preachers, deacons, and other members to help push the work of the Lord.

T. S. HOLSINGER.

From Chippewa Creek Church, Mich.

OUR church is in love and union. Brethren Isaiah Rairigh and S. M. Smith were with us June 10, at which time we had a council-meeting for the purpose of reclaiming a brother who had strayed away from the fold. We were made to rejoice to see the wanderer return home. Since that the brother called for a minister to come and baptize his wife. Bro. George E. Stone came and administered baptism to the dear sister, who now also rejoices in the hope of eternal happiness. Our elder, Bro. E. Bosserman, came to us Aug. 14, by request of our beloved Bro. Pauckstad, who has been afflicted with consumption for about a year, and desired, once more, to partake of the sacred emblems of the body and blood of Christ. Arrangements were made that day for a love-feast the same evening. Our brother was so low that but five could be permitted to be in the room and commune with him.

The Brethren at this place, at their last council, decided to hold their love-feast Sept. 28. Those coming by rail will please stop off at Rodney, where they will be met by the writer the day before, and also on the 28th, if coming by the 10:40 A. M. train. WM. F. JEHNSEN.

From Rock Run Church, Elkhart County, Ind.

OUR harvest meeting was held Aug. 11. Eld W R. Deeter preached a thanksgiving sermon to about six hundred people,—holding their attention during the entire sermon. After dinner, Bro. Deeter talked to the children, which was very interesting to both young and old. It was pleasing to see how ready the children were to answer questions. There were about 100 children and in answer to a question presented by Bro. Deeter on the liquor question, they all seemed to be Prohibitionists. Can we not all draw a lesson from this? Brethren, do not forget the children! A collection was held for missionary work which amounted to twenty dollars. S. BURKETT.

Literary Notes.

RANDOM SHOTS AT LIVING TARGETS.—By H. W. Holley. 12mo, 238 pp., cloth, $1 co New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

Here is a book that was evidently written to produce conviction. It illustrates and elaborates the elements involved in the Temperance Reform with great vigor and considerable ingenuity. Prose and poetry are commanded to do the author's bidding. Keen satire is employed to show the weakness of current arguments in favor of license. The author makes a strong case by applying the license principle to various other evils. By this unexpected reductio ad absurdum he captures the resisting reader and crowns the conquest with a hearty laugh. In a similar way he makes the hopeless inebriate teach the folly of "moderation," the futility of "regulation," and the necessity of "prohibition." Political chicanery is painted with a master's brush. Ministers, deacons, and church-members who put the weight of their influence on the side of the saloon, are treated as their complicity deserves. Sober logic, racy rhyme, sparkling wit, cutting irony, amusing hyperbole, and biting sarcasm mingle in the varied scenes. The book has teeth, and the teeth have edge But truth-lovers will keep awake while they read, and rise refreshed for the fight against giant wrong. It is a good book for family reading.

Miller and the writer from Heb. 13: 22.

THOS. G. SNYDER.

SNYDER.—In Montgomery County, Ohio, Aug 15, Barbara Snyder, daughter of David and Hannah Miller, aged 84 years, 4 months and 17 days.

Deceased was married to David B. Snyder in 1827, by David Crip.e. She was baptized by Bro. Ettei, rear Amity, Ohio, in June, 1829. She was the mother of three children,—Noah, Hannah and Eliza. Hannah died in June, 1870. Sister Snyder has been a widow for twenty-nine years. Her husband died of dyspepsia, April 28, 1860. She has been afflicted for a long time and has not attended church since May, 1879. Funeral services at Toms' Run church, from 1 Pet. 1: 3, 5, by elders John Bowman and the writer. LANDON WEST.

HENRICKS.—Near Colton, Henry Co., O., Aug. 24, sister Joanna, wife of friend George Henricks, aged 28 years, 3 months and 12 days

Deceased was born in Seneca County, Ohio. She bore her suffering patiently, and was fully resigned to the will of God. A few days prior to her death she called the writer to her bedside to be anointed. She leaves a husband, three children,—one an infant about a week old,—a widowed mother, one sister and four brothers to mourn their loss. Funeral by the writer.

LUTZ —In Germany Valley, Huntingdon Co, Pa, Aug. 5, Permelia Lutz, consort of Abraham Lutz, aged 60 years 2 months and 11 days.

She leaves a sorrow-stricken husband and five daughters. Since the death of her mother the eldest daughter has confessed her Savior before God and witnesses, and we fondly hope that in the near future the father and the other sisters may follow her example.

Funeral services conducted by the writer, from John 11: 28, to a large and sympathizing congregation.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.

"Set for the Defense of the Gospel."

Vol. 27. Old Series. Mt. Morris, Ill., and Huntingdon, Pa., Sept. 24, 1889. No. 38.

The Gospel Messenger.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH, Editor,
And Business Manager of the Eastern House, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

AGENTS for the German and English Hymn Book, as used by the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, will have their orders filled promptly by addressing H. R. Gibbel, Lititz, Pennsylvania.

THE Missionary Board of Middle Pennsylvania, will meet at Huntingdon on Sept. 20th. We hope the Board will arrange to do some effective work during the winter. And to do this they will need the hearty co-operation of all the churches of the District. Those churches that have not contributed their dues, should do so soon.

WE again kindly ask our correspondents not to mix things. Don't write business on one side of the sheet, and an obituary, or love-feast announcement on the other. The right way is to write each item on a separate slip, on one side only. By remembering this we will be saved the trouble of copying, and mistakes will be avoided.

WE had a short call from Eld. J. M. Mohler last week. He was on his return from Fayette County, Pennsylvania, where he had been called to assist in the dedicatory services of a new church house, recently built by the Brethren there. Bro. Mohler expects to spend the fall and winter in evangelistic work, of which there is always plenty to do.

THE great need of the world to-day, is a religion that reaches the lives of those who profess it. It seems to us that God must be wearied in so much empty profession, form and self-righteousness. It would be a good thing for all of us, to get down to a prayerful and practical study of the Scriptures that we may become more fully imbued with the spirit and practice of those who were its true representatives.

BRO. I. M. GIBSON is now the settled minister of the Philadelphia church, and we do hope that under his ministry the church may prosper, and greatly enlarge its borders. As this is one among the first Brethren churches established in America, a large number of our Brethren are deeply interested in its welfare. Let the brethren and sisters there labor and pray for the divine blessing upon Bro. Gibson's work. And we are sure that many others will do the same thing.

IN reply to our request in regard to the Almanac, we are getting a number of suggestions, some of which are timely and practical, while others are not. One suggests that we give a number of biographical sketches of ministers who have been prominent in the church. This we would be pleased to do, but who is to write them? It is an easy matter to say how a thing ought to be done, but not so easy to do it. However, we will do the best we can to give the church a good Almanac, and will accept all the help that is given us. It will yet be in time to receive copy, if prepared and sent at once.

OUR possibilities for furnishing our patrons with good and cheap Bibles, are unexcelled. Neatly finished, good binding and clear, large print are features in a Family Bible that should not be overlooked, and these are the things we claim for our Bibles. The prices range from $2.50 up to $10.00, and still higher, if wanted. From $4.50 to $6.50 will give Bibles good enough for any ordinary use, containing all that is found in Bibles of higher prices. When ordering, send us the amount of money you wish to invest, and we always send the best we can for the money received. From the large number we sent out, there has not a single complaint been made. We also furnish "Oxford," and "Teachers'" Bibles for prices ranging from $1.50 up, according to size of type and style of binding.

MINISTERIAL INTERCHANGE.

ONE of the pleasant and desirable features of the church, to us, has been the frequency of our ministerial exchanging. And we are sorry that there seems to be less of it of late years than formerly. The effects of these exchanges were always beneficial in more ways than one. We learn, and are instructed, from each other, and in this way receive special advantages. Then, too, the social relations between the different congregations are maintained, and a greater unanimity of faith and practice is preserved.

We have always been favorable to this interchange, and will here say that we shall always be pleased to have the good old custom practically carried out with us. Ministering brethren passing, are invited to stop off and give us a call.

If at all convenient, stop over Sunday, or on Wednesday evening, and preach for us. We have preaching service twice every Sunday, and prayer-meeting on Wednesday evening, at which time a sermon is always an agreeable substitute.

Come and see how we do, and also become acquainted with the workings of our school. A personal interview is always more satisfactory than flying reports, which have no author except Old Mrs. Gossip, "They say," which is the ignis fatuus curse of human society.

That there is a decline in ministerial interchange must be evident to all, and with that decline there seems to be growing a correspondent coldness and selfishness. When a clannish disposition becomes apparent among us, there is cause for alarm, because such a disposition leads towards division, and if not removed, will end there.

What we most need, outside of the pure Gospel truth, is to cultivate and strengthen our bond of union. And there is nothing that will do this so effectually as frequent Christian association.

Coldness and uncharitable feelings are usually held and entertained because of misunderstandings—because we don't know each other's motives. The social feelings enkindled at our District and Annual Meetings do more to strengthen our bond of union than all the decisions we can make. The human soul is not molded by law but by love. And love is the outgrowth of Christian association. Love is not so much a law-maker as it is a good factor in the fulfillment of law. Therefore, whatever conduces to the growth of this principle should be encouraged as an auxiliary to the good of the church, and the promotion of the cause of Christianity.

THE REAL AND THE UNREAL.

LIFE is real, so it is said, and it is true. There is a real, natural existence, but with this real there is a great deal that only seems to be, or, to put it in a more direct way, there is much that is not what it seems to be. When we were a boy, the crows persisted in pulling out the newly-sprouted corn, and to keep them from their purpose, we were set to work to make a "scarecrow." This we did by getting a forked stick, about the height of a man. By turning the forked end downward and nailing a piece of wood near the top at right angles, we had the skeleton of a man.

On top we tied or wrapped a straw band, which formed the head, and then dressed the lower part in a man's suit. Stuffing this with straw, and we had a man to place in the cornfield to watch crows, or, rather, to scare them. At first this worked quite satisfactorily. But the crows, by a little inspection and experience, soon learned that the man was not a real man—it only seemed to be a man, because it had the outward appearance of a man. And as they learned this, all man-fear departed from them, and the straw head and old hat made a suitable place for them to alight and spy out the tender blades of corn as they pushed through the soil.

Now, we are often fooled and played upon in the same way. When we judge by outward appearance only, we will soon find, if we make search, that there are many like our scarecrow, who have not much inside but straw.

This too often applies to the professing Christian as well as to the common sinner. The outside is not so much to blame as the inside. When we tried to make the crows believe that our straw man was a real man because he had on a man's clothes, we played a fraud on them. We do the same thing to our fellows when we try to play Christian outwardly only. We are not what we seem to be, and therefore stand before the world as religious frauds. "And his life was the light of men." Yes, so it was said of the Master, and so let it be said of us.

Our success, as a church, depends largely on the truthfulness and piety of our membership, and each one of us, as representatives of the church should feel, wherever we are and wherever we go, that we are witnesses for Christ, and that our showing is real — that we are living epistles, known and read by all men. Such living will preach Christianity louder than it can be done from the stand and pulpit.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THE SPIRIT'S CALL.

AT DAYBREAK.

"O, slumberer, rouse thee! Despise not the truth;
Give, give thy Creator the days of thy youth.
Why standest here idle? 'The day breaketh'—see,
The Lord of the vineyard is waiting for thee!"

"Sweetest Spirit, by thy power,
Grant me yet another hour;
Earthly pleasures I would prove,
Earthly joy and earthly love:
Scarce yet has dawned the day,
Sweetest Spirit, wait, I pray."

WHEN THE SUN IS HIGH.

"O, loiterer, speed thee! The morn wears apace;
Then squander no longer thy remnant of grace;
But haste while there's time! With thy Master agree!
The Lord of the vineyard stands waiting for thee!"

"Gentle Spirit, prithee stay;
Brightly beams the early day;
Let me linger in these bowers,
God shall have my noon-tide hours.
Chide me not for my delay,
Gentle Spirit, wait, I pray."

WHEN THE SUN DECLINES.

"O, sinner, arouse thee! Thy noonday is past;
Already the shadows are lengthening fast.
Escape for thy life! From the dark mountain flee!
The Lord of the vineyard yet waiteth for thee."

"Spirit, cease thy mournful lay:
Leave me to myself, I pray!
Earth hath flung her spell around me;
Pleasure's silken chain hath bound me."

* * * * * * *

Hark! Borne on the wind is the bell's solemn toll;
'Tis mournfully pealing the knell of a soul!
Of a soul that despised the kind teachings of truth,
And gave to the world the best hours of its youth!
The Spirit's sweet pleadings and strivings are o'er;
The Lord of the vineyard stands waiting no more!

SPIRITUAL BONDAGE.—John 8:36.

BY WM. M. LYON.

Number Four.

OUR remarks in the preceding articles on this subject have had reference principally to ministers: we now turn to the laity, and, lest our deacons should feel themselves overlooked, we shall include them in the number.

Our aim is to set forth the right and condemn the wrong, no matter where it is found, to hold up truth and expose error, to contrast spiritual conditions, as exhibited in the church to-day, with what they should be, as revealed from heaven, making special application of our text.

It is quite evident that many who think themselves free, and enjoying the full liberty of the Gospel, are bound down in unconscious servitude. How often do we find our own members speaking of the inconsistencies and superfluities of those who belong to fashionable churches, when we can find the same things existing right among us! The devotees of the simple and foolish fashions of the world are not free,—they are slaves so far as those things are concerned, at least, whether they are professors of religion or not, whether they be found among the Presbyterians, Lutherans, Methodists or the Dunkards.

How often do we hear the expression, "He is a perfect slave!"—it may be to strong drink, or to his delicious cud or sweetly-scented pipe, or it may refer to any other disgusting habit. If the Son has made us free,—if Christ be in us the "hope of glory," surely, then, we will have power sufficient to tear loose from the world, the flesh and the devil, and, having once separated ourselves from these evil things, if we "continue in the Word" (John 8:31, 32), we shall never again be brought into bondage. But if we yield to temptation, to any of the allurements of the devil, to any of the fascinating charms of the world, to the extent that we give way to the adversary, to that extent we are not free, but become slaves. "Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom you obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" Rom. 6:16.

If we would be perfectly free, and belong wholly and solely to God, our bodies, as well as our souls and spirits, must and will be entirely consecrated to him, but if the devil can only get a mortgage on a little piece or parcel of the Lord's property, the probabilities are that it will not be very long till he will become sole proprietor. What we mean by this is, that if we allow Satan to cheat us out of only a part of our liberty,—the perfect freedom that the Son alone is able to give,—he (Satan) will not be satisfied with a small part but will continue to encroach upon our rights, until he shall have gained complete control over us; hence the admonition of Paul: "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." Gal. 5:1.

But let us look all along the Gospel class, and see how many we can find who are not free. Here are quite a number who are slaves to

PUBLIC OPINION.

They are always afraid of what "the people" will think or say. Instead of submitting the propriety or impropriety of every contemplated act to God, they are governed by popular sentiment among the people. Sins, both of omission and commission, are largely due to the fact that they feared the people more than God. Surely such are not free. "Let God be true, but every man a liar." Rom. 3:4.

It is right and proper, and, indeed, it is our duty, to have and show due regard for the feelings in every respect, but when positive duty intervenes, let us be careful that we do not serve the creature more than the Creator. Rom. 1:25. "If the Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, then follow him." 1 Kings 18:21. Instead of halting between two opinions, and wondering whether the people will endorse every "this and that" of our lives, let us ask ourselves the question, "Will it please God?" This we must do if we wish to be free, and not slaves.

The same will apply with reference to dress. How many are there who are not free in that respect! I believe that there are thousands in the church to-day that would like to be free, so as to conform to the general order of the church in regard to the matter of apparel. They will freely admit that the Gospel rule will not allow the vain and foolish fashions of the world; they are also ready to confess that Christians should dress plainly, yet they have not the moral courage to "live it out;" they allow the world to pluck away from them some of their Christian liberty, and thus get into spiritual bondage, and suffer the enemy to reduce their spiritual strength and capacities, until, perhaps, they are never able to regain their power and freedom. O, what a pity that we can't all be free in such an easy matter as this!

But there are many who tell us that they know it is wrong to indulge in certain things, yet they say, "I can't help it." Take for example the habit of using tobacco. I have never yet found a brother, nor even any one else, but who would willingly acknowledge that the tobacco habit was a bad one: and they will advise others never to begin the practice, yet those who thus talk, and at the same time indulge,—those very people virtually declare they are not free—they are slaves, because they are not able (or at least they think so) to cut loose from this filthy fashion, so they go on in bondage. They seem to forget that the eternal God hath said, "My grace is sufficient for thee." What a pity, then, that the grace of God and the power of Christ, the great Liberator, should not be sufficient to deliver all from this evil, as well as any other!

If we do not enjoy this full freedom that Christ alone is able and has promised to give, surely, then, it is our own fault, and we shall have to suffer the consequence. We get the idea, therefore that if we expect to enjoy the fulness of God's blessings (and this we all desire, if we would be perfect Christians), then, without a doubt, we can not suffer the enemy to hold us in bondage, but the Son must make and keep us free; and this will he do, if we are but willing to hear him in all things. If we refuse to do this, we refuse to be what God would have us be, and hence have no right to claim the promises in full.

A FEW THOUGHTS ON BAPTISM.

BY I. S. ROTHROCK.

BAPTISM is a holy ordinance, instituted by Christ. It is the door of entrance into the visible church of God, and is not to be administered to any until they have professed faith in Christ, and obedience to him. Acts 5:14. They that believed were baptized, multitudes, both of men and women. Acts 8:12. But when they believed Philip preaching concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus, they were baptized, both men and women. Acts 17:4. "They who believed consorted together with Paul and Silas; of the devout Greeks a great multitude, and of the chief women, not a few."

Christ's commission to his apostles was, "Go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and in the name of the Son, and in the name of the Holy Ghost." The injunction to impart knowledge and instruction implies capacity to receive such knowledge and to exercise the understanding in the right use of it. In this way faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God.

Divine Writ tells us that, "except a person be born of water and of the spirit, he shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," etc. It is an outward means by which Christ communicates to us the benefits of redemption.

Obedience to the revealed will of God yields the answer of a good conscience toward God. The apostle tells us that we may purify our souls in obeying the truth. Remission of sin and the gift of the Holy Ghost are not promised until after the water baptism. Thus it is made a means of salvation.

Speaking of the mode of baptism, Paul says: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead, even so we also should walk in newness of life, for if we have been planted together with him in the likeness of his deatb, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." Rom. 6:3. The Holy Spirit, by Paul, uses the words, "buried with him in baptism," to impress upon our minds an important, sacred truth as plainly as a burst of sunshine on a cloudy day. He gave the specific act "bury" to the generic verb "baptizo," and thereby plainly establishes the form.

"Bury" is the primary meaning of the ancient Greek word "baptizo." If Christ, the Holy Spirit and Paul, in speaking of the ordinance of baptism, used the primary meaning of the word "baptizo,"—dip, plunge, immerse, bury,—how dare we depart from their examples and established rule?

That there was but one form practiced is plainly evident. Paul says, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized, were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried." "So many of us," means all of us. Then he says, "Now I praise you, brethren, that ye remember me in all things and keep the ordinances as I delivered them unto you." Better still he says, "God be thanked that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered unto you." Not, "the pith and essence of the doctrine in some other form," but in the identical form delivered. If the form was of no account, why did Paul praise them and thank God that they obeyed the form that was delivered unto them? No wonder that Jude exhorted his brethren "to earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered to the saints!"

THE TRIUMPH OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

BY H. W. STRICKLER.

Number Two.

DIVINE Writ tells us: "From the rising of the sun even unto the going of the same, my name shall be great among the Gentiles." Mal. 1: 11. "There shall be a handful of corn in the earth upon the top of the mountains." Ps. 72: 16. The high, uncultivated mountains (which it would have been impossible to cultivate had it not been for infinite wisdom), are founded upon the Rock of Ages, having this important motto inscribed upon it, "I will draw all men unto me."

This being the case, "the fruit of the handful of corn shall shake like Lebanon." The heavenly wind shall carry the seed to the uttermost parts of the earth, so that young Lebanons shall grow up almost everywhere, even on the mountains of not only the East, but also the West. It was but a small handful of this heavenly seed that Peter sowed on the day of Pentecost, and, afterwards, in the house of Cornelius, but it was carried from Jerusalem to the islands of the seas, even down to this, the nineteenth century, so that nothing is more visible and abundant than the fruit of the little seed that was sown.

The Lamb's Bride upon the earth sings, "Ride gloriously and triumphantly; be exalted above the heavens, and let thy glory be above the earth." Ex. 15: 1, 2. Brethren, do you not know that the moment the saints begin to sing below, the heavenly choir strikes its golden harps? "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing." Rev. 5: 12.

These songs of praise, and this angelic joy and triumph ascribed to our Savior and God, and the echo of the spirit of prophecy, respecting the rise and progress of Christ's Kingdom, have reached the ears of "Beelzebub," the prince of the power of the air, and has made him exceedingly angry; for he knows that his time is short; he knows the desire of all nations is come, and that Christ's Kingdom must spread from sea to sea, and "the glory of his person, the excellency of his office, and the efficiency of his atonement, covers the whole earth as the waters cover the sea." Satan trembles when contemplating the final proclamation,—that the kingdoms of this world have become the kingdoms of our God and of his Christ. All the powers and principalities of darkness see the progress of the little stone,—how it rolls against the images of the East and West. All the kingdoms of Satanic power are now shaking; even the worshipers of Juggernaut and the Ganges may be saved as brands out of the burning.

On the one hand Satan sees the rapid increase of Messiah's kingdom, and on the other hand he sees the great angel with a mighty chain in his hand, almost ready to bind him hand and foot, and cast him into the bottomless pit. No wonder he fears the Temperance movement, and opposes benevolent and missionary institutions of the present day, for he knows that they work for the God of Heaven, who is about to set up a kingdom which will never be destroyed.

When the little stone, spoken of in Dan. 2: 45, shall become a great mountain, and shall fill the whole earth, the glory will consist of three things:

1. The victory obtained.
2. The blessing bestowed.
3. The duration of the kingdom.

In the victory obtained we behold the great golden-headed image consumed and broken to pieces. The stone cut out of the mountain is represented as rolling toward the image with great velocity, like a stone cut off and let loose from the top of a high and steep mountain. Suddenly and unexpectedly it will strike against the head of the golden image, till it is crushed to the ground, like Dagon before the Ark.

Ever since the little stone was cut loose, it has kept in motion, bounding and rebounding, butting and rebutting against the head of the beast in a violent manner, increasing in velocity every time it turns, till the gold, the silver, the brass, and the iron are separated and ground to pieces.

In turn, the little stone grows to be like a mountain, filling the whole earth. This victory is to be obtained by the Word and Spirit of Christ, in connection with Divine Providence. It is a victory over the devil, over sin, and over death. On the morning of the resurrection there will be no enemy but death, for the last enemy that shall be conquered is death.

Satan is the prince and god of this world. He has many agents, such as "Fashion," "Alcohol," etc. To-day Beelzebub's kingdom is being kept up by Rome, Mohammed, and the adherents of other false religions. All these shall be destroyed, and the period is not far distant. Instead of the darkness of paganism, there shall be light. Unto Zion it shall be said, "Arise, shine, for thy light is come, and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee!" Soon it shall be said, "Babylon is fallen! That great city, because she has made all nations to drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication." Then all the saints shall shout, "Victory, victory, victory, through the blood of the Lamb."

HOW WE MAY LET OUR LIGHT SHINE.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

IN our intercourse with the world at large, and the church in particular, we become more and more convinced of the frailty of human nature. In studying the habits and customs of people we can plainly see that we are all poor, weak, imperfect beings at our best estate. It appears that even where our better judgment, on more mature reflection, ought to see the errors and mistakes of our lives, we do not seem to profit by our past experience to the extent that we might.

We sometimes wonder why it is that young and thoughtless persons will persist in irreverent and giddy conduct and conversation while attending our Communion meetings. Let me ask, dearly beloved, are we not, to a great extent, responsible for their conduct by our own example? When we come together to break the bread of Communion, or, in other words, to celebrate the death and sufferings of Christ, the Son of God, we do not always display reverence and godly fear as we should, neither do we manifest that solemnity that such occasions seem to demand. I will just name a few things of which we are guilty, which darken the light that is in us.

Our meetings are appointed for 10 A. M. We gather at the place appointed, from far and near. Feasting and merriment seem to be the order of the day. We have our little ones, of whom the Savior said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," decked in the most fashionable apparel, and they are allowed the liberty of the house, and naturally take the liberty to ramble from "cellar to garret." Sometimes they race up or down stairs, making such confusion that some of our old people fail to hear and understand what the speaker is saying, compelling him to speak unbecomingly loud to be heard at all. The "home members" are worn out preparing a feast for the "mixed multitude." After dinner the "visiting" members lounge around in and out doors, idly passing away the afternoon in,—may I say?—"foolish talking and jesting," smoking cigars, chewing tobacco, and other vain amusements.

Beloved, how do such meetings correspond with our profession and attire? Let each one of us consider our ways and answer for ourselves.

There is yet one other thing I would like to call our attention to, that is, levity and thoughtlessness at the Supper table. Occasionally we see members engage in conversation at supper, which, unless it is absolutely necessary, we ought not to do, neither should we eat in a hurried and greedy manner, but with reverence and godly fear and with due solemnity, keeping the sacredness of the occasion before our minds. O, how much brighter our light might shine if we would have a uniform time for meeting together on such occasions, say 3 P. M., and spend the time until supper is prepared in divine worship, thereby getting all our minds in a proper frame for the evening exercises, and concentrating our thoughts to the importance of the ordinances, thus commanding the respect of those without, and insuring good order and attention, and keeping our children interested in the work of the church.

SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES.

THE nobility of the Bereans lay in their receiving the Word with all readiness of mind and then in searching the Scriptures daily whether these things were so. A candid reception of truth, no matter of what kind, nor from what direction, is a token of a noble mind. It is invariably associated with a faithful searching of the Scriptures when the truth under immediate consideration is Gospel truth. No man can regard himself as a sincere enquirer after "the truth as it is in Jesus," who does not daily refer all his investigations to the Bible touch-stone. It followed as a matter of course that "therefore many of the Bereans believed." Prejudice, resistance or indifference to the truth and neglect of Bible research are fruitful sources of religious darkness and error, both doctrinal and practical. "Ye do err, not knowing the Scriptures." Any man who attempts to substitute the "inward monitor" for the "revealed will Word of God" will inevitably grope in darkness. Ed.

"WORKING for the good of others is not to be undertaken simply with a view to reward. We must engage in the Lord's work from nobler incentives than the thought of recompense. In the results of the work itself there is motive enough to work. To save a soul from death, or to minister in any way to the Lord's own people, might be joy and honor enough for any heart."

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSONS FOR THE FOURTH QUARTER.

BY L. A. PLATE.

SOMETIMES it is well before commencing, to take a view of the work before us, so as to better understand the general surroundings. This is especially so with the Sunday-school lessons. Looking at them as a whole, we can see the connection between each one and their significance. We have, as it were, a birds-eye view of the Scripture scenes portrayed to us in the sacred narrative.

Leaving the last quarter with the death of Saul, we enter upon a new era in Jewish history, which brings us to

LESSON I.

THE TRIBES UNITED UNDER DAVID.

2 Sam. 5: 1 12.

It is wise to wait patiently until God is ready to give what we need. As in the case of David, so now, God will always find means to accomplish his ends. And as God rules all, we must never forget to undertake all we do in his holy name. He is the sure foundation. If we build on him, we shall not be forsaken. Then, as David took away the stronghold of the Jebusites that no enemy might dwell in the holy city, so must we drive out sin from our hearts, that Christ may dwell therein and make it his abiding place.

LESSON II.

THE ARK BROUGHT TO ZION.

2 Sam. 6: 1-12.

While it is a very good thing to attend zealously to divine ordinances, yet we must always take the right way for it. David should have moved the ark as the law prescribed, then there would have been no necessity for the "steadying" by which Uzzah lost his life. Good intentions are, in the sight of God, altogether out of place, when there is a violation of the law. Will the Lord hold us guiltless if we neglect the study of his law, and thereby fail to do as he commands?

LESSON III.

DAVID'S THANKSGIVING PRAYER.

2 Sam. 7: 18-29.

To do something for the Lord was David's desire, and though God did not permit him to do the very thing he wanted to do, yet a far grander prospect was opened to him as a reward for his faithful desire,—his kingdom should endure forever! Christ, the illustrious offspring of the house of David, will indeed reign until the end of time. God's promises are sure, and they are equally glorious to us as in the days of David. If we show in our lives that we trust God fully, and that the extension of his work is the burden of our prayers, he will open a vision of glory for us, of which we can form no conception.

LESSON IV.

SIN, FORGIVENESS AND PEACE.

Ps. 32: 1-11.

David, while he had fallen and transgressed in the sight of the Lord, yet, in the verses of our lesson, he comes to God with a penitent heart. He is cast down, yet not forsaken. His sin weighs heavily upon him, yet he knows that God is gracious, and abundantly able to pardon. So, too, should we feel when sin has ensnared us, and, better yet, let the sad mistake of David be a warning to us, not to rely on our own strength. "Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed, lest he fall."

LESSON V.

DAVID'S REBELLIOUS SON.

2 Sam 15: 1-12.

While Absalom's course may have been, in a measure, an outgrowth of David's sin,—which, though pardoned, yet left unextinguishable traces behind it,—we can not repress a feeling of sympathy for David, in the deep affliction that comes upon him in the rebellion of his own son. By the way, Absalom is a good illustration of the man, in the church or State, who wants an office. By the very course he takes, in order to GAIN the office, he shows that he is not competent to fill it properly. Doing one's work well, and trusting in the overruling hand of Providence, will, in the end, fit us for something greater. The call will be made, whenever the time has come that we should leave the smaller duty for the greater one.

LESSON VI.

DAVID'S GRIEF FOR ABSALOM.

2 Sam. 18: 18-33.

Perhaps one of the saddest things in this world is the shipwreck of a soul, especially when there were great possibilities of doing good. Whenever, as in the case of Absalom, the whole course of a man's life is wrong, we may well write "failure," as the final result of such a life. And while David grieved, and desired that he might have died in Absalom's place, yet all this teaches us that it is better to so live, that our children, by our example, may be induced to lead a godly life. Then we need not grieve if they die, for we know they are in the Paradise of God,—safe in the arms of Jesus.

LESSON VII.

DAVID'S LAST WORDS.

2 Sam. 23: 1-7.

After a stormy day, there may be a glorious sunset, and so we find that in David's last years the clouds were gone, and he often had glimpses of the glory-world beyond. In his last words, as we have them in our lesson, he expresses the same tender confidence in the Almighty, that he so often portrays in the Psalms. It would be well if we, in these latter days, could leave self and cling closer to Christ. There is safety in the Shadow of the Great Rock.

LESSON VIII

SOLOMON'S WISE CHOICE.

1 Kings 3: 5-15.

The Lord gives all the privilege of choosing. While he gives us the best if we ask for it, we should also ask him to give us grace that we might make the proper use of what he does give us. If we "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," God will add such things as are best for us. This he did in the case of Solomon, and this he will do for us.

LESSON IX

THE TEMPLE DEDICATED.

1 Kings 8: 54-63.

Glorious as was the temple dedicated by Solomon to the worship of God, it is not to be compared to the blessings of the later dispensation brought in by Christ, wherein the body of every true believer is a temple of God. Now each one, redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, may look forward to the glories of the City "made without hands," where, on the golden-paved streets, he may spend an eternity in praising him who "sitteth upon the throne," surrounded by a multitude of the heavenly host.

LESSON X.

SOLOMON AND THE QUEEN OF SHEBA.

1 Kings 10: 1-13.

As the queen, overwhelmed by the splendor of Solomon's palace, acknowledged, "The half was not told me," so, too, the Christian will realize, when he once experiences the full extent of God's goodness and power. The believer may not be able to express, in their fullness, those heavenly feelings to others, and they, if unbelievers, may not even believe them, yet, if a man is truly born of God, the inward happiness far outweighs all the pleasures of earth. A pilgrim on earth, he looks forward to the heavenly mansions.

LESSON XI.

SOLOMON'S FALL.

1 Kings 11: 4-13.

For everything there is a cause, and if we look for the reason why Solomon, with all his wisdom, was unable to walk uprightly, we find a succession of causes that tended to his ruin. Polygamy, bad company, toleration of evil, lawless pleasure, ambition and pride, and a number of minor evils that might be named, were only so many steps on the downward grade. True wisdom should have taught Solomon to avoid taking the first step, and we should profit from his sad experience by avoiding even the appearance of evil, ere it overcome us and hurl us downward to destruction.

LESSON XII.

CLOSE OF SOLOMON'S REIGN.

1 Kings 11: 26-43.

Lord Bacon once said, "The saddest sight in the world is, to see a man walking in procession at the funeral of his own greatness." This applies to Solomon in the sad ending of his life. Favored by God with superior advantages, his latter days should have been his best, and as a sheaf fully ripe he should have been gathered to his fathers. Instead of all this we see God's judgment descending upon Solomon and his house for the dishonor brought upon the holy name of Jehovah.

Let the lessons of this quarter, dear brethren and sisters, teach us to be more faithful and watchful that we may not, in the end look back upon a misspent life, but rather look forward to a crown that rewards faithful effort.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK.

BY GRANT MAHAN.

A GREAT deal more might be said about the Sunday-school and its usefulness than has been said. We do not seem to realize how much less attention is given to the Sunday-school in the winter than in the summer. But a simple statement will show the difference. The Brethren's Quarterly is printed at Mt. Morris. For the second and third quarters of the year more than three times as many are printed as for the first and fourth quarters. This goes to show that there is less than one-third as much work done in our Sunday-schools in the winter as in the summer. Each one should draw his own conclusions, and find out whether he is doing what he ought to do.

In the Journal des Ecoles du Dimanche for September, 1889, the Editor says: "A certain number of Sunday-schools are in vacation at this time, and it seems to us that this fact, from year to year, tends to become general. We regret it, for our part, and we wish to point out in all frankness the reasons which lead us to believe that there is in this a danger for the future of our work.

"Our fundamental objection is that, in making the Sunday-school share in the vacation of the daily school, two absolutely distinct institutions are assimilated. The school of the week is a school, and only that; the Sunday-school is essentially a worship. There are all sorts of good reasons why the first should rest from work from time to time, but there are none for the second. No one thinks, at least in France, of suppressing public worship during two months of the year; then why suppress the worship of the children? Have they less need than their parents of the continuity, of the permanency of the religious exercises of Sunday? Is it not necessary to teach them early in life that worship and prayer together are the duty and the privilege of Christians in every season, and that they have the right to deprive themselves of them only for very great reasons? Is there not danger, in giving them a holiday for several weeks, of inculcating the idea, already too much propagated about them, that public worship is a sort of luxury of existence which one indulges in when he has the time or inclination, but which one can do without and not lose anything; or, worse yet, that it is a duty of which one wishes to get rid as soon as possible?

"What! you have fifty-two hours a year to teach the children of our churches concerning their most important interests, and yet it is necessary to deduct many which bad weather, sickness or other causes take from you, and you are going, deliberately, to curtail them still more, by closing your Sunday-school for two months! . . . . .

"Ask yourselves, I pray you, what will become of your children thus left to themselves during nine or ten Sundays! The great part will spend in the street the hour which they would spend in the house of God; they will contract the habits of vagabondage, or at the least of the profanation of the Lord's Day; they will forget what they have learned during the rest of the year. And when they shall return to you in October,—and not all will return,—you will find them distrait, frivolous and wearisome.

"I have asked: What will become of the children? I add: What will become of the school itself? I would be very much surprised if the incoming were as great as the out-going. The annual interruption will have furnished an occasion quite natural to certain pupils to find out that they are large enough to quit attending the school. . . . . .

"I know it will be said to me that, in many of the schools of the city, the necessity of having a vacation obtrudes itself, because the pupils and their teachers go into the country. I admit that in fact some schools see their personnel reduced a half or two-thirds for this reason. But these schools are a very small minority and, in the most of our churches, our schools are attended by children who change their places but little. These children, idle during all the week and exposed to all the temptations of idleness, would have double need that the Sunday-school come to re-act against the temptations of the week. And I do not see why, even in the schools, a part of the personnel of which has gone away to the country or to the bathing places of the sea, those who remain should be deprived of the Sunday-school."

There is a great difference between the Sunday-school work in France and in this country. Over there they have a great difficulty to contend against, and that is that the Catholics are much more numerous than the Protestants. The difficulty seems only to make them more zealous in the work. The custom in that country has been to have vacation during the months of August and September—less than half as much vacation as our country schools take. But the point on which particular stress should be laid is the one made in comparing the Sunday-school with the daily school—there are reasons why children should rest from labor, but there are none why children should cease to worship for a time.

The fact that a half or two-thirds of the children quit coming in the winter is no reason why the others should be deprived of the Sunday-school. And if all the children were absent, could the older persons do better than to spend an hour each Sunday in the study of the regular lesson? In this way they keep the connection, and are prepared to do better work when the schools are full again. It is the earnestness, the zeal, of the teacher or preacher which has the influence over those who listen.

We are too negligent in many of our duties, and we can not afford to be. There is a time coming, and it is not far distant for any of us, when we must give an account for the wasted opportunities. We have none too much time to do our work, and if we lose a great deal of what we do have, we will not be likely to hear the "well done" at the end of the world. We all want to hear those words, for then we will be supremely happy through all the ages that are yet to come.

NEW TESTAMENT GREEK.

BY JAMES NEFF.

Number Seven.

THE varied application of a word often necessitates (if indeed we may not say, creates) for that word a variety of meanings. Even with reference to the use and application of many words in the New Testament this truth is very apparent.

For the present let us make a brief study of the word bless and its derivatives. In view of the fact that the Scriptures show that God blesses man (Heb. 6: 14); that man may bless man (Matt. 5: 44; Luke 2: 34); that man may bless God (Luke 2: 28; Jas. 3: 9); that man (1 Cor. 10: 16), and even Christ blesses objects without life (Luke 9: 16), we are prompted to ask

WHAT IS A BLESSING?

We shall first consider the verb in the active voice (to bless). There is but one Greek word so translated in the New Testament. This is eulogeo and means, literally, to speak well of, to praise. It occurs more than forty times, and in the Authorized Version is rendered bless every time but once (Luke 1: 64), where the participial form is rendered "praising." The Revised Version, however, has "blessing."

Doubtless the Revision Committee made this change for the sake of uniformity, and not because the word praising did not express the sense of the original; for, as we have shown, the primary meaning of eulogeo is to speak well of, to laud or to praise.

Now let me cite a few passages where a consistent and reasonable rendering will allow only this meaning of the word. In Luke 2: 28 we read: "Then took he [Simeon] him [the Lord's Christ] up in his arms, and blessed God." That is, he spoke well of, lauded, or praised God. In Jas. 3: 9 we read: "Therewith bless we God * * * and therewith curse we men." That is, we speak well of, or praise God and speak evil of, or curse men. Now if we can find no passage in which this meaning of eulogeo will not apply, we have done with eulogeo and have so far found but one kind of blessing. But let us see. Read with me Luke 24: 50: "And he led them out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands and blessed them." Did he simply speak well of them, or praise them? No; he did not do this, but he did more. The act of lifting his hands shows an attitude of prayer. He invoked the favor of God upon them. In Matt. 5: 44 et al, Christ commands us to bless them that curse us. Does he mean that we should praise them? No. Does he mean that we should simply speak well of them? No; we often could not do that truthfully. We might often speak kindly in answer to reproach, and thus return a blessing for a curse; but this is not all that Christ meant to teach. He meant that we should have that love for them and interest in them which will lead us to invoke the blessings of God upon them. It was thus that Christ blessed the little children.

Has this word any other meaning? Read Matt. 26: 26: "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread and blessed it," etc. Did Jesus praise or speak well of the bread? No. Did he invoke the favor of heaven upon it? No; not simply this. He asked God to bless, consecrate or sanctify it to their use.

We find still further that when this word is asserted of God it has yet another meaning. When God blesses he regards with favor, or grants, or bestows some real benefit, either spiritual or material. This is the kind of blessing God bestowed upon "all nations" in Abraham. See Gal. 3: 8. This is the kind of blessing God bestowed through his son Jesus "in turning every one of you from his iniquities." Acts 3: 26. It was this favor of God which Gabriel announced to Mary as hers in Luke 1: 28.

GIFFORD'S ADVICE TO JOHN BUNYAN WHEN UNDER CONVICTION OF SIN.

"THERE is naught for thee to do but to seek pardon at the foot of the cross. Consider this: If thou dost feel a thousand times more than thou canst ever do, yet thou wilt not ever feel enough the sore burden of thy sins. Consider how many and black are thine iniquities, and how persistent thou hast been in rejection of the mercy of God proclaimed in Christ Jesus! Oh, it is good for thee to realize how black and foul thou art, and how desperate thy case is apart from Christ. Thou art like a man being drawn from a pit by a single rope. He does naught but cling to the rope tied around him; if that rope break, he must be dashed to pieces; all his salvation depends upon the rope of another, held in another's hand. That rope is the work of Christ for thee, and he who cast the rope will pull thee out of thy peril and distress.

"But I would specially charge thee not to rest content until thou art established on the Rock Christ Jesus. Be well persuaded, and that by Scriptural proofs alone, that thou art passed from death unto life. Fill thy spirit from the well of the Bible. Drink deeply and often of its gracious words if thou wouldst be strong. Depend upon it, it is neglect of the Bible that causes the anguish and weakness of many Christians; thou canst not be strong and useful save by the influence of the inwrought Word, and to it I would commend thee."

THE PASSIONS.

AN old man was once walking with a little boy, and came across four shrubs. The good man said to his youthful companion: "Pull up the least one." He obeyed with ease. "Now, the next." He obeyed, but it did not come so easily. "And the third." It took all his strength to move its roots, but he succeeded. "Now, the fourth." In vain the lad put forth all his strength. He could not move the roots. They had gone strongly into the earth, and no effort could dislodge them. Then the wise old man said to the ardent youth: "This, my son, is just what happens with our passions. When they are young and weak one may, by a little watchfulness over self and the help of a little self-denial, easily tear them up; but, if we let them cast their roots deep into our souls, then no human power can uproot them—the Almighty hand of the Creator alone can pluck them out. For this reason, my child, watch well over the first movements of your soul, and study, by acts of virtue, to keep your passions well in check.—Sel.

BISHOP HALL says, "The proud man hath no God; the envious man hath no neighbor; the angry man hath not himself. What good, then, in being a man, if one has neither himself, nor a neighbor, nor God?"

EXTRAVAGANCE IN THE USE OF MONEY.

BY GEORGE L. JENNINGS.

"Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not?"—Isaiah 55: 2.

THE prophet had a desire to know why or wherefore the people spent their money for that which is not bread. He tells them, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money: come ye, buy, and eat: yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price." Isa. 55: 1. As we pass along on our journey through this world, we have to wonder and are almost ready to ask the question with the prophet, Why is it that so many human beings who claim to be intelligent, spend their money for that which is not bread, and their precious time, that God has given them for usefulness, in labor that is of no account, and in the end satisfies not?

One of the greatest sins of our day is extravagance in dress. American women, instead of aiming at that perfect simplicity which ought to spring from our republican institutions, ape the fashions of the most dissolute nations of Europe, and outshine queens and empresses in gorgeousness of attire. The church even falls into the same sin, with only faint and occasional efforts to oppose the tendency of the age.

The excess of sinful adornment develops some of the dangerous propensities of the heart. Such devotion to self cultivates that selfishness which is always repulsive: it monopolizes so much of the person himself that little regard is paid to others. It also interferes with intellectual and moral improvements.

There is usually not much intelligence among toilet worshipers, for so much time is spent or given to dress, that little or none is left for reading or study.

If you spend so much time in furnishing your exterior, your interior will be very poorly furnished indeed. If young people would spend the hours, they consume in vanity, in storing their minds with religious information, and in the performance of deeds of charity, how much more happy would be their lives! How much more useful would they be in the world!

Do not hang out the colors of vanity, for a showy dress is the advertisement of a vain mind and a proud heart. Come to Jesus so that you may have inward principles to guide you, and ask for pardon and a new heart. Learn of him and, like him, you will become meek and lowly in heart, and that will preserve you from the fashions of the world and sinners.

Christ says, "Pride cometh out of the heart." Then the wearing of gold and other ornaments is undoubtedly the fruits of a proud heart. The apostles have given specific directions, that women should adorn themselves in modest apparel. 1 Peter 3. Peter and Paul have positively forbidden the wearing of gold and costly array. These commands and teachings of the holy apostles are just as binding on us to-day as any other commandment within the lids of the Sacred Volume. The Word tells us if we are guilty of disobeying one commandment we are guilty of the whole.

No doubt there are numbers of fashionable churches, who have never seen nor read the teachings of the apostles. They have never heard a sermon on the subject. And what shall we say about their disobedience?

Disobedience to God's command has been punished through all generations. Moses, after he had led the children of Israel through the wilderness to the Promised Land, was not permitted to enter in, on account of disobedience at the waters of Meribah. So it will be with every one of us if we disobey and make light of the commandments that Christ and the apostles have given to us in such plain language, for we will, like Moses, enter in through the gates into the city.

When we look around and see the vanity and display of pride, even in the church, we are made to think of Paul. It cost him many tears. In Philpp. 3: 18 he says, "For many walk, of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ." Philpp. 3: 18.

David tells us how sin affected him, "Rivers of water run down mine eyes because they keep not thy law."

By the language of Jeremiah we see what feelings were awakened in him, witnessing the sins of his day: "O that my head were waters and mine eyes a fountain of tears that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughters of my people."

When we look around and see the sin and disobedience in our day we have great cause to use the same language as did the prophet. Those who have professed to follow the Blessed Master in all his appointed ways, are guilty of disobeying his teachings and substituting for them their own opinions. They should remember Lot's wife. She was commanded to escape out of Sodom and Gomorrah and not look behind her. She made an effort to escape, but not proving true to the command she had received, she looked back,—became a pillar of salt, and failed to reach the place of safety. So it will be with all who make an effort to start on the way, and stop or look back before they receive the crown.

If we begin to murmur or think it hard to perform each and every command that is made obligatory upon us, we are in great danger of losing the crown. No doubt Lot's wife had many things in the city which she did not like to part with. No doubt there are many now in our day who have a desire to grasp after worldly affairs. Examine yourself and see if you do not desire to be esteemed great in the eyes of the world? Probably you imagine that by following the world you can gain the good will and approbation of the great men of the world, and at the same time be a Christian, or at least bear a Christian name. But, remember, you can not serve God and Mammon. We can do nothing better than to turn our attention to the pages of the Word of God, and there see what has befallen the unrighteous and false worshipers in every age of the world. We can see how true worshipers have always been blessed and have enjoyed the favor and complaisant smile of God.

Middletown, Ind.

TO MAKE READY A PEOPLE FOR THE LORD.

BY A. HUTCHISON.

WE might institute the inquiry right here, What is necessary in the case? We feel safe in affirming that a good deal is necessary.

It is a fact, well established by divine authority, that man, while living in the unrestrained indulgence of the carnal lusts, can not enter into the place prepared for the pure and the good. Then something must be done for such an one, that he may be made meet for the Master's use. The power of the Holy Spirit must be brought to bear upon him in such a way as to cause him to say like Saul, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" When he makes a surrender of his own will, and is ready to say, "Not my will, but thine be done," then, and then only, is he on the safe side of the question.

As long as the carnal man predominates, the man, thus constituted, is unfit for the Master's use. "The carnal mind is enmity against God," hence a radical change must be effected in every unregenerate person, as a preparatory measure, before he can be used in the Lord's work. This is not the work of a moment, of a spasmodic out-burst of an emotional character, but an intelligent investigation of the facts in the case, and a hearty accepting of the Scriptural testimonies upon the subject.

"Without faith it is impossible to please God." "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of the Lord." So, then, it is apparent that the Word of the Lord must be used as an agent in the preparatory steps, in getting the man ready for the Lord's use, as well as in the use of the man in the Lord's work after he is made ready.

The great and principal difficulty in the way is a lack of the full surrender of the will of the man. Few persons would refuse to be saved, if they could be allowed to fix the conditions of salvation. If they could only be allowed to have their own way in a few of the conditions, it would be a great relief to them. We must not forget that it is Jesus who must save us, and we ought to allow him to lay down the rule for the government of our words and lives, and to indicate the limits beyond which we dare not go. Failing to do this, we thereby declare that we are not willing that God's will shall be done in us and by us. We are, therefore not ready for the Lord's use, and just so long as such a condition of things exists, we are in an unsaved state. We can not be saved until we become dead, so far as our wills are concerned. When man fully consents that the Lord's will shall be supreme over all, he is then ready for the Master's use, and, consequently, is in a state of salvation. Christ can then dwell in that heart, because self has been cast out. When we look at the use the Lord has for us here, it is enough to inspire us with a holy zeal that we may fill our high calling with credit to ourselves, and with honor to the Lord. While Christ was in the world he was the light of the world, but when he was about leaving the world he made a transfer of this work to the church. Hence the greatness of the work now committed to us. We become the representatives of Christ and of the grand principles which he has incorporated into his church. Listen to the following, "He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also so to walk even as he walked." 1 John 2: 6. Do we walk that way?

FEED MY SHEEP.

BY A. FLORY.

CHRIST commanded Simon Peter to feed his sheep. No doubt Peter was well acquainted with the occupation of herding and feeding sheep, as this practice was common in the land of Palestine.

Sheep must be well cared for, if we would have them thrive. If fed on inferior food, they will become lean and weak, and when a storm sweeps over the land, many of them may get lost. With the best of food, sheep will thrive, and be able to withstand the wintry blasts. There must be a shepherd, to care for them tenderly. If left without a shepherd, dogs and wolves will enter the fold and destroy the sheep.

Just so it is with the church of Christ. Bad ruling in the church produces the same result as improper care with the sheep. If decisions of Annual Meeting would be strictly regarded, such trouble would be avoided. Some elders allow pride to enter the flock entrusted to them. If this is persisted in, it will ruin those in their charge. Some will get weak and sickly, and others may stray away. As a result many will be lost to the church. This was manifest during our late church troubles. All churches, as far as I know, that worked in harmony with decisions of Annual Meeting, had but little, if any, trouble. This has been our experience in the Valley of Virginia.

Missionary work should be of the right kind. To send out brethren, to preach and establish churches, who are not in order, and do not regard decisions of Annual Meeting, is very unwise. Such work will result in but little, if any good. The work will be according to the pattern. Missionaries should be in harmony with the church. They should work fully up to her decisions. The requirements of the church should be fully presented to all applicants and accepted by them before they are received into the church, by baptism. If delayed until after that time, they will not be likely to accept them. This kind of work brings trouble into the church.

The most successful missionary work is done by doing like Paul did. He dwelt two whole years in his own hired house. He remained long enough to establish churches and get them in working order. He ordained elders in every church. To send brethren to remote places, where our doctrine is not known, to preach a few sermons and get a few lambs into the fold, and then pass on and leave them exposed to the wolves for twelve months, is not good policy. They are young and tender, and easily overcome by the surrounding influences. If well cared for a few years, they will become strong and more able to resist the enemy. Jesus told Peter to feed his sheep, because he knew they would not prosper without being fed and tenderly cared for.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO GOD.

BY G. W. BUNTAIN.

Our responsibility to God is, or ought to be, one of the most important and solemn thoughts that could cross our minds. The fact that we are living this life here below but once, and that we must and shall give account for our privileges and enjoyments here, ought to cause us to realize that we are responsible beings to God. We enjoy many blessings, both spiritual and temporal, that some persons in other nations do not. All this ought to make us feel our great responsibility to God for the proper use of these many privileges.

These temporal blessings are not all that God has given us. After the human family had fallen from the lofty position in which he had placed them, down into the valley of degradation and sin, he made provisions by which man might again be re-instated and find favor with God through Jesus Christ. We ought to feel thankful that the plan of salvation has been given on such easy terms, that it is within the reach of every one. All may accept it if they are only willing, but the great trouble is to conquer the stubborn will.

Sometimes, when an error is committed and we are called to an account for it, we are ready to attribute our mistake to the weakness of the flesh, and plead that the adversary overcame us, or that, in an unguarded moment, the carnal mind took possession of us. If we were to investigate the case, we might find that it is only a lack of will power to crucify self. There may be wrongs committed and, doubtless, there are, that we can truly call weaknesses of the flesh or errors of the head, and not of the heart.

The object of Christ's coming into the world was to save his people from their sins, and when we come into the church by baptism we put on Christ, and rise, to walk with him in newness of life. We ought to become dead to sin, if we have put on Christ. After we have taken up the cross, we should follow him daily, knowing that he came to save his people from their sins, and not to save them in their sins. We ought to keep ourselves pure, since God can not look upon the least of sin with any degree of allowance. Christ came to save us from our sins, and if he is not saving us from our sins, and making such men and women of us as the Gospel directs we should be, it is evidence that there is a mistake somewhere,—we have not taken the proper course. The power that was in God's Word to bring Paul out of error and darkness, is still in it, and is just as powerful to save us from our errors, if we have it properly applied. The same power that caused men in the apostles' day to cry out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" will, if properly applied, cause us to say at all times, and under all circumstances, "Not my will but thy will be done, oh, God!"

CHILDREN AND THEIR WORK.

BY W. H. ROOSE.

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."—Eccl. 12: 1.

This admonition of Solomon is directed to the youth of the present and future, as well as to those who lived in his time. Those who are taught the existence of a God,—of his love toward all his creation, and of his dealings with the human race, can not help but realize that they are indebted to him for all the blessings they enjoy.

God always works in accordance with the laws of order. These laws have wisdom for their basis, and become a part of God's creation, and if we live in harmony with those laws we can not help but be happy. This is what Solomon wishes us to do. He wants us to forget neither our Creator, nor his laws. Obedience is indispensable to true happiness. When we forget God and his laws, we also cease to be happy. While Israel remembered God, they enjoyed their existence, but when they forsook him and wandered after strange gods, they were in darkness. They did as many do now, who do not acknowledge God, nor respect his laws,—sell their chances of life for a pittance.

There is yet another way to remember God, — by thanking him and worshiping him for all the good we receive from his hand. Many good men and women are doing all they can for you and me. They rank from the silvered hairs of many winters to the noble youth. They battle for the utter destruction of sin and the misery it inflicts upon unsuspecting humanity. Soon the veteran soldiers will be called to their reward, and their places must be filled by others that are willing to aid the cause.

All are not "workers with God." Many fall by the wiles of the tempter. The strength of sin grows in proportion to the growth of population. Satan carefully studies the best methods of ensnaring the unwary and leading his victims to the brink. His agents will not permit a single stone to remain unturned that would hinder their progress.

God, too, has ever had able men and women on his side. His army of workers has not yet been too large. God still calls for volunteers to fight the battle for right. "The battle is the Lord's, and he solicits your aid, and in order that you may do your work more effectually, it is important that you be trained and disciplined in the work before you, while young. Remember, that example has more power to convict than precept.

Evil habits, while easily formed, may become deeply rooted. When they grow upon you, it will take more than ordinary courage to abandon them. The Bible says, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." This shows that when a child is taught to walk in the way of God, he will not depart from it when he gets old. Why? Because he finds that it is right, and brings many blessings. It creates peace and good-will toward men; it tends towards union and perfects in love, and all our goings are established. The early training and practices build a walled fortress about our hearts, and strengthens our inclinations to resist wrong.

Children need not wait, however, until they become men and women, to begin their work, but may begin now. But what can children do? "Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right." The element of future fruitfulness is possessed by the plant long before its fruit appears. The eaglet makes many an attempt to fly before it mounts upward on tireless pinions and opens conflict with the storm. Where are we to find the active spirit of the church or the philanthropist of the world, if children are not trained to the ministry of love? If earth is ever to be a counterpart of heaven, it must be through Gospel love; if sinful man ever expects to rejoice in the presence of Deity, he must get this love, cherish it in his heart, and manifest it in his life.

The child Jesus said to his parents, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" All may work nobly and earnestly for God and humanity. Even a child has its peculiar sphere of usefulness which no one else can occupy so well. He has attractions and moves in a circle of influence that neither man nor angels can claim. No, we can not do without the little ones; the good they have already accomplished can not be told. While they may not preach in sublime sentences, they have often moved men to tears whose stubborn hearts withstood the pleadings of a faithful wife and loving mother. Their stirring appeals, —earnest and touching entreaties, — have caused many a drunkard to leave the cup untouched.

In all our work for humanity, we should remember that even in the lowest there yet remains a spark of the true spirit, and if we strive aright, we may fan that one little spark into a flame. It may become a glowing ember that will sometime light some other benighted soul. Let us be gentle with the erring. Hailstones destroy, while the same element, reduced to the milder form of rain, nourishes whatsoever it watereth.

Much depends upon the influence of your surroundings in shaping your life for the future. Do right from principle and not from fear, and in time you will do so from second nature. Remember, we all have a work to do, and all our time must be employed in accomplishing that work. The time we spend in hunting for little faults in our neighbor's conduct, will be lost in training our own minds.

One important thing for the child to do is to reject the company of those who idle away their time on street corners, in billiard halls, saloons, etc. Such boys, as a rule, use bad language, learn to chew and smoke tobacco, and to drink strong drink. Thus you are likely to form bad habits.

Reader, beware! Look well to the path you choose! Look well to your reading matter! Good literature forms good characters. It will inspire you to do good. It will make you bold. You will have courage to say, "No," when evil presents itself. You will be a power for good, and be respected and loved by all.

If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work on immortal minds—if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and our fellow-men, we engrave on those tablets something that will brighten all eternity.—Daniel Webster.

THE address of Eld. W. Wyland is changed from Lipscomb, Texas, to Payne's Store, same State.

As announced last week, we are now ready to fill all orders for the Brethren's Quarterly, and hope the demand will show that a goodly number of our schools intend to continue during the winter. For an extended notice of these lessons we refer our readers to another column.

THE great question, for those intent upon making the world better, and saving the young from joining the great army of criminals, is that of preventive work. As in other cases, so in this,—"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," and while there is much that is heroic in the efforts we see made to rescue and reform wrong-doers, there is far more virtue and good sense shown in the endeavors to prevent wrong-doing. In the downward path which leads to criminal life, the first step is by far the most important, and just at that point the utmost effort should be expended.

IT is often said that only the good is beautiful, but is not this a mistake? Were it true that everything that is beautiful to look upon in this world were good, and evil were always repulsive, then who would not do right, for it would be an easy task to do good? The tempter may come to us in a beautiful form, for he may be transformed even into an angel of light to lead us out of the path of right. We can not be governed by appearances. What may seem to us beautiful, may be Satan's offering to tempt us, and what may seem unattractive to us, may be God's offering to lead us to a higher life in his service. We need to remember that there are beautiful things in this world that are not good, and that there are good things that are not beautiful.

THE Brethren of the Silver Creek church, Ogle Co., Ill., will hold their love-feast Oct. 5 and 6, commencing at 3 P. M.

"FIFTY years ago seven shoemakers in a shop in the city of Hamburg said, 'By the grace of God we will help to send the Gospel to our destitute fellow-men.' In twenty-five years they had established fifty self-supporting churches, had gathered out 10,000 converts, had distributed 400,000 Bibles and 8,000,000 tracts, and had carried the Gospel to 50,000,000 of the race. It would only take 150 of such men to carry the Gospel to the whole world in twenty-five years. Even if there were no more than 2,000,000 of Christians in the world to-day, yet if every Christian would but be the means of every year leading only a single person to Christ, in ten years the whole world would be converted."

"THERE are some words which can never quite get over their base origin, however courtly the company in which we may find them. Sneering is one of these words; sarcasm is another. Sneering is a word which is closely allied to snarling, and in the old Germanic languages it indicates the grin of a dog when it opens its lips and shows its teeth all ready for a bite. Sarcasm carries the idea one step further. That means an actual tearing of the flesh. But, when you come to think of it, does it show much wisdom, or ability, or learning, to pride one's self on one's proficiency in arts which take their most appropriate names from the ill-tempered snarl of a dog, or from the savage act of a savage beast?"

A YOUNG man had been arrested and brought before a justice, charged with committing a theft. He was not more than eighteen years of age, and he did not look like a thief, yet the proof was strong against him. When questioned as to his age and place of residence he answered indifferently, but when asked his name he turned to the judge in a hesitating manner and said, "Must I answer that question?" "Yes," was the answer. With a look of keen anguish in his countenance, he asked again, "If I give my name, can it be kept from my mother?" He did not want his mother to know that he had fallen so low in sin, and this was the thought that troubled him most. "What will mother say?" has kept many a boy and girl from doing wrong and falling into sin. And how good it is, always, to ask the question, "What will mother say?" when tempted to do evil. Who can measure a good Christian mother's influence over her sons and daughters?

"THERE is a gain in systematic and thorough Bible study; there is a gain in intelligent Bible-reading, topically or by a single book at a time; there is also a gain in the regular daily reading of the Bible, chapter by chapter, in course, throughout the year. This latter reading may, at times, be perfunctory, but it has its practical value even then. Those men who are most familiar with the Bible in all its parts are commonly those who have been in the habit of reading the Bible through, in course, year after year, and who have thereby become gradually familiar with portions of the Bible which they would not have looked up in ordinary topical reading or study. Nor does this formal reading of the Bible interfere with more earnest and thorough occasional Bible-reading. On the contrary, it makes that kind of reading all the more satisfactory when it is undertaken. It is a good thing to read a chapter in the Bible at the close of the day's work, even though its reading be somewhat irksome, and the temptation to sleep be a strong one for the hour. But that should not be one's only way of Bible-reading; nor is it likely to be."

"KIND words produce their own image in men's souls, and a beautiful image it is. They soothe and quiet and comfort the hearer. They shame him out of his sour, morose, unkind feelings. We have not yet begun to use kind words in such abundance as they ought to be used."

LAST winter heavy rains fell in Palestine, and especially around about Jerusalem. As a result, it is reported that the entire north wall of the ancient pool of Siloam has fallen down and the reservoir has been filled up with masses of the wall so that neither its bottom nor even its water can be seen. Thus this important landmark of antiquity is rapidly falling into complete ruin, and unless an effort is made to restore and preserve it, the pool, to which Christ sent the blind man to wash, will soon be entirely obliterated. When we visited the pool, in 1884, it was in a good state of preservation and there was sufficient water in it to afford bathing and swimming facilities for a number of Arab boys who were thus enjoying themselves as we passed by the famous pool. The water of the fountain that has, for at least two thousand years, emptied into the pool, it is said has forced its way under the stones and earth, and, as before, flows through the pool into the canal below.

FROM May 27th to July 1st the General Synod of the Moravian church was in session at Herrenhut, in the south-eastern part of Saxony. This body, which is the highest ecclesiastical authority among the Moravians, meets only once every ten years. It settles all questions of church doctrine and determines the fundamental features of Moravian church order and discipline, elects bishops, and supervises the important missionary work of the church. The Moravians are most active in mission work. With a membership of only thirty-three thousand at home, they have over eighty-four thousand members belonging to their various missionary posts, which are to be found in all parts of the world. They support and manage a hospital for lepers, at Jerusalem, where many of these unfortunate ones are cared for. They pay, annually, more money per capita for mission work than any other church in America. The founder of the Moravian Brotherhood was the great reformer, John Huss, who was burned at the stake for his adherence to his religious convictions, July 6, 1415.

"DYING from overwork in the cause of Christ is more talked about as a danger than encountered as a reality in the Christian church. There are more churches dying for want of working pastors than there are pastors dying through excessive work for their churches. There are more Sunday-schools that are languishing because of the want of energy in those who conduct them, than there are superintendents who are endangering their health and usefulness by too great devotion to their Sunday-schools. There are classes that make no progress because inactive teachers sit before them and yawn through a lesson which they have not prepared, and which they have not earnestness enough to teach if they were prepared. There are Christian men who let their church run down because they are too indolent to keep it up. Yet, some of these same men make their own secular business succeed. It is only as Christians that they are indolent. It is a shame to do the world's work well and Christ's work shabbily. What is wanted is a revival of Christian energy and zeal. God never blesses laziness. It is a farce for you to ask him to bless your parish work, your preaching, your teaching, your superintendency, if you put no life into your work. Consecration is a mockery unless it is made real by the utmost we can do."

FEEDING THE MULTITUDES ON SUNDAY AT OUR ANNUAL MEETING.

SINCE the close of our last Conference, held at Harrisonburg, Va., the subject of feeding so many people on Sunday, with the great amount of labor incurred, has given rise to several queries and articles; the first asking if the labor cannot be lessened, and the second calling attention to the fact that, in the opinion of the writers, there was a great deal more labor performed at the place of meeting on Sunday than seemed to be necessary, and that, as a result, the Brethren have been subjected to unfavorable criticism by other denominations. In view of this we propose to offer a few thoughts on the question, for we believe if the matter be clearly understood it will be seen that no blame can attach to the church, and that a heavy responsibility is placed upon the committee who have charge of feeding the people on such occasions.

The question of feeding such a large number of people at our Annual Meetings on Sunday has long claimed the attention of our thoughtful brethren and it has been carefully considered by our own Conference. A paper relating to this question was presented to Annual Meeting, held at North Manchester, Ind., in 1888. Article 9, Minutes of Annual Meeting for that year reads as follows:

9. "A number of papers were presented, requesting Annual Meeting to discontinue the practice of feeding a mixed multitude on Sunday (Pentecost). The papers were referred to a committee which reported as follows:

'We, your committee, after carefully reading the papers submitted to us by Standing Committee, beg leave to make the following report: However much we may be in favor of avoiding feeding a mixed multitude on Sunday, we are met on every side by the impracticability of such a course, as our Annual Meeting is often held where there are but few Brethren; hence we decide to make no general change, but advise Committee of Arrangements, where such Meetings are held, to dispense with the traffic of everything on Sunday except what is really necessary, and that all cooking be done on Saturday, to avoid as much labor as possible on Sunday.

SAMUEL H. MYERS,
E. W. STONER,
D. E. PRICE,
JACOB RIFE,
SAMUEL DRIVER.'"

Report adopted.

From this it will be seen that it is contrary to to the advice of our Conference to sell anything on Sunday "except what is really necessary." It is also advised "that all cooking be done on Saturday to avoid as much labor as possible on Sunday." The object in passing the above report of the committee was, to keep the sanctity of the Lord's Day and to devote the time to divine service. As a people, we believe in keeping the Lord's Day as a day of rest and of worship; a day devoted fully to the Lord's work. At the same time we remember that man was not made for the day but the day for the man. Hence we attend to all works of mercy and necessity on that day. Under a work of necessity comes the question under consideration. The multitudes must be fed lest they faint by the way, and the feeding involves more or less labor.

It was estimated that from fifteen to twenty thousand people were on the meeting grounds at Harrisonburg, Va, on Sunday, and only those who had the experience can realize what it means to feed such a large multitude of people. There is labor to be done if the people are to be fed. We believe the Committee of Arrangements did the best they could under the circumstances. We did not hear any one complain that they did not get enough to eat. There may have been some things sold at the lunch room that might have been dispensed with as not "really necessary." If so, then, in this respect, there should be an improvement in the future.

If those who are disposed to criticise could have the responsibility of feeding the people at one of our Conferences on Sunday, placed upon them, they would find out how it is themselves, and would be much less disposed to offer criticisms. It is so much easier to look on and see others bearing a responsibility and doing the work, and to tell how it ought to be done, than to take hold and do it ourselves. Just criticism, however, is good and we should aim to improve on the past, and if those who have charge of our Conferences in the future will follow closely the advice given by Annual Meeting, we think every objectionable feature will be removed and the sanctity of the Lord's Day will be unbroken.

A TERRIBLE PICTURE.

A PROMINENT judge who has presided for many years over the courts in Chicago, recently gave his views on "The Effects of the Saloon on Society" to the Inter Ocean of that City. The picture he draws is an appalling one, showing as it does that to the use of intoxicants and the corruption of the saloon are to be traced nearly all the evils that curse society. It should be remembered that these words were spoken by a man who is familiar with the subject, having had before him thousands of criminals, made so by strong drink. He said in part:

"You may ransack the pigeon-holes all over the city and country, and look over such annual reports as are made up, but they will not tell half the truth. Nor only are the saloons of Chicago responsible for the costs of the police force, the fifteen justice courts, the bridewell, but also for the criminal courts, the county jail, a great portion of Joliet, the long murder trials, the coroner's office, the morgue, the poor-house, the reform school, the mad-house. Go anywhere you please, and you will find almost invariably that whisky is the root of the evil. The gambling houses of the city and bad houses of the city are the direct outgrowth of the boon companions of drink. Of all the thousands of prostitutes of Chicago, the downfall of almost every one can be traced to drunkenness on the part of their parents and husbands, or drunkenness on their own part. Of all the boys in the reform school at Pontiac, and in the various reformatories about the city, 95 per cent. are the children of parents who died through drink, or became criminals through the same cause. Look at the defalcations; fully 90 per cent of them come about through drink and dissipation. Go into the divorce courts; fully 90 per cent of the divorces come about through drink, or drink and adultery both. Of the insane or demented cases disposed of in the court here every Thursday, a moderate estimate is that 70 per cent are alcoholism and its effect. I saw it estimated the other day that there were 10,000 destitute boys in Chicago who are not confined at all, but are running at large. I think that it is a small estimate. Men are sent to prison for drunkenness, and what becomes of their families? The County agent and poor-house provide for some. It is a direct expense to the community. Generally speaking, these families go to destruction. The boys turn out thieves, and the girls and mothers generally resort to the slums. The sand-baggers, murderers and thugs, generally, of to-day, who are prosecuted in the police courts and the criminal courts, are the sons of men who fell victims to drink. The percentage in this case is fully 95 per cent. I have studied this question for years, and have passed upon criminal cases for years, and know whereof I speak. 'This saloon,' that 'saloon,' the other 'saloon,' —saloons, saloons, saloons figure constantly and universally in the anarchist trial. Conspirators met in saloons; dynamite was discussed in saloons; bombs were distributed over saloons, armed revolutionists were drilled above, under, or in the rear of saloons; treason made assignation in saloons, and time and time again witnesses say, 'We went to such and such a saloon for wine and beer.' There is not a country under the sun in which lurks so much treason, revolution and murderous treaty as in our 'saloon' of the United States, and notably in all large cities. These saloon pests harbor thieves, thugs, house-breakers, anarchists, robbers and murderers. Nine-tenths of the law-breaking in America are hatched in saloons, and the admitted fact is palliated by the axiom that saloons are headquarters for town, city and even national election gerrymandering.

"The liquor counter is the scaffold on which a half hundred beautiful, vital American things are assassinated, and on which scores of horrid public plagues are glorified."

PROHIBITION.

JOSEPH COOK, the celebrated Boston lecturer, gives the following reasons why we should have prohibition in America. In looking them over it seems to us that they are sound and logical and can not well be controverted.

1. "It would effect an important reduction of taxes. The citizens pay millions more annually to the whisky shops than for all the expenses of the State government.

2. "The whisky ring is a leech, fattening on every other trade and occupation, and itself producing nothing useful in return. The liquor tax in Maine is three cents annually on each member of the population; in license New Jersey it is $2.40.

3. "Eight-tenths of the crimes committed in the State are produced by intoxicating beverages directly or indirectly, and the business which makes criminals is itself criminal.

4. "Science, by showing that alcohol has a local affinity for the brain, and that habits of drinking necessarily manufacture paupers and madmen, demonstrates the right of government in self-protection to interfere by prohibitory legislation with the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

5. "Prohibitory laws have stood for twenty-three consecutive years on the statute-books of Maine, and have effected so much in the reduction of taxes and in the improvement of the government of cities and in the amelioration of the drinking customs of the people, that it is notorious that no political party in Maine dares now propose the repeal of prohibition.

6. "Great cities are likely to rule the American republic; they will also ruin it if they are governed by the whisky ring as they have been in a majority of cases thus far in our history. The predominant political influence of the whisky ring in great and corrupt cities is incompatible with the success of American institutions, or with safety to life and property under universal suffrage in mismanaged municipalities.

7. "These facts being fully appreciated on the eastern sea-board of the United States, where the people have suffered much from the mismanagement of cities, the most crowded part of the nation is anxiously watching every experiment with constitutional prohibition, and all friends of temperance and of social order wish it success."

THE GREAT NEED.

BY J. S. FLORY.

THE crying want of the day is, more laborers in the field,—this great world,—to labor for the spreading of the Gospel and the perpetuity of the faith once delivered to the saints. This faith must be held inviolate in the churches composing the one universal church of the Living God.

The missionary cause to-day does not so much lack system as it does efficient workers to go out and labor with might and power to do the work of evangelizing the world. There must be a cause or causes why there is such a dearth of laborers. We have many in the church to-day, and among that number quite a number of young brethren, whose circumstances in life are such that they might be sent,—men who can endure the heat and labor of the work, but who, with all this, are not the men suited to the work, from the very fact that they have not the manifest evidences that they are full of the Holy Ghost. Without this divinely-ordained qualification, it is useless to send them out.

The Holy Ghost's office, in part at least, is to bring to remembrance the "all things" spoken by Jesus, and among those things is the doctrine of non-conformity to the world and the sayings of the Savior. "If he neglect to hear the church let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican." The principle standing out here, involves a duty as binding on every member of the church as that of "repent and be baptized." If disobedience is not an evidence of a lack of the true spirit of God, in any one, then we know not wherein there is such evidence.

In view of this fact what we want is evidence on the part of our brethren that they have the proper qualifications necessary for evangelists or laborers in the field. Intellect is one of the things often necessary to cope with opponents, in order to meet them on their own ground, but non-conformity to the world in action or appearance, as well as in theory, is one of the essentials necessary to meet opponents on Gospel grounds.

Facts are stubborn things, and we speak from actual occurrences when we bring out the following incidents to prove the position we take and the reason we urge the importance of being consistent, in order to become efficient workers.

A young brother, so-called, made a preaching tour through a certain section of country where there was a number of churches. His appearance showed conclusively that he had more respect to the customs of the world than to the customs of the church. He talked very well, but avoided allusion to the doctrine which says actions speak louder than words, or that the outer is an index to the inner life. As a result, nine-tenths of the members had an unfavorable opinion of the brother so far as being a proper person for the work, or as an evangelist. He lost the approval and confidence of the church by the mistake of catering to his own opinions and desires. To please the few that were like-minded, he lost the influence of the many, so that they could not conscientiously hold up his hands in bidding him God-speed in the course he pursued.

Another young brother passed the same way and preached in the churches. He gave evidence, by word and deed, that he had the same mind that was in the Lord Jesus,—meek, humble and obedient. He did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God in a way that put a decided veto to all self-will or worldliness, clinging to the redeemed of God. The church had not much to say about his ability, but he had the confidence of all, and, as a body, they would have voted for him to go out as an evangelist, if it had been so ordered.

Not long since a young member of the church said that the Annual Meeting was afraid to have young men go out as missionaries for fear some one would be converted that the old brethren would have no hand in. Of course the expression savors of an evil surmise, but it affords an opportunity of saying in reply thereto, that the old brethren every-where are more than anxious to have a whole army of young members in the field, especially young ministers who are not too hampered by the care of a family, stock or lands,—such that can go out and stay out, and do the much-needed work. But what is needed and expected, is, that they themselves first be living epistles of the life and character of their Lord and Master,—that they be fully imbued with the spirit of true humility and that their love for the church and her peculiarities originate from the heart. They should be truly converted so that they can preach the entire doctrine of the church with such force that the conversion and conviction of the hearers may be in harmony with the entire church polity. Then there will be no trouble on account of them not having done their duty.

The church is right in being careful that only truly regenerate men, as far as it is possible to so judge, be sent out. Let me say right here to my young brethren every-where, "You can lose nothing, worth having, by coming out fully in your whole life in defense of the non-conforming principles of the Gospel. The church has no rule or custom, at variance with non-conformity, as taught by the Gospel." With this principle maintain all others, and do the work your hands find to do. Never push yourself forward for the public ministry, but do what you can. No matter what your station in life is,—if worthy, the church will seek you.

Never for a moment let the tempter retain the thought in your mind that the church does not understand or appreciate your talent or calling. Self-called men are poor exponents of God's truth. There never was a time in the history of the church, that there was a wider field open for true men, —men fully consecrated to the work,—to become useful in the church, than now. The same may be said of sisters in the church. Principles, especially, applying to our sisters are being ignored, and we want them to stand forth in defense of the same so determinedly that the scoffers will be silent, and the timid made strong.

The obedient always get along nicely; it is the disobedient that are always getting into trouble themselves, and making trouble.

May the spirit of the Lord lead us all into the way of right, that we may all provoke one another unto love!

EVIDENCES OF THE TRUE CHURCH.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

Chapter Five.—The Christian Name.

"The disciples were called Christians first at Antioch."—Acts 11: 26.

WHETHER the name Christian was given in derision, or in honor, or merely for convenience, is rather difficult at this date to determine, neither does it make any material difference. We wish to call attention to the fact, however, that there are churches organized and specially named "The Christian Church." Members of those churches lay much stress upon the mere name. Some, even, go so far as to claim, that, to be a member of such a church, is good evidence of building upon the Rock.

We remark that the mere name either of a person or of a church does not impart any merit or moral character.

If names imparted moral qualities, then every person, named after another, would inherit all the qualities of character of the person he was named after. A great many persons have been named after George Washington, but, not one of them has inherited the moral qualities of Washington. Then, to merely assume the name Christian is no evidence that such an one is a Christian. This would be trusting a mere shadow and will deceive in the end. The real value of the Christian name consists in the character from which it is derived.

If there is no Christian character back of the name, it is a mere, empty title. Character is the important thing. Some people of excellent Christian character have been called ugly names. Christ said, "If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?" Matt. 10: 25. The inference is, calling one by an ugly name does not make him a bad man; and calling us by the Christian name does not make us Christians.

Then, to depend on a special church name for salvation, is extreme folly and implies a false conception of the conditions of salvation and the formation of Christian character.

THE FATAL MISTAKE.

BY WM. M. LYON.

IN a recent MESSENGER, a certain sister, in giving the report of their late harvest meeting, refers to the idea advanced by the minister who taught that it is our duty to give when "we have enough and to spare." Right here many make a fatal mistake and suffer themselves to be deceived.

They wait, and wait, and WAIT, and WAIT till they feel that they have "enough and to spare," before they can go down into their pockets, forgetting that all they have belongs to the Lord. They talk about the "Lord's part." Why, bless you, my dear brother and sister, did you ever think that the Lord's share is all of it?

Ah, how often have our deacons and soliciting brethren, when trying to collect for the treasury of the Lord's house, heard the pitiful reply, "I guess I can't do anything for you this time, we've got along so poorly this year" (and just then the mind runs back to last year, and the response is concluded by), "and I believe, too, I gave you a little something the last time you were around."

Now, I'm not sure, but I'm greatly inclined to the opinion that all this follows as a natural result based upon the principle of giving when "we have enough and to spare."

The trouble is, people never get enough for themselves; then, how can they get anything for the Lord? We have already referred to the answer of those who refused to give to the Lord, and I will here remark that we have known this to be the case when the one solicited was worth thousands.

I repeat, "Let us look at the principle upon which we give or refuse to give. I fear there is the fatal mistake. If we wait till all our own wants, both real and imaginary, are satisfied, we'll have but little, if anything, left for the Lord.

Let us take God's plan for it and it will be otherwise. Let us remember that God wants his part out of all our goods and gains, whether they be much or little.

Let us examine ourselves in this matter. It will pay.

HOME AND FOREIGN MISSION WORK.

BY D. F. STOUFFER.

THERE is, at the present time, a great and important work agitating the church of the Brethren, presented under two headings,—"Home" and "Foreign" Mission Work. "Home Mission" is a local work, hence falls under the supervision of local churches. A necessity of a work of this kind arises from the fact that, in the majority of local churches, there are places where the doctrine of Christ, as taught and practiced by the Brethren, has not been heard. It occurs to me as wonderfully strange that there is not a more united effort in pushing forward this work. The church claims to have the spirit of Christ. If Christ were here personally and would see souls, so near the borders of his church, starving for bread, his spirit would call loudly, "Go out into the streets and lanes, and hedges and highways, and compel them to come in."

Oh, how I wish we would all see the importance of the work, and realize the individual responsibility that gathers around us in the accomplishment of this most noble work! I am inclined to believe that we would not feel content in simply talking about it at our church and District Councils, but would make it one of our daily efforts.

Let us look at this work from a proper standpoint. How is it? Are we doing what we can, or are we at ease in Zion? Just now the words come rushing in, "Woe unto them that are at ease in Zion."

I was recently called to fill a mission appointment, referred to by Bro. Brindle in MESSENGER No. 34. I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. D. Ausherman, who is one of our practical missionary workers. We preached several sermons to the people, and the Word preached had a most telling effect upon the people. Old men and women wept, and there appeared to be a general shaking up of the dry bones. I agree with Bro. Brindle in wishing that all the Brethren, and sisters, too, could have seen what I saw. They would surely help the mission cause more than they do.

The call has been so urgent for our return that we have arranged to meet with them in the near future.

One of the pleasant features of my visit was, to meet my dear old uncle, John P. Stouffer, who has passed the line of three score years, and all that time away from his God. While together, kneeling at the altar of prayer, holding him up to God as a special object of our petition, the fallow ground of his heart was broken up, and, as he wept, his heart responded, "I yield; I yield." Next day, as we traveled together, we came to a certain water, and Uncle said, "See, here is water; what hindereth me?" Finding nothing to hinder, preparations were made, and right there he was led down into the water, and, before a congregation of curious spectators, he consecrated himself to the Lord. His last words in our separation were, "I want to be faithful until death. Pray for me!"

At the place where the meeting was held, there were no members. We made our home with strangers and truly they labored to have us feel at home. While with them, they did not wait to see if the preacher had a place provided for him, but came up, and said, "Come to my house, and make that your home."

I shall ever remember the kind spirit of a certain lady, who, while we were seated around the supper table, announced the future arrangements, —"You are all to come back here, and let no one persuade you away, as we are prepared to entertain you. Come and feel at home!" That appeared so much like the spirit of Christ that it made us all feel happy. Thanks to those people for their kindness!

Echoes from the Highway.

LEAVING Chicago Aug. 20, we came direct to Denver, Colo., where we tarried a few hours and thence went to Longmont. Since here we have attended meetings with the dear ones of like precious faith in this and adjoining County. The cause is moving along with occasional accessions to the church, both by letter and baptism. They have had several additions by baptism recently.

When we came to this country, sixteen years ago, it was yet a Territory, sparsely settled. The buffalo and Indian roamed at large, but now they have disappeared before the tread of the busy and enterprising pioneers. The country has rapidly settled up; large farming communities are turning the desert into a charming expanse of beautiful farms, with thriving towns, here and there, full of the noise and commotion common to marts of trade and commerce. I found at that early day, here on the wild frontier, one member as a farmer, and two in the mines, with letters of membership sixteen years old. The first person baptized in this part of the "Far West" is now a minister of the Brethren in Nebraska. As usual, where the banner of Jesus is unfurled to the breeze, to be looked upon by sin-diseased souls, the work progressed, the waters were frequently moved, other laborers came to the work, and the church has maintained the principles of the Gospel. For seven long years there was scarcely a ripple of trouble to mar the peace of the Brotherhood, but as time rolled on, as every-where else, troubles, more or less, came, but it is to be hoped out of all of them such lessons have been learned as will enable God's children here to be better fitted for the warfare against sin and Satan, and that the blessedness of harmony and union may the more fully be appreciated. A good stone church-house has been erected, in which the Brethren meet week after week to teach the young the truths of the Bible and to labor in word and doctrine in the service of God. At a number of other points meetings are held. One elder, four other ministers and a corps of deacons constitute the official body, which, in connection with a company of active, working members, ought to make the strongholds of Satan totter In several other parts of the State of Colorado, churches have been organized, which, if well supported by missionary help, ought to prosper.

As time rolls on and the works of iniquity increase, it stands us all in hand to be more vigilant, more earnest and more self-sacrificing in this great work of maintaining the integrity of our non-compromising principles of the Gospel, and the spreading of the good news of salvation, until many thousands, that now know not the truth, are brought to the cross of Christ. J. S. FLORY.

Longmont, Colo.

From Salimony Church, Ind.

WHILE laboring in the cause of our Master in the above-named church, a sad accident occurred, resulting in the death of sister Adaline Wike, wife of Bro. Jacob Wike, who resides near Huntington, Ind.

Tuesday morning, Sept. 3, as sister Wike was doing her morning work, she went to adjust a window curtain. Attempting to mount a chair, she fell across the chair, hurting herself internally. A doctor was summoned, and though all was done that kind hands could do, she died Wednesday morning at 3 P. M.

Sister Wike was a faithful companion, a devoted sister, a kind and loving mother, —one who had her children in subjection. She was loved by all who knew her.

Sister Wike's age was thirty-six years, eleven months and one day. She was the mother of six children, one having preceded her to the spirit land. Bro. Wike and his children have the sympathy of the entire neighborhood. Funeral services were conducted at Lancaster by the writer, assisted by Bro. Samuel Murray, to a large concourse of friends. GEO. L. STUDEBAKER.

From Neutral, Kans.

THE members of this little band met in council on Saturday, Aug. 31. The business of the meeting was to arrange for a love-feast, and to effect an organization. The new organization took upon itself the name, "New Hope." They had one resident minister in the first degree, Bro. A. B. Lichtenwalter, and also one deacon, Bro. Shepherd Capron. They decided to hold an election at the love-feast Sept. 7, for a minister and a deacon. This was done. The lot for minister fell upon Bro. Frank Fornaman. In the choice for deacon, two were so near a tie, that the matter was submitted to the church, and they said (and I think wisely too), "Install both." Their names are Daniel Barger and Norman Nice. These brethren were then installed into their respective offices. Bro. A. B. Lichtenwalter was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. They made choice of Bro. Samuel Edgecomb, of McCune, Crawford Co., as their elder. These members unanimously agree to work with the general Brotherhood. The bounds of the organization are within Cherokee County, Kans., and take in the members about Neutral, and also those in and about Columbus.

This new organization, though not so large in numbers as some, yet seem hopeful, as their adopted name, "New Hope" would indicate. While they may feel, at present, as if they were too weak to cope with influences around them, yet they should remember that one only who has Christ to help, always has a majority.

It was the privilege of the writer to spend a little over one week with them, and while the meetings were small, because of other meetings in the same village, still we were made to feel as if the efforts of the few members here were not in vain. The principles of the Truth, being eternal, must stand.

While at Neutral I was called upon to witness the very sudden death of Bro. Norman and sister Sophia Nice's little son, only a little over two years old. He was playing, as usual, in the morning, and between five and six o'clock P. M., he left for the glory world. Oh! how heavy the stroke! But the Lord knows best, therefore we must submit.

The love-feast was an occasion of joy to all those who participated, as far as we were able to judge from appearances. Two were baptized.

To-day, Sept. 9, the writer is in Columbus, the County-seat of Cherokee County. I preached here last night in the M. E church to a very full house of attentive hearers. We expect to have preaching at the same place again to-night. To-morrow the appointment is out in the country at the Bethlehem house, where I will remain until Friday morning. From there I go to McPherson, and then home. The weather has been rather dry here for some time past, but there have been some pleasant showers recently. The brethren, sisters and people generally, in this country, are ready to bid a hearty welcome to all good people to come and locate among them.

A. HUTCHISON.

From New Haven Church, Mich.

THE brethren and sisters of this church met in council Sept. 7. The weather was very pleasant. After the meeting was opened, Dr. A. W. Flowers, an aged brother of seventy-two years, addressed us in a very impressive manner, pointing our minds to the rapidity of time, and the great necessity of union. It really seemed as though we were all with one accord in one place. Love and union were the prevailing elements. We decided to hold a series of meetings in the near future. While many of our old, faithful brethren have passed away, we are still trying to maintain the apostolic customs and practices.

JOHN STONE.

From Canada.

AUG 5 wife and I left our home near Mulberry, Indiana, for Canada. We arrived safely at Bro. Jacob Cober's, near Hespeler, Canada, Aug. 6. We remained six days with the four members at that place. Aug 12 we bade farewell to them and came to Bro. Samuel Horner's, near Gormley, the same evening,—a distance of sixty-seven miles,—where we make our home. Here we expect to work in the cause of the Master.

My health was bad before we left home, and is not much better yet,—but is improving somewhat. I think in a short time I will be able to work in the mission field, in compliance with a call made by the General Missionary Committee.

Since my arrival I have held several meetings with good interest. At present our meetings are held in a good house that was built by the surrounding neighborhood several years ago, and is open for all denominations except one.

I have been asked how many of our members are living in Canada. According to my knowledge there are twelve, including wife and I. The members are living about ninety-four miles apart,—four at Hespeler, sixty-seven miles south-west from this place, and two twenty-seven miles north-east from here. So, dear brethren and sisters, you can see the field is large and the labor arduous. Will you come to our help in your prayers? When you assemble in large numbers in the house of the Lord, think of the few, here in Canada, of us who have left home, brethren and sisters, friends and children!

The GOSPEL MESSENGER is still making its way to a few families in Canada. May it be the means of bringing conviction to many hearts!

J. W. METZGER.

From Cold Water Church, Butler Co., Iowa.

WE held our love-feast at Greene, Sept. 7. The meeting was larger than usual and very enjoyable. All was love, peace, and happiness. The speakers present were brethren Fowler and Beaver, of Chickasaw County, Wm. Eikenberry and E. J. Hoff, of South Waterloo, Ia., and the home ministry. We had good preaching. Brethren John D. Shook and Wm. H. Eikenberry were elected to the office of deacon, and three brethren were re-instated into that office. The charge of office was given, and the church received them in a very impressive manner.

The church here is now looking forward with bright prospects. Seven souls have been received into the church this year by baptism. Quite a number have been received by letter and some reclaimed.

Bro. Emmanuel Hoff and wife, of Waterloo, Iowa, are now on a mission tour to Wright and adjoining Counties. Bro. Hoff has already been at Greene, and with the Brethren in Franklin County, for some time. He preached eight discourses in our church at a place, where the Brethren have not preached often. There seemed to be good interest. Bro. Hoff is young, but preaches the Word with power. Time will tell the harvest.

Bro Hoff is working for the Mission Board. He travels by private conveyance and can fill any call in the mission field. We are fully persuaded that good results will follow from this work. May the Lord bless Bro. Hoff and his dear companion!

H. W. HANAWALT.

From Sugar Ridge Church, O.

SATURDAY, Aug 31, Bro. I. J. Rosenberger and Bro. Joseph B. Light came to us and commenced a series of meetings, which they continued until Tuesday, Sept 3, the day of our love-feast. It was an enjoyable occasion, and one long to be remembered. All seemed to be encouraged on their way Zionward, and we feel to thank the dear ministering brethren from other congregations who so kindly assisted us during our love-feast, by dealing out the Word of Eternal Truth to the edifying of both saint and sinner.

Brethren and sisters of Sugar Ridge church, let us remember the feast of love we enjoyed, and if we meet no more as we did that day, oh, let us be faithful so as to meet each other where parting will be no more!

Our Sunday-school was re-organized April 14 with the writer as Superintendent, assisted by Bro. David Nansickle. The school is well attended by both old and young, and I trust a good work may be accomplished through the Sunday-school at this place. Let us all be more determined to work for Jesus and his cause! There is a work for us all to do. Let us do it while it is called to-day! Sept. 1 we had a children's meeting. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger and Bro. Jos. B. Light talked to the children from John 10. The meeting was very interesting to young and old, and I hope that we all may remember what we heard. I stated to the school that the penny collection of that Sunday would be sent to the treasurer of Children's Mission. The collection amounted to $1.19. We thank all for the money thus donated. "God remembers the cheerful giver."

D. W. C. RAU.

McComb, O.

Here and There.

IN March we reported fourteen baptized in the Green Tree church since the first of the year. Since then, we are happy to report, twenty-two more have been baptized by the writer in the beautiful Schuylkill River, only about a quarter of a mile from the church,—a place made sacred by the many baptismal scenes in the last forty years. In all, over ninety have been received by baptism into the Green Tree church in the last three years, and, with but little exception, we think are doing as well as can be hoped for. We hope and pray the good work may continue on, not only so far as numbers are concerned, but also in a corresponding development of Christian piety of an apostolic type. For such a development we are hoping, praying, and, by the grace of God, shall labor.

TRIP TO HUNTINGDON.

Sept. 3 we got on board of the Express train at our home station en route for the above place, and, after a six and a half hours' very enjoyable ride, reached the place in safety. The weather being delightful, and the scenery grand and fascinating at many points along the route, made it a trip long to be remembered by the writer, with the exception of the marks of the horrible devastation and destruction along the different rivers and streams, caused by the recent floods, of which the papers gave graphic descriptions. Suffice it to say, the devastation of the flooding and destruction of property all along the line of the Pennsylvania railroad,—not to say anything about the loss of precious lives—is beyond description. In the language of the sacred historian, "The half was not told."

While at Huntingdon, we made our home with Mother Quinter. The immediate family now consists of Mamie and Grace. Mamie is the older one of the two daughters, and has been attending Swarthmore College, when in session, for the last year. She expects to return again for the fall term to complete her studies. Grace, the youngest in the family, is still attending school at the Brethren's Normal.

While at home with Mother Quinter and the girls—and we were there from Tuesday until Saturday — our mind would revert time and again to gone-by days, when Father Quinter made us all feel good by his smiling and godly presence. Oh, how we did miss "papa," as we used to call him! At night, when lying awake in bed, we tried to imagine his presence and form before our eyes, and it did seem to us at times as if his very form became visible to us, and then disappear again. Beloved and dear Father Quinter, we hope to meet thee, all of us, by and by in the better world! Until then may the good Lord help us to be faithful to him, to the church of his choice, and to each other as a family composed of a broken-hearted companion, mourning and sorrowing children.

Mother Quinter and the children, of which my wife is the oldest, will all miss, when gathered together in the home, the earnest implorations that used to go up from Father Quinter's heart and lips to the throne of mercy in behalf of his, now mourning, little family. But, blessed be God, if we all follow him as he followed Christ, and ever aim to pattern after his work and sweet life—for his was a sweet life—and ever giving heed to his counsels for our good, we need not "sorrow as those who have no hope" for the one only gone on before; for we shall meet again, as we sometimes sing:

"It is the hope, the blissful hope,
Which Jesus' grace has given —
The hope, when days and years are past,
We all shall meet in heaven."

THE SCHOOL.

It gives us no little pleasure to report the interest and progress in the school work of the Brethren in Huntingdon. If we are correctly informed—and we think we are,—the number of students considerably exceeds what it was last year at this time. But the gratifying feature about the work, to us at least, is the fact, that there are quite an unusual number of young brethren in attendance, which is as it ought to be. Brethren, send your sons and daughters to our schools, even should it cost you more to do so, and you will be aiding the cause, while, at the same time, it may prove to be the very thing needed to bring your boy or girl, as the case may be, into the church. And so far as the school at Huntingdon is concerned, we feel it is well managed. The Brethren, those who are engaged in the good work are self-sacrificing, and anxious, more than ever, to make the school productive of good, not only as a school power, but so far as the general principles and doctrine of the Brethren church are concerned.

The new building that is being put up by the Brethren there to afford additional school advantages is fairly under way, though they are considerably hindered in the work in not being able to secure the lumber as fast as they like to have it. We hope they will be able to have the building in good shape before winter sets in; especially as it is desirable to have more room to afford necessary accommodations to do the desired school work. And right here we want to say, Brethren, don't think those who are engaged in the school work of the church are having a good time of it; far from it. From beginning to end it is a work of sacrifice and self-denial, and yet a work so important and far-reaching in its results, that we all ought to feel a willingness to co-operate with those engaged in the work in whatever way we can. We would like to express our mind freely on the school question, right here and now, but as our communication is already of greater length than we had hoped it would be, we shall desist from saying any more on the question for the present

We very much enjoyed our short visit of a few days with the folks at home, and friends and brethren in the little Huntingdon church. Both the church and school there are near to us, perhaps, because Father Quinter was vitally related to both.

To our Huntingdon Brethren and friends we would say, we wish you all a hearty "God prosper you!" J. T. MEYERS.

Oaks, Pa., Sept. 10, 1889.

Wayside Notes.

SEPT. 1 I had the pleasure to meet the Brethren in Solomon's Creek church at their harvest meeting. Bro. Edmund Forney, from Northern Illinois, addressed the congregation, using the parable of the unjust steward. Our attention was particularly called to the fact that we must be careful not to waste the Lord's goods. The sermon was full of rich gems, and I am sure we could profit by it.

The writer was called upon in the afternoon to address the children. The children seem to appreciate these little talks. After that Bro. A. H. Puterbaugh was called upon to address the young men and ladies upon the issues of the present age, and warn the young against the many sins they are exposed to. That closed the meeting at Solomon's Creek.

The committee (sent by Annual Meeting) then met in the Washington church to adjust such difficulties as might come before them. The meeting lasted four days, and, considering the great amount of business before the meeting, I never saw a committee that got along more pleasantly with business. The church was well pleased with their decisions, and all received the report. Oh, how good it is when brethren can dwell together in unity and love! How much hard labor and study could be avoided, and money and time saved, if all the members would observe one thing, and that is, to do right!

Sept 7 wife and I met with the members in the Berrien congregation, Michigan, at their love-feast. A number from adjoining churches were present. Eld. James Miller, formerly from Portage church was present. Bro. Miller's age begins to tell on him, and it is presumable that, according to nature, he will not remain long with us. When I was a boy, I can well remember seeing those old standard-bearers of the cross, while in the vigor of manhood, call long and loud to sinners, to repent and turn from sin's destructive way, and come to that loving Savior, whose voice so pleasantly is calling, "Come, for all things are now ready." When I call to memory some of those old soldiers of the cross, whose bodies are now quietly resting in silent graves, I am made to wonder what has become of their children and grandchildren. Elders Jacob Miller, David Miller, Abram Whitmore, James Tracy, and others, traversed, thirty and forty years ago, this beautiful land, called Portage Prairie, and the adjacent Counties. They have now crossed over the river. Soon we all shall meet them at the great judgment bar of God. Eld. John Knisely officiated at the Communion services. Twelve ministers were present. The meeting, indeed, was an excellent one. At this meeting I had the pleasure of meeting brother and sister Flory. I had not met with sister Gertrude Flory for ten or twelve years. How pleasant it is to meet and renew such acquaintances! Sister Flory, like Bro. C. H. Balsbaugh, and others, who are laboring under the hand of affliction, are only instruments in the hands of God to do much good for the church, and help to labor for the blessed cause of Christ. Bro. Landis, from Darke County, Ohio, was present. We met members from ten different churches.

Berrien church feels much revived. One sister, who had left and gone with the fast element, came back to the church.

We stopped with Bro. Noah Early. He and wife accompanied us to the Catholic institutions. The first place of interest was to visit "St Mary's." This department has no males, excepting the priest, who preaches for the sisters of charity and female students. If only our sisters could be so easily known by their appearance as those Catholic sisters! They were anxious to know what our profession is, and if all of our sisters dressed as sister Miller does. They greatly admire plain dressing. We were next brought one mile east to "Notre Dame." This is the oldest part of the institution. Here may be seen a number of missionary priests, who wear their peculiar coat, and, like the sisters, can be easily known by their appearance. They do not feel ashamed of their uniform, and why should we? They claim to have about 700 students. Here may be seen oil paintings in a remarkable state of preservation, reaching back to the thirteenth century. I saw a German Bible over 200 years old. They also have a book of music in which the notes are written on sheepskin, several hundred years old. Coins of all descriptions, from all countries, may be seen here, reaching back many hundred, and, in some instances, over 1000 years.

The Catholic people are much engaged in collecting relics of all descriptions from all parts of the world. If our people would try half as hard to spread the Gospel as do those Catholics, our Brethren would soon take the Bible into all lands.

The Catholics make use of every possible means to extend their cause. Frequently you may notice that a man, having met with the loss of his wife, goes to Notre Dame, and upon the condition of being cared for during the remainder of his life, agrees to become one of the workers there. All his property, upon entering the institution, goes to the church. Thus thousands of dollars are brought to Notre Dame every year. They own over 600 acres of land, and all is carefully farmed. All the orphan children whom they can find they will induce to enter their schools, and once brought in contact with their methods and form of worship, nine out of ten will become Catholics. I am astonished to see so many Protestant children there. No wonder the Catholics are getting so strong a foot-hold in the United States.

Sept. 12 we met with the Brethren in the South Bend district, Indiana, at their Communion services. The meeting was largely attended, and the order good. At this meeting I met elders David Ruple, James Miller, John Knisely, Thurston Miller and others. Wm. C. Teeter, of Sidney, Nebr., was also present and helped to make the meeting pleasant. Two were baptized at this meeting. One was an aged brother; the other a sister of about eighteen years of age—a mute, who had never been taught to read the Bible. Yet she is more wise, and understands her duties towards God better than some who have every advantage of Bible knowledge. J. H. MILLER.

Milford, Ind.

From Circleville, Pendleton Co., W. Va.

We are still trying to labor in the Lord's vineyard, and although the great work is not moving onward as we would like to see it, we are encouraged by the Brethren from the Valley of Virginia, who come to us occasionally and administer unto us the words of eternal Truth.

Aug. 10 and 11 brethren Martin P. Miller and Lewis Showalter preached the Word of Eternal Life at Dry Run. Aug. 11 Bro. Miller preached a funeral sermon at Circleville, in which we were pointed from the silent tomb to the Celestial City, with warmth and ability. Aug. 12 and 13 these same faithful workers ascended the mountain, known as the "Hunting Ground," where the writer lives, and labors in the great work. Here they preached two sermons with zeal and earnestness. From this point they went on their way to other appointments, at Friend's Run Aug. 14 and 15, and at Smith's Creek, Aug. 16. Aug. 17 and 18 the writer and wife were permitted to meet them again at Hammer's church, near Franklin, this County, at the love-feast held by these brethren, Bro. Miller officiating. After hearing a good sermon, on the morning of the 18th, we once more took the parting hand, and returned home. The brethren went on their way to meet other appointments, and then to seek their homes in Rockingham Co., Va., where loved ones awaited their coming. May the Lord shower, upon them and their work, his richest blessings! GEO. W. GRADY.

"ONE of the mistakes in the conduct of human life is to suppose that other men's opinions will make us happy."

From Eglon, W. Va.

Our love-feast at this place occurred Sept. 7 and 8. We had a feast of love in deed and in truth. There were brethren and sisters here from far and near. About fourteen ministering brethren labored for us. Bro. G. S. Arnold, of Mineral Co., W. Va., officiated.

Our church is still increasing. On Saturday morning one young sister was baptized. Several were added to the church this summer. Let us, dear brethren and sisters, hold out to the end! A few more days and then we can strike glad hands in heaven, where there will be no parting, and where all will be joy!

RACHEL WEIMER.

From Juniata, Nebr.

Our love-feast, Sept. 7 and 8, was a feast to us all. We had an able corps of laborers. The ministers from abroad were Jesse Y. Heckler, Uriah Shick, Lamar Miller, J. M. Nofziger, A. Titus and E. Rothrock, S. M. Forney, etc. There were more ministers present than on any previous occasion. Two were baptized on the day of the meeting. They were old people and had belonged to the Mennonites. Nearly fifty members communed. May God continue his blessing to us! Brethren, remember us, out here, in your prayers! We have more work and calls than we can attend to. Come and help us! DAVID BECHTELHEIMER.

Notice to the Members in the North-eastern District of Kansas.

All those who subscribed for the "Miller and Sommer Debate" at the District Meeting of North-eastern Kansas and have not received the work, should forward their names, with $1.50 enclosed, to me. In that way I can have the books sent by mail, direct to purchaser, thus saving express charges. GEO. BRINDLE.

From Blue River Church, Ind.

Our harvest or thanksgiving meeting occurred Sept. 1. Brethren Jeremiah Gump and Daniel Snell were with us and preached the Word with power. Bro. Snell also preached at a school-house three miles east of the church, and his labors at that place stirred up quite an interest. The people speak well of his preaching. WM. BROWN.

From Falling Spring Church, Franklin Co., Pa.

Our quarterly council was held on Sept. 7. The weather being very inclement, the attendance of members was small, and in consequence of that, some business of importance was left over until Sept. 25, when we will meet again, if the Lord will. One dear sister was reclaimed who had wandered from the fold. May the Lord help her to be faithful till death! One was baptized lately,—a young sister of thirteen years. Oh, how important to remember our Creator in the days of our youth! Our Communion meeting will be held Oct. 12 and 13, at 10 A. M., at the Hade meeting-house.

WM. C. KOONTZ.

From the Field.

On the last day of August we commenced preaching at the Wassam school-house, near Reece, Greenwood Co., Kans., and continued over two Sundays. The Communion services which we had were something new there. Two were added by baptism and a church organized. A young brother, Peter Nelson, formerly a minister of the United Brethren church, was elected to the ministry, and J. J. Wassam to the deacon's office. Eld. D. Stouder assisted. The church was named Spring Creek. Thus there is another branch added to the Southern District of Kansas.

G. W. STUDEBAKER.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

GISH.—In Bourbon County, Kans., Sept. 3, of malarial trouble, Omily T. Gish, wife of Bro. Christian Gish, aged 61 years, and 18 days.

Sister Gish was married to Christian Gish, Dec. 18, 1851. She leaves a husband and five children,—two sons and three daughters,—to mourn their loss. Mother Gish was esteemed by all who knew her, and in her death the community sustains a loss hard to repair. Funeral discourse by the undersigned from 2 Cor. 5: 1. A. J. HIXSON.

GRAYBILL.—At Lowry, Bedford Co., Va., Aug. 2, Katie Graybill, aged 1 year, 8 months and 20 days.

Little Kate was killed by a railroad engine, and was buried in the corner of the yard where the little brother and sister often linger with roses to adorn the little mound.

She has gone to be one of the angels, and if we would but listen, we might, by faith, hear the flutter of snowy wings and the echo of that sweet voice in the Paradise of God.

J. C. BEAHM.

KLINE.—At Stephen's City, Frederick Co., Va., July 29, Bro. Joel Kline.

While the whole community is bowed in sorrow at this sad dispensation of an Allwise Providence, we are happy in the thought that we mourn not as those who have no hope. In the relation of husband, father, brother, or friend, his life was so adorned with all the Christian graces, that we feel assured of that mature preparation on his part, that fitted him for the solemn event of death. He was a minister of the church of the Brethren, and such was his piety and love for the worship of God, that, in spite of feeble health, he was seldom absent from his place in the house of God. SAMUEL KLINE.

BURNS.—In the Union church, Marshall Co., Ind., Aug. 9, of dropsy of the heart, sister Elizabeth Burns, aged 76 years, 2 months and 6 days.

Deceased leaves two sons and two daughters, all members of the church but one,—to mourn their loss. She was the sister of Eld. John Knisley, now of the Pine Creek church, Ind. "Aunt Betsy," as she was usually called, joined the Brethren church when yet a young woman, and lived a consistent Christian life until her death. Funeral services by Eld. Jacob Shively.

JOSEPH BURNS.

KAUB.—At Paxton, Kans., Sept. 8, Jacob Kaub, aged 85 years, 5 months and 4 days.

He was sick one week only, suffering from congestion of the bowels. Funeral services by the Brethren. JOHN SHERLY.

REED.—At Alum Ridge, Floyd Co., Va., Sept. 2, sister Lucy Reed, aged 71 years, 5 months and 15 days.

She united with the church in 1839, and lived a devoted life until the Lord called her home. Two of her little ones preceded her in death. She leaves a husband and eleven children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by F. W. Dove and Bro J. B. Pence, at Pleasant Valley meeting house

MARK A. REED.

KARN.—Near Tippecanoe City, Miami Co., Ohio, Sept. 6, sister Catharine Fair Karn, aged 81 years, 7 months and 4 days.

She was a faithful member of the church for many years, and loved by all who knew her. She leaves seven children and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss. Her husband, Bro. Abraham Karn, preceded her to the spirit world four years ago. Funeral services by Eld. Jesse Stutsman and the writer.

I. J. ROSENBERGER.

ALDRIDGE.—In the Locust Grove church, Frederick Co., Md., Aug. 3, Bro. George W. Aldridge, aged 82 years, 7 months and 27 days.

His remains were interred in the Locust Grove cemetery. Funeral services by Bro. S. H. Utz. We sympathize with the aged and bereaved wife, who is left to mourn her loss. May God sustain her in her sad bereavement. M. E. ECKERS.

HARTER.—In the Nettle Creek church, Wayne Co., Ind., Aug. 3, Bro. Levi Harter, aged 66 years, 1 month and 15 days.

Deceased leaves a kind companion, two sons and one daughter to mourn their loss. He was a consistent member of the church about forty years and died in the triumph of a living faith. His disease was supposed to be cancer of the stomach. He kept his bed for about thirteen weeks, much of the time suffering great pain, which he bore with Christian fortitude. Services by the Brethren.

MATCHETT.—In the bounds of the same congregation, Aug. 24, little Della, daughter of friend David Matchett and wife, aged 6 years, 6 months and 28 days. Disease, diphtheria.

MATCHETT.—Out of the same family, Aug. 29, of typhoid fever, Dora Matchett aged 15 years and 7 days.

Thus, in less than one week, the monster death has torn from the embrace of these kind parents two of their tender lambs, leaving them with but two darling little boys to mourn their loss. Oh may they prepare to meet those dear daughters that have gone to represent their little family on the evergreen shore! Services by Eld. Daniel Bowman and the writer, at the West River church, East Dalton.

TEETER.—Also in the same congregation, in Hagerstown, of scarlet fever, Eva Irena, daughter of friend John and Catharine Teeter, aged 3 years, 5 months and 26 days.

Though our natural affections are strong toward our tender offspring, let us be reconciled to God's will. Knowing the sweet innocence of little Eva, it makes her a proper associate for the society of angels. Funeral services from the language of Jesus, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven," by Lewis Kinsey and the writer.

ABRAHAM BOWMAN.

STILES.—At the home of his sister, near Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 11, Francis A. Stiles, aged 22 years, 1 month and 28 days.

Bro. Stiles was a noble man and a model Christian. He was baptized at the early age of sixteen, since which time he lived as an active and devoted member in the Brethren church. May the dear young friends, for whom he so often prayed, realize that life is uncertain, and, like him, prepare to meet their God. Bro Stiles was attending school at Huntingdon, Pa., and had come home to spend the summer vacation, expecting to return in September; but malarial fever claimed him as a victim, and a few days later he slept the sleep of death. He was an adopted son of Bro. Levi and sister Hannah Good. Great in soul, yet lowly in disposition, he won the good will of his fellow men, and his death has cast a shadow over the loving hearts of many. But God knoweth best, and we dry our tears in the hope of a sweet reunion in our Father's kingdom. SADIE C. BRALLIER.

CALVERT.—Elmer E. Calvert, April 22, aged 24 years and 22 days.

H. H. BRALLIER.

EBY.—In Dayton, Ohio, Millard F., son of Bro. John and sister —— Eby, aged 30 years, 2 months and 1 day.

Deceased leaves a wife, two small children, and a large circle of sympathizing friends to mourn their loss. He was one known only to be loved. He possessed the characteristics of true manhood,—the fruits of early Christian training. Funeral services were conducted by Eld. P. J. Brown, of Congress, Ohio. ISAAC FRANTZ.

NEFF.—In Honey Creek, Henry Co., Ind., Aug. 27, sister Sarah Newlin, aged 69 years, 7 months and 2 days.

She united with the Brethren church in 1860, and continued a faithful member until death. Services by the writer.

BOUSLOY.—At the same place, Aug. 29, Mary Helen, daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth Harvey, aged 31 years, 9 months and 28 days.

She was married June 10, 1876, to D. L. Bousloy. To them were born five children. On the evening of the day above mentioned, while milking a cow, she was kicked by the animal upon the chin, which dislocated her neck and she died almost instantly. Funeral services by Bro. John McCarty from James 4: 14. D. F. HOOVER

DIERDORFF.—At McPherson, Kans., Aug 10, Mabel N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Dierdorff, aged 8 years, 7 months and 24 days.

Little Mabel was a remarkably bright child for one of her years, and to know her was to love her. Her pure life and earnest Christian devotion, we hope, may be a bright and shining light to lead those who mourn for her to a higher and nobler life in God's service. Many long weeks she lay on a bed of suffering, but no murmur or word of complaint escaped her pure lips. Each night she could be heard sweetly pouring forth her words of faith and praise in prayer to the God she trusted. She has been taken when yet a tender blossom, ere she had felt the blight of sin or the bitter heartaches of this cruel world. Her gentle spirit has returned to the God that gave it, pure and undefiled.

Listen! Methinks I can catch the echo of the words spoken long ago by him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." C. B. L.

PECK.—In the Falls City church, Nebr., Aug. 28, sister Mary Peck, aged 74 years and 26 days.

Deceased was united in marriage Sept. 1, 1839, to Elias Peck. They moved to Richardson County, Nebraska, their present home, in 1873. Sister Mary leaves a kind husband, seven children and twenty-four grandchildren to mourn their loss.

At the tender age of twenty years she cast her lot with the church of the Brethren and continued faithful for fifty-four years, never wavering in faith.

Her suffering of about seven weeks seemed to draw her nearer to her dear Savior, and was patiently borne. She was anointed according to James 5, and at last fell asleep in Jesus.

Her funeral was largely attended, and, with great solemnity, conducted by elders Mohler Davis, and the writer. Her remains were laid away in the Silver Creek cemetery.

R. K. BERKEBILE.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.

"Set for the Defense of the Gospel."

Vol. 27. Old Series. Mt. Morris, Ill., and Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 1, 1889. No 39.

The Gospel Messenger.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH, Editor,
And Business Manager of the Eastern House, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

ON last Sunday we had four preaching services, two in the Normal Chapel, one a few miles from town, and one in the Reformatory. We also had a service of song, and a young people's prayer-meeting.

WE have now organized two very interesting courses of Bible study in our school. The one is a course of Bible history, commencing with the creation, and taking in the whole Bible, including the New Testament, during the school year. The Bible is the text-book, using such other helps as are essential to the understanding of the customs and the different forms of government, etc. Only those who have taken a systematic course of Bible study can understand how much there is to learn from the great Book of books. The other course is an exegetical study of the Gospels, and as we go from page to page, and from truth to truth, we do not wonder that Paul recommended study to Timothy. Truly, it is a mine of riches that no amount of taking from can exhaust. In this book are contained the unsearchable riches. We may find much, but not all. Yet every acquisition is a grand success in spiritual wealth, when sanctified by divine grace. Without this knowledge no one can have a complete education, or is prepared to go out to do battle with the world.

EQUINOXES.

THE equinoctial storms are singing their dirges around the sharp corners of time, and are, in their way, telling that the summer is past, and that autumn, with all its hallowed associations, is ready to greet us.

The storms have rather a bluff way of introduction, but so come many of the needful things in life. There are many things given in a way that we may see; but if we refuse to see, then we must be made to feel, and the more sensibly we feel, the better we remember it.

These equinoctial storms are not confined to the weather. We have them in many of the ways and experiences of life. In the nation, the church and the home sometimes come these bustling storms, and in many cases they are quite as bluffy and as fussy as the wind. These storms, however, can not be called strictly periodical, as they do not come at regular intervals or in special seasons of the year. Neither does that blessed peace and calm always follow.

Church and home equinoxes, instead of introducing the autumn tinge of beauty and loveliness, often come as messengers of bitterness, which continue to boil and bluster until they become chronic, and destroy every vestige of the good and the beautiful.

These storms are within our grasp of control, and we have it to say whether or not they shall come and make our existence a pandemonium of ill. These storms may come as messengers of good, to show us our own weakness, and the strength of the One on whom we should lean.

If from them we can learn such lessons, they leave behind them the autumnal hue of beauty and love. And why should they not? We have so often experimented on our own strength, to our sorrow and disappointment, that every lesson that comes to us, pointing us to the strong Arm, should be accepted as a blessing for our profit and instruction.

REFRESHING RAIN.

DURING the spring and summer we have had showers of rain so frequently that most people were inclined to say: "Too much." Taking the average, there was no small amount of religious grumbling, or, we mean, grumbling done by religious people. This condition of affairs, after awhile, changed, and a corresponding dry spell followed, and the wet grumblers became dry grumblers. The corn was suffering for rain, and the ground was getting so dry that plowing could not be done, and the roads so dusty that they could scarcely be traveled.

But after all this grumbling, our good Father, just at the right time,—and he always does things at the right time—sent us a grand and glorious rain, the fields are softened, and are in the best possible condition for receiving the seed for a crop for the coming year. And, of course, everybody is happy, if not thankful, to our bountiful Giver. How much better it would be for all of us to have a little more faith, and trust God with the things that we can not do or change! If we do our part fully, we are sure that God will not be slack in fulfilling all the promises that he has made, and they are many and precious.

BIBLE SCHOOLS.

As we are introducing a Bible Department in our schools, it may be of interest to our people to know how early in the Christian age such schools were introduced.

From the fact that the disciples were chosen from the more humble class of people, fishermen, mechanics, etc., and that they were said to be "unlearned," some are inclined to take the position that they were men of no learning, and therefore refuse to give their sanction to anything that tends to the education of our people. To understand the the literary status of these men, we must be able to discriminate between an ordinary education and a learned one—between a liberal education and a classical one.

At the time that this language "unlearned" and "ignorant," was used in regard to Peter and the other disciples, there were present the most thoroughly-educated of the age and country. Annas, the high-priest, his relations, the captains, the Sadducees, etc., were there. In the estimation of such men, these who had only an ordinary education would be called unlearned and ignorant. When they perceived from their humble appearance that they were Galileans, they at once came to this conclusion. But when they heard them speak they marvelled, and they took knowledge of them that they had been with Jesus. Or, in other words they concluded that they had received an inspiration, which enabled them to speak so learnedly.

Whether they were right or wrong in this estimate of the literary qualifications of the disciples, we are not prepared to say. But that they were men of a good, practical education in their own language, is evident from the confessions of these self-styled learned men, and also from their writings. The Gospels were written by them in the Greek language, on parchments, and they were well written.

If they were enabled to do this through a special inspiration, it only shows that they had such need, and that they were thus supplied that they might be enabled to perform the work given to them.

As the days of special miracles are past, what they got by special inspiration we must get by labor and study. Hence Paul says to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." The Lord's inspiration only begins when our own pains fail us

Because of the need of this kind of study, Bible schools were established at a very early date, not by the then so-called learned, but by the immediate followers of the apostles. Between the death of John, the last of the apostles, A. D. 100, and the council of Nice, a period of 225 years, we have the writings of Polycarp, who was a disciple of John, and bishop of the Smyrna church, Clement, who, Origen says, was a fellow-laborer with the apostle Paul, and with him we have Athenagoras a converted Greek philosopher, who was born during the life-time of Polycarp, and was the first Principal of the Bible School of Alexandria, from A. D 161 to 180. There may have been Bible schools prior to this date, but this is the earliest one we have on record, that was conducted by the immediate followers of the apostles.

This same school was presided over by Clement, who died A. D. 220. Origen, a pupil of this school, afterwards became its president. He was succeeded by Dionysius, and died A. D. 265.

Thus we see that the carrying on of Bible schools is no new thing, but quite ancient—almost as ancient as the establishing of the church itself. And as it was needful for Timothy to study, and for the early Christians to have schools for this purpose, it is reasonable to conclude that we still have such needs, and that it is our duty to use all the possibilities that are within our reach to make ourselves efficient workers for Christ, and the promotion of his kingdom, of which, we hope, we are subjects and workers.

ESSAYS

"Study to shew thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THE PUBLICAN'S PRAYER.

This day my guilt, great God, I own;
In fear I come before thy throne,
With faltering voice and bended knee:—
O, Lord, be merciful to me!

Behold my sins, how dark they mount!
The multitude no man could count.
Yet when the host thine eyes doth see,
O, Lord, be merciful to me!

I ask not gold or silver bright,
But make me rich in truth and right.
Command my guilty fears to flee.
O, Lord, be merciful to me!

In shame I kneel before thy face;
Through tears implore thy pardoning grace;
Rich, bounteous love I plead of thee;
O, Lord, be merciful to me!

I am, of all men, sin-possessed,
The vilest and the wickedest;
Yet at thy touch I cleansed would be.
O, Lord, be merciful to me!

The chains of hell have bound me fast,
But lo! I come to thee at last.
Now set my struggling spirit free.
O, Lord, be merciful to me!

COMFORT.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To an Aged Sister in Maryland:—

"I * * * * * am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ." Rev. 1: 9. This is saying much, and we must enter into deep and faithful searchings of heart to see whether such wonderful words express the naked truth. Let us see. To be a brother and companion in the furnace of affliction means much more than similarity of outward circumstances. It means much more than beautiful words and apt quotations of Scripture, which, after all, are only sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal in the absence of that love which covets the cross to express its sincerity and fervor.

How often do we hear verbal comfort where those who utter it would not touch our burdens with one of their fingers! Eliphaz and Bildad and Zophas are not dead. They are full of talk as ever, but they are as "miserable comforters" now as in the days of Job. When God comforts, it means the giving of His life. All true comfort means just this. Many are ready with counsel and hollow words of cheer, who shrink from sacrifice that touches the purse or involves inconvenience, discomfort and loss. When a sister who is childless, opens her heart wide enough to the orphan to take in, and rear in Christian nurture, sixteen poor children, six of them African, it does look as if Christ were walking the earth again in human form.

Such comfort counts with God, and will in no wise lose its reward. Such comforters are rare, and a pity it is. Of such comfort God is the Author and Finisher. In the old Derry cemetery, a few miles from here, is an old, rough tomb-stone, recording that the childless saint who sleeps beneath reared nineteen children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. "I will have mercy and not sacrifice." Francke, of Halle, Müller, of Bristol, and Cullis, of Boston, are the standing monuments of faith and mercy, showing to a degenerate church God's method of comforting. Freely ye have received, freely give. God has given us Christ and the Holy Ghost and all His angels; why should not we give ourselves as freely for each other? "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. 8: 9.

You have comforted many—poured out your very blood gladly that others might live, and now, in your old age, feel the need of comfort so deep and so Divine that no good you have ever done to man for Jesus' sake will suffice. This is a true mark of a regenerate soul. Not our "alms deeds," but Jesus, is the one ground and source of comfort to a truly awakened soul. I saw an aged mother in Israel on her death-bed. Her life was truly "hid with Christ in God." For many years her heart was poured out in ceaseless sacrifice for the good of others. When near her end, she opened her eyes wide on those around her, and said, "What have I ever done for Jesus?" His claims seemed so great that her response seemed nothing. "Having done all, we are yet unprofitable servants." We are rewarded according to our works, but saved only by grace through faith.

There is only one Savior, although there are many sub-agents; so there is only one Comforter, however many secondary instruments he may employ. Rest on nothing for salvation but Jesus, and hope in no one for comfort but the Holy Ghost. He knows the time, the manner and the measure. In all these things we may fail. He never. God is not scant in resources: He is All-proprietor. Neither is He stingy: He gave Himself for us. Into the Divine-human Person of Emmanuel He put all the fulness of His Godhead. "Ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." 1 Cor. 3: 23.

When the Son returned to the Mediatorial Throne at the right hand of the Father, the Holy Ghost came as the Dispenser of all the riches of God's grace in Christ. "He shall not speak of Himself." He shall testify of Me. "He shall take of Mine and show it unto you." Are we ready for it? He is ready to "fill us with all the fulness of God." Are we prepared to receive it? What is the state of receptivity? Utter self-annihilation. "Not as I will, but as thou wilt," is the universal condition of being filled with the Spirit To be emptied of self and world is painful. It means no less than death. But there is in it the prophecy of joy. And when the joy comes, it is Christ's joy, and it is full, and no man taketh it from us. "Not as the world giveth, give I unto you." John 14: 27. Poor palaver is the world's best comfort. Even the saints can comfort only as they themselves are comforted of God. 2 Cor 1: 4

Abiding comfort is the work of the Holy Trinity. But then it is comfort. It becomes the very essence of consciousness. "The Word was made flesh." Very God became very Man. The perfections of Jehovah were lived out in human will and love and pity and patience. The Father of this wonderful Jesus is Your Father. The same Holy Ghost by which he was conceived and developed and perfected and comforted from the womb to the Cross, is your Paraclete. He led Jesus into the Wilderness to be tempted of the Devil, but sustained Him gloriously. He will do the same for you. "Looking unto Jesus" will "make you more than conqueror." "The gates of Hell shall not prevail against you." You have a strong and malignant enemy, but he is "not able to pluck you out of your Father's hand." Abiding in Jesus you are as safe as Almighty Power and Infinite Wisdom and Everlasting Love can make you.

"The Eternal God is your refuge, and underneath are the everlasting Arms." "Nothing shall by any means hurt you." "Not an hair of your head shall perish." "It is finished." God can do no more, and need not, for all the requirements of our undone condition are met. If we perish, it is because of the mother-sin of unbelief. John 16: 9. Let the solemn "take heed" of Heb. 3: 12 sink into our inmost souls. God is as gracious and as stringent now as then. The Devil is a murderer and a liar, and if he can get us to think we are too low and mean and vile and worthless to be saved, he has gained the day. Ask the Holy Ghost to write 1 Thess. 5: 9 on "the fleshly tables of your heart." When Satan tempts you with doubts, tell him "it is written, IT IS WRITTEN, IT IS WRITTEN!"

The Word of God is the sword of the Spirit, and the Arch-fiend dreads its keen, Heaven-furbished edge. We have to contend with a mighty foe; but "God is our salvation; the Lord Jehovah is our strength." "We will trust," and not be afraid." Isaiah 12: 2, 3; John 14: 27. He who died for our sins, was raised again for our justification, and ever liveth to make intercession for us. No wonder we have the bold challenge of Rom. 8: 33–39! Let the believer point to that interrogation as God's answer to all the accusations of Satan. "My grace is sufficient for thee." "COMFORT YE, COMFORT YE." Is. 40: 1.

NEW TESTAMENT GREEK.

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

Number Eight.

WE are now ready to resume the study of the subject of

BLESSINGS.

Last week we considered the active verb eulogeo, which we found to be used in four different senses in the New Testament.

The same verb appears in the passive form twelve times, twice compounded with the preposition en, but with no variation of meaning other than that already observed.

But built upon this same root we find the adjective eulogetos, appearing, however, but eight times, and always translated "blessed." It is a matter worthy of note that this adjective is in every instance applied to God, and means praised, or worthy to be praised. See Mark 14: 61; Eph. 1: 3.

But the adjective of most common occurrence in the New Testament, translated blessed, is makarios. This appears forty-eight times, and means happy or fortunate. It is this word that stands first in each of the Beatitudes, where it is used rather as a congratulation The Master congratulates, or counts happy or fortunate the meek, the merciful, the peace-makers, the pure in heart, etc.

In forty-two of the forty-eight passages where the adjective makarios appears, it is translated in the Authorized Version, blessed; in the remaining six passages it is translated happy. But in the Revised Version the word happy occurs in but three of these six passages, the word blessed being used in the other three instead. In the Revised Version John 13: 17 reads, "If ye know these things blessed are ye if ye do them." The same change is made in 1 Pet. 3: 14 and 4: 14.

Now this adjective makarios, meaning happy or fortunate, is almost always applied to man. In Acts 20: 35 it is applied to the infinitive "to give." "It is more fortunate to give than to receive." In 1 Tim. 1: 11 it is applied to God. "The Gospel of the glory of the happy or fortunate God." See also 1 Tim. 6: 15. "The happy and only Potentate." In Titus 2: 13 it is applied to "hope." "Looking for the happy hope," etc.

But besides the verb meaning "to bless," and the adjectives meaning "blessed," we have a noun in the Greek that is usually translated "blessing." This noun is eulogia, and has the same stem, as will be observed, as the verb eulogeo and the adjective eulogetos. The primary meaning of the noun eulogia is "good-speaking." It is the noun from which comes our English word eulogy. It occurs fifteen times in the New Testament, and is eleven times translated "blessing." In Romans 16: 18 it is translated "fair speeches." In Rev. 5: 12, 13 it is translated "blessing," and is used in the sense of praise or laudation. In 1 Peter 3: 9 it is translated "blessing," in the clause "that ye should inherit a blessing." Here, as will be seen, it is used in the sense of an actual benefit. But now see 2 Cor. 9: 5, where the same word is translated "bounty," but still used in much the same sense,—that of an actual benefit. In this latter passage the Revised Version has "blessing" in the margin. Other variations of meaning corresponding to those of the verb eulogeo, which we have already noticed, we will not now call attention to. Now let us briefly recapitulate.

1. For the three English words, "blessing," "bless" and "blessed," we have found five Greek words.

(b) Two verbs, eulogeo and its passive compound, eneulogeomai.

(c) Two adjectives, eulogetos and markarios.

2. All these words are from the same stem eulog except the one adjective makarios.

3. The adjective eulogetos is only applied to God, and has the one meaning of praised or worthy of praise.

4. The adjective makarios is almost always applied to man, and has the uniform meaning of happy or fortunate.

5. The noun eulogia and the verb eulogeo have a variety of meanings, depending upon their application.

6. But the most important thing we have learned is that there are four different kinds of blessings spoken of in the New Testament.

(a) When sacred writers say that man blesses God they mean that he praises him.

(b) When they say that God blesses man they mean that he confers upon him some real benefit.

(c) When they say that man blesses man, they mean that he invokes the favor of God upon him. (They may mean more.)

(d) When they say that God or man blesses a thing they mean that he sanctifies it, or he prays that it may be sanctified to a particular use.

7. Mark this: The best kind of blessing that man can bestow upon man is that which will include all that is included in the first, second and third classes of blessings above explained. Praise, or speak well of him; speak and act kindly to him, that is, confer some real favor; and then, in faith and fervor, invoke the favor and smiles of God upon him.

ELDERS—THEIR APPOINTMENT.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

THE appointment of church officers, and the successive steps of church work, are not given in detail in the Acts of the Apostles. Of the one hundred and twenty in that upper room, it does not appear that there were any officials besides the apostles, though the seventy whom the Savior appointed and sent out two by two, must have had an existence, and probably formed a part of the company with the apostles and women whom the Apostle Peter addressed, and which selected Matthias by lot to the bishopric. We hold that the church had an existence before Pentecost, that it was fully organized and established by our Lord while on earth. Then in it, thus established by the Lord, must have been every grade of official from apostle to deacon, and these were increased by the apostles as occasion required.

The selection of Matthias to the apostleship was the first work of the kind on record. There were but two that had the qualifications, and they wanted but one. After prayer "they gave forth their lots; and the lot fell upon Matthias; and he was numbered with the eleven apostles." Now there are a number of things not named in this Sacred Narrative, such as, Who conducted the election? How was he numbered with the apostles? Was he installed by the laying on of hands? And if we knew this much more, it is doubtful if we would be more benefited by it, for there would be other details we would wish to know. The Gospel lays down general principles which we are to apply in church work; and a consistent and proper application of those principles we claim for the order as we now have it.

Luke has given us emphatically the ACTS OF THE APOSTLES, and says but little about other officials of the church. To the superficial reader, it would seem that, notwithstanding the multitude of disciples, the three thousand of Pentecost, the five thousand of Acts 4: 4, and the multitudes both of men and women of Acts 5: 14,—the twelve apostles did everything for them, from preaching down to spreading the tables and distributing the loaves. That the apostles had the oversight of the disciples, is reasonable, but that they did the manual labor and "served tables" is unreasonable. When we come to Acts 6, Luke says there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministration. The declaration of the apostles to the multitude of the disciples, "It is not reason that we should leave the word of God and serve tables," is proof that the apostles were not the table-servants, and that they were not the persons who had neglected the Grecian widows.

"Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." Here is the first instance on record where the apostles obtained relief in the oversight of the disciples by appointing others, and they state as a reason that they might give themselves "continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the Word." The seven chosen must have been teachers,—leading men among the disciples, or their gifts would not have been known. They were appointed over the table service, hence over the table-servants. The table servants to this day are the deacons of the church, and those who are appointed over the deacons are the elders of the church. Then the seven of Acts 6: 5, whom the Apostles appointed over the table servants, bore the same relation to those table servants that our elders bear to our deacons. Therefore the appointment of our elders by the laying on of hands, and thus giving them the oversight of the church by placing them over the younger officers of the church, is in perfect harmony with the primitive church. The laying on of hands was not for imparting greater wisdom, or more of the Holy Ghost, for the seven were to be already "full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom," as a qualification for the selection. When any one is full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, you can not give him any more. Some think a great blessing attends the laying on of hands. No blessing can attend a service that is not in harmony with God's law. What greater blessing can any one obtain than the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands and prayer in baptism? What, then, is the purpose of the laying on of hands of the presbytery in appointment to office of overseer? Moses was commanded by the Lord "to lay his hand on Joshua," and Joshua became Moses' successor as leader and commander of the people. (See Num. 27: 18–23). The apostles laid their hands on the seven of Acts 6: 5 for the purpose as they declare in verse 3, which was to give them authority over this business, to direct, oversee, superintend what then and yet may be required.

Paul says, "Whereunto I am ordained a preacher, and an apostle, a teacher of the Gentiles" (1 Tim. 2: 7), and the place we find his ordination is in Acts 13: 3, where they "fasted, and prayed, and laid their hands on them, and sent them away." Here Paul receives his full commission to preach the Gospel to the Gentiles, and to take the oversight of the churches established through his instrumentality. The act of laying on of hands in ordination, is associated with the idea of giving the position of overseer, ruler, and superintendent. This fact is indicated in every instance where it occurs in the Bible.

It is proper that one who has a full commission to preach the Gospel and establish churches, should be an elder, or overseer. When Barnabas first came to Antioch he was an exhorter (Acts 11: 24), and was sent by the church at Jerusalem, and was subject to the church that sent him. His position in the church corresponds to what we call the second degree of the ministry. When Barnabas brought Saul from Tarsus to Antioch, they "taught much people." Paul, then, was a "teacher." Though called to be an apostle by the Lord, it was through human agency. When ordained by the laying on of hands, Paul became the apostle to the Gentiles, and Barnabas was his equal and co-laborer in the Gospel and in the oversight of the churches, and both alike subject to the apostles, elders, and church in general conference at Jerusalem.

THE TRIUMPH OF CHRIST'S KINGDOM.

BY H. W. STRICKLER.

Number Three.

2. IN that great day of the Lord the blessings bestowed on rebellious men, will flow freely from the heavenly reservoir through the golden pipes into the valley of humility. The people shall know the Lord from the oldest to the youngest. The earth shall be full of this knowledge. Mankind shall be made partakers of the faith that overcometh the world,—faith unfeigned that works by love and purifies the heart. The light of the Gospel will be as brilliant as the light of the day when the sun shines in his full meridian splendor. No more misty clouds of darkness, but one continual day shall shine above the brightness of the sun. Living waters shall flow in winter and summer. The Lord shall then be king over all the earth. In that day there shall be one Lord!

The mountain of the Lord shall be established upon the top of the mountain, and all the people shall flow to it. The religion of Christ will be higher in the estimation of the people than anything else. It will not be a secondary matter, but their chief concern. The fountains of grace and mercy will flow from the eternal ocean of God's love to man.

Another blessing attending this glorious reign is a universal and everlasting peace. There will be no more war, no more shedding of blood, no more contention! All the swords and spears will be taken from the arsenals and "beaten into plowshares and pruninghooks," for nation "shall never any more lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." O, glorious period! O, happy time! Heaven on earth, and earth beneath like heaven above! Behold the voracious wolf dwelling with the meek and harmless lamb; the ferocious leopard lying with the innocent kid! See the little child leading the calf and the lion together, like a yoke of oxen. "They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth is full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

In that day when the stone shall become a great mountain, the dust of the image driven away with the wind, and knowledge most wonderfully increased, holiness will be seen every-where. "In those days Judah shall be saved, and Israel dwell in safety." O what an unspeakable blessing is peace!

3. Messiah's kingdom shall never be destroyed. It shall not be given to another people, but it shall endure forever. Where is the magnificent kingdom of Babylon? Where is the brilliant and illustrious kingdom of Greece? Where are the "Alexanders" and "Napoleons," with all their boasted grandeur, dignity, and splendor; with all their imperial crowns, and costly diamonds, and with all their tyrannical, rigorous and extended dominions? They are all mouldering in the dust. Their kingdoms are demolished, but Zion's King is yet alive, and, behold, he liveth for evermore. His kingdom is an eternal kingdom, and he shall reign forever and ever. As he is the eternal God, —the God of gods, the Lord of lords, and the King of kings, the Alpha and Omega, the Father of eternity, so his kingdom is an eternal kingdom.

The signs of the times, together with Scriptural language, lead us to think that the period is not far distant when the kingdom of God shall come with power, when the stone cut out of the mountain shall fill the whole world. It is not for us to know the precise time of his coming, but by the pointing of the hands we all know that it is near daylight.

HEAVENLY RECOGNITION.

BY MARY M. COX.

THE belief is expressed by some that we will not recognize our friends in heaven, and that we also cease to remember our earthly life. If such is the case we will not know who redeemed us, or that we have been redeemed,—we will cease to love and reverence Jesus as our Savior, and no longer remember Gethsemane. We will no longer think of the crown of thorns, the many persecutions, and the terrible death on the cross which he endured for our sakes.

Our Savior has said that we will be rewarded in heaven if we are reviled and persecuted, while here, for his sake, but if we do not remember those persecutions, we will not know what we are being rewarded for.

Let us notice the transfiguration of our Savior, Matt. 17: 3. "And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him." Peter knew them as Moses and Elias, for he said, "Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias." Moses and Elias had not lost their identity, and I think we will not lose ours, for God is not a respecter of persons.

We will next notice what our Savior said of the rich man and Lazarus. Luke 16: 22, 23. "And it came to pass, that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom." Abraham had died, but he was still known as Abraham. "The rich man also died, and was buried; and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom." The rich man knew both Abraham and Lazarus. Abraham knew him, for he said, in answer to his request that Lazarus might be sent to dip the tip of his finger in water, to cool his tongue, "Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented." We see that Abraham knew both the rich man and Lazarus.

We will next notice the resurrection of our Savior. He arose with the same body which he had when he died. John 20: 27. "Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side; and be not faithless, but believing.' We do not read of his body being changed before he ascended to heaven. He was with his disciples, and had been talking with them, and while they beheld, he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight.

Our Savior, in describing the last judgment says that those who are saved shall be told the reason. Matt. 24: 34-36. In verse 40 he tells them, in answer to their questions, as to when they had done those things for him, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Those who are saved will, no doubt, remember what they have done for their fellow-beings, and will, therefore, know what they are being rewarded for.

In Rev. 6: 9 we read "And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held: And they cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?" The above surely proves that we will remember our earthly life, and, if so,

> "We will surely know each other
> When we reach that better land.
> We will once more see our mother,
> Once more clasp our father's hand.
> And the ever-faithful brothers,
> And the sisters we so love—
> We will know them when we meet them
> In that better land above."

One of our writers says, "We will miss some who are not there, if we are to know each other." We must remember that heaven is a large place, and millions of people will be there, so, of course, we will not see all of its inhabitants at once. I have thought, when musing on the subject, if we are permitted to enter heaven, we will be constantly enjoying new pleasures, and among them will be the meeting with the loved ones of earth. Our hearts will be filled with the love of God, and we will then know that he doeth all things well. We will be content to await his own appointed time for our meeting. I can not think that God, who is love himself, will allow those who have been near and dear to each other here, to dwell together without the power to recognize each other.

If I thought, when standing by the graves of loved ones who have gone before, that we would never be permitted to meet and recognize each other again, I would indeed mourn as one without hope. I thank my Heavenly Father that such is not my belief. Our dear ones can not return to us, but we, by the grace of God, can go to them.

As to recognizing our foes, we will have no foes to recognize. Those for whom our Savior gave his own life, and who are found worthy to be saved, will then no longer be our foes. We will then love as the Savior loves, for we are told that we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. As to our earthly sorrow,

> "His rest will be the dearer,
> As we think of weary ways;
> And his light will be the clearer,
> As we muse on cloudy days."

THOUGHTS OF A HAPPY HOME.

BY FLORIDA J. E. ETTER.

WHAT should encourage a Christian more, than to think that he is an heir of heaven, where all is love and happiness, where we can mingle our voices in singing the loud Hosannahs with the blessed angels forever! Who would not like to gain an entrance therein?

We love our homes here, but what a vast contrast there is with the one up yonder! There all is verdant! There joy and love superabounds! There we shall be supremely blest. There abounds all that is lovely to behold, — the glory of the Lord!

I think if those, who are traveling on the broad road to destruction, would stop for a moment and consider the great contrast between the two homes, they would turn their course Zionward in order to reach that lovely home. There we shall see splendor and beauty! All will be magnificent, not only to last a while, but all through eternity, forever and ever!

When we look at the condition of the lost, all is woe, eternal woe! What a vast difference! Who does not desire a home in the "Golden City?"

PERSEVERANCE.

BY I. N. CROSSWAIT.

I HAVE never known much good accomplished without vigilant and persevering effort. Some persons are very diligent and persevering in their work for the meat that perisheth, and yet neglect to labor for that which endureth unto eternal life. O, what inconsistency! And, above all, when they profess to make the future their chief concern!

Too many are blinded by love of the world. Some are earnest workers in time of a series of meetings, and soon after become lukewarm and neglect their duties to God. They are far from doing so in temporal affairs. Where, then, is their chief concern? Evidently it is for the things of the world, and yet we find in the Word, "He that loveth the world, the love of the Father is not in him."

It seems the love of the world is so blinding that poor humanity can not see their true condition. We are prone to view ourselves with less scrutiny than others, while it is required of us to "judge ourselves that we be not judged." This is a requirement we should heed, and strive to judge with impartial judgment, leaving self out of the way.

Sometimes persons get an idea that the church where they are is so out of order that they can not live right in it. Well, for my part, I am resolved never to give place to Satan. If I think he is in the church, then I will persevere in a zealous effort to get him put out,—he has no power to stand against one, armed with the spirit of Christ. The Sword of the Spirit is mighty; if we try to meet him in our own strength, we may look for certain defeat, but, going in the strength of Israel's God, we prevail.

Then I would most earnestly entreat every child of God, if he thinks the church is out of order, to be more careful to be at meeting, and determine to work with more vigor for the right. Then we can look for divine aid. I, though weak, am going to strive to persevere in a most ardent effort to awaken the children of God to a true sense of our great responsibility. It is truly a time of sleepiness, which to me is evident that the great day is near, "even at the door."

It is my great desire to see the children of God prepared to receive the Master. I have besought the Lord for years past, that he would give us all the Holy Spirit as a constant, indwelling guest, that we might ever walk in the light even as he is in the light, so that we might be a true light to the world.

We should be prepared to receive our Elder Brother at any time. If the time should be long, we can assure you that it is a blissful waiting.

We can, with assurance, look to God, like one of old and say to him, "Forsake us not in age until we have shown thy strength unto this generation, and thy power to all that is to come." Psalm 11: 18.

I am going to persevere earnestly, in an effort to have the children of God ask him in prayer for just what they want, and can, in confidence, expect to receive.

PURE RELIGION.

BY A. FLORY.

THE word religion has, to a very large extent, lost its meaning. Numbers of persons believe that it is a thing to be obtained,—that, if they will continue to ask the Lord for it, he will give it to them in a mysterious way. This idea is absurd in the extreme.

Religion is a system of worship; it is a work for man to do. Many persons that get what they call "religion" find very little work to do. They see no use in being so precise in obeying Christ's commandments. They see no harm in brethren going to law with each other. They see no harm in taking up arms in times of war, to slay their fellow-men. They see no harm in conforming to the world's vain customs and fashions. They see no harm in going to shows and other places of worldly amusements. They see no harm in rejecting the ordinance of feet-washing, the feast of charity and the holy kiss. In short, they see no wrong in departing from many of Christ's commands.

Why is this? It is simply because their system of worship is governed and controled by their feeling, or imaginary religion. It should be otherwise. Their feeling should be controled by their religion. The apostle James says, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." James 1: 27. This covers it all. The man that is free from all manner of disobedience and unbelief is unspotted from the world. This kind of religion is very scarce in this age, for "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life and few there be that find it." James says, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God."

Dear reader, ask God for wisdom, but never ask him to give you religion. This is not a thing to give but it is a work for man to do. When the minister invites the sinner to come to the mourner's bench and "get religion," he is asking him to do that which he can not do. "Not every one that sayeth unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

The man that is doing God's will is doing religion; he is keeping himself unspotted from the world. He finds no fault with God's Word. He is willing to obey God in all things. He believes the whole Gospel. He repents and is baptized for the remission of sins. He loves the Lord with all his heart. He loves the Brethren. He salutes them with a holy kiss. If they trespass against him, he tells them of their fault. He lives peaceably with all men, and loves even his enemies. He never takes up arms in times of war, nor goes to law with his brethren. He abstains from every appearance of evil, and stays away from shows and all other places of worldly amusement. He is not conformed to the world in its fashions and folly. He does all that he is commanded to do. He feels good because he does right. His religion is experimental. He is unspotted from the world.

To feel just and holy while refusing to obey any of Christ's commands, means deception. All manner of disobedience and unbelief is of the world. The lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eye and the pride of life is not of the Father, but of the world.

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

BY HENRY ROYER.

"Ye are the light of the world A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid."—Matt. 5: 14.

HERE the Christian is compared to a city on a hill, and just as little as a city on a hill can be hid, can the true, lively, zealous Christian be hid from the world's view. He carries something with him that can be seen and felt. The world will always notice the one that does not live very strict to his or her profession. They can tell you almost every misstep such a one makes. How can this be done unless they know what belongs to a true Christian? When this is known by those who are not interested in the cause, how much more important that we, who have started out in the great work, should know what our profession requires of us, that we might live it out in every particular, avoiding every appearance of evil.

The Savior said, "Watch and pray." I have often said, "If we fail in this, need we wonder if others watch us?" The world has a right to watch us, if we do not watch ourselves.

Again, the Savior said, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Now, if we are devoid of good works, what will our influence be on others? A great responsibility rests upon us, if we allow our influence to go out in a wrong direction. It is not enough to have been baptized, go to meeting, etc. We must not go with the world just as far as we can,—just so the church cannot hold us to account for it. What kind of a light do we show before the world? "If the light in us be darkness, how great is that darkness!"

On the other hand, if we engage in the service of the Lord, with a heart, full of love for our Master, and a zeal that is manifest to all, we carry our religion with us wherever we go. Let our lights shine brightly, so that others, seeing there is a beauty in "holiness," may be attracted to the "Great Light" above, and share the glories that are reserved for all who make themselves worthy.

Oh, that we might all be found faithful workers in the Master's kingdom, that our influence might be felt wherever we are, reviving the drooping, discouraged Christian on his journey heavenward, and winning many to Christ, now exposed to the wrath of an angry God, for we read, "God is angry with the wicked every day."

AWAKE, THOU THAT SLEEPEST!

BY I. S. FLORY.

STOP a moment, friend, and think seriously of the way you are traveling! The end of your life is coming. Are you prepared for the change, death will bring about? O, dear friend, will nothing but the trumpet thunder of the day of judgment awake you to the necessity of salvation! Come now, shake off the lethargy of sleep and flee for your life! Jesus only can save. Believe in him! Trust in his merits! His blood alone can save. There is no other way whereby you can escape. Take the Savior at his Word! Lay aside every other thought or imagination of your heart, and make a full surrender. Get thoroughly awake! Delay not, but come at once and enter on the narrow way that Christ has marked out.

An abiding faith in Christ will arouse you to action. Saving faith is an active faith that works by love. Be assured that an abiding faith in the merits of Christ's blood will bring to you peace, rest, strength and joy, and such an earnestness of spirit that you will gladly accept of all the conditions of salvation without a murmur. You will find that the spirit of obedience will so completely take hold of you that you will be impelled, by a sense of love and duty, to go on and do the all things of the Gospel. This is the simplicity of the plan of salvation in all its beauty, power and fullness. Believe in Christ as your Savior, repent and be baptized for the remission of sins, and you shall come into possession of the Holy Spirit. Can you not see that this is the way to attain unto eternal life? Thus becoming a new creature in Christ, your whole life is a change. "Christ within the hope of glory," all along the way that Jesus leads. Continuing to lay hold of the promise of God, you ascribe all praise to the Lamb of God.

To hope for any cleansing efficacy in works,—that is because of obedience to the outward ordinances of God, will detract in the mind from the sufficiency of Christ's merits, and rob you of much of the blessed experience that comes from knowing that there is an all-sufficiency in the blood of Christ to save. Remember, that while it is true that "nothing but the blood of Jesus can wash away our sins," the new creature will ascribe all the glory to God, out of a pure heart of love, so far as to be obedient to all the commandments of God, as an evidence of the working of the Spirit of God within. The doing of good works does not save, but is an expression of the life of Christ within. Seeing, then, the plan of salvation is so simple and plain, why delay? "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

"Awake thou that sleepest and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."

TRUST IN THE LORD AND DO GOOD.

BY MARIA PUTERBAUGH.

As the season for our Communion meetings is now at hand, we may well ask the question, "Are we still in the faith?" Let us stop and think for a moment! Have we ever been in the living faith that was delivered to the saints? Have we been born again, and have we the mind of Christ? Do we feel thankful for the blessings, and for a home in the church? Do we attend church to be fed and strengthened so as to grow stronger day by day, or do we attend church for other reasons? If the latter is the case, we will not grow nor receive any spiritual strength. We must "set our affections on things above, not on things of the earth."

If we only were willing to obey Christ and be led by the Holy Spirit, we would ever have the peace of God abiding with us! We would have pure thoughts and the love that no pen can describe. It will be pure because it comes from the Fountain! O, dear brethren and sisters, take courage and press on with vigor toward the mark of the high calling which is in Christ Jesus.

If we have pure thoughts in abundance, there will be no room for evil ones. Let us arouse to our true aim, for to-morrow we may be in eternity! Let us try, by the help of God, to do more for his cause!

Clarence, Ia.

"SYMPATHY is one of the great secrets of our lives. It can overcome evil quicker than the harshest treatment. It strengthens good, bringing forth more help to bear the hardest trials that come to us all from time to time."

LIVES OF THE CÆSARS.

BY W. H. ROOSE.

Number Sixteen.—Caligula.

It is a fact worthy of notice that men who are the meanest in crouching before the great, are generally the proudest and most arrogant to their own inferiors when raised to authority. Caligula was so cowardly in his youth that he did not utter one word of compassion or sorrow when Tiberius murdered his mother, Agrippina, and his brother, Drusus. On account of the modest manner in which he concealed his own selfishness, a great orator said of him, "There never was a better slave or a more detestable master."

The Romans hoped they had made a happy exchange from the gloomy, cruel tyrant, to the young son of their favorite hero, Germanicus. They called him "The Propitious Star." Their hope soon gave way when they saw a sudden outburst of Caligula's folly. His actions would have been utterly ridiculous had he not been so powerful.

Foolishness never puts on such serious airs as when it leads to cruelty and bloodshed. Such was the folly of Caligula. His reign began with orders that all men should worship him. He built a temple in which was placed a statue of himself, made of gold and dressed with costly robes every day, corresponding to those he wore in the palace. To this god or statue he had sacrifices made in his name. He called it Mars, Jupiter, Venus, or whatever else his fancy dictated, and many of the Romans were mean enough to act as his priests, and even begged the honor of worshiping at his altar, sacrificing all the most exquisite delicacies they could obtain for these occasions. He often held semi-audible consultations with his statue, and endeavored to imitate thunder. But there was not enough worshiping done to suit him, so he demanded that his wife and horse should also be worshiped.

He built a marble stable for his favorite horse, and the mangers were richly carved and inlaid with ivory. In order that the animal might not be disturbed during his sleep, Caligula placed sentinels to watch over it. He sometimes had the horse dine with him at his own table. He fed him oats out of a gold plate and gave him wine out of a gold goblet. I think the animal would have been much happier upon the green fields with a good supply of grass and water.

I do not know that I have ever read of any one, prior to his time or since, that idolized a favorite animal as did Caligula, yet many people bestow care and time upon pets of the brute creation that could be more profitably spent upon unfortunate relations and homeless children. Dives was punished for leaving Lazarus' wants to be supplied by dogs. What will be said to those who waste both time and food upon dogs, while many an unfortunate one is left to go unclothed and unfed?

Caligula was a depraved debauchee. His enjoyments were no better than those of the lowest rabble around him. He remained with them whole days and nights at theatres and circuses, watching the gladiators struggle for supremacy. Wild animals were baited with human beings, and there were other idle and foolish things.

How wearied the people must have been of such horrid spectacles! Yet we do not doubt but that they were really interested for a considerable length of time. I have known people, and probably you have, who could sit wide awake all night at a theatrical performance and think it but a short time, while they would stay awake at church scarcely long enough to hear the text.

Caligula would slay many Romans on these occasions and feed their bodies to wild beasts. At other times he would have them led to the slaughter and would jestingly say, "I am clearing my accounts." In order to lessen the burden of supporting the old and infirm, he had them cast before half-famished lions. He had people put to death in a slow manner that "they might feel themselves dying," and he was generally a witness to the dreadful suffering, insulting the sufferers in both mind and body. Many of the senators lost their lives at his hands and, to deceive the people, he would send messages to the dead men's homes, pretending he did not know they were dead. The terror-stricken Romans could not find a refuge anywhere on earth in which to feel secure from the cruel hand of their emperors, except among barbarous nations and there their fate was as dreadful as at home.

They could not always endure such a dreadful reign. Their patience became at length exhausted. Caligula's wife accidentally found her name on the list of unfortunates. She could not resist the power of the first impulse, to avert the design of her cruel husband, by forming a conspiracy with Cherea to rid the Roman Empire of such a tyrant. The plot was almost known. An actress knew all about it, but would not tell. She suffered untold agonies,—had herself pulled to pieces joint by joint,—but would not divulge any names.

The people were assembled to enjoy what they called the Palatine games, in which all kinds of fruit was thrown in the air, and Caligula seemed to enjoy the sight produced by the people scrambling for the fruit. He appeared to be uncommonly good-humored and clever on this occasion When, at last, he rose to get some refreshments, Cherea, with several others, who were in the conspiracy, followed him, pretending to wait upon him. When he entered the bath-room, Cherea struck Caligula with his sabre, felling him to the floor, with the words "Tyrant! think upon this!"

Caligula made a determined resistance, yet he failed to save that which thousands had to yield up as a result of his unfeeling commands. A cruel tyrant had fallen and many hearts beat freer than they had "for many a day."

Caligula was only twenty-nine years old and had served as emperor four years. The depravity he showed at this age would have reached far beyond our imagination had he lived to have grown old in iniquity. Seneca, in speaking of him, says, "Nature seemed to have brought Caligula forth to show what was possible to be produced from the greatest vice, supported by the greatest power."

GO FORWARD!

A SERMON BY JOHN CALVIN BRIGHT.

"Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward."—Ex. 14: 15.

The occasion that called forth these familiar words comes intuitively, I presume, to an intelligent and Bible-read audience. Israel was on the way to the Promised Land. They had started for the land of their fathers, "which flowed with milk and honey." God had delivered them with a high hand and strong arm from the galling yoke of Egyptian bondage. He had brought great plagues upon the Egyptians, and when the last plague brought death into every family, flock, and herd, they were not only willing, but also anxious to get them to go on their contemplated journey, and lent a kind hand to get them under way. In a few hours three millions of people, with thousands of cattle, marched in one grand army under the leadership of Moses for the land of plenty, peace, and promise. The Red Sea was reached, and they halted.

In the meanwhile the Egyptians regretted their haste. They could not consent to lose so many industrious slaves, with all their valuable property, and they started their determined and well-equipped soldiers in pursuit. The position of the Israelites was to all human appearances a critical one. In front the broad waters of the Red Sea were spread out before them, without as much as a "small ship" to take any of them across, much less the millions of people, with their flocks and herds. On either side were elevations which they could not readily surmount and pass, while behind them came the flower of Pharaoh's army, on their vehicles of war, determined to drive them back to their strawless brick-kilns.

Confusion, excitement and despair pervaded the camp of Israel. But the Lord came to their rescue. "Go forward," was his command to the children of Israel, while Moses was directed to stretch his rod over the Sea. The waters were parted and Israel went through dry-shod and reached the shore of deliverance. Their enemies, essaying to do the same, were destroyed in the waters.

The Israelites went forward and triumphed. So can, so should we. We should "go forward" in the divine life. The apostle Paul encourages this thought. "Press forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." "Run with patience the race." Then we should all "go forward." We all acknowledge that we have room for improvement. Let us proceed without delay to make improvement.

1. We should "go forward" in crucifying the least as well as the last remains of the carnal mind. "For the carnal mind is not subject to the law of the Lord, neither indeed can be, for to be carnally minded is death." It is in this fallen and carnal nature that our lusts, appetites and passions have their origin, and we should "go forward" in subjugating it with them; for they not only annoy us and diminish our enjoyment, but they also darken our light as Christians, and thus retard the work of Christ. Paul enumerates the works of the flesh in the epistle to Gal. 5: 19–21, and we should remove all such principles from our hearts and lives.

But we should not only "go forward" in cleansing ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit," but we should also "perfect holiness in the fear of the Lord." We should not only give attention to the negative part of the Christian life, which consists in "abhorring that which is evil," but let the positive part which consists in "cleaving to that which is good," be attended to with equal interest, for both are necessary to perfect Christian character. The good husbandmen not only eradicate the weeds and thistles from their gardens and fields, but also sow and plant good seed therein.

Then let us "go forward" in attaining a knowledge of the Sacred Scriptures, "which are able to make us wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus." Paul, writing to the Corinthians, says, "Some have not the knowledge of God; I speak this to your shame." This they could have attained by searching the Scriptures. Again we hear Paul say, "Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." The apostle Peter, in writing to those of "like precious faith," commands them to add knowledge to their Christian attainments. The command of the Master is, "Search the Scriptures." A close acquaintance with them is a great and essential help in fighting "the battles of the Lord."

3. Let us "go forward" in cultivating "holy conversation," "for by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." Let us have our "speech with grace, seasoned with salt." "Let the words of our mouth be acceptable to God." Let us bridle our tongues and have our "conversation in heaven,"

4. Let us "go forward" in cultivating Christian meekness, courtesy and gentleness. These traits, if happily blended, will give us a power for good that can not well be resisted. "Actions speak louder than words."

5. Let us "go forward" in labors of love, performing all Christian duties with devotion and earnestness, and zeal, remembering that the Lord will not overlook a mite cast into his treasury, a cup of cold water, a word of comfort, or a look of sympathy given to his disciple in his name, "in the last great rewarding day." We should remember that Jesus spent his life doing good, and if we have his spirit, we will follow in his footsteps. The Scriptures teach us that we are to "always abound in the work of the Lord." Again, "Be diligent in every good work."

6. Let us "go forward" in humble boldness, and not be discouraged by the difficulties in the way. We should not forget that "the kingdom of heaven suffers violence, and the violent take it by force." "We must strive to enter in at the strait gate." We can not expect to go to heaven "on flowery beds of ease." We must fight! Jesus went forward and met and vanquished death, hell, the grave, and the devil, and is set down on the right hand of his Father's throne. He will safely guide all who will trust him. Multitudes have taken his cross, triumphed over all their foes, and reached the heavenly shore.

The revelator speaks of "a great multitude which no man could number, and which stood before the throne and before the Lamb, clothed in white robes, with palms of victory in their hands." They had come up out of great tribulation. At God's command they went forward and passed through all their trials safely.

What God commands us to do, may be done; where he commands us to go, we may go, and where he leads, we may follow, though earth and hell oppose. Let us, then, "go forward," upward, onward, and heavenward, and we will enter the haven of eternal rest.

"When we can not see our way,
Let us trust and still obey;
He who bids us forward go,
Can not fail the way to show."

SPIRITUAL BONDAGE.—John 8:36.

BY WM. M. LYON.

Number Five.

If we have been reasoning correctly and Scripturally (and I trust we have), by this time we are forced to the conclusion that there are many among us who are not really enjoying the full benefits of the Gospel, because they are not free; their lack of liberty simply means a lack of blessings, lack of spiritual life. In other words, we have too many

SLAVES IN THE CHURCH.

We have tried to point out some of the causes that lead to this sad result, and we have also briefly hinted at the remedy to be used, in order to bring about a full redemption. Now, are we willing to apply the only spiritual test?

Brethren, let us see to it that we use every means possible, on our part, to redeem ourselves from this spiritual bondage. We have the power if we are only willing to apply it. Will we do it? Why should we preach to sinners and tell them that Satan has them bound down with the fetters of sin, and that Jesus Christ stands with outstretched arms of love and mercy, ready to liberate them,—why should we wonder if they are slow to accept the proffered liberty, when we find so many in the church, who are crying out, by profession, "Liberty and heaven," and by example say, "Slavery and hell!"

To be free is to take up the cross of Christ; to be a slave, to try to carry the praise of the world. To take both at the same time is an impossibility. Take the desire to gratify "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life" (1 John 2: 16), out of the church, and you take the slavery out of the church and place it where it properly belongs—in the kingdom of this world.

The difference between a slave in the church and one in the world is this: The devil leads the one by the mouth, the other by the hand. The non-professor can well say, "If I must go to hell, I don't want to go there with a profession of religion in my mouth." If making a profession of religion would make us free, and keep us out of spiritual bondage, it would be an easy matter. Then those Pharisees would have been free and Christ need not say to them, "If the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." It is the Christ-life alone that secures and preserves our full Christian liberty, and entitles us to "mansions in the skies," and gives us "right to the tree of life" that we "may enter in through the gates into the city." Rev. 22: 14.

But we can not conclude upon this subject without giving a word of counsel and warning to those who still refuse to be made free. While we are made to lament on account of bondage in the church, our heart is made to feel doubly sad, because of the utter refusal of Christ by all who are standing outside the covenant of grace. Because some have broken their solemn contract with God, have proved unfaithful, and thus gotten into spiritual bondage again, none of these things will ever justify you. Their failures can never be your salvation. And yet, my unconverted friends, I feel sure that you want to enjoy this liberty, you want to be made free, you want to enter heaven, but you are not willing to let go of the world. Do you not often get tired of following the dictates of the world in its foolish customs and evil practices, and do you not then feel an inward longing for something more lasting, more comforting? Do you not feel that you are not free, and that you would love to serve another Master,—one that would give you the only true pleasure and solid enjoyment?

If so, then come and be made partakers of that "perfect love that casteth out all fear." 1 John 4: 18.

You honor our forefathers who bought our national freedom with their blood, more than a century ago, and secured for us the liberty of which we boast to-day. You hold their names in reverence, and you would feel like following their example were you placed in a similar situation at the present time, all because you want liberty. You appreciate it, love it, yet when Jesus Christ has come into the world to purchase your freedom, purchased it for you when you were not possibly able of yourselves to obtain it, purchased it with his own precious blood, you now refuse to accept it, refuse to enjoy it, refuse to honor him for it. What is worse than all, if you refuse to be free by refusing Christ, you choose to be a slave, and serve him who will not only rob you of happiness in time, leave you comfortless in the dying hour, but will bring shame and suffering upon you in eternity! Who then would be a slave! God help us all to be free!

HOW YOU MAY KNOW.

"How may I know," inquires one, "that I am a child of God? I long to settle the question, "Am I a Christian?"

There are several evidences by which we may know that we are Christians; some of them we will name, but not enlarge upon.

1. You may know that you have done what God requires, in order to be a Christian. You have repented, restored, confessed and believed.

2. You may know that you are doing now what one, professing to be a Christian, should do. You are avoiding all evil, attending upon all the means of grace, and doing all in your power to save and bless the world.

3. You may know that you love the things which the Bible says Christians love. You love your neighbor as yourself, you love the brethren, the people of God, and you love to keep God's commandments.

4. You may know that you hate what you once loved and practiced. You hate sinful associations, and take pleasure in avoiding them.

5. You may know that you have experienced a change. You feel peace, such as you never knew before; joy, exceeding all that earth has ever given; patience, under uncommon provocation; love for enemies, such as you never knew before.

"Jesus all the day long,
Is your joy and your song."

6. These are all indirect evidences, but there is one which must not be overlooked, as, without it, doubt will ever haunt you like a spectre of night. We mean, "The witness of the Spirit." Without this testimony we can not know that we are the children of God—"The Spirit himself witnesseth with our spirit that we are the children of God" There is communicated to your consciousness, by the Spirit of God, the fact that you are now a member of the Divine family. This witness is clear, and can not be counterfeited. It is not a voice to the natural ear, but a witness to the inner sense, and the soul hearing it, rejoices "with joy unspeakable and full of glory."—Sel.

THE BIBLE.

How many ages and generations have brooded and wept and agonized over this book? No really great song can ever attain full purport till long after the death of its singer—till it has accrued and incorporated the many passions, many joys and sorrows it has itself aroused. To what myriads it has been the shore and rock of safety—the refuge from driving tempest and wreck! Translated into all languages, how it has united this diverse world! Of civilized lands of to-day, whose of our restrospects has it not interwoven, and linked and permeated? Not only does it bring us what is clasped within its covers; nay, that is the least of what it brings. Of its thousands there is not a verse, not a word, but is thick studded with human emotions. No true bard will ever contravene the Bible. If the time ever comes when iconoclasm does its extremest in one direction against the books of the Bible in its present form, the collection must still survive in another, and dominate just as much as hitherto, or more than hitherto, through its divine and primal poetic structure.

"ARE you troubled and anxious about the future? Do clouds obscure the sun, and is there no light in your faith? What says your Maker? "Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver you." Do you not believe this precious promise? If so: why disquieted? You may have cares in abundance, but certainly not more than the apostle, who had the care of all the churches, and yet found daily comfort in communion with his Redeemer. Remember, when inclined to be cast down, or to look on the shadow, that "He will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry." Call earnestly upon God, and the shadow and the darkness will flee away, and you will be saved from all your troubles. The promises of the Bible never fail."

BRO. W. C. TELTER is at South Bend, Ind., at the present time, holding meetings.

BRO. LEVI MOHLER has been out in the mission field in Middle Missouri. During his labors three were added to the church by baptism.

BRO. I. J. ROSENBERGER writes that he is on a visit among the churches in Eastern Ohio. He expects to close with a feast in the Canton church Sept. 28.

AN old adage says, "It always takes two to quarrel." If you do not believe this, the next time you commence quarreling with any one, just walk away and notice how soon the quarrel will stop.

DEATH has visited the home of our friend, G. L. McDonaugh. He writes us, under date of the 15th inst., these sad words: "I was two pound of my baby 'Jead.' He died near P. M. to day, aged 11 months and 24 days." Many of our brethren and sisters will join us in extending sympathy to the bereaved family.

PERTLE SPRINGS, Mo., the grounds where our next Annual Meeting is to be held, is a pleasant place, and we are of the opinion that our Brethren who are permitted to attend the Meeting will be well pleased with the location. The Missouri Brethren say they will do everything in their power to make the meeting a pleasant one and we believe they will succeed.

THE most perplexing troubles that arise in the church come in almost every case, from a violation of the rules by which we ought to be governed. One of these rules is Matt. 18, and every violation of it brings trouble, while, if all would walk according to it, difficulties that often come into the church, would be unheard of. It is always safe to follow the rules laid down by Christ.

WE are glad to learn that Bro. Landon West is improving in health and we express the hope that he may again be fully restored to usefulness in the church.

TROUBLES and difficulties assail the best of people in this world, but the Christian should meet them in such a way as to show that he possesses his soul in patience. He who has not yet added patience to his faith, virtue, knowledge and temperance, lacks an essential qualification to meet the trials of life.

WHILE in the Mineral Creek church, we, in company with Bro. S. S. Mohler, visited Bro. Phillips' home. His son was dangerously ill with the consumption, and he, realizing his need of a Savior, gave his heart to the Lord and was baptized by the Brethren. After coming out of the water he seemed to be much stronger. He was blessed in this act of obedience.

IN this world every man's ability is limited, and when the limit of his ability has been reached, when he has done what he could, then and only then is he clear in the sight of God. The measure of our responsibility is our ability, and we will all do well to remember this truth and see to it that we do what we can. There is, too, danger of becoming discouraged when there comes to us, as it is sure to come, a knowledge of our own limitations. It may seem to us that we can do so little that it is hardly worth while to do even the little that we can do. We see some at work who are doing so much that we may come to think it is no use for us to try. This is all a mistaken notion. God expects you to do no more for him than he has given you the power to do, and if you are faithful in the use of the little power he has given you, your reward will be just as great as his, who, having more ability, does more work. Faithful endeavor is what the Lord wants.

THERE is a pressing demand for more laborers in the church. Without exception, our brethren who have shown themselves efficient in evangelistic work among the churches have more calls than they can fill. One brother, who has been quite successful in such work, informs us that he has calls enough to keep him constantly in the field for a year, and others are pressed the same way. We need more men to preach the Word. The harvest truly is great but the laborers are few. We may pray the Lord to send the laborers but we must do our part. Let the churches in which there are faithful young brethren who have the qualifications for the ministry, set them to the work. We have visited some churches where there were three or four ministers well advanced in years. In a few years, at most, they will be called to their long home; then, who will take up the work? In all such cases young brethren should be called to the ministry and trained under the care of those having age and experience in the work. Let us have more consecrated men in the ministry!

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

FOR some time we had been contemplating a trip to Warrensburg, Mo., to visit the churches in that vicinity. One of the objects of our trip was, to visit the place where our next Annual Meeting is to be held, and to give our readers some account of the location, its advantages, etc., etc. The brethren, in sending an invitation to us, to come to them, said, "We want sister Miller to come with you." We left home on Sept. 10th for Missouri.

At Chicago we found all the trains crowded with excursionists, going west, to see the country and to seek new homes. Extra coaches were added to the trains to accommodate the multitudes who had turned their faces westward. We are impressed with the thought that if men and women were as much concerned about seeking a home in heaven as they are about securing an earthly home, there would be a great many more earnest, devoted Christians in the world than there are. This question came to us in this connection, Is it right for Christians to spend from $50 to $100 on a pleasure trip and then have nothing to give to the Lord when the cause is suffering for want of money? If one-half the money, that is spent by professed Christians, uselessly, were given to the church, to be used for the spread of the Gospel, what a good work might be accomplished for God and humanity!

Love-feast in the Rockingham Church.

On the morning of the 11th we reached Norborne, Mo., where we stopped to enjoy a love-feast with the Brethren in the Rockingham church. The meeting-house is eleven miles from Norborne and we enjoyed a drive over the country to the home of Bro. S. B. Shirky with his sons, John and Joseph, both members of the church.

The congregation is known as Wakendah church but many of the Brethren here came from Rockingham, Va., and they brought with them the name from the old home, hence the meeting-house is known by the name of Rockingham. The place has become somewhat noted on account of the Miller and Sommer Debate which was held here last March. The church is under the care of elders S. B. Shirky and D. B. Rhodes. They are assisted in the ministry by brethren George W. Clemmens, William Mason and I. N. Miller. The church passed through a troublous period, and in 1884 was left with sixty-eight members. Since then, one hundred and twenty-four have been added by baptism and nineteen by letter. Some have moved away and yet the membership of to-day is one hundred and ninety-eight. The growth of the church at this place has been remarkable, and it is an evidence of what faithful labor and right living will do for a congregation. There has been no looseness in the work done; no getting people into the fold on promises that they may enjoy certain privileges contrary to the practice of the church. As a result the church here enjoys peace, and instead of turning their attention upon local troubles among their own members they spend their energies in the conversion of sinners. The fact that they were willing to pay out seven hundred dollars to defray the expenses of the debate, shows in what direction their zeal runs.

The feast, which was, held on the 12th inst., was, in every respect, a most enjoyable one. About one hundred and seventy members were seated at the Lord's table, and the space allotted to spectators was crowded. The order was excellent and the large audience is to be commended for the respect shown to the worship of God. Bro. Josiah Ellenberger officiated, and at the close of the meeting the general expression was that we had enjoyed a precious season of refreshment in attending to the ordinances of the Lord's house.

The day following the feast an election was held for two ministers, and brethren John Shirky and Lewis Macy were called to the work, and they were duly installed in the important office of the ministry by Bro. Daniel Sell. These brethren are both young in years. Bro. Shirky is in his twenty-first year and Bro. Macy is not quite that old. If the Lord spares them, they have before them many years of usefulness for the church. They have the advantage of youth, when the mind is active and vigorous and retains the impressions made upon it, and this is of incalculable value to the minister. Only those who have been called to this important work later in life realize what they have lost. The best years of their life for study have passed and they must be content to struggle under this loss. We believe that mistakes are often made by putting men in the ministry when they have passed the meridian of life. All things being equal it were far better to put our young brethren to the work.

Our young brethren, Shirky and Macy, felt the weight of the responsibility placed upon them by the church and were loath to accept it. We trust the Lord's blessing may rest upon them, and that they will study to show themselves approved unto God.

The Mineral Creek Church.

After spending a very pleasant and enjoyable season in social and spiritual intercourse with the members at Rockingham, we left them on our way to Warrensburg, Mo., where we were met by Bro. S. S. Mohler and taken to his hospitable home in the Mineral Creek church, eleven miles from Warrensburg. On our way we stopped at Pertle Springs and took a hasty survey of the grounds where our next Annual Meeting is to be held. We shall have something more to say of the place in our next letter.

The Mineral Creek church, Johnson Co., Mo., was organized Dec. 25, 1869 with eight members. Since then, the territory included in the original organization has been divided, a part going to the Warrensburg church and part to the church in Henry County. Since the organization, about two hundred have been received into church fellowship by baptism. The membership numbers at the present time about one hundred and seventy-five. Among this number are many young brethren and sisters. Here, as at Rockingham, this is a noticeable feature and, with the solid character of the work done, the church enjoys a degree of prosperity and future prospects for successful work that are encouraging to all who love the cause.

Bro. S. S. Mohler is in charge of the church, assisted by brethren Fred Culp and J. M. Mohler, both in the eldership, and Bro. Martin Mohler in the second degree of the ministry. The work is carried on harmoniously and, as a result, the congregations are large and attentive. A large and well-conducted Sunday-school is kept up and we were much pleased to see the interest taken in the Sunday-school by the older members of the church. They not only send the children to Sunday-school but they go themselves and encourage the work by their presence. The old as well as the young may be benefited in the Sunday-school. The study of the Bible can not be too strongly commended, and in a Bible class in the Sunday-school, if properly conducted, may be found an incentive to the study of the Bible that will be helpful to those who have a desire to know more of God's Word.

We do not often write up the country through which we travel but we take space to say that the Brethren in Missouri have made an excellent selection. The land is exceedingly fertile and produces immense crops. As much as thirty-eight bushels of wheat per acre have been secured this season, and the corn crop in many places is estimated at from seventy to eighty bushels per acre. The climate is well suited for the cultivation of fruit, and there is an abundant crop of apples, pears, grapes and peaches. At Bro. S. S. Mohler's we picked large, ripe peaches, of most excellent flavor, from the trees, and we enjoyed the luscious fruit very much indeed. The country around about Mineral Creek is slightly rolling, affording good drainage. On the whole, we were very much pleased with the country, and concluded that the Brethren have been somewhat backward in letting others know what a fine country they have. A railroad will some day be built through this part of Missouri, and then, it seems to us, that our Brethren here will have about all the conveniences that they can reasonably desire or expect in this world.

We remained with the Brethren of the Mineral Creek church from the 14th to the 19th of September and enjoyed several seasons of worship with them. During our stay we met with the Committee of Arrangements who have charge of preparing for our next Annual Meeting. They met at Pertle Springs, where the Meeting is to be held, and we had a good opportunity to look over the ground. We think, from what we have seen of it, that it will make an excellent place for the Meeting but we defer further notice of it until next week.

QUERISTS' DEPARTMENT.

The Right to Commune.—The Standing Committee.—Queries and Answers.—Dedicatory Services.—Let Him be unto Thee a Heathen Man and a Publican.

1. Has an elder or any member of the church a right after examination services, when the members have taken their seats at the table, to ask any one not to commune? If so, where do they get the authority? Please explain through the MESSENGER.

THE church has always exercised care to have all the members come to the Lord's table worthily, and this is not only proper but absolutely necessary, in order to keep the church in peace and to maintain her integrity and purity. With this object in view the church has established and kept up the visit which precedes the Communion season. By means of the visit any trouble or difficulty that may obtain between members, of a personal character, is settled, and the parties are thus prepared to come to the table of the Lord. The examination services, which always immediately precede the Lord's Supper, are held for the same purpose. While the examination is personal to individual members and it becomes a matter of conscience with them as to their fitness to approach the Lord's table worthily, yet circumstances may arise when it would be proper to request them not to do so, even after they have examined themselves according to 1 Cor. 11: 48. Self-examination is not admitted by our Brotherhood as giving members, in all cases, the right to commune. See Art. 16, 1877, page 259, Classified Minutes.

Cases may occur in which it would be impossible to reach an adjustment before Communion, and one or more affected by the case might present themselves at the table. It would then be proper for the church officials to request them not to commune. Such cases, we are glad to believe, are very rare, and an action of the kind referred to could only be considered allowable when it would be found impossible to adjust the case before Communion. Cases of this character have occurred and may occur again but they need to be handled with great care. It is a painful duty to request a member not to commune, and will not be done ordinarily unless sufficient cause exists for a course of this kind.

2. (a) Does the Standing Committee of Annual Meeting hold over with powers to make appointments until the succeeding Standing Committee is organized, on the same footing that the Moderator holds over?

(b) Last Annual Meeting decided that when queries are answered by referring to former answers, the former answer should be printed along with the new; was it understood that this rule was not to be in force before next year?

J. S. FLORY.

ANSWER.—(a) Yes. Heretofore some business has occasionally been placed in the hands of the Standing Committee to adjust after the close of the Meeting. The Committee would have no power, however, to transact any business after the close of the meeting except as may have been referred to them by the Conference. (b) It was without doubt the design to have the decision take effect the same year that it was passed by the Meeting.

3. (a) Did the Brethren hold special dedicatory services in their first meeting house at Germantown, Pa.? If not, at what period of time and place of worship did the Brethren hold their first dedicatory services?

(b) "Let him be unto thee as a heathen man and a publican." Matt. 18: 17. In what sense and in what manner should such an one be held as a heathen man and a publican by the believer? Should he be invited to give religious counsel or to lead in prayer? MOSES FLORY.

ANSWER.—(a) We have no way of ascertaining whether the Brethren held dedicatory services in the Germantown meeting-house or not. There may be something on record in regard to the matter. If there is, we do not have any knowledge of it. About the year 1845 the Brethren commenced holding dedicatory services. There was nothing special about such services. When a house of worship was completed, the first meeting held in it, was called the dedication service. The first one we ever attended was in Washington County, Maryland. The sermon was preached, as we now recall it, by Bro. D. P. Saylor, and was made suitable to the occasion. Reference was made to the dedication of Solomon's temple, and the fact was stated and impressed that the new meeting-house was set apart and dedicated to the Lord, to be used only for religious service and church work. Since then we have attended a number of such services. The only difference, noticeable between such meetings and our regular services, is, that the sermon is usually suitable to the occasion.

(b) In the cases referred to in Matt. 18: 17, the bond of Christian union is severed. Those who refuse to hear the church are to be held as having forfeited the rights of church membership. To such we are to perform the common courtesies of humanity, to treat them kindly and considerately, but we are not bound to them as Christian brethren are bound to each other. We should not look upon one who has thus been dealt with, as a proper person to give religious counsel and instruction or to take part in our religious services. The inference is, when such action has been properly taken by the church, that the one who refused to hear is cut off from the communion and fellowship of the church and that they have no part or lot with her. In all cases, however, we should not forget that those who have fallen away should be kindly entreated and used in such a way that they may, if possible, be won back again. We should go out after the erring ones and show them that we love them and want them to come into the fold again.

Missionary and Tract Work Department.

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come" 1 Cor. 16: 2

"Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give. Not grudgingly or of necessity, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver" 2 Cor. 9: 7

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not" 2 Cor. 8: 12.

THANKSGIVING TO GOD.

BY LANDON WEST.

AMONG the many inducements given us for doing good unto all men and especially to the poor,—to those that believe,—there is this one, both great and glorious in its results: "It causeth abundant thanksgiving to God." See 2 Thess. 9: 11, 14.

Much of the treasure of this world is kept to be moth-eaten, and to advance and support the kingdom of Satan, to yield no good fruit to any, and to make no one express a word of thanksgiving. This should be given to the poor, the sick, the hungry and the naked, besides the masses that are starving for the Bread of Life! What a cloud of incense, filled with tears, prayers and thanks unto God would arise from hearts now cold and dead in sin! All this without loss to any that are now asleep in the fold. 1 Thess. 5: 6. Let us all wake up to the work and lay aside every lust, habit and weakness, and use all our means to forward the cause of God, and we will soon be happy, others will be happy, thanksgiving will be abundant, and God's name will be glorified!

HOW ABOUT OUR RESPONSIBILITY?

SELECTED BY WM. M. LYON.

THERE is a story told of Christmas Evans, the famous Welsh preacher, who received for a large portion of his ministry but seventeen pounds per annum, and never more than thirty pounds. His biographer, himself a Welshman, says it must be remembered as among the anomalies of Welsh religious life, that it combines an insatiable appetite for sermons, with a marvelous disregard for the temporal comfort of the preacher. On one occasion a woman said to Mr. Evans as he came from the pulpit:

"Well, Christmas Evans, we are back with your stipend; but I hope you will be paid at the resurrection. You have given us a wonderful sermon."

"Yes, yes," was his quick reply; "no doubt of that; but what am I to do till I get there? And there is the old white mare that carries me—what will she do? For her there will be no resurrection. And what will you do? What reward will you get for your unfaithfulness at the resurrection? It's hard but I shall get on at the resurrection; but you, who get on so well in the world, may change places with me at the resurrection."

Men who love the message, but starve the messenger; who dwell in ceiled houses, but have little care for those who wander as pilgrims on the earth, may hear some words at the resurrection which will startle and astonish their souls.

Stewardship is a solemn service, and when he who has made us stewards, calls us to account, it will be a sad day for those who have hoarded or wasted the Master's wealth, while his work has been neglected and his servants have suffered want.

DO YOU DISTRIBUTE TRACTS?

IF not, you miss a great opportunity. Tracts have revolutionized the world. The Bible is but a collection of TRACTS. In its sixty-six little pamphlets there is found the quintessence of human wisdom and divine revelation. We have collected and combined these small productions into one volume, "the Bible," "the BOOK;" but from the beginning it was not so. No cumbrous volume, too large to be easily read, was launched upon the world by the first apostles and prophets; but brief, pointed, earnest tracts, bearing the messages of the Most High, guiding into the way of life, teaching the truth as it is in Christ, witnessing against error, and rebuking wrong;—these were the instruments used to work that renovation which has changed the face of the world, and which, though incomplete, yet shows a progress which is real, and hopeful and marvelous. If we are workers together with God, we do well to follow the divine methods, and scatter divine Truth in simple style and in portable form; and in so doing we may expect the blessing of God upon our work.—Sel.

LIONS WITHOUT.

BY S. D. ROYER.

"The slothful man saith, There is a lion without, I shall be slain in the streets."—Prov. 22: 13

WHEN we look at the many excuses that men and women make in the work of the Lord, we conclude there must be many spiritual sluggards, but in looking at the principle underlying, we at once conclude that it is because we do not want to do the work; hence the excuse.

When the Apostle says we shall "pray without ceasing and in everything give thanks," we say we can not pray (a lion without). When the Savior says, "Go and teach all nations," we say, "We can not go; we must work to support our family" (another lion); but when the church has made arrangements so that we can send others by giving them a little of what the Lord has loaned to us, then the lion is, "We are afraid the right men are not sent, and our money will be misused."

Again, when we are asked to contribute to the Book and Tract Work, we are afraid some brethren are trying to make money by printing tracts and some money will be uselessly spent, or if we are asked for endowment, we are afraid the Tract Work will, perhaps, fail, and our money be lost. The lions meet us every-where, only because we do not like to give.

If we were like David when he went to meet Goliath,—go in the name of the Lord, willing to do what we could for the Lord,—then the lions would all fall like Goliath did; we would destroy them with their own swords, but as long as some of the leaders (Saul-like) are willing to discourage those that would work, it is no wonder that we are afraid of the lions without.

Bradford, O.

THE WORK OF TO-DAY.

SOMETIMES the work of to day is tedious toiling, sometimes it is patient waiting, sometimes it is earnest watching, sometimes it is quiet resting. Whatever the work of to-day is, it should be done. If the Master says, "Come ye aside into the desert and rest awhile," this may be the work of today. If we refuse to do it, and struggle on in weariness, we may not only do our work imperfectly, but may meet with sickness and be unfitted for work and deprived of opportunities for a long period of time.

The Lord will give us guidance if we will but follow him. If we are obedient so far as we know, he will show us the thing we ought to do, and when he has shown us, happy are they who have the wisdom to do what Christ commands, and to fulfill the work which he assigns us.—Sel.

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—Bro. Geo. B. Royer informs us that three were added to the Panther Creek church, Iowa, recently.

—Bro. E. W. Stoner writes: "I was in the Beaver Dam church, Frederick County, Md., recently. While there, three sisters were baptized and one was restored to membership, who had been induced to join the Old Order element."

—Bro. James H. Graham writes: "The Scipio church, Ohio, is moving along in peace and harmony. Last Sunday another dear one was received into this church by baptism. We are looking for others soon."

—The good work in Philadelphia, Pa., is still progressing. Bro. I. M. Gibson, under date of Sept. 16, writes: "Yesterday one more came out on the Lord's side,—this time a Presbyterian preacher. Doctrine without compromise will win. This makes four in the last two weeks, with fair prospects ahead."

—Bro. S. J. Garber, of the Middle River church, Va., writes: "The Brethren had church meeting in the above-named church Aug. 24, preparatory to their Communion meeting. I could not be with them on account of the afflictions of my wife, but I understand that all business passed off satisfactorily. Their Communion meeting will be Sept. 14."

—Bro. Nathaniel Cripe, of the Hillisburg church, Ind., under date of Sept. 12, writes: "We held our Communion, Sept. 6, and had a feast of love indeed. About thirty-five members communed. Brethren S. H. Saylor and Isaac Cripe labored for us in the Word. Bro. Saylor stayed till the 10th. We were made to rejoice to see two come out on the Lord's side. May the Lord bless our little church that many souls may yet be brought to Christ!"

—Bro. E. H. Stouffer, of the Garrison church, Benton Co., Iowa, writes: "Saturday, Sept. 14, we held our quarterly council, prior to our feast. A goodly number of brethren and sisters were present, and all business passed off with the best of feelings. Two were received by letter, and one, a dear sister, who had wandered away, returned to the fold. This made us feel to thank God and take courage. We decided to hold a series of meetings, commencing Sept 21 and continuing till after our feast. Bro. D. E. Brubaker, of Maxwell, Iowa, is to be with us."

—Under date of Sept. 17, Bro. D. B. Gibson, of Cerro Gordo, writes: "Our council is in the past. Everything passed off harmoniously. A young man was baptized at the close of the session. Bro. David Musselman is one of the delegates to District Meeting from this place. We expect to hold a series of meetings in the near future. Our regular meetings are well attended."

—Under date of Sept. 13, Bro. Lewis M. Kob, of Garden Grove, Iowa, writes: "Our Communion services were held on the evening of Sept. 6, and seemed to be enjoyed by all present. Good order and attention were given by the spectators. Brethren Martin Replogle, of Appanoose County, and W. W. Folger, of Clark County, dealt out to us the Bread of Life. We thank the brethren for their labor of love, and praise God for this season of grace."

—Under date of Sept. 16, Bro. Silas Hoover, of Boynton, Pa., writes: "According to previous arrangements, I commenced meetings in the Jacob's Creek congregation on the evening of the 2nd. They had their love-feast on the evening of the 7th. I closed the meeting on the evening of the 8th. During this time eight were added to the church by baptism, and one more made application during these meetings. The best of order prevailed. Many thanks to the members for their Christian courtesy."

—Writing from Cornell, Ill., Bro. N. S. Dale sends the following: "We held our council-meeting Sept. 12, and had a very pleasant meeting. The reports of the visiting brethren were generally favorable. The members seem to be in love and union and desirous to work with the church. The church decided to hold a series of meetings in connection with the love-feast, which will occur Oct. 5. Eld. Menno Stouffer is expected to do the preaching. May the Lord bless and sanctify every means in spreading the Gospel!"

—Writing under date of Sept. 9, Bro. J. E. Young, of Beatrice, Nebr., notes the following: "During the past summer a family here in town buried their only child. It was hard for them to give it up, but now they have a treasure 'over there,' and it has drawn the heart of the mother to Jesus. She was baptized yesterday. We hope and pray that the father, who is an invalid, will soon center his affections on heaven. Others are weeping over their sins and are 'almost persuaded.' We enjoyed an excellent prayer-meeting last evening."

—Under date of Sept. 12, Bro. G. W. Lowry, of Scullton, Pa., writes: "We were made to feel glad when, on Aug. 14, we were permitted to lead two into the water, from which, we hope, they arose to walk in newness of life. These, with others previously reported, make twenty-eight that have been received into the Middle Creek congregation since Jan. 1, 1888. Our prayer is that God may take the lambs into his tender care, lest they wander from the fold! There are others who are halting between two opinions. May God lead them to the light!"

—Sister Sarah A. Daggett, expresses her great appreciation of the MESSENGER which has been a source of great comfort to her. She continues: "During the past year, while mother was confined to her bed with sciatic rheumatism, I have not been away from home very much, so you may know what the MESSENGER was to me and how it cheered us all in our loneliness. Aug. 23, in company with Lizzie Hillery, and others, I attended the love-feast in Washington County. Brethren Conner, L. Eby, S. Holderman, Lugenbeel and Smith earnestly preached the Word. Attending this meeting seemed like old times, and my thoughts went back to Illinois and the meetings we there attended in the days of yore."

—A sister, enclosing $2 00 for the spreading of the Gospel, writes: "What a pity that some, who have been richly blessed by the Lord, do not make a better,—nay, the only proper use of that which has been entrusted to them! We that have good privileges, ought to remember those who are not so favorably circumstanced. Let us be liberal and do as we would wish the Lord to do unto us!"

—Sister Florida J. E. Etter, of Carteraville, Va., writes: "I love the people of God. Many of those whose names appear in the GOSPEL MESSENGER I have never seen, but I feel that we are of the same precious faith and know each other in spirit. I receive letters from many who are unknown to me, which encourage me very much. We are few in number and hear very little preaching, but I trust what little I do hear, may urge me to work for the honor and glory of God. Though we may do but little, if it is done for the honor of God, he will accept it. This is encouraging. If we only give a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple, we shall not lose our reward."

—Sister Mary E. Hostetler, of the English Prairie church, La Grange Co., Ind., writes: "Our brethren, M. M. Eshelman, Geo. E. Studebaker, and G. G. Lehmer, of McPherson, Kans., while traveling in the interest of the McPherson College, stopped with us and held meetings here over Sunday. They came Sept. 5, and remained with us until Sept. 9, preaching in all five sermons. We were glad to meet our brethren from the West, but would have been pleased if they would have stayed longer with us. We believe some good might have been done. Our Sunday-school is still progressing. We were much encouraged and pleased with the address to the school by Bro. Lehmer."

—Under date of Sept. 16, Bro. S. M. Forney, of Kearney, Nebr., writes: "The love-feast in the Wood River church, Nebr., was held Sept. 14 and 15. We had a very enjoyable feast. The membership was well represented and two ministers from abroad were with us,—Eld. D. Bechtelheimer, from Juniata, Nebr., and J. P. Nofziger, from Mascot, Nebr. They preached with earnestness and power. Three young lambs were baptized. Seven members were lately added to the Wood River church by letter. A choice for two deacons was held during the feast and the lot fell on J. W. Gripe and Wm. P. McClellan, who were duly installed into the important office given them. The meeting throughout was interesting. A number of dear friends and relatives met once more after years of separation. This added to our joy, and we hope we shall all meet again at the great meeting in the end of this world!"

—Under date of Sept. 14, Bro. John M. Miller, of Westphalia, Kans., writes: "The members of the Scott Valley church held their love-feast on the evening of Sept. 11. It was a meeting long to be remembered. About seventy-five members communed. Ministering brethren, Garst, Leaman and Winey were present from adjoining districts. At the close of the meeting three were added to the church by baptism. We now number about sixty-five members including three ministers and five deacons. The church is moving along smoothly and growing encouragingly. The calls for preaching are more numerous than we can attend to. We buy tracts for the isolated to scatter among their neighbors. In that way we help the ministering brethren to tell the old, old story of Jesus and his love. We expect to hold a series of meetings in October. We invite ministers, or others, traveling through Coffey County, to pay a visit to the Scott Valley church."

CORRESPONDENCE.

☞Church News solicited for this Department. If you have had a good meeting, send a report of it, so that others may rejoice with you. In writing give name of church, county and State. Be brief! Notes of Travel should be as short as possible. Land Advertisements are not solicited for this Department. We have an advertising page, and, if necessary, will issue supplements.

Notes by the Way.

AUG. 30 we boarded the train at Timberville, on a mission to the isolated and almost neglected. Our field of labor was partly in Warren County; also in Page and Clark Counties, Va

Our first point was Browntown, Warren Co. This place was named after a Bro. Brown and wife. Sister Brown came from Brownsville, Md., about seventy-five years ago, and continued to go to Brownsville to meet with those of like faith. We do not know whether the Brethren, in their day, ever preached at Browntown or not.

About eighteen years ago Bro. Cornelius Cassel and Bro. E. W. Stoner visited some of their friends in that vicinity, and Bro. Cassel held meetings during their visit. At that time Robert M. Allen applied for membership and was baptized. He remained isolated from the church, and for eight years did not see or hear anything of the Brethren. He then went to Brownsville, Md., and met with those of like faith, and finally made arrangements with Bro. William Peters, of Powel's Fort, to come across the mountains and preach for him and his friends. Bro. Peters has been going there for several years once a year. Of late he went several times during the summer. A year ago a sister was baptized.

Last year Bro. Allen requested me to come and preach for them, and I gave the promise to come at some future time. In accordance with my promise we met and had meetings in a school-house and in private houses. We had nine meetings with good interest. Two united with the church. There is a good feeling, and more will likely come in the future.

These brethren need a house of worship. The school-house sometimes can not be had. The members are all in very limited circumstances, but appear to be willing to assist, and, with proper aid, I hope they will get a house of their own.

The doctrine of the Brethren is hardly known here. This is the place for the young, active brethren who can walk, if need be, over the hills. I hope some one will assist Bro. Peters in this field. He needs it.

We then went to Dry Run, Page County, and from there to Clark Co., where we have amonthly mission. We found all well and much built up. Brethren, let us go out more on the borders! The calls are many. Let those who are at home and enjoying the comforts of family and fireside, remember the poor minister who is called to go and preach the Word to a dying world. Let us pray for them, instead of finding fault.

S. H. MYERS.

From the Ludlow Church, Ohio.

OUR council-meeting, following the general church visit, occurred last Saturday. All business was duly disposed of. A good feeling prevailed, and we feel that the meeting was a profitable one. We were made sad, however, that two of our number decided to walk with us no more. We do not know to whom they will go, and hope they may soon see that it will be to their interest to return. The church decided to hold a love-feast Oct. 11. Preaching at 2 P. M.

I have just read Bro. S. S. Mohler's article in No. 37, and am glad that the closing paragraph found a place in the GOSPEL MESSENGER, and I second the motion. In favor of the motion I would say that the Brotherhood is wealthy, but Eld. R H. Miller is not.

I hope we may have an explanation through the GOSPEL MESSENGER that will be satisfactory, as explaining by private correspondence can not reach all who think that justice should be done to Bro. Miller in this matter. JESSE STUTSMAN.

Rejoice.

Dear Children:—

THROUGH the grace of God I am permitted to send you good news. My heart rejoices, and I believe you will rejoice with me. Saturday, Sept. 7, my youngest children and I left home to attend the dedication of the Litchfield church. Brother David Troxel preached the dedicatory sermon and continued the meeting for a week or more. During the time they had a love-feast, yes, a feast of love in seeing precious souls come to Jesus. We were there on Sunday, Sunday night, also Monday night.

The good news I want to tell you is, that we had the pleasure of seeing three precious little lambs come out on the Lord's side, to walk in newness of life, to work for their dear Lord whom they love dearly. It was with tears of love that they gave themselves up to be sincere and true to God. I am confident they have loved Jesus for some time. Some of them told me they had been praying children. This speaks well for their parents. They have now given themselves into his service, to work for him who is able to purge them from all iniquity. They are sweet, pleasant children, and will be a credit to the church, if they have the proper care in getting the sincere milk of the Word. Much now depends upon how they are protected by those who are older in the cause.

I learned there were two others, also young in years who came out later on. May God give them all grace to hold out faithful to the end, is my prayer!

Brother Troxel is a kind, sympathetic preacher, calculated to do much good in his daily walk and conversation, as well as in his persuasive way of preaching to the people.

I must tell you of another beautiful feature I saw at the above place. They are collecting pennies for the Lord every Lord's Day at the Sunday-school. If I mistake not, it amounted to about sixty-seven cents that day. Their membership is now seventeen in all, and they were only organized quite recently. Their zeal, however, is far ahead of some of our stronger and older established churches to-day, in collecting pennies for Jesus We hope that all the churches may become aroused to their duty in that line.

We visited all the members while there, and enjoyed our fellowship together very much indeed. May God truly bless them all in bringing and keeping them near the foot of the cross, and may they be as a city set upon a hill, and a shining light to the city and all their associates in life!

TEXAS, as an agricultural State, is only just in its infancy. By proper development it will be one of the foremost States in the Union.

If you want to work for the Lord, you can find a good field of labor, here in Texas, and plenty to do. Supplied with tracts and papers, you need not be idle.

The Williams Creek church has held her council-meeting, which passed off profitable to us all. We decided to hold our love-feast on Saturday Nov. 2. We also decided that we would make an effort to have as much mission work and preaching as possible. We hereby extend a hearty invitation to all brethren and sisters who think of a visit to this State, to make this one of their stopping places. By notifying me at Lorin, you will be met at Gainesville at any time, and if any should desire to extend their visit on west, through Nocona church, and Wise County church, the Brethren will assist them. Brethren Henry Brubaker and Abraham Molsbee have the oversight of all these churches.

We ask an interest in the prayers of the Brotherhood, that we, in our work here, might be faithful! May we all manifest an interest in the work of the church, and may the members of the body become more concerned for the welfare of Zion!

A. W. AUSTIN.

A Visit to the Cold Knob Mountains, Greenbrier County, West Virginia.

In company with Eld. Andrew Fleshman, of Lindside, Monroe Co., W. Va., we went to Cold Knob for the purpose of organizing a church. This was done on Saturday, Aug. 24, by the election of Bro. Elijah Read to the ministry and brethren John McClurg and Thomas Read to the deacon's office.

There are but few members in that section of country. Some of them were formerly of Floyd County Va., and they seem to be very zealous and exert a good influence. We think there is a good opening for the Brethren at that place, and our prayer is that success may crown the efforts of that beloved little body.

ABRAM M. FRANTZ.

From Glensted, Mo.

BRO F. CULP commenced a meeting at Florence, a mission post of the Prairie View church, Aug. 24, continuing until the night of Sept. 2, closing with a love-feast. The few members at that point were built up, and others are searching the Scriptures. We trust that much good has been done at that place. Sept. 3 he came to the Prairie View church and remained with us until Sept. 10, closing with a love-feast. Bro. Levi Mohler also came to us Sept 6, and remained until the 14th. We had an excellent meeting Three united with the church; one came over one hundred miles to be received into the church. During these meetings we also had our annual visit meeting. The church is in union and all are alive to the cause. Bro. M. M. Holsopple was called to the ministry, and fully installed into his office. We now have three ministers and three deacons.

DAVID BOWMAN.

From Kingsley, Iowa.

AGAIN we have had a season of refreshment. We held our love-feast Sept. 7. Bro. D. M. Miller and Bro. John Diehl were called to our assistance. They held forth the Word of God in all its purity and simplicity.

Bro. Miller remained with the Brethren (ten miles west of here) until Sept. 12, conducting meetings. From there he contemplates going to Galvia where he will remain for some time. May the Lord go with him!

As an immediate result of the work done, one precious soul was made to forsake the sinful ways of this world and walk in newness of life. Three weeks previous to our love-feast, four more wandering souls found the way that leads to eternal happiness and bliss.

Oh, sinners, if only many more of you would seek that way. Time is rapidly passing! How often are we reminded that our lives are but a shadow that declineth, and that we soon pass away. We must do quickly the work the Lord has given us to do; for very soon, oh, how soon the night of death cometh, when no one can work!

Dear sinner, why will you despise "the riches of his goodness and forbearance and long suffering," and thus heap up more awful condemnations against the day of wrath! Would you not rather flee the wrath to come, and lay hold upon that which is good, than to enjoy the pleasure of sin for a season? Behold the angels are waiting to carry the glad tidings of your repentance to the very presence of God. Heaven rejoices and hell mourns over every sinner that repenteth. Oh, this mighty act of grace which concerns three worlds! Hell loses a victim, the world loses a subject, and heaven gains an immortal soul, destined to live in bliss and glory through eternal ages! Dear reader, if you have not yet made your peace with God, do not rest until the chain is broken and every stain is washed away. Wrestle with your besetments, stand up against the assaults of the devil, depart from iniquity and lay hold on eternal life!

"'Twill not be long till death shall come,
And you shall slumber 'neath the sod,
With white hands crossed, and pale lips dumb,
Alone with God, alone with God.

'Twill not be long ere fame shall cease
To beckon you to heights sublime,
For death shall bring you pain or peace,
Throughout all time, throughout all time.

'Twill not be long till wealth shall fail
To satisfy your soul's demand,
For nothing can with death prevail,
Nor loose his hand, nor loose his hand.

'Twill not be long ere you shall be
Consigned to mould within the tomb,
Then cometh an eternity
Of joy or gloom, of joy or gloom."

VIOLA M. TROSTLE.

Notes and Jottings.

AUG 8th we meet with the Brethren of the Rush Creek church in Hocking Co., O. This was one of the early pioneer organizations of our church in the State. In its early days it prospered and flourished like the palm. Some difficulties during the war began to hinder her progress. Added to this their elders, — Hunsacker and Henricks—did not work harmoniously. This necessitated the calling of committees. The devil never fails to get a rich harvest of spoils, when he can get officials, especially elders, at variance. How pitiful the scene! How timely were the parting words of Joseph to his brethren, "See that ye fall not out by the way." The work was, however, greatly revived, years ago, by a revival, held by Bro. D. N. Workman The Rush Creek church again had fair prospects It then fell under the hand of pretended loyalty, and they were quietly and unconsciously moulded for modern progression. When the decisive hour arrived, about half went with that element.

We were pleased to find the present membership of the Rush Creek church loyal and faithful as a body. Bro. Daniel Hartsough, who is of ripe years in the ministry, is about leaving them for Indiana This leaves brethren Jesse C. Beery and Levi Stoner in the ministry. They are young brethren of promise, and it is hoped they will faithfully care for our Father's children. On each Sunday we held three services. Like in Christ's time,—they sat on the green and ate. The attendance was encouraging. We had a feast Aug. 24. It is interesting to notice what a pleasure it is to many people, far and near, to attend what they call "the Dunkards' annual feast." How impressed they are with the heavenly scene! The meeting proved a season of encouragement to the cause

May the Lord tenderly regard and bless the faithful ones in the Rush Creek church!

It is not uncommon for the church to be criticised in her discipline on the apparel question; for being partial with the brethren. It should be borne in mind that all have their besetting sins. Man's common or besetting sins are profanity, fighting, gambling, horse-racing, using tobacco, intoxicants, etc. While women are rarely charged with any of the above sins, her besetting sin is fashion and pride in dress. Hence we find the texts in Scripture, bearing on the apparel question, alluding largely to women's dress.

It is almost universally admitted that, on the apparel question, there must be some limits set, —some one to say where to stop. This must be done either by the church or the individual. The church, in general council, has set limits, which, if respected, universally prove a success. Some congregations have expressed themselves dissatisfied with those limits, and have exceeded them to gratify fancied taste. In this they have shown open disobedience to the church. Can not their members, either or any of them, with equal propriety, refuse to obey the decisions of their respective congregations? Besides, does this increased latitude increase the power of the church for good? Does it separate her more from the world? Does it give her more love, more union, more meekness, more humility? I fear not.

A congregation some time since passed a decision to bear with sisters who were wearing a plain hat. They soon found themselves in confusion as to what was a plain hat. They appointed a committee of their number to interpret the language and "read the handwriting." I am reminded of God's people in the land of Shinar, who, in their wickedness at the tower of Babel, were thrown in confusion of tongues and could not understand one another. I. J. ROSENBERGER.

From the Washington Church, Kans.

I LEFT home Sept. 7 and went twenty miles north of Washington to hold a series of meetings in Jefferson County, Nebr., at a place where our doctrine was never heard. Here I preached ten times and baptized twelve souls,—one of them an aged lady of seventy years, and blind, two more sixty years old; the rest from twenty to forty-five years of age. Three more made application.

I should have continued here, but, on hearing that my daughter was very sick, I had to go home. I have a call to preach at Willow Springs, Nebr. At that place several members are living, all isolated, but I can not go. The Lord says, "Go," the people say, "Come," but my means will not permit me.

The Brethren and sisters in Nebraska should not forget the little band in Jefferson County. They live three miles south-west of Endicott. Write to Bro. George Fortner and he will meet you at the train. Brethren, pray that we may successfully wrestle against flesh and blood, and fight manfully under the banner of Emmanuel!

ELI RULE.

Notes by the Way.

SEPT. 14th the writer left for Red Oak Grove, Floyd Co., Va., a distance of nine miles. At 10 A. M. the council was opened for business. The visiting brethren made a report of their visit. With one exception all were found to be in the same faith as when they united with the church, and willing to labor with the church for an increase of holiness both in themselves and others.

The time for their love-feast will be October 12, commencing at 11 A. M. The church agreed to hold an election for several more deacons, and also to vote on advancing two brethren to the second degree. Brethren Abraham Spangler, Asa Bowman and Isaac Boon were chosen as deacons. Brethren Moses Dickerson and Samuel Spangler were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. All were duly installed into their offices with much solemnity. May God's grace be with them through life!

Sunday, Sept. 15, we had a good congregation with good attention and the best of interest.

J. H. SLUSHER.

From the Lost River Church, Hardy Co., W. Va.

AFTER a journey of thirty-nine days to Illinois and Missouri, I reached my home Aug. 8, and found all well, for which I thank God. I have attended six funerals since my arrival home, and baptized nine persons, who are young in years. I pray that they may be faithful until death, and then enter the haven of rest. We have had twenty-two additions by baptism. Two returned who had wandered away. There are some more applicants for baptism in the near future.

OUR love-feast occurred Sept. 7, and will long be remembered by those present. The church decided to elect one minister and two deacons. Bro. P. H. Berry was elected to the ministry. Brethren Harry Fuller and Nelson Prowant were chosen as deacons. May they be faithful! Bro. Jacob Heistand, of Carey, Ohio, preached for us one week before the feast. He delivered eight sermons in all and baptized four.

Bro. Jacob then went to what is called the Light Hill school-house and preached five sermons. While there were no accessions, he left many warm friends at both places. We have all assurance that some were like Agrippa,—almost persuaded to be Christians. D. R. PROWANT.

TO DAY we held our quarterly council in the Loraine church. There was not much business to attend to, but all was attended to in peace and love. We appointed for our love-feast, Nov. 9. We will, perhaps, have a few meetings preceding the feast. A hearty invitation is extended to all who can and wish to be with us on the occasion.

The Mill Creek church, Liberty, Ill., will hold their love-feast on Thursday, Oct. 31.

SEPT. 5 I started for the Pulaski church, in company with Bro. A. Weed and wife, and Bro. Jacob Hess and wife. We arrived in the evening at Bro. Stump's, and found them busily engaged in getting ready for the feast. Sept. 6th was the council. All were found in love and union. They decided to hold an election for the ministry. Brethren John Dellplain and Bro. Willard Gillet were chosen and installed into their offices. They had a love-feast Sept. 1. There were three baptized and one reclaimed. This church is in good working order. They have one elder, three ministers and two deacons. J. L. JORDAN.

From River, Ind.

THE Salamony church just closed an interesting series of meetings with twenty-eight additions by baptism and one reclaimed. Bro. George L. Studebaker did the preaching. Our communion will be Oct. 9, commencing at 3 P. M. A general invitation is extended to all who feel to be with us. SAMUEL MURRAY.

From Mansfield, Mo.

OUR love-feast occurred Sept. 14 Forty-three members were present on the occasion. We had the best of order. Brethren Mason and Adkins, from Texas County, were with us. Bro. Mason is our elder. He shunned not to declare the whole Truth. We think the members were built up in the faith, and sinners were warned to flee the wrath of God. Brethren, come again!

A Sad Accident.

ON the morning of the 24th of September, Bro. John Diehl, of the West Branch church, Ill., met with a serious accident. He went to the cornfield to husk a little corn for his pigs. He put the sack containing the corn on his shoulder, started home, fell and broke his thigh bone. Bro. Diehl is seventy-seven years old, and never having been sick much, finds this a source of pain in more ways than one. He is resigned to his lot, however, and seems to be doing well. J. G. ROYER.

DESPAIR is like forward children who, when you take away one of their playthings, throw the rest in the fire from madness. It grows angry with itself, turns its own executioner and revenges its misfortunes on its own head. It refuses to live under disappointments and crosses, and chooses rather not to be at all than to be without the thing which it hath once imagined necessary to its happiness.—Charron.

THERE is no true and constant gentleness without humility: while we are so fond of ourselves we are easily offended with others. Let us be persuaded that nothing is due to us, and then nothing will disturb us. Let us often think of our infirmities, and we shall become indulgent towards those of others.—Fenelon.

IF you live in the full sunshine of Christ, and have him not merely playing upon the surface of your mind, but sunk deep down in it, transforming your whole being, then some men will, as they look at you, be filled with strange longings, and will say, "Come, let us walk in the light of the Lord."—A. Maclaren.

From Dulinsville, Va.

THE members of the Madison church expect, the Lord willing, to commence a series of meetings Oct. 6, and continue until Saturday, Oct. 12, at which time we intend to have our love-feast, commencing at 3 P. M. Bro. J. M. Kagey, of Dayton, Va., is to do the preaching. As we are somewhat isolated from the main body of the church, and are very weak and few in number, we earnestly request all, who feel an interest in our spiritual welfare, to be with us during our meeting, and especially at our love-feast. Brethren and sisters, come and help us, and cheer us on our way to the celestial City!

Special Notice to the Middle District of Indiana.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements, the Trustees of the Old Folks' and Orphans' Home of the Middle District of Indiana, met at the Home Sept. 14 Bro. Miller has completed his work and given the Home over into the hands of the Trustees. We are glad to say that it is a plain and commodious Home, and far exceeds our expectations. Bro. Miller has fully filled his promise made to the Middle District of Indiana. His daughter, Rebecca, has also fully complied with her promise, and furnished the largest room with plain new furniture and carpet.

We know the Lord is not slack concerning his promises, neither should his children be, and since Bro. Miller and his daughter have fully met their promise, we earnestly urge that the elders and members of the Middle District of Indiana do not forget their promise, made to District Meeting, to accept and support the Home.

The Home will be ready for inmates just as soon as we can furnish it, but this can not be done until the Trustees are furnished with the necessary means, for we have resolved not to go in debt.

We urge all the elders to give this matter their immediate attention, and appoint solicitors if they have not already done so. Thoroughly canvass your church and all whom you may feel are interested,—members or not.

Many have inquired what articles they should solicit. We would suggest that you first solicit for money,—cash. If you can not get that, then take installments, to be paid at donor's own time, but remember that it requires $600 to meet present demand. The solicitors should also solicit bed clothes and carpets. They will be furnished with "Endowment Notes," which, we hope, will receive due attention. All funds should be sent to Noah Fisher, Perrysburgh, Miami Co, Ind. All other articles should be sent to Noah Fisher at Mexico, Miami Co., Ind.

JAMES HIMELICK, Sec'y.

From Hurricane Creek Church, Bond County, Ill.

WE had a refreshing season, Saturday morning Sept. 7, at 10 o'clock. There was preaching during the forenoon, and in the evening the members met for the love-feast exercises. On Sunday we transacted some church work, followed by preaching. Bro. Joseph Jones was forwarded to the second degree in the ministry, and Bro. Davis Redenbow was elected to the deacon's office. We hope it will prove a blessing to the cause. Bro. and sister Wise, of Sumner County, Kans., were with us during our meeting. They stopped off here on their way east. Bro. John Wise conducted the meeting, assisted by Bro. D. B. Sturgis and Bro. Henry Liligh.

When our thoughts revert to the fall of 1881, when Hurricane Creek church had a membership of about one hundred, and then see it as it is at the present, the language of 1 Pet. 8 is brought to our mind. Our membership numbers only about thirty-eight at this time, but the Savior left some consolation for his followers. Where two or three are gathered together, he has promised to be with them. We were glad to have Bro. and sister Wise with us once again, at our Communion. It reminded us of a family reunion.

CORNELIUS KESSLER.

THE man who is only honest when honesty is the best policy, is not really an honest man. Honesty is not swerving policy, but staple principle. An honest man is honest from his inmost soul, nor deigns to stoop to aught that is mean, though great results hang on the petty fraud.

"THERE are treasures laid up in the heart; treasures of charity, piety, temperance and soberness. These treasures a man takes with him beyond death, when he leaves this world."

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.

"Set for the Defense of the Gospel."

Vol. 27. Old Series. Mt. Morris, Ill., and Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 8, 1889. No. 40.

The Gospel Messenger.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH, Editor,
And Business Manager of the Eastern House, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

BRO. SWIGART and family spent last Saturday and Sunday with their home folks, and report them as well as usual. The aged father is both blind and helpless, and is awaiting his time to be delivered.

As we are now making the corrections in the Ministerial List, we find that death has been at work among us, and quite a number of our active laborers have been called from the field, and taken to their reward. Who next? should be an important thought for us all.

BRO. F. F. HOLSOPPLE, a Normal student, preached an acceptable sermon in the Normal Chapel on last Sunday evening. He is studying to make of himself a workman that need not be ashamed. He, with a number of others, is taking the "Bible Study," which we hope may prove instructive and profitable to all who have entered it.

ON last Sunday afternoon we, in company with Bro. J. B. Brumbaugh and family, and our own family, had a pleasant visit to our father's house, the place we call home. The time was agreeably spent, and in the evening we met with the James Creek Brethren, in their church-house near by, for service. This we also enjoyed, as in this congregation there are many who are of near kin in several ways.

THE EXCELLENCY OF CHRISTIANITY.

"He was a man of excellent spirit."

MAN is essentially a dual being, having a physical and a spiritual life. And yet these two lives are so intimately connected together, that it is difficult to discriminate between them. In the characteristics of the physical life, there are many things that may be called excellent. Of a fine and well-developed man we say, "He is a man of excellent physique, or a man of excellent appearance, of excellent health. And there is excellency in being a fully developed physical man, because a sound body is an essential to true manhood. Of the skilled workman it is said, He is an excellent mechanic, and to be skillful in the arts is a desirable qualification, it is a developing of the physical powers. Then, we have our excellent scholars and scientists, philosophers, a development of the powers of the mind, thus leading to intelligence and morality. All these things lead towards the development of true manhood and an excellent and desirable characteristic, and an essential to spiritual development.

Solomon says, "A man of understanding is of an excellent spirit." Thus wisdom and understanding are necessary to an excellent spirit. The greater a man's physical and intellectual development, the greater are his possibilities of great spiritual excellence. But the highest type of moral excellence is as far from spiritual excellence as hell is from heaven,—as there is no degree of morality of sufficient excellence to save the soul. Hence the importance of striving for that excellence which is not only commendable, but sufficiently sustains in the sight of God to make us acceptable to him. Daniel, undoubtedly, had all the moral excellence common to man, but while he had these, he had still more, he had an excellent spirit. And for this he was commended. His excellency of spirit was the commendable feature of his life. And because of this in his life, God manifested his power, and conferred honor upon him. He loved righteousness and found God. The righteous man is more excellent than his neighbor, or the unrighteous. Then the righteous man is a man of an excellent spirit, the perfect man—the typical man.

THE BADGE OF DISCIPLESHIP.

BADGES, as distinctive marks, have an early origin, and their design or use is not complimentary to human-kind. Away back in the antediluvian world, Adam had a son who murdered his brother, and the curse that was pronounced upon him was so great that he told God that he could not endure it. To assuage his fears and protect his body from physical injury by those who rose up after him, a mark or badge was placed upon him. This was to distinguish him as a man-slayer, and remind all who saw it that a double curse would fall upon the one who laid hands upon him, with intent to kill.

And from that time onward, badges, as marks of distinction, became more common, so that to-day all organizations of men have their badges and uniforms, as marks of distinction.

Under the Mosaic dispensation these badges had the divine sanction, because it was an age of literalism and eye-service. The ribbon of blue was essential to Israel's safety, as it was so commanded of God, and in it there was a commendable design. But as the Jewish worship degenerated, the true design was lost sight of, and their distinctive forms became insignificant and empty of all design and power, as far as they were recognized by God; so that, when Christ came there was but little left to designate God's people, outside of empty badges and forms. The scribes and the Pharisees had their badges, and they made broad their phylacteries—they took pride in them, that everybody might see and know just who they were and what they professed. They enlarged upon them until they had lost all their significance and were no more representative. Hence, God showed his displeasure toward them by designating the users as deceivers and hypocrites.

When Christ came to establish his religion, which was not one of sight, but of faith and spirit, he laid aside all these formal badges, and adopted one that was in harmony with the character of his religion. A badge was needed to designate the subjects of his kingdom. But he wanted one that came from the heart. It was to be of the spirit, and not of the loom or the engraver's tools. It was not to be an empty sign of something, but the fruit and outgrowth of the real thing itself. Hence, he adopts the badge of love.

"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

The soldier may don his uniform while he may be no soldier in deed. The different orders have their different badges and grips, but these do not give assurance that they will be true to the oaths they have taken. The most ignoble traitor may enshroud himself in the Stars and Stripes, while a Judas may kiss his brother, as a "make-believe" that he loves him; but in the badge that Jesus gives, there can be no deception. Love is not a material mark that can be worn on our bodies or pinned on the lapel of our coats, but it is the "made-visible"-by-our-actions evidence that can be seen as unmistakably as we see apples grow on our trees.

This is a badge that can be seen and known by all men in all countries and by all classes. It is the badge that neither time nor customs change. By it Noah, Moses, David, Jonathan, the prophets, and all the good of past ages were known. Wherever this badge was exhibited, there was a child of God, though it was not then set forth as the distinctive badge of Christian discipleship.

Since the introduction of the Christian dispensation, it has had placed upon it the divine sanction, as the visible and practical badge of discipleship. By this shall all men know. There may be other evidences of discipleship, but they are known comparatively only by the few, and even then a few may be deceived. But as the religion was designed for all nations, the badge of discipleship must be as universal as the religion which it is intended to indicate.

This badge is not an extraneous substance that is affected by climate or soil, but is an undeveloped principle possessed by us all, and is developed into the Christian badge through the reception and retention of the Holy Spirit.

My Christian brother, have you this badge of discipleship, or are you priding yourself in your profession, or your outward appearance? The scribes and Pharisees tried to do it in this way: they took special pains to make them broad and visible, so that they could be seen of men. How different the Christian's badge! "Let not your left hand know what your right hand doeth," is the spirit, and such was the spirit of Christ. In many of his best ministries of love he would say, "Tell no man." Those who wear this badge do not need to blow a trumpet to have it seen; it is a light on the candlestick, and it can not be hid. Let it be our design, our purpose and our prayer to have constantly about us this badge. And then we can have the assurance that we are the disciples of Christ.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THE DRUNKARD'S CHILD.

'Twas evening, and the streets were rife
With many a passer-by,
When suddenly I caught the sound
Of a heart-broken cry.
I quickly pushed amidst the throng,
The sorrowing wail to quest,
And lo! beheld a weeping girl,
Convulsed in wretchedness.

How sad the sight! Her form was clad
In garments old and mean;
Her face was furrowed, yet her age
Was scarcely seventeen,
In pitying love I sought her side,
And asked, 'mid trembling fears,
"Since all the earth seems fair and glad,
O, maiden, whence these tears?"

The heaving bosom mutely told
Of raging storms beneath;
The fragile form swayed to and fro,
And shook with very grief.
Then, clasping both my hands, she cried,
In accents wild, though frail,
"If you would know from whence these tears,
Dear lady, hear my tale!

"Once I was blest; a happy home,
With love and wealth, were mine.
Supreme enjoyment filled my heart,
With pleasures most divine.
A noble father I possessed;
A mother, fair and sweet!
Thus, life was one long happiness—
A Paradise complete.

"How strange that all life's sweetest joys
Should in a moment pass!
For soon our happiness was drowned
Within the maddening glass,
Then mother, broken-hearted, died,
And all my peace took flight.
O, pitying God, reverse my doom,
And break this awful night!

"I can not tell—you can not know
What cruel sorrows smart;
How many wrongs have crushed my life,
And broken my poor heart.
My sky is ever overcast
With anguish fierce and wild!
O! who could count or know the pangs
That rend the drunkard's child?

"Each day, with aching, bleeding feet,
Amid the city's whirl,
I roam the pavements, cold and damp,
A poor, sick, hungry girl.
Alas! that the accursed draught,
Which from the goblet foams,
Should fiercely sunder loving ties,
And shatter happy homes!

"Nay, lady, do not harshly judge;
O, blame him tenderly!
For he was once as pure and good
As any man could be.
But now he treads the downward path.
Each step is marked by sin;
I try, but can not call him back—
Dear lady, pray for him!"

And now my prayers and tears ascend,—
Not for this one alone,
But all the vast, deluded host
That worship at Rum's throne.
O! may each noble, Christian hand,
In loving, sweet accord,
Help lift our fallen brethren up,
And lead them back to God!

THE STORY OF JOSEPH.

BY JAMES L. SWITZER.

THE story of Joseph and his brethren is the richest, most beautiful narrative that has ever been written. Its history forms the most pathetic passage in the whole Bible, and has never been equalled in any language nor in any age. I can not read that passage aloud. I always break down. I can not even read it to myself without uncontrollable weeping. My heart swells in spite of the most determined resistance, my eyes fill with tears, and sobs choke me. This may be weakness, but who can help it! Who can resist the melting power of divine pathos? Who can resist the music that touches every fibre of the human heart? Who can help but be moved when the Lord himself vibrates the sympathetic chord?

Other parts of the divine Message are grand. Like the lofty mountains do they tower far above the highest altitude of human effort. The Scriptures have one constant and unvarying internal sense — they every-where say, "The Hand that made us is divine!" But though they run all over the mental universe like a great mountain chain, yet, like a great mountain chain, they rise, here and there, into lofty eminences and grand and towering peaks that seem to overtop and overshadow everything beneath. They have their Sinais, that lift far above the Jordan and the plain below, and their Pisgahs, that furnish glorious views of all the Promised Land.

So in the spiritual riches and realms of divine literature there are masterpieces by the Master, and master-touches in some passages, that render them peculiarly radiant with the hues of heaven. Remember the story of Joseph is a narrative. There are those who blame Joseph for using his prophetic prescience to concentrate the wealth of Egypt under royal control, and impoverish the masses. Just how Joseph could have done otherwise, under the circumstances, and saved the people, might not be so easy to determine. But whether or not Joseph was wise in this, is not vouched for by the divine Author of this superlative story. He only states facts. He tells what was. He gives the whole Truth, and the manner and matter of his testimony is beyond rivalry and beyond cavil.

In this story, the most powerful temptations are resisted, the most horrible crimes are exposed. The strongest paternal affection is reciprocated in turn by an undying and unchangeable example of filial affection. The meanest treachery of a family of boys, is, by the piety of a father, and the sterling integrity and constancy of a son, counteracted, healed, buried, and they are given to the world as the patriarchs of a noble race, from one branch of which sprang the world's Redeemer.

Out of slavery and the prison a noble boy rises to sit on the throne and save a nation, save his family, and save his brethren who conspired against him. He forgives them all. He teaches them the grand lesson that God overrules all evil for ultimate good. He feeds them. He clothes them. He weeps with them, and their tears profusely flow together in one mighty, heart-felt baptismal font of reconciliation and forgiveness.

He sends them to their father with rich presents and noble greetings, and, tremblingly, and in amazement, the old man, revived in spirit, rises upon his staff, and, quivering with emotion, says, "It is enough; Joseph my son is yet alive: I will go and see him before I die."

"AND THE SAYING PLEASED ABSALOM WELL, AND ALL THE ELDERS OF ISRAEL." —2 Samuel 17: 4.

BY WM. M. LYON.

A STRANGE text, is it not? But if you wish to know why I use it on the present occasion, please allow your minds to turn back to Nos. 30 and 34 of the MESSENGER, to the words of sisters Flory and Miller, on the subject of the prayer-covering; or, what I would like still better, not only go back in your minds, but take up the papers, and read those articles again. (It won't hurt you one bit.) I can surely say that their sayings pleased me well, and it is to be hoped, "all the elders of Israel."

What I want to say now is that the sisters are going about the work in a right way—a way that pleases me, and should please us all. Only keep the work moving. The brethren have been preaching and writing a great deal on the subject, and we are very sorry to think that much of their counsel and instruction on the subject seems to go unheeded and disregarded.

Now, perhaps, if our sisters will go on in the good work already started, who knows but that a mighty change may be wrought in this way? Dear sisters, I write this to encourage you in this undertaking. Many of you are "living out" that part of the Christian profession along with other duties, but our heart saddens to think of the many who seem to say, by their actions, "I'm ashamed of this prayer-covering, but I'm compelled to wear it once in a while." Now, don't think that we wish to charge any of our sisters with being ashamed of this part of their profession, but we have often seen and heard many things that are well calculated to lead our minds in that way.

One reason for speaking so, is this: Have any of you ever noticed that the more fashionable the head-dress, the fewer times the covering is found there? To us, that reveals a great deal. But while we are writing this, we don't want to close without suggesting to our sisters that they make thorough work. In many places we have this trouble: The sisters go to meeting and wear the covering, but somehow so many of them forget to take their bonnets off; and especially have we often noticed this to be the case in towns and cities, or in places where the Brethren are not very numerous nor well known.

All these things go to teach us something, and I'm inclined to think that the world and fashionable Christianity(?) don't look on these scenes without drawing some conclusions. I will let our sisters think about what some of those conclusions may be.

I might say a great deal more, but as I said I wanted the sisters to discuss this subject further, and reason together, hoping that it may result in much good, I say adieu for the present.

THE SECOND BEAST.

BY W. F. GILLETT.

Number Five.

"And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus, and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their foreheads, or in their hands; and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years."—Matt. 20: 4.

WE have now come to the brightest part of our subject,—to the blessings we shall enjoy after obtaining the victory over the beast. This brings us to the "Millennium." In the consideration of this, we have the following divisions:

1. The Coming of Christ and the Resurrection of the Saints. When Christ ascended, and his disciples looked steadfastly toward heaven, as he went up, "behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1: 10, 11.

Christ himself said to his disciples, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also." John 14: 2, 3. Christ also told his disciples: "But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars of heaven shall fall, and the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken. And then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and glory." Mark 13: 24–26. It looks very much as though his coming were very near. The sun was darkened and the moon became as blood about the year 1780. About the year 1844 the stars fell. There is yet one thing to be fulfilled, and that is, the powers that are in heaven shall be shaken. This may have reference to the church when it would be persecuted by the second beast. "Now learn a parable of the fig tree: When her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is near: So ye in like manner, when ye shall see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the door. Verily I say unto you, that this generation shall not pass, till all these things be done." Mark 8: 28–30. "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen." Rev. 1: 7.

The dead saints will be raised, and the living saints will be caught up with them to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall they ever be with the Lord. 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17. The rest of the dead live not again till the thousand years are fulfilled. "This is the first resurrection. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power, but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." Rev. 20: 5, 6.

After all have met the Lord in the air, the Lord will descend upon the Mount of Olives. The prophet says, "And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley: and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal: yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah: and the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints with thee." Zech. 14: 4, 5. Christ ascended from the Mount of Olives, and if he comes again in like manner as the angels said he would, Acts 1: 11, he will descend on the Mount of Olives.

2. The Extent of Christ's Kingdom and the blessings that attend his subjects. I suppose we all look for him to reign on the earth. Rev. 5: 10. His kingdom will be universal. Zechariah says that the Lord shall be king over all the earth. Zech. 14: 9. "His dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth." Zech 9: 10; Ps. 72: 8. "And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Dan. 7: 27.

Christ's kingdom will be a universal kingdom. At the beginning of this age Satan will be bound and a seal set upon him that he should deceive the nations no more, until the thousand years should be fulfilled. There will be no more war, because the devil, the prince of war is bound. "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isaiah 2: 4. There will be no famine during this age. "And the floors shall be full of wheat, and the fats shall overflow with wine and oil." Joel 2: 24. "Then shall the earth yield her increase; and God, even our own God, shall bless us." Ps. 67: 6. "Yea, the Lord shall give that which is good; and our land shall yield her increase." Ps. 85: 12. "And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing. And the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the Lord, when I have broken the bands of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hand of those that served themselves of them." Eze. 34: 26, 27. Thus we see there will be no famine during this age, but they that get the victory over the beast will be perfectly happy and will receive all the blessings that mortal man could wish for.

3. The Duration of Christ's Kingdom. Paul says that Christ must reign until he hath put all enemies under his feet. 1 Cor. 15: 25. The last enemies that he will have to put under his feet, excepting death, will probably be Gog and Magog of Rev. 20: 8. When the thousand years are fulfilled, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go out to deceive the nations that are in the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog, to gather them together to battle. The number of them is as the sand of the sea. They shall compass the camp of the saints, but fire shall come down from God out of heaven, and devour them.

During the thousand years holiness and peace shall prevail. Every knee shall bow to Christ, and every tongue shall confess Jesus. The saints will be perfectly happy, and finally enter in through the gates into the New Jerusalem. Rev. 22: 14. There will be no tears and no death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. Rev. 21: 4. No wonder that John was told to write, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them." Rev. 14: 13.

THE ENDLESS REST.

BY LUCY ROSS.

THERE are no weary heads nor sorrowing hearts on the other side of Jordan! The rest of heaven will be the sweeter for the toils of earth. Jesus will soon bring us to rest in his Father's house. His rest will be glorious! It will be a rest from sin, a rest from suffering, a rest from sorrow and care,—the very rest that Jesus himself enjoys! We shall rest not only with him, but like him. Thanks be unto God for the glorious promise! Wearied one, look away from thy present suffering, and remember there is a rest remaining for thee! A little while yet, and thou shalt enter into rest!

FACTS ABOUT THE BIBLE.

SELECTED BY B. B. SWITZER.

A LEARNED prince of Granada, heir to the Spanish throne, imprisoned by order of the crown, for fear he should aspire to the throne, was kept in solitary confinement in the old prison at the place of skulls, Madrid. After thirty-three years in this living tomb, death came to his release and the following remarkable researches, taken from the Bible, and marked with a nail on the rough walls of his cell, told how the brain sought employment through the weary years.

In the Bible, the word Lord is found 1,853 times; the word Jehovah 6,855 times, and the word reverend but once, and that in the ninth verse of the 111th Psalm. The eighth verse of the 117th Psalm is the middle verse of the Bible. The 9th verse of the 8th chapter of Esther is the longest verse. John 11: 35 is the shortest. In the 107th Psalm four verses are alike. The 8th, 15th, 21st and 31st verses of the 136th Psalm end alike. No name or words with more than six syllables are found in the Bible. The 37th chapter of Isaiah and the 19th chapter of 2nd Kings are alike. The word girl occurs but once in the Bible, and that in the 3rd verse and 3rd chapter of Joel. There are in both parts of the Bible, 3,586,483 letters, 773,693 words, 31,373 verses, 1,189 chapters and 66 books. The 26th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, is the finest chapter to read. The most beautiful chapter in the Bible, is the 23rd Psalm. The four most inspiring promises are John 14: 2; John 6: 37; Matt. 11: 28; Psalms 37: 4. Isaiah 60: 1 is especially suited to the new convert. All who flatter themselves, and boast of their perfectness, should read the 6th chapter of Matthew. All humanity should put to practice the 6th chapter of St. Luke from the 20th verse to its ending.

BURYING THE TALENT.

BY D. G. WOLF.

WE read, in Matthew and Luke, accounts similar to each other, in regard to this matter. The question is, Can this be applied to us at present? We think it can. The Savior said, The kingdom of heaven is as a man taking a far journey into a country, who called his own servants and delivered unto them his goods. To one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one. He gave to every man according to his ability, and then took his journey. We learn that when their lord left them, those servants that received the five and two talents went to work, or, in other words, traded with the same. We discover that when their lord returned, they had, by diligent work, doubled their talents or, in other words, had gained a hundred per cent. With this their lord was well pleased. When he heard how diligent they had been, he said, "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things. I am willing to entrust to thy care many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy lord."

It was not so with the other. We may conclude this man lazy, or of an indolent disposition, for we learn that he went and hid his talent in the earth. We do not think he dug very deep, to hide his lord's money. We presume he continued in idleness, but, no doubt, he felt somewhat condemned in the matter, and prepared some excuses to offer to his lord upon his return.

We find that, upon the lord's return, the servant comes up with the talent which he had buried and says, "Lord, I knew thee, that thou art a hard man to get along with, and I was afraid and went and hid thy money in the earth. Lo, here is that thine is."

But with this his lord was not well pleased. He begins to chastise him, saying, "If you knew so much about me, you should have done differently. You should have put my money into the bank that I might have received my own with usury. The lord commanded that the talent be taken from him and that he should be cast into outer darkness, where there is wailing and gnashing of teeth. When our Good Lord was here, he established the kingdom of heaven here represented in this narrative. When we are regenerated and born again, get into his kingdom, we become his servants; and upon this he promises to grant unto us the gift of the Holy Spirit which is given to lead us into all truth, and as we are commanded to search the Scriptures as they are truth, the Spirit, if suffered to do so, will lead in this direction. Here, then, we go to work. We are ready to change or trade our old notions for new ones, and to give up the things of the world, that we once loved so much, for the things we did not love. We will ever try to be engaged in the work of the church. We will point sinners to Jesus who has done so much for us. We will ever be ready to help advance the missionary cause, by providing the means entrusted to us for the same. We will ever be ready to administer to the wants of the poor and needy. We will be ready to visit the sick and the afflicted in their distress, and if right true to the leading of the Spirit, we will keep ourselves unspotted from the world. By so doing we can obtain in this life an hundredfold, and in the world to come eternal life. We shall hear the welcome words, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

On the other hand, if we become slothful in business, and sit down in idleness, or bury our energies and influence for good, how can we expect to be justified by any excuse whatever? What do we hear? "Take the unprofitable servant, bind him hand and foot and cast him out into outer darkness, where there is weeping and eternal woe."

OUR SPIRITUAL GARDENS.

BY MARY M. GIDSON.

THIS subject was proposed to me by a little nine-year-old, though I had given the subject some thought previously.

Man's work, in beautifying and enlarging the mind with good thoughts, is in perfect harmony with the works of God. Evil thoughts come to us quickly, but we should avoid them by constant watchfulness and by cultivating in their place good thoughts.

God's work is seen in majestic power, in foaming water-falls, the beautiful forest, the green valleys, the mighty hills and mountains, the sparkling stream. Man himself is a manifestation of the power of God. God shows himself in man in various ways. Love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, etc., are all attributes of a sin-redeemed nature. If we possess them, we shall reap a great reward in the eternal world.

If we have joy, it will beam forth in our countenance, and our souls will be in rapture divine. If we have peace, it will be a declaration of "Thy will be done." If we are long-suffering, we will bear and forbear. If we are gentle, we will be kind and loving, do more good to others and expect less for ourselves. If full of goodness, we will have the broadest field imaginable to work in his calling. If we have faith, it will be "the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." It will be a foretaste of realms of bliss. The meek are lowly and contrite in spirit,—after God's own heart. Temperance is the balance-wheel to rule us in all things, that God would have us to do, to be true followers of Christ.

We never tire of God's work in beautifying the world when we view nature in all its wonderful works, neither should we become tired or careless in regard to rooting up and casting out the evil that may be lurking within us. God has given man intelligence, by which he is to cultivate the inner man of the heart, so as to make a better creature of himself, and mightier in his deeds.

How often many of us are careless and indifferent when we have glorious opportunities to do a great work for the Master! Give a child good, wholesome literature to read and he will grow up bright and intelligent, always ready to do all the good he can in any line. You may take a child any way you will, generally it will follow its early training. If taken at the proper time, the mind will naturally develop as God would have it. By sending our children to the Sunday-school, they see and know the interest taken by others, and are inclined to follow after the good they learn. How sad to see how careless some parents are in not providing for children under their care! Golden opportunities are lost, never to be recalled, which might have been improved.

Bible questions are always new to the young, as may be seen by the interest they manifest in trying to learn. "God gave the Bible as he gave the world, wherein appears the truest beauty and the deepest unity." So God has left it to mankind to cultivate the mind to his own glory, in training up our children in the way he would have them go.

How deeply, at heart, ought all parents be concerned about the welfare of the children God has given them! They are young, tender plants that need the best of culture, and care should be taken to give them good training. They should have consecrated care, such as Hannah of old gave to her son Samuel. Is a child, that can talk, too young to lisp the name of Jesus, or bow the humble knee in meek submission and reverence to his name? Nay, verily! They dearly love to pray their little prayers, and ask and answer questions about Jesus. Try it, dear mothers, by taking your babes upon your lap a few times, and you will be surprised indeed!

How awful for parents to stand in the light of their own dear children! Children are commanded to remember their Creator in the days of their youth, and their parents should be much concerned in cultivating their wondering minds. God wants us to be earnest, willing, working creatures, that nothing good remain undone that will better the children of men

The human family is very peculiar. Instead of being thankful and praising God in cultivating the good talents he gave us, by using them to a good and noble purpose, we grieve because we do not possess more. We say, "Oh if I could just do what this or that one does, I would love to work." Ah, my dear brother, or sister, don't we know if we will work and toil to cultivate the talent that God has given us, he has promised he will add to it? Exercising and cultivating our talents makes a well-rounded, balanced Christian in character and culture.

We must ask and trust God for wisdom, to do his will, and to be a proper example to those around us. We are watched and patterned after, more or less all through life, and should be ready and willing to do with our might what our hands find to do, in his name, so that others may grasp the spirit! If we strive but little, we may expect but little, and if we strive much in behalf of the human race, God will reward us in due time.

If we will unite all our talents with God's numerous blessings, we will achieve the highest results. As we can not exist without God's blessing, why not give back to him what he has given us? He has justly endowed each and every one with talents of his spirit in some way, and we all know our gifts, and should work to gain more. The relation existing between God and the human family is wonderful and mighty, and more work should be accomplished, that the true standard might be obtained. If we do not cultivate our talents, we produce but a sorry specimen of the inner man. We are plants in God's garden, and should produce much better fruit of the Spirit by being up and about our Master's business concerning our soul's welfare. Some are not as talented as others, but why let our talents be in a dormant state? God is not pleased with this. If we possess but little, that little is required. If much is required, and if we let it go undone, we will have to bow the knee, and confess with our tongue the golden opportunities we neglected. How, then, we will mourn and lament our indifference and carelessness, if rejected by him who doeth all things well!

Brethren and sisters, arise, let us unite our forces and work mightily to do his will, that we may prove to the world we are children of our Heavenly King! Let us see to it that our spiritual gardens are cultivated with divine care in Jesus' name!

THE NOBLES OF TEKOA.

BY LIZZIE H. DELP.

NEHEMIAH was a cup-bearer to the king of Persia, in the palace of Shushan. Then he was appointed governor of Judea by Artaxerxes, the king. Among the gay scenes of that proud court, he served the God of his fathers faithfully. With sorrow he noted that the temple had been dishonored, he mourned over the desecration of his father's tomb while he was an alien in a strange land, and, finally, with holy patriotism he built the walls of Jerusalem. He kept a careful record of the work and noted the delinquency of the nobles of Tekoa, "they put not their necks to the work of the Lord." Zadok, the son of Baana, repaired, and next unto them the Tekoites repaired; but their nobles stood aloof from the project. They never dreamed that thousands of years afterwards the people would know of their slothfulness.

In the writings of Moses we read of the covenant God made with him on Mount Sinai, of the ceremonies in the temple, the sin-offerings and burnt sacrifices that were offered for years, until the people forgot the God who had brought them up from Egypt, and who saved them by his almighty power. They worshiped strange gods, and the anger of the Lord was kindled against them.

Their promised land was laid waste, Jerusalem was a desolation, and by the Babylonian waters they hanged their harps on the willows and refused to sing the loved songs of Zion in a strange land. In every line of their sad history is woven a warning for us.

Jesus came to redeem, not alone God's chosen Israel, but the whole sin-cursed human race. The disciples asked him about the restoration of the kingdom of Israel, and Jesus said, "Ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth." In the Acts of the Apostles is recorded the holy zeal with which they preached the Gospel to every nation in every clime and season. Nothing could deter them; they rejoiced that they were counted worthy to suffer a martyr's death for Jesus. The billows of persecution rolled higher around them, the dark surges of bigotry almost swept away the few little ones who were clinging to the Rock in those troublous times, yet the witnesses of Christ went all around to tell the sweet story of Jesus and his love for sinners. We read of a few, who, like the nobles of Tekoa, would not work with them.

The present is another epoch in Christ's history of the world. His witnesses are not molested. We have grand opportunities to work for Christ. Some are sent to heathen lands to proclaim the glad tidings. In our large cities as well as on the fertile western plains we need those who will declare, as far as the force of words will go, the honors of the Lamb "that was slain, but is alive for evermore."

There is something wrong somewhere. The world would be better than it is, if all professing Christians were true to their vows, but we fear that in many of them the light is darkness. By their works they deny all knowledge of Christ. Like the nobles of Tekoa they put not their necks to the work of the Lord, — they are a hinderance to the advancement of Christ's work. We can all witness for Christ by living for him. The world is a troubled ocean, and on its fluctuating waves we can not stand firm, — we soon find our Christian life warping under its pernicious influences, but, by keeping near the cross, we may live so that others can see that we are watching, praying and working until the end.

COMMUNION WITH CHRIST.

BY EFFIE GIBSON.

COMMUNION is described as a state of giving and receiving. We give to Christ our faith and our obedience, glory, honor and praise, and he gives to us rest, the "peace which passeth understanding," and an abiding hope of everlasting life.

"I will, therefore, that men pray everywhere; lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting." As prayer is one medium of communion with him, I think we learn from the above that he wishes it, and that it is possible for us to hold sweet communion with him at all times and in all places. On the street, in the work-shop or office, in the kitchen or parlor; on our beds at night when restful slumber refuses to come, "Draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to you." Indeed, we believe that communion with Christ will ofttimes bring, to the sleepless one, rest, as nothing else will, by withdrawing the mind from the cares of this life, and centering them on him who alone can bring perfect peace to body and mind.

Our Lord knew that the cares and vanities of this life would be hinderances to our communion with him and consequent spiritual growth. He knew that among those who should in the future take up their cross and follow him, would be some who have very little religion or disposition to worship in their natures, and that to such it would be a hard and constant struggle to avoid growing cold and falling away. Hence, he urges us all through his Word to close and continual communion with him by prayer, and "teaching and admonishing one another in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in our hearts to the Lord."

By habitual communion with Christ we grow strong and are prepared to withstand the temptations of the evil one and are able to resist them. Some one has said:

> "Satan trembles when he sees
> The weakest saint upon his knees."

If this be true, we should be much on our knees and, like Jacob, wrestle there till the morning, if the blessing can not be received otherwise.

If we would seek communion with Christ, when at our daily labor, and pray continually for wisdom to guide us in the use of our worldly goods, and in all our transactions with the children of men, instead of racking our brains and losing sleep, speculating on how much our wheat and corn, cattle and horses, stocks and bonds, or other investments will profit us, then would we begin to know what higher Christian life means. Then might we expect to see the suppression of a multitude of evils that are blighting this fair land of ours. Then would our churches be full, for people would want to go with us because God is with us. Then would our congregations be filled with the Holy Ghost and with power. Then would our faces shine as did Moses' after he had been with the Lord, and our communion with Christ and with each other would indeed be sweet and we would be filled with all the fullness of God. All who are Christ's have known the blessedness of communion with him; then, why should we allow ourselves to be led off into the by-paths of neglect and folly? Shall we continue to strive for this blessed communion with Christ, for this higher Christian life, or shall we let the greed of gain and gold sap the life of our churches and ourselves, till, whatever of spirituality we may have once possessed, is only a dim dream of the past?

When we are called on to settle our account with the Judge of the quick and dead, will we have to say, "Lord, here is thy talent! Really, I have not had time, while in the world, to work for thee. All my neighbors and friends were striving so hard to gain a home and riches on the earth, that I caught the same spirit and as they increased in goods, I thought I must also. I strove hard for worldly riches until my time and strength were both spent; and when I did finally think of the talent thou hadst given me I had neither time nor opportunity to improve it! Time, opportunity, happiness, heaven, all lost. Nothing gained.

REVIEWING.

BY FANNY MORROW.

A FREQUENT reviewing of lessons in educational work is considered the best method of attaining a high degree of scholarship. One who loves the study of the Bible finds it both a necessity and a pleasure to review frequently the beautiful lessons taught therein. Many books can be read and laid aside for all time. Not so with the Scriptures. When one becomes interested in their perusal, they become an inexhaustible mine of treasures.

There never has been a work published, of art or science, but some scholar has, by diligent application, been able to master it. Some persons have been able to hold each volume in their hands and say truthfully, "I have exhausted that volume; I understand and comprehend fully every principle laid down therein, and can explain the reasons for each one." Not so of the Bible. In all the hundreds of years of its existence no Bible student has been able to make such a declaration, however much he may have studied the volume. Why is this? Because the eternal, infinite, incomprehensible God is the author of the Bible, while all other books are the productions of mortal man.

True, the mind of man, renewed by the spirit of Christ, can bring forth treasures new and old—can trace reason, knowledge, light, liberty and life in the glorious plan of salvation, and that hope we read about, reaches out and anchors the soul firmly to the time when we shall know more, — "when that which is perfect is come." In the meantime let us keep on reviewing.

While reviewing some numbers of our present volume of GOSPEL MESSENGER, I saw a piece in No 32 on "Condition of the Dead; or, Spiritualism," by Mrs. Samuel Neal, which is an article that well bears reviewing. The manner in which the subject is treated is Scriptural; and if any one has doubts, or is inclined to believe in the return of departed spirits, let him search those Scripture references therein given, carefully, and he will receive light. When we bury our dear loved ones from our sight, our agonized hearts cry out for some sign or token of their presence, and taking advantage of this state of mind, the enemy steps in with the unscriptural delusion,—"their spirits will return and commune with you," etc. When king David lost his darling child, he declared emphatically, "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." 2 Sam. 12: 23. How much better to accept God's plan and be comforted with an everlasting consolation than to accept the earth-born delusion of Spiritualism and be led by a phantom or shadow of a hope which will only lead a trusting heart to misery and woe.

We have known some honest, kind-hearted people who led upright, moral lives, carried away from their early faith in the Bible by the sophistries of Spiritualism. They wanted to receive some of the Bible as true while other parts were false. They believed Christ was a very good man. They could endorse his teachings, they loved to speak of his life bringing to our knowledge more of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, etc., but they deny that he was the Son of God.

Christ claimed to be the Son of God as is recorded in St. John 9: 35–37, also in other places in the New Testament, and unless he was just what he claimed to be, he was a liar and a hypocrite and so their charming story of his being a good man falls to the ground. They would scarcely want to teach that a liar was a good man. One of their pleas was, if a mother died and left little children, those, in charge of the children, would be kinder and take better care of them if they believed the spirit of the mother was hovering near them and knew all that befell them. Now, if those persons believe that the eyes of God are upon them and they must give an account to him for all they do, surely they would care more than for the eyes of a poor, weak woman. "Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister unto them who shall be heirs of salvation?" Heb. 1: 14. This has often been quoted to show that the spirits of our dead return, but reference to the preceding verse shows that angels are referred to and not the spirit of man. See that the children of men would not so easily sell their hope of heaven and trust in fables!

In MESSENGER No. 34 we have "Deception" by Riley C. Brubaker, a very good article to read as a sequel to this on "Spiritualism." Let us all review it and think on these things.

In No. 36 we have "Fashion Notes," by Sarah M. Saunders. Let us review that and never, never let it be said again that our plainest members are the ones who follow the abominable fashion which she delineates.

In No. 38, the same sister gives us something on "How We can let our Light Shine," and, surely, where such disorder exists, as she describes, on love-feast occasions, if there ever was any light there, it must now have turned to darkness.

JEAN Paul Richter thus beautifully contrasts these two qualities of the soul:—"Who is the greater sage—he who lifts himself above the stormy time and contemplates it without action; or he who, from the high region of calmness, throws himself into the battling tumult of the times? Sublime is it, when the eagle soars upward through the storm into the clear heaven; but sublimer, when floating in the serene blue above, he darts down through the thick storm-cloud to the rock-hung eyrie, where his unfeathered young live and tremble."

A CHOSEN GENERATION.

Synopsis of a Sermon preached by Eld. Geo. W. Studebaker in Fredonia Church, as given by Bro. Allen A. Oberlin.

"But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of him who has called you out of darkness into his marvellous light."—1 Pet. 2 9.

Our subject consists of two parts chosen and generation. The latter we shall treat first. This subject has been brought to bear upon our mind, from the fact that it has been largely commented upon by different contributors of the GOSPEL MESSENGER. About twenty years ago I found myself debating with a Universalist. My opponent contended that forty years were considered a generation, and that all things were fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem. We, therefore, investigated this subject in the fear of God.

Generation is not a specific, but a generic term. For illustration, travel is a generic term, because it will bear two definitions, ride or walk, either of these definitions being a specific term, because specifying the mode of travel.

Webster defines generation as "race." Out of nine translations I have at my command, seven render this subject, "race." The connection also shows this to be a correct rendering. Peter says, "Ye are a spiritual house, which in time past were not a people, but are now a people of God." Again Isaiah 53: 8 reads, "Who shall declare his generation, for he was cut off out of the land of the living." To this question the Savior answers and says, "I give unto thee the keys of the kingdom." Paul also says, "He has given unto us the ministry of reconciliation." Matt. 24: 34; Mark 13: 30. "This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled." Out of nine translations, above named, four render "this generation,"— "this race." The connection shows that the all things were only partly fulfilled at the destruction of Jerusalem, and will not receive the full completion until the second advent of our Blessed Savior into this world. Hence the word "race" is correct. You can apply it to the Jews, for, according to the teachings of the Bible, while the world lasts, they shall be a distinct people. You may also apply it to Christians and it will hold good, for Christ promised to be with his followers down to the end of the world, and Paul says, in 1 Thess. 4: 15, "For we that are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not come before them that sleep." Again, "We shall not all sleep." 1 Cor. 15: 51. Christians, or this generation, or race, will not all have passed away when Christ comes.

All prophecy will receive its fulfillment in due season. The coming of the Son of God will come to pass, after other things, which have to be prophesied, are fulfilled. All things will come to pass in the order of their prophecy, before the second advent of Christ, for ages are moments with the Almighty, and a thousand years are as one day. God surveys his vast plans in one view, and declares his design in one word to his prophets, though it may require ages to fulfill them. Prophecy may receive a partial fulfillment at one period, and at another be more fully developed, and afterwards be fully completed.

This brings us to our second proposition "Chosen." I take the position that man is a free moral agent, for had Judas refused to carry out God's design, another plan would have been chosen. Life and death are set before us. We have the power to choose life, or to reject the counsel of God against ourselves. Deut. 30: 19; Joshua 24: 15. Hence, when we choose, we become chosen, elect and ordained. Mary chose that good part, hence she was the chosen of the Lord. Paul says "God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the spirit unto obedience." Luke says, Acts 13: 48, "And as many as were ordained unto eternal life believed." Ordained means to set in order, to arrange according to rule, to regulate.—Webster. The rules and regulations in God's Word set forth, for the sinner to come to, are, (1) Facts; (2) Testimony; (3) Faith; (4) Feeling; (5) Action.

Our testimony produces faith, and faith produces feeling, and feeling produces action, therefore, our testimony is in ratio to our faith, and our faith in ratio to our feelings, and our feelings in ratio to our actions. To illustrate, supposing some one tells me, "I passed by your lot since you left home, and I saw there was five dollars worth of your property destroyed." I accept the testimony and believe. I feel the loss and my actions are accordingly. But supposing I am creditably informed that my son met with an accident and lost his life. Instead of considering it lightly, as in loss of property, I would sensibly feel the loss of an only son in my old age. I would act accordingly.

Again, if our faith is right, we feel right, and feeling right, our actions are right. Our actions always show whether we are right or not. It is a Bible truth as well as a philosophical principle, that all our moral powers are controlled by what we believe.

A SPECIES OF SKEPTICISM.

BY SAMUEL WEIMER.

"Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins."—Acts 2: 38.

We are often told that "for the remission of sins," means that sins have been remitted, thus making baptism a symbol.

In this "compound" Scripture injunction we have two commands, synonymous in effect. What are they? Repentance for the remission of sins, and baptism for the remission of sins. It follows, then, that, if a person is to be baptized because he, prior to baptism, received remission of sins, he also is to repent because, prior to repentance, he received remission of sins.

Who will accede to this? Not one in a thousand. No one believes that a person can obtain remission of sins prior to repentance, neither does the Scripture imply it. If otherwise, the question, sprung by the Pentecostians, would have been without foundation. "Men and bret hren, what shall we do to be saved?" In answer to their question they were commanded to do two things, —first, repent; second, to be baptized. What for? To be saved, or for the remission of sins. It is absurd, then, to believe that a person can obtain pardon, prior to repentance, and no less so, to believe that remission of sins is necessary prior to baptism.

Does the apostle Peter make it any less necessary to be baptized than to repent for the remission of sins? That is just what those virtually say, who believe remission necessary, prior to baptism, and thus make repentance bring about remission of sins, while they have baptism for quite a different purpose. Thus they differ from Peter. He makes repentance and baptism jointly necessary for the remission of sins. There is no more reason why a person should obtain remission of sins by keeping one of these commands, i. e., repentance, and leave the other undone, than there is, to believe that a person is justified before God to keep one command in the Bible and ignore the others. It would be no more right than to be baptized in the name of the Father, and not of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, or to partake of the Communion bread and not of the cup, to represent Christ's broken body and shed blood.

The unreasonableness of such deficient work can readily be seen, and to believe that God will bless such work, is without foundation. As certain as language means anything, so certain Peter places repentance and baptism on the same basis. Both are for the remission of sins, and to say that remission is necessary prior to baptism, is only to say that remission is necessary prior to repentance.

"YE ARE THE SALT OF THE EARTH."

BY C. H. BROWN.

"Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted?"—Matt. 5: 13.

That which makes salt so valuable and indispensable to the human family is its preservative properties. Salt, applied to animal matter, will preserve it, but if the salt have lost its savor, or strength, soon the work of decomposition takes place, and all is lost.

In this sense, no doubt, our Savior makes use of the term "salt." This earth rests under a curse and must, sooner or later, go to destruction. It was a lack of righteousness on the earth that caused the old world to be destroyed by water. God saw that the wickedness of men was great in the earth, and he had to destroy them from the face of the earth. Gen. 6: 5–7.

Again, it was a lack of salt or righteous intelligence, that brought destruction on the populous city of Sodom, for the Lord said, "Becauee the cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because their sin is very grievous, I will go down now and see whether they have done altogether according to the cry which has come unto me, and if not, I will know." Gen. 18: 20–21. Abraham felt anxious for that doomed people, and asked the Lord whether he would destroy the righteous with the wicked. But, alas! — there was not a sufficient number who possessed the preserving elements of righteousness, consequently fire and brimstone came down from heaven upon them and consumed them. Jude says that Sodom and Gomorrah and the cities about them, are set forth for an example of the vengeance of eternal fire. Jude 7.

In the burning of those ancient cities, we see prefigured the great conflagration which shall take place when this world's history is finished. The prophet Malachi says, "For behold the days come that shall burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea and all that do wickedly shall be stubble." Mal. 4: 1. Peter says, "But the heavens and the earth, which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." 2 Peter 3: 7. The question might be asked, When shall this soul-horrifying scene be realized? When the salt of the earth shall have so nearly lost its savor that it is no longer able to perserve it. Jesus said, "Ye are the salt of the earth." Thus followers of Jesus are said to be the salt, but if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it,—that is the earth,—be salted?

When we look around over the vast multitudes of professed Christians of the present day, we conclude there is salt in abundance, but is the salt pure and fresh, from the inexhaustible fountain of God's Word? Abraham, no doubt, expected to find a sufficient number righteous in Sodom to preserve it. He asked whether the Lord would spare them, if fifty be found righteous? From this language we infer that there was a goodly number who professed righteousness, but the penetrating eye of Jehovah discerned a lack in the elements constituting the salt, there being only three saved.

Oh, that every one that has named the name of Jesus would examine himself and see whether he have not lost his savor! Remember, the Gospel principles are the elements of salvation upon which the Christian must feed daily, in order that he may be the true salt. Jesus said, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the month of God." Matt. 4: 4. The church is represented as one body. 1 Cor. 12: 20. As such each member has certain duties to perform. The ordinances of the Gospel originated in the mind of Deity, and the faithful performance of them may certainly be numbered with the elements which constitute the salt of the earth.

What a sad picture to see them all set aside as non-essential, by some churches, while others observe but two, — baptism and Communion! By some the Lord's Supper is taken in the morning instead of evening.

Our Master gave us some of the essential elements of the salt in his Sermon on the Mount. He says, "Blessed are the poor in spirit. Where will be this element in popular Christendom to-day? Jesus saith to the Laodiceans, "I will spue thee out of my mouth, because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked: I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be rich; and white raiment, that thou mayest be clothed, and that the shame of thy nakedness do not appear; and anoint thine eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see." Rev. 3: 17–18.

This language depicts before our minds the deplorable condition of a vast number of professed Christians whose hearts have been lured away from the heavenly treasure, and attracted by the glittering baubles of this fleeting and transitory world. Thus they have become rich and exalted in spirit, and failed to realize their dependence on the mercies of God, or their need of the Savior. Let us all examine ourselves and say, "Lord, is it I?"

Christ, in the Sermon on the Mount, says: "Blessed are they that mourn." Paul says, "Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of." 2 Cor. 7: 10. Where do we find this element to-day? Certainly not among the churches who are gratifying the carnal appetites of their flesh by going to places of revelry, such as picnics, festivals, church fairs and many other like fruits of the flesh.

The apostle Paul refers to these last days as perilous times, when men shall be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof, "from such," he says, "turn away." 2 Tim. 3. Do we daily mourn because of the sinfulness of our nature, and long to rise higher in the scale of moral purity? If we thus mourn, we have the promise that we shall be comforted.

Meekness we find to be one of the elements of the true salt The Master said, "Blessed are the meek." Where do we find this principle of meekness manifested? Hardly among the proud, arrogant devotees of fashion and lovers of the praise of men more than the praise of God. We should ask ourselves whether we have this element of meekness in our character. Are we willing in honor to prefer one another?

The hungering and thirsting after righteousness is an essential element to that salt. Matt. 5: 6. Our churches are generally in a healthy spiritual condition, so that their appetites are craving that Bread which comes down from heaven? Is it their "meat" to do the will of him that sent them, John 4: 34, or is that heavenly manna becoming loathsome to many, who, in their hearts, have gone back to the weak and beggarly elements? Jesus said, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

In conclusion we ask, "Where is the salt to-day that has not lost its savor?" Let us, dear brethren and sisters, examine ourselves and see whether we are perfect and entire,—wanting nothing! Let us carefully cultivate all the Gospel principles, that the salt in us may be perfect enough to preserve us in that great day, when the elements shall melt with fervent heat, when the earth, also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up. We believe that the time is near when the salt of the earth will not be sufficient to preserve it. This is to be the condition of the moral world when Jesus comes. He says, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Luke 18: 8. This implies a question, whether he would find faith. The time has come when it is necessary "earnestly to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints."

COVETOUSNESS.

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

THERE are two kinds of covetousness—the one good the other evil; the one has the approbation of God, the other his condemnation. The one Christ commends; the Bible teaches it, the apostles taught it, the Holy Ghost urges it, and holy men every-where believe and advocate it. On the other hand, evil coveting is opposed by Christ, the Bible, the Holy Ghost, the apostles and holy men of all ages.

The first argument in favor of Gospel covetousness is founded upon 1 Cor. 13: 31. "Covet earnestly the best gifts." This is said in connection with what God had done. He had set some in the church and named them apostles, prophets, teachers. When these had been properly set, their work followed; and that which was in them was called gifts. Some had the gift of working miracles; some had the gift of healing; some of helps or aids in apostolic labor; some had the gift of governing; some the gift of tongues or languages. All were not apostles, nor were all prophets, nor teachers, nor miracle-workers. Only some — not all—had the gift of healing. Only a part could interpret, and more, he who could heal was not permitted to despise him that could not; nor could he who taught, despise the work of an interpreter. All those who had gifts constituted "the body of Christ," and were "members in particular." Each one was urged to covet the best gifts,—and to covet them earnestly. It is, therefore, right to covet, to teach, and to prophesy,—to make known the way of the Lord, and persuade sinners to repent and believe the Gospel.

Sometimes brethren earnestly covet to teach—to proclaim the Word, or sound it out in all the regions round about, and when called upon to instruct and edify, they are cut down and driven to silence,—and sometimes to indifference by the uncalled-for assertion that "they want to preach." Is it a sin to covet to preach? Is not preaching one of the best gifts? And are we not commanded to covet the best?

It is wrong to say that such and such persons desire to preach, though it be true; for it is said not to honor and edify but in derision. "Despise not prophesyings." 1 Thess. 5: 20. It is equally wrong for a brother to "become hurt" when some one says, "he wants to preach." To become indifferent and turn away from holy work because some one speaks derisively of you, is an acknowledgment of weakness which you should not have, for no man can preach well, unless he has a desire to preach. He must love the Lord, and the work of the Lord with all his heart. I do not mean that a man should run before he is sent; for it is well that he tarry at Jerusalem until he be endued with power; but I mean that no man should be hindered in testifying for Jesus when he feels that he has a message to deliver. A little more simplicity among us — a little more confidence — a little more equality would not injure Christianity, nor cause the hearts of God's children to wax cold. As a final proof I will quote 1 Cor. 14: 39, "Covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues."

The second argument in favor of covetousness is founded upon 1 Peter 2: 2. "As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby." The command is to desire,—that is to covet or wish for,—the sincere milk of the Word. It is not here requested to covet the Word, but the milk of the Word,—the purifying, liberating and illuminating doctrines of the Gospel. Do not taint the sincere milk of the Word with the poison of your errors!

The third argument in favor of heavenly covetousness is founded on 1 Tim. 3: 1, "If a man desire the office of a bishop he desireth a good work." The apostle does not here lay a prohibition against coveting the office of a bishop, but rather commends the desire. It is therefore wrong to charge a man for having this desire. This is his privilege, and let no man rob him of it; for what God grants, all men must.

A man, however, may desire the office, yet not possess the qualifications laid down in the Gospel. It is one thing to desire a thing, and another to possess it; and in this case a man must possess a number of things before he can obtain the office. And while there are some things he must possess, there are certain things that must not be in his heart before he can occupy the position. Let us look at the list:

He Must Be	He Must Not Be
1. Just.	1. Greedy.
2. Holy.	2. Covetous.
3. Sober.	3. Self-willed.
4. Patient.	4. A novice.
5. Vigilant.	5. Soon angry.
6. Blameless.	6. A striker.
7. Hospitable.	7. A brawler.
8. Apt to teach.	8. A wineblbber.
9. A good ruler.
10. Of good report.
11. Of good behavior.
12. Husband of one wife.

A brother, who is at present an able bishop, recently said: "I never desired the office of a bishop, but I desired and coveted the qualifications of a bishop." He would not have erred had he coveted the office; nor did he err when he coveted the qualifications of a bishop. Doubtless his desire for them stimulated him to seek for them more earnestly, and kept him from many temptations. "Covet earnestly the best gifts."

It would be well, and would go far towards evangelizing friends and neighbors, if every member would covet, and seek with earnestness, the qualifications of a bishop. These gifts are noble, and blessed is he who possesses them. It is right to have them, right to seek them, right to use them. Covet to be just, to be sober, holy, temperate, blameless, vigilant, hospitable,—covet to teach, to be a good ruler at home, to be of good report, of good behavior, and to hold fast the faithful Word. Covet a crown of glory; covet to inherit the kingdom of God; covet eternal life, and coveting all these, trust in God, labor on and the end will be both peaceful and joyful!

BRO. M. M. ESHELMAN has been recently laboring in the ministry for the Brethren in Cass Co., Mo.

IF it be true that it is God's prerogative to command, and our business, as his creatures, to obey, and none will attempt to deny the proposition, then how do those who say it does not make any difference whether we obey in all things or not, expect to answer to the Creator in the day of Judgment?

THERE are people in this world who do things because others do them. This tendency shows itself in the changing fashions. No matter how ridiculous or how absurd a fashion may be, once get it fairly started and the masses follow it. One of the leaders of fashion once put a tiny bit of black sticking plaster on her face to cover a pimple, and forthwith every fashionable lady could be seen with a bit of black court-plaster on her face. If people did things because they were right what would become of the fashions?

"WHAT is more pleasant than to reflect that we have a Father in whom we can implicitly trust, and feel that all our paths are directed by him! Still we are often found complaining. Some trifle may so affect us that for hours we feel disturbed and unhappy. Would it be so, if we would say from the heart, 'It is the Lord'? We are short-sighted and can not tell of how much profit a disappointment may be to us in the long run. Often, what has been a sore bereavement to us, in the end has resulted in peculiar blessings. We can not understand the ways of God, and so it becomes us always to be resigned to his dispensations and never to murmur or fret at the trifling rubs we receive. With a grateful heart and a fervent prayer, we shall never feel to mistrust our Father, no matter how trying his dispensations may be."

"ADVICE should be like a gentle fall of snow, and not like a driving storm of hail. It should descend softly, and not be uttered hastily."

WE are glad to know that in very many of our churches series of meetings will be held during the fall and winter. Every church in the Brotherhood should arrange for such meetings. If you can not get some minister to come to your help, let the home ministers do the work. God has abundantly blessed efforts made by the home ministers in the past, and he has just as many blessings in store for the future. Let a move be made along the whole line on the ranks of the enemy!

MEN, in all ages of the world, have come from lowly conditions in life to fill the highest places in the world. The Lord greatly exalted many of his servants who were of humble origin. Moses, the law-giver, was the son of a poor Levite; Gideon, who delivered Israel from the Midianites, was a thresher; David, the king, was a shepherd boy; Amos, the prophet, was a herdsman; the apostles were unlearned in the wisdom of the world; the reformer, Zwingle, emerged from the shepherd huts amongst the Alps; Melanchthon, the great theologian, was a workman in an armorer's shop; Martin Luther was the son of a poor miner; Carey, who originated the plan of translating the Bible into the language of the millions of Hindoostan, was a shoemaker in Northampton; Dr. Morrison, who translated the Bible into the Chinese language, was a last-maker; Dr. Adam Clarke was the child of Irish cotters. These men all filled positions in the world far above their lowly birth. They were men of convictions and they labored for the cause they espoused with zeal and earnestness. Let no one be discouraged. Honest effort will bring success.

THERE is a satisfaction in living, and in having lived, which rarely rises out of life for those who have not acquired the habit of accommodating themselves, nobly and properly, to the temper of the passing moment. To possess a frame of mind in unison—or, even better yet, in harmony — with the vicissitudes through which we are called to pass, is to be richly and sweetly content. But to be thoroughly and helplessly out of tune with the events or the temper of the passing moments, as they pass, is to be dissatisfied and miserably discontent. So, then, it is necessary to cultivate a power of appreciating and joyfully entering into the sudden, surprising, and various changes that each hour of the day is likely to bring us. We may be called upon to pass, without notice, from sunshine into shadow, from jubilee to sorrow, from ecstasy to pain. We may need to mount from the gay to the grave, from the petty to the sublime. We may be led without opportunity for preparatory reflection from merest trifles to deciding and momentous crises. Physician, pastor, teacher, may be summoned from the feast to the death-bed, from the search for a lost pin to the search for a lost soul. A word brought by the postman or spoken by a neighbor may make revelations of existing facts that will require instant change of demeanor. In all enjoyment of peace and pleasure we are, like the soldier, to be ready for marching orders to the front; in every flush of victory we are to be prepared to graciously accept the orders to retreat. And in all these vicissitudes the satisfaction of living consists in our ability to speedily adjust ourselves to the word of the Master. If we can accept cheerfully the orders that the Master gives us, and even under painful or happy surprises attune our being to the temper of that wherewith we are surrounded, our life will be enriched and glorified in its bright sides, and yet more deeply enriched and made grandly sublime in its darker sides.—*S. EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Warrensburg, Mo.—Pertle Springs, and our Annual Meeting for 1890.

CENTRE VIEW CHURCH.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., is a flourishing city of about 6,000 inhabitants, located on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, one among the best managed roads in the West, sixty-five miles east of Kansas City and two hundred and eighteen miles west of St. Louis. The Brethren have a meeting-house about two miles south of the town, and the Mineral Creek, Centre View and Knobnoster churches are within a radius of fourteen miles of the place where our next Annual Meeting is to be held. For this purpose Pertle Spring Park has been selected, and, after looking over the ground carefully, we are prepared to say that it is well adapted for the Meeting.

On Tuesday, Sept. 17, we had the pleasure of meeting with the Committee of Arrangements into whose hands has been placed the general management of the Annual Meeting for 1890. The Committee is composed of the following-named brethren: Frederic Culp, Foreman; A. Markey, Treasurer; Wm. Mohler, Secretary; J. W. Brooks, Assistant Secretary; S. S. Mohler, A. W. Reese, A. A. Weaver, John Deeter, Levi Mohler, M. S. Mohler, Amos Wampler, David Mohler, and Mr. J. H. Christopher, the proprietor of the grounds. The Committee is composed of men who are well able for the work they have to do, and they will leave nothing undone to make the Meeting a pleasant and successful one. The work of arranging for, and managing the large crowds who attend our Conferences, is a labor of no small magnitude, and only those who have had the work to do, can form an idea of its importance and of the cares and perplexities attending it.

THE GROUNDS.

Pertle Spring Park is located one and a quarter miles south of the Missouri Pacific depot at Warrensburg. The farm and park contains 343 acres; 183 acres are devoted to the park and this will be thrown open for the use of the Brethren. The ground is not level. There are hills and valleys, covered with oak and other forest trees, affording delightful shade on a warm summer day. In this respect it reminds us of the meeting grounds at Ottawa, Kansas. Some of our older brethren and sisters may find a walk over some of the hills a little fatiguing but there will be found seats beneath the friendly shades of the trees where one may sit and rest and enjoy a conversation with friends. The undulating character of the ground affords excellent drainage, and this, with the sandy soil, relieves us of all anxiety about mud which has made some of our Meetings very unpleasant.

The Springs, from which the Park takes its name, flow from the base of a high hill. The water is fresh and clear with a regular temperature of fifty-four degrees, and, notwithstanding the fact that it is highly impregnated with mineral substances, is pleasant to the taste. It contains, as is shown by a chemical analysis, silica, oxide of iron, alumina, magnesia, carbonate of lime, and other minerals that go to make the water a valuable medicinal agent. The waters of Pertle Springs are highly prized by invalids and many spend the summer here for their health and go away very much benefitted. The water from the Springs flows into a small lake near by. There are several lakes on the ground which add much to the picturesque beauty of the place. The lakes are well supplied with fish, and black and striped bass, perch and carp are abundant.

The Park is used every season by different religious bodies for holding meetings of various kinds. Sunday-school and Chautauqua assemblies are held here every summer, and here the somewhat noted Southern evangelist, Sam Jones, holds a camp-meeting. A large hotel, with rooms for 300 guests, and a tabernacle, with many other buildings, are permanently located on the grounds. A number of new buildings will be put up in time for the Annual Meeting.

THE TABERNACLE.

The tabernacle as now constructed will seat, if closely filled, about 3,500 people. It is substantially built and covered with a good shingle roof. It is the intention of the Committee of Arrangements to add considerable space to the seating capacity of the tabernacle, so that at least 5,000 people may be comfortably seated within easy hearing distance of the speakers. When this is done, the tabernacle will be equal to any in which our great council has been held. The acoustic properties of the building are exceptionally good. In making a test of this, Bro. S. S. Mohler stood on the platform and spoke in an ordinary conversational tone and we distinctly heard what he said, standing at the further end of the building. The tabernacle stands upon an elevation, but there is plenty of level space about it. The ground is covered with trees and these will afford a shady retreat for those who can not gain admittance to the building when the council is in session. It is the intention of the Committee to place a number of seats on the grounds among the trees. These will add greatly to the comfort and convenience of those who attend the Meeting. Mr. Christopher has given the assurance to the Committee that the tabernacle and grounds will be lighted up by electricity in time for the meeting. We noticed in the local papers, while at Warrensburg, that the contract for the electric light plant had been let, and it seems almost certain that we shall enjoy this modern convenience at our next Meeting.

LODGING.

The Committee on Lodging has arranged to rent a number of large-sized tents. These will be set up and furnished with plenty of straw, and rented to those who wish them at about what they cost the Committee. Tents with a capacity of from eight to ten persons, twelve by fourteen in size, during the entire Meeting, $4.00. Tents with room for from five to eight people, ten by twelve in size, $3.00. A party renting a tent will have entire control of it. Beds at the hotel will be furnished at the rate of twenty-five cents per night. Those desiring rooms or tents should write to Bro. William Mohler, Warrensburg, Mo. Those securing rooms at the hotel will be registered and the rooms kept for them. In addition to the hotel and tents, the citizens of Warrensburg have very kindly agreed to furnish rooms to the Brethren, and there will also be free lodgings furnished. We are usually much concerned about a lodging place when we get to the Meeting grounds, and the Committee in charge of this work usually have their hands full, but we are assured that ample provision will be made for all who come. A large building, standing within a few rods of the tabernacle, known as the "preachers' home," will afford ample and pleasant quarters for the Standing Committee. It is well lighted, well ventilated, and conveniently close to the tabernacle, and we believe the Standing Committee for 1890 will be well accommodated.

The only disadvantage that occurs to us is the fact that the grounds are one and one-fourth miles from the depot, but this is not a serious matter. Many will be glad, after a long ride in the cars, for a walk of that distance, and those who prefer to ride out to the Meeting grounds will be accommodated by paying a small fee. The proprietor of the grounds says that, before the Meeting takes place, an electric railroad will be in operation between the depot in Warrensburg and Pertle Springs. If this is done, the problem of transportation will be partially solved. If such a road is to be built, work will have to commence on it very soon or it will not be completed in time for the Meeting; but whether the road is built or not, ample means of conveyance will be furnished.

The Committee will arrange to avoid, as much as possible, all Sunday traffic. It will be impossible to feed the multitudes without performing some manual labor, but so far as it is possible to avoid it, there will be no work or traffic on the Meeting grounds on the Lord's Day. By pursuing this course, the Committee will avoid the unfavorable criticism to which some of our Annual Meetings have been subjected in the past.

Looking over the ground carefully, we do not hesitate to say, in conclusion, that Pertle Springs Park will afford most excellent advantages for the Annual Meeting of 1890, and our Brethren in the Eastern States, who have not had an opportunity of visiting Missouri before, will, we think, find here a country equal to any part of the Great West. They will also find faithful brethren and sisters who will give all a hearty welcome. The Meeting of 1890 will be an important one, owing to the fact that several very important questions, which have been deferred for two years, will come up for discussion and decision. A very large attendance is expected and the Committee of Arrangements will be prepared to care for all who may come.

THE CENTRE VIEW CHURCH.

After leaving the Mineral Creek church we stopped with the Brethren at Centre View, a small town about six miles west of Warrensburg. Here we spent a few days enjoying refreshing seasons of worship in the sanctuary and in visiting with the members. The Brethren here are well situated and have good homes. The land is rich and productive. Here, as well as elsewhere, the Lord has abundantly blessed the farmers with bountiful crops. We hear of from twenty-five to thirty-five bushels of wheat to the acre, and the corn crop is very large.

The Centre View church has a membership of about eighty. The meeting-house stands just at the edge of the town, thus making it very convenient for those members who live in Centre View. We think it is a good plan to locate meeting-houses in towns where our members live. Our Brethren who live in the country have teams and can easily drive to the meeting-house, while the majority of those living in towns must either hire a conveyance or walk. The Brethren at Centre View, doubtless with this consideration in view, built their meeting-house close to the village.

Brethren Andrew Hutchison and Jacob Witmore have charge of the church at Centre View. Both of these brethren are well known to our Brotherhood as successful missionaries and evangelists. Bro. Hutchison just returned home from the Kansas field and left again, after a short stay, to visit and labor in the churches in Nebraska. In speaking of the necessity for more laborers in whitened fields, Bro. Hutchison informed us that it would require some years to fill all the calls that are made upon him for preaching the Word. He must, for lack of time, decline many urgent calls.

Bro. Jacob Witmore, who spent his time last winter in mission work in California, and whose labors the Lord most abundantly blessed, is arranging to give more of his time to the work of the church. He has a pleasant home near Centre View and is very comfortably situated. His farm contains fifty-two acres of good land. In order to give more of his time to the Lord's work, he offers his farm for sale. Any one desiring a nice home within two miles of the town and of the Brethren's meeting-house, should write to Bro. Jacob.

The church at Centre View has had some difficulties. A few of the members decided to walk no longer with the church and withdrew, but from what we saw and heard, we believe that the church and her work has not been seriously retarded. The attendance at the meetings was large and the attention was good. Our Brethren should bear with each other in matters of opinion; where no principle of right is involved, and we believe the Brethren at Centre View are disposed to do this. Those who have gone out should be, and, we believe, will be, kindly and courteously treated. In this way they may be led back to the home and to the family from which they are at present estranged.

We are impressed with the thought that when brethren or sisters fall into an error, we should, if possible, try to put ourselves in their place. If we knew all the circumstances surrounding them, their trials and difficulties, and their struggles, we would often be less disposed to judge them harshly. We should never lose sight of the fact that church discipline should be administered for the purpose of restoring and saving those who may have stepped aside. Too often we get the idea that church discipline is to be administered as a punishment for wrong doing. We regard this as not in accordance with the teaching of Christ and the apostles. Paul would have us receive those who are weak in the faith, but not to doubtful disputations and if any fall, those who are spiritual are commanded to "restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself lest thou also be tempted. Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." Both at Mineral Creek and Centre View we were most kindly met and entertained by the Brethren, and they succeeded in making us feel very much at home among them. Had we space and were we impressed with the thought that it would be edifying to our readers, we might enter more into details, but we do not think it would be especially interesting to state where we slept and what we ate. It will be enough for us to say that all treated us with uniform kindness and that we shall not soon forget our visit to these churches. May the Lord bless them all and keep them faithful unto the end!

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor. 16: 2.

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." 2 Cor. 8, 12.

TO MINISTERS.

OUR offer, as it appears in another column, to furnish tracts for distribution free, presents an excellent opportunity to ministers to give them somewhat more extensive circulation, while traveling and preaching, especially in new territory and places remote from organized churches. Those who are thus engaged, in traveling at their own expense, will be furnished, postage prepaid, on application, with as many tracts as they can find time and place to handle and distribute as may seem profitable.—H.

THE OUTLOOK.

BY LANDON WEST.

THERE is nothing of late that affords me more encouragement as to the future of our Brotherhood, than to see so many new hands at the work.

Every copy of the MESSENGER brings with it the name and effort of one or more new contributors, and I am comforted not a little with the fact that the force is widening,—the Vine is spreading its branches. I am glad that its precious fruit is being tasted both far and wide. I feel to thank the Lord and take courage, because there are so many more of late who are willing to contend for the faith as the saints had it.

While some of our great workers have fallen with the armor on and others must soon give way because of the heat and burden of the fight, I am glad to see that scores are coming up where one has fallen, and that the battle still goes on. Are there not others, both brethren and sisters, who as yet have not stepped forward to the work, whose efforts might bring the Bread of Life to the starving ones of earth? I feel that not near all the workers are at work, hence the effort is weak to what it might be and what it should be.

The work must go on. So long as the ranks are full of lively workers, the MESSENGER can not go down. As its contributors are on the increase, I feel assured that its subscribers and readers are also on the increase.

May God help the MESSENGER in its work, and may he help its editors, its contributors and its readers, all of them, to do their part in spreading the Truth before the world,—for the Gospel is needed in all the world!

EVIDENCES OF THE TRUE CHURCH.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

Chapter Six.—Numbers.

SOME persons imagine that, to be a member of a church, numerically strong, that can number its communicants by millions, is an evidence, clear and strong, of the true church. They thus persuade themselves that their relation, with so strong a body, is a safe one. They think that so many can not possibly be mistaken.

The history of the world and of Israel proves just the contrary. The smallest number has ever been on the side of truth and right. In the days of Noah the whole world had corrupted its way before the Lord save eight persons.

In the days of Lot all the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah and all the plains thereof, became desperately wicked. Out of all that number only four were accepted by the Lord.

In the days of Moses, when he was up in the mount, receiving the Law, all Israel quickly turned aside, made them idols, and said, "These are thy gods," and worshiped them. The whole camp engaged in religious service, but it was the service of idolatry. Only a few remained loyal to the God that brought them forth out of the land of Egypt. Ex. 32.

In the days of Elijah, the prophets of Baal were four hundred and fifty men, while Elijah only remained a true prophet. 1 Kings 18.

Under the Christian dispensation Christ says, "Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." Matt. 7: 13.

Paul, in writing of the Jews, says, "A remnant shall be saved." Rom. 9: 27. Again, in 1 Thess. 4: 17, Paul says: "Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air," thus implying clearly that the smaller and not the larger part of the human race is here referred to. We discover, by the history of the past, that the masses of the people ever gravitated towards error instead of truth.

The saying of Christ is forcibly truthful, "Men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil." John 3: 19. We also learn that numbers alone is a very unsafe test of the church built on the Rock.

"Numbers are no mark
That men will right be found;
A few were saved in Noah's ark,
For many millions drowned."

FREE.—50,000 TRACTS FOR DISTRIBUTION.

ANY person addressing the Book and Tract Work, Dayton, Ohio, can again obtain an assortment of tracts for distribution free, excepting the postage. These will be supplied mainly from classes D and E as they are the most suitable for general circulation.

Send ten, twelve, or fifteen cents in stamps, which will pay the postage on from one hundred and thirty to two hundred tracts. If a larger number is wanted, send stamps accordingly. The postage will be but a small item of cost to the individual, whilst to the Tract Work, it would, in the aggregate, amount to a large sum.

We take this method to distribute our tracts at this time because it is the cheapest by which we can reach anything like a general circulation. In this way, it will be seen, we reach all persons and places where the MESSENGER does; especially is this true of the readers of this department, and who, as missionary workers, so deeply and sensibly feel the necessity and importance of distributing Gospel instruction, thus contributing to the spiritual wants of others. Many such would not, probably, otherwise ever know or learn of the Brethren, and their deep concern and earnest, prayerful solicitations to bring them into the right way of the Lord. Success attends effort.—H.

PALACE CAR PIETY.

GOOD old John Bunyan lived before the days of railroads, and he sent his pilgrim to the Celestial City on foot. Some pretty rough walking and hard climbing did Christian find before he had traversed the straight road from the City of God. His convictions of guilt were deep and pungent, his conversion was thorough, and when he reaches a dark and dangerous defile on the way, he bravely says, "I see not but that this is the way to the desired heaven," and on he goes without flinching. The piety of the pilgrim was stalwart, self-denying, sin-hating and uncompromising; the man relished even the severities of duty and never coddled himself with confectionery. Is there not a strong tendency in our day to make a Christian life a great deal easier and more self-indulgent—and, instead of a sturdy walk with God, to make it a comfortable ride to the heavens in a palace car?

1. This tendency shows itself in quite too much of the preaching to the unconverted. The Apostle Peter's first discourse after Pentecost was not a bid for popularity; he did not seek to bribe those Jerusalem sinners by telling them how easy it was for them to become Christians and what a "good time" they would have if they embraced the new Gospel. He knew that the very best thing for them was to convict them of their sins and a prompt acceptance and confession of Jesus Christ. Thorough conviction brought thorough conversion; then came gladness of heart and steadfast continuance in the apostle's doctrine and fellowship. * * The best service that can be rendered to a sinner is first to convince him of his sinfulness and then lead to Jesus' blood; the more thoroughly sick of sin he becomes, the more he gets the bad stuff out of him by deep repentance, the healthier, holier Christian he will be afterwards. But to preach to an unconverted man that "it is just the easiest thing in the world to be a Christian" and to urge him to come on board the church-train just as he is, and be transported safely and comfortably to Paradise, is pretty sure to either hoax him into self-deception or to make him a crude, half-converted, self-indulgent professor to the last. When the deadly hurt of sin is salved over, or "healed slightly," it breaks out again. To endeavor to bribe sinners with the offer of "happiness" before the heart is right toward God, is a cruel deception; it is the surest way to rob them of that solid soul health and purity and holiness, which alone can give enduring peace.

2. Our blessed Master—who loved sinners infinitely more than we can—never bribed men into discipleship. He invited them to come to him, but he frankly told them that unless they were willing to deny themselves and take up a cross and follow him, they could not be his disciples. There was a magnificent reward waiting for them at the terminus, but no palace cars to carry them there. The young ruler, who fancied he might find one, and ride to heaven "like a gentleman," went away disgusted and disappointed. Brethren, we are always safe when we copy our blessed Master. So in dealing with the unconverted and with the awakened inquirer, let us be honest with them and tell them that if their "right hand" be a favorite sin, the hand must come off. The biggest devil in a sinner's heart is self, and unless that greedy devil is cast out, Christ can not and will not come in and flood the soul with peace, and joy, and power. What is it but the subtle spirit of self that would seek to bargain with Christ for a safe and "genteel" journey to heaven in a palace car?

3. The spirit of indulgence eats like a canker into the life of too many members of our churches. It leads them to choose as their place of worship —not the one in which they are the most needed— but the prosperous one in which they have the lightest load and the most luxuries. The wealth that ought to feed a dozen feeble churches into independence, runs right down into the pool of one aristocratic church and stagnates there. Self-indulgence inquires, "Who preaches there? Is he eloquent? Is the music fine? And do the best society go there?" In plain English this means, bribe me with a seat in the drawing-room car and I will go with you. Self-indulgence always goes to its store through a storm, and hires a carriage on the bitterest nights to reach a pleasure party; but it leaves Christ's ambassadors to preach to empty pews on an unpleasant Sabbath. The conduct of a vast portion of Christ's professed followers (I fear a majority of them) on every wet or inclement Lord's Day, is a severer reproach, and works a severer damage to our Christianity than the ribald assault of a hundred Ingersolls. It practically means, "My religion will be worth heaven to me in eternity; but in this world it is not worth a little exposure and discomfort."

Brethren and sisters, we have but one journey to make through this world. Let us make it on foot, helping up other poor fellow-travelers as we go along. Jesus will walk with us over the ruggedest paths of self-denial and sweeten every step. We shall have the best of company—home missionaries who wear old coats to teach men new hearts—poor needle-women who give hard-earned dollars to their Master—and rich men also who give Christ the key to their iron safes and check books. Let us be in no hurry to get to heaven, for "Our Beloved" is with us on the road and we are needed in this sin-cursed world. When we get to the celestial "station," we will not find many who came there in a palace car.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D., in Interior.

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—Bro. J. H. Miller wishes us to inform his correspondents that all his mail matter should be addressed to "Goshen, Ind.," and not "Milford," as some have been doing.

—Under date of Sept. 23, Bro. A. Haws, of Charleston, W. Va., writes: "I am requested to acknowledge through the MESSENGER, the receipt of $2.00 from the Hatfield Poor Fund, Pa, to aid in the building of our church at this place; also the receipt of $2.00 from a sister at Lansdale, Pa. The members hereby tender their thanks to the different persons who have donated to the building of our church here."

—Bro. Isaac E. Branson, of the Kill Buck church, Ind., writes: "Our communion occurred Sept. 21 and 22. It was a communion, indeed, for the children of God. There was a large number of brethren and sisters present from other churches. Come again, brethren! Four have been baptized since the last report from here."

—Bro. Charles Beagle, of Logan, Hocking Co., Ohio, gives us a full account of a trip from Somerset County, Pa., to the place mentioned above. A lack of space forbids the insertion of the entire communication. Just at the close Bro. Beagle speaks of some interesting meetings being held by Bro. I. J. Rosenberger at Marion, Ohio. A love-feast was also held at that place, which was very much enjoyed by all.

—Under date of Sept. 23, Bro. John A. Studebaker, of Moline, Kans., writes: "The feast at my place was an enjoyable occasion. About 250 people were present. Elders G. W. Studebaker and C. Harader were with us. Two were baptized, and more are inquiring for the way to be saved. Our little band of brethren and sisters at this place has great reason to rejoice. We held the meetings in a large tent. Our services closed last night."

—The discouragements of the Sunday-school teacher are thus described by sister S. McBride: "We, as teachers, do not have the co-operation of the brethren and sisters as we should have it. Many spend their Sundays in visiting and feasting, while the Sunday-school workers are praying for God's blessing upon their labors, and struggling on as best they can, unaided by those who might and should reach out a helping hand. Then, too, we have the utter indifference on the part of the scholars,—a great deal of it owing to the fact that parents take no interest whatever in aiding their children in the study of their lessons. No wonder if the Sunday-school does but a small part of the work it might do, if proper pains were taken!"

—Bro. J. P. Studebaker, of Walshville, Ill., under date of Sept. 23, sends us an account of the love-feast at Litchfield, Ill., and the interesting meetings in connection therewith. As sister Mary M. Gibson has already given a full account of those meetings, we will give merely the conclusion of his letter: "Our meeting was full of encouragement to the few members at this place. The house was crowded with anxious listeners, and the very best of order prevailed. We trust there was seed sown that may produce an early and copious harvest. There is great need here for the preaching of the pure Word of God. The world and popular churches go almost hand in hand. Even the saloons find some of their strongest supporters,—if not advocates,—among so-called Christians. O, for some mighty power to arouse men to their duty!"

Bro. D. K. Richards, of Toledo, Iowa, writes of his isolated condition. He continues, "I am living a distance of twenty-six miles from the nearest place of meeting, and as I am too poor to have a conveyance, I am deprived of the pleasure of meeting with those of like precious faith. If the distance were not so great, I should walk, but when one has seen the winters of seventy-eight years, one does not feel like undertaking to walk more than a very few miles. It is not strange, then, that, in my loneliness, I highly value the MESSENGER,—my only visitor! Not a brother has been in my house for five years. Once it was a custom for members to visit each other for comfort and encouragement,—now, alas! the poor and the aged are too often passed by! If I have read the Bible aright, Christ always visited the poor, and told his followers to do likewise. If it is not done now, we are at fault, and should ask the Lord to create within us a clean heart and a renewed spirit."

From Huntington, Ind.

As was already stated last week, Bro. George L. Studebaker commenced a series of meetings in the Salamonie congregation, Huntington Co., Ind., on the evening of Aug. 31. The weather was very warm, then, and some had some doubts as to the propriety of holding the meetings at this time, as it was right in seeding-time and farmers were all very busy, but the result showed that Gospel seed sown at this time also produced an abundant harvest. The meetings continued until the evening of Sept. 22. A deep interest was manifested from the beginning. People came night after night, —some as many as eight or ten miles, and while there was not much fruit manifested, in the way of an ingathering, for a week or ten days, a deep solemnity pervaded the greater part of the congregation, and marked attention was given to the Word preached. Prayer after prayer was sent to the "Throne of Grace." Sermon after sermon was preached. Saints were encouraged on their way, and sinners were warned to flee the wrath to come. And while all seemed deeply in earnest, there was nothing in the way of excitement. The preaching was sound Gospel doctrine, which could not be gainsaid, and, as a result, wanderers came flocking home, until the number of applicants for baptism was twenty-seven. One dear sister, whose membership had been suspended, returned to the fold, making twenty-eight additions in all, ranging in age from the maiden of thirteen to the grandmother of threescore years. Many are heads of families and yet in the vigor of life. Up to the evening of September 21st, fourteen had been baptized. On that evening one more applicant came forward when the invitation was given, yet it was evident that others were seriously impressed.

The next day being Sunday we had a crowded house, and when the invitation was given, eleven more came forward, and many a tear of joy was seen trickling down the cheek, as parents saw their children coming home. At the night service two more came forward and were baptized the next day, when Bro. Studebaker bade us farewell, and returned to his home, to go tc other fields of labor, where, we pray, his labors may be equally blest.

Although our meetings continued a few days over three weeks, many thought they closed a little too soon, and there is no doubt, had they continued a little longer, many more would have come out for the Lord!

To God be the praise for the work done, and may his grace sustain us all, keep us from the evils of the world, and finally give us a home in heaven! A. H. SNOWBERGER.

From Eglon, Preston Co., W. Va.

SEPT. 7, the brethren and sisters of German Settlement congregation met at the waterside to administer the ordinance of baptism to a soul who was willing to put on the whole armor of light and walk in newness of life. One was also baptized Sept. 1. Both were sisters. Our prayer is, that these, as well as all of us who have made the good choice, may stand faithful to our duty till the Lord will call us home!

Our love-feast, which occurred Sept. 7 at the Maple Spring church, was a feast of love indeed. Our house was crowded and about one hundred people were outside. About two hundred members communed. There were nine ministering brethren with us from abroad. While at this feast, there was sorrow and gladness in our hearts. There was sorrow because so many were sitting back from these earthly tables of the Lord and staying outside of the fold of Christ, seemingly not realizing their danger. There was gladness, because we could see so many seated at the tables of the Lord and because I was permitted to be one among the number. On Sunday, Sept. 8, brethren Asa Harman and Taylor Sines preached us a good sermon from Matt. 24: 44.

On Sunday evening brethren Geo. S. and Peter Arnold preached us another good sermon from Dan. 3: 16–18. We had good order during the meetings. The church at this place is in good working order. EMRA T. FIKE.

From Dayton, Ohio.

We are glad to inform you through the MESSENGER that we have completed our church in the West Dayton District, and that, on Sept. 15, at 2 P. M, we were permitted to dedicate the same to the Lord. Bro. Isaac Frantz, Bro. John Smith and Bro David Filbrum came to us and did the preaching

Long before the appointed hour, the house was filled to its utmost capacity. Many were not permitted to get in, and, on account of the rain, were compelled to seek shelter elsewhere. Many others would have come, had it not rained. But then, God's ways are not always our ways. "His ways are ways of pleasantness and all his paths are peace." How differently are ours!

For a lesson to us all, Bro. Frantz read Psalm 84, in which we learn that the prophet, longing for the blessings of the sanctuary, shows how blessed they are that dwell therein.

So with us, my brethren. Six months ago we longed for a church house in which we could meet for the worship of God. We tried to show the necessity of it, and prayed that we might have it. We thank God that we have been permitted to realize and enjoy that which we so much desired.

The dedicatory services were improved by using the words of John 4: 24, "God is a spirit and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth." Upon this grand truth Bro Frantz dwelt at some length, giving us many citations of worships in the different ages of the world, how they worshiped God, and how they were blessed in the work

Oh, my brethren, how many of us have the truth of the text hid in our hearts, — that to worship God we must do it in spirit and in truth! Houses to worship are necessary, but if we have not the right spirit, our houses will do us no good! Therefore it becomes us, as children of the kingdom, to look well to our ways, to our living and to our worshiping, and have nothing to do with the works of the wicked one. The doing of that which is wrong only tends to lower our character, to lessen our morality and finally destroy our immortal souls.

Bro. Smith followed Bro. Frantz, briefly, with some appropriate remarks, and the services were then closed by Bro. Filbrum. The latter came back to us in the evening and gave us a sermon from the language of our blessed Savior, "I am come, that you may have life, and that you may have it more abundantly." Upon the truths of this text we were entertained and edified, I trust, to the glory of God.

To build churches is an important work,—is no small matter. It requires willing hands and hearts, and money, time and effort. But when we call to mind that God is the Creator of all things both spiritual and temporal, and all that we are and have belongs to him, should we not do even more for him than what we are doing?

We now have our house built and dedicated to the Lord. It is a pleasant place, capable of holding about 459 persons. I feel that we should put forth every effort to pattern our lives after the Great Pattern,—our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. The obeying of the ordinances of God's house brings happiness. The Savior tells us, "If ye love me ye will keep my commandments." The inference, then, would be that, if we do not keep his commandments, we do not love him, and hence can not worship him in spirit and in truth.

One of the best ways to do more for our Savior than we have done, is to live lives of dedication and consecration of our all to his glory. Men who have great wealth may do great and good deeds, but this does not militate against others obtaining the promise—eternal life.

H. C. PUTERBAUGH.

From Conway Springs, Sumner Co, Kans.

THE church at this place is in a very fair working condition, but,—as is the case nearly everywhere,—the most serious hinderance to the cause is found in the inconsistencies of those that profess to be Christians. I think that will include most of us. May we all try to live better in the future!

Bro. Lemuel Hillery came to us Sept. 7th and stayed until the 11th. He told us many things that will do us good, if obeyed. We hope he will be with us at our love-feast, Oct. 12 and 13, and as many others as can be with us are cordially invited.

We have preaching and Sunday-school every Sunday at our church. The Sunday-school is well attended by the older members and parents, which is very encouraging. We feel sorry to know there are schools that do not have this help. Still more sad it is that members discourage Sunday-school work and those that are laboring faithfully in that cause. This ought not to be!

We have been blessed with good crops here this year, and I hope we all feel thankful to our Heavenly Father for his kindness to us. We have such a good opportunity now, to show our thankfulness that I fear if we neglect to do so, we may fail to lay up treasure in heaven. Please turn to Luke 12, and read the first forty verses. Can we not learn something from this?

J. R. LEATHERMAN.

From Beaver Creek Congregation, Va.

ON the morning of Aug. 7, in company with Bro. Jacob Thomas, we left home to visit the scattered lambs of Crab Bottom, Highland Co., this State.

This section, though hemmed in by mountains, possesses some of the finest and richest land of the State. The view from some of the highest points presents to the eye, for miles, one grand panoramic view of nature's painting, with herds of the finest cattle dotted over the hills and dales, denoting prosperity and plenty.

The Brick church (M. E. North), our first point, was reached on Thursday evening. We remained at this point until Sunday evening. Two made the good resolve and were received by baptism, in the presence of a large crowd of witnesses.

On Monday morning we started for Union Chapel, where appointments were awaiting our arrival. Here our plans were somewhat frustrated by appointments left by a minister of another denomination. The feeling, generally shown toward the Brethren, is good and we may hope, in no far distant day, to do a good work here.

Friday morning we resumed our travels and went some eight miles eastward, to the old Straight Creek church. This is the home of Bro. Josiah Beverage, one of our ministers. His work is very commendable and all seem well satisfied.

Saturday evening, the time arranged for the Communion, brought together a goodly number of members. The large crowd of spectators gave the best of attention, and good order pervaded the entire service. We here met two of our ministering brethren, who lent a helping hand in time of need,—A. T. Wright, of Bolivar, and Amos Pufinbarger, of Sugar Grove, W. Va.

It having been previously announced, that the funeral of old Bro. David Varner would take place on Sunday, an unusually large crowd assembled. Through the kindness of the trustees, the doors of the new Methodist Episcopal church were opened for the occasion, which was appreciated by all.

We reached home on Monday evening following, and were made glad to learn that five young persons had been added to the fold by baptism during our absence. J. W. CLICK.

From the Vermillion Church, Kans.

Sept. 7 and 8 were our feast days. We had a very enjoyable feast,—one long to be remembered by us all. Elder Aaron Berkeybile officiated. Ministers present besides the home brethren were, Elders Aaron Berkeybile, Enoch Eby, Wm. Davis, S. Haldeman, B. Forney, Wm. Smith, Samuel Studebaker and John Eby. They fed us richly on the Word of God. Three were constrained to put on Christ in baptism on Sunday of the feast.

Bro. Enoch Eby continued meetings until Wednesday after the feast. Then Bro. D. G. Couser, of Saltillo, Nebr., preached one sermon, and other brethren continued through the week. Our brethren here have more calls for preaching than they can fill properly.

Our membership is much scattered, and all feel that there should be meetings at the different places for the benefit of themselves and neighbors. This makes a great deal of work for the ministers, but our brethren are doing the best they can to supply all calls, as far as possible. Pray for us that we may be faithful to the cause!

A. J. GATES.

From North Solomon Church, Kansas.

SEPT. 22 our quarterly council was held, amid peace and joy. The members were nearly all present. All business was transacted harmoniously. On the Lord's Day following, one brother was added to our number by baptism. His wife, a sister, having been called over the river, he was left standing alone upon the stormy banks,—with children around him. He was thus led to choose, too, the better part which can not be taken away from him. FANNY MORROW.

From the Coal Creek Congregation, Ill.

Our love-feast occurred Sept. 7, and was a very enjoyable occasion. Our little church was well represented, and there were several members present from the adjoining churches. This is right. I like to see members from different congregations meet together and show that brotherly love that should exist among brethren. I came here in March, to labor with the dear brethren and sisters in this church. I like the country very much, as well as the people. I find the dear brethren and sisters very sociable and benevolent, and I feel at home among them.

We think of holding a series of meetings this fall with the hope of reviving the church and adding some lambs to the fold. May the Lord help us in our efforts!

I sometimes think we, as home ministers, do not put forth the effort we should, in order to advance the cause. We depend on help from abroad, and sometimes the brethren can not be had at the proper time, and the cause suffers on the account of it. Had we not better go to work ourselves, and push on the work? Lost time is never regained. I have seen some very successful meetings held by the home ministers. I do not say it is always the best, but it is good to push the work at any time.

Brethren and sisters, this is not our eternal home. We are fast hastening to eternity, and we know not who will be first. Let us be watching for the coming of the Master, that it may be well with our souls. The good Lord bless all his dear children, is my prayer! SOLOMON BUCKLEW.

At Mt. Morris Again.

NEARLY a month has now passed since we arrived here. While we enjoyed our vacation work,—for, indeed, we ought to enjoy working in the vineyard of the Lord,—we were anxious, too, to again return to school and pursue our course of study.

was a pleasant one to us. The churches with which we labored will be remembered for the zeal and earnestness manifested. The brethren and sisters with whom we worked and visited, are worthy of remembrance for the kindness shown to us; but especially so for the interest manifested in the blessed cause of our Master, and in general for a willingness to sacrifice, if need be, for the good of the church.

Brethren and sisters, do we feel the weight of the responsibility resting upon us? Do we recognize the fact that the future destiny of the church hinges upon the direction we give it now? How, my brother, do you want to see the church thirty years hence? Do you want to see her still worthy the name of Christ, grandly maintaining her sacred principles, ready at all times and in all places to offer a home, a place of refuge, safety to all, whether rich or poor, high or low? Then, will you help to make and keep her so?

To those who have made their peace with God under our labors we would say, You have entered upon the noblest work! Be steadfast! Let nothing be able to turn you from the path of right and duty. Temptations will come, but the sin is not in being tempted, it is in yielding to the temptation. Keep in the line of duty and live in close communion with Jesus, our refuge.

"Sweet hour of prayer! Sweet hour of prayer!
That calls me from a world of care
And bids me at my Father's throne
Make all my wants and wishes known;
In seasons of distress and grief,
My soul has often found relief,
And oft escaped the tempter's snare,
By thy return, sweet hour of prayer."

THE SCHOOL

is in good working order. The enrollment is larger than usual for the fall term. The faculty is full, able, and has the good of those under its charge at heart. We feel we can say without hesitating that the managers are self-sacrificing in their efforts, and did they simply look upon pecuniary compensation, long ere this, they would have turned the key and gone to other business. But they see, as many of us do, that we must have schools of our own,—schools where the doctrine and principles of the Brethren church are taught, both by precept and example. They doubtless feel it is their duty to see that this need is met. So far as being able to conduct a school in harmony with the principles of the church is concerned, it is no more an experiment. The fact is demonstrated that it can be done. Brethren, we must face the current. We can not stop it, but we can turn it. Does not wisdom dictate that we turn it to our advantage? We trust the day will soon come when our brethren, who are trying to hold the current in the proper channel, and who, without doubt, are true to the church, will receive the sympathy and support they merit! We will pray and work for the best. The Lord be with his people every-where!

Sept. 30, '89. T. T. MYERS.

McPherson Notes.

THE cause of the Lord is still advancing in this part of his vineyard. A few weeks ago we were called on to preach the dedication sermon in the Brethren's new church at Navarre, Kans., the home of Eld. P. R. Wrightsman. Elders John Humbarger, J. D. Trostle and John Forney were also present and assisted.

In the afternoon Eld. John Forney addressed the children who had been called in from the several Sunday-schools in the community. His remarks were very timely, and such meetings can not but be of advantage to the cause of Christ, in the way of enlisting the young people.

This meeting-house was built largely by the untiring zeal of sister Wrightsman, who, by the consent of the church, pushed forward the work until a house was dedicated unto the Lord. The question is sometimes asked, "What can sisters do?" Here is the answer. Let the sisters in every congregation go to work and do what they can.

On the 4th of September the McPherson College opened its fall term of school. Many of the old students and a large number of new ones came in on the first day. The enrollment the first week was about the same as last year, but many came in since to swell the list, and many more are coming when the threshing is done. Owing to the scarcity of farm hands, some have been detained from entering school. It is estimated that there are over a million bushels of wheat to thresh yet in this County alone. Surely the Lord has blessed Kansas as he did Egypt!

Last Sunday we were called on to preach a sermon on Baptism, at Solomon City, in reply to one preached against it by a Methodist. At this place live some faithful members, one of whom, Bro. Blunderfield, stood at the church door, distributing the Brethren's tracts as the people were coming out of the house. The tract work needs more pushing and more men like Bro. B. to do the work. Elders John Forney, and P. R. Wrightsman continued the work at this place when we left.

There are a great many Brethren taking advantage of the excursions to the West, and visiting McPherson. Quite a number have made arrangements to make this their home. S. Z. SHARP.

Echoes from the Highway.

HOME AGAIN.

SUNDAY, September 15, we closed our labors with the members of the St. Vrain congregation, Colorado, bidding many of them adieu, it may be, for the last time in this world, but we do hope they will be faithful until death.

On the morning of September 18th we went to Denver, where we spent a few hours. Thence we went to Littleton where we visited brother and sister Bair, who, though somewhat isolated from the main body, seem to be earnest and devoted to the cause, for which the Lord will surely reward them here, and more abundantly in the world to come.

At eleven o'clock at night Bro. Bair took us to the train, and we took our departure for California. Next morning we got aboard the fast express at La Hunta. From there our route lay across barren mountains and desolate plains, and so we traveled for over two days and two nights, when, on the afternoon of September 21, we crossed the summit of the last range of mountains, and once more felt the invigorating breezes from the ocean, and emerged from the weary, burning levels into the land of everlasting verdure and flowers.

At Los Angeles we met with a number of brethren and sisters who were in council, considering ways and means relative to the building of another meeting-house. It is needless to say we were glad to meet with them once more. Next morning, early, we set out aboard the train for home, and found all well, for which we do thank the Lord.

In our four months' roaming in the highways, we traveled over six thousand miles, visited many relatives and friends, and made many new friends, especially among the children of God. We did what little we could, working for the interest of our Master, and now leave it all to the Judge of the quick and dead, with the consciousness that he will do what is right. We are not fully satisfied with our seemingly hasty trip from Chicago to Colorado, as we had expected to visit Mt. Morris, an elder brother in Nebraska, McPherson, and other points, in Kansas, but we were hindered, so we hope our dear brethren will excuse us. This is a world of disappointments, and a place where we can not find completed satisfaction, but, with the Psalmist, we can say, "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness." Yes, Lord, then, and not until then, will we be satisfied. Blessed be God for this hope! J. S. FLORY.

From the Lower Miami Church, Montgomery County, Ohio.

SEPT. 25, the Brethren of the Lower Miami church held their annual council-meeting. The church was found to be in need of ministerial help, and decided to hold an election. The choice fell upon our dearly-beloved brother, Emmanuel Shank. Bro. Enoch Hyer was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. They were then installed into their respective offices. May the Lord abundantly bless them in their official capacity, and may they ever be found faithful stewards, studying to show themselves approved unto God, workmen that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth in its primitive purity. All business before the meeting passed off pleasantly. The church seems to be in love and union for which we thank the Lord! SAMUEL T. HARNES

"IF sorrow could ever enter heaven—if a sigh could be heaved there, or a tear roll down the cheek of a saint in light, it would be for lost opportunities—for the time spent in neglect of duty and of God, which might have been spent in his spirit and for his glory."

From the George's Creek Church, Pa.

ACCORDING to arrangements, Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Lewistown, came to our place Sept. 1, and preached the dedicatory sermon of our new meeting-house at Fair View.

No doubt a good many of our Brethren remember of hearing about our church house being wrecked by a wind-storm last spring, after the house was nearly completed. It was very discouraging, but our members took courage and went to work with a will, and, by the help of our friends and the united efforts of the church, we now have it finished.

We were anxious to have the house dedicated from the fact that we have been without preaching about one year. The old Fair View house will be remembered as the place where the lamented Bro. James Quinter so faithfully and zealously labored for ten or twelve years. It is said that when Bro. Umstad brought Bro. Quinter to this place, the latter was but a young man and the Brethren were slow to accept him as their minister. Through the persuasions of Bro. Umstad they agreed to try him, and when he preached his first sermon, young as he was, there was hardly a dry eye in the house, such was his zeal. This same earnestness marked his pathway all through his religious life up to the time of his death.

Then, again, we had such worthies as Bro. Jacob Mack and Bro. James Kelso. Later on we had with us Eld. Joseph I. Cover, who afterwards went with the Old Order element. We next had A. J. Sterling, who went with the Progressives. Bro. J. C. Johnson has been our elder since Eld. Cover left us.

Brethren, we have had our troubles; yes, they have been numerous. The different factions are bitter against us. Sometimes it seems as though the sun would never shine to make our hearts glad. It seems to us that there is always a cloud over the sun to keep it from shining. The Word of God tells us, however, that all things work together for good to them that love God, and if we can not see our way, let us trust in the Lord. Brethren and sisters, pray for us!

We started out to say something about the dedication of the new Fair View church house. The old one was torn down and the new one was built in its place. The size of it is forty by sixty feet, with seven feet reserved at one end for a kitchen. The new church, as well as the old one, was built on the ground donated to the George's Creek church by Ephraim Walters, who contributed liberally for the support of the church, and whose son now owns the same farm. He, like his father, has contributed liberally toward the building of the new church.

We had expected Bro. J. M. Mohler to be at our place, Saturday evening, Aug. 31, in time for an appointment, but he did not get to Uniontown in time to do so. On Sunday morning, however, he was there in good time. The day was all that could be desired, and long before the hour for meeting, the house was filled to overflowing with members and friends, to listen to an excellent dedicatory sermon.

After dedicating the church, the deacons began to make ready for our love-feast, which was to be held that same evening. Many participated and were glad to have the privilege of partaking once more of the holy emblems.

Bro. Mohler continued the meetings during the week until Sunday evening, Sept. 8, at which time our meetings closed. We had good attendance and good attention to the Word spoken.

Bro. Mohler is a good workman that needeth not to be ashamed, "rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

Brethren and sisters, let us put on the whole armor of God that we may stand against the wiles of the devil! O, how often our prayers are hindered on account of our worldly show in dress! ALPHEUS DEBOLT.

From Falls City Church, Nebr.

THREE more were baptized in the Salem church,—two on the 14th, the last one Sept. 19.

I wish here to correct a misunderstanding. When speaking of the "Salem church," many got the idea that there is an organized body by that name, which is not the case. We simply give it that name to distinguish the two houses in this church. The one is four miles north of Falls City at Silver Creek; the other, seven miles west in Salem, and are named according to their situation. Both houses and the entire membership belong to the same organization,—the Falls City church.

We are moving along quietly. We say but little through the paper and from this it might be presumed that we are not doing anything or but very little. We are, perhaps, not doing very much, but, considering the almost disorganized and bad condition of the church, caused by division, we feel to thank the Lord for what little we are doing.

It is not quite three years ago since I came here from St. Louis, to take charge of this church. I found it without a minister, and nothing but a missionary post. All the ministers and most of the deacons had gone Progressive. Since that time we received, by baptism, twenty-four, and by letter, twelve. In spirituality there is a remarkable change for the better, and all seem to be in love and union. The future outlook for a further increase and advancement on a solid basis looks very promising, for which we feel to praise the Lord.

R. K. BERKEYBILE.

WE are to forgive one another because God, for Christ's sake, has forgiven us, and to the end that we may resemble God. Here is the inspiration for this high and difficult task of conquering resentment. Ought not more sermons to be preached on this branch of Christian obligation? Is a sermon on this topic ever amiss? Will it not always be timely, and find a needed application somewhere in every Christian assembly?

A SINGLE grateful thought toward heaven is one of the most perfect and acceptable prayers.—Lessing.

Little Moses was a bright and loving boy. He expressed a desire to go to his Heavenly Father. Services by Rev. Brown, of the Christian church, assisted by the writer. G. W. BUCKMASTER.

KEEFER.—In Franklin County, Va., Sept. 8, sister Annie Keefer, aged 79 years, 11 months and 3 days.

She was the wife of Eld. Christian Keefer, who preceded her to the spirit world. She was suddenly and unexpectedly taken to her long home, and was sick only two days. She died surrounded by those whom she loved, and on the farm where she lived many years. With a Christian spirit she administered to the wants and necessities of those around her, and in a special manner to those of the church of her choice. Many were they who were welcomed to that home, and many were the kind acts that were administered by those charitable hands, which now lie cold and quiet. Her work is over. Her labors of love will long be remembered, especially by those of her own family to whom she was so devotedly attached. She leaves two sons and two daughters to mourn their loss. She will be missed by the church and by her neighbors. A. B. BARNHART.

GRACE.—In the Hopewell district, Pa., Sept. 8, Ezra P. Grace, aged 57 years and 7 months.

Bro. Grace was a member of the church for about three months. He leaves a wife and about ten children to mourn their loss. Funeral discourse by the undersigned from the latter part of 1 Sam. 20: 3.

GRACE.—Also, the same day, Ida Annie Grace, aged 7 years and 14 days. Funeral discourse by Bro. Henry Clapper.

DILLING.—In the same place, sister Elizabeth Dilling, aged 61 years and 12 days.

Deceased was the wife of J. B. Dilling, who served as a deacon in the church for a number of years. Sister Dilling was a faithful member in the church and will be missed by many. Funeral services by the Brethren from Rev. 14: 13. D. S. CLAPPER.

FOUST.—At Boynton, Pa., Bro. John A. Foust, aged 61 years, 2 months and 19 days.

Bro. Foust was a consistent member for a number of years. During the last three weeks of his life his sufferings were very great and he expressed his readiness to die and be with Christ. Our prayer is, that God, the Great Comforter, may comfort the sister and children in their bereavement.

SILAS HOOVER.

CARPENTER.—At Stuttgart, Ark., Sept. 10, Mary Augusta, daughter of Bro. E. A. and sister H. E. Carpenter, aged 3 years, 7 months and 15 days.

G. W. BUCKMASTER.

SHEPARD.—In the Four Mile church, Union Co., Ind., Sept. 11, sister Mary Shepard, aged 32 years, 8 months and 19 days.

HART. In the same congregation, Sept 16, Bro. John Hart, aged 68 years, 4 months and 10 days.

Deceased was the third son of David and Nancy Hart, who emigrated to Wayne County from North Carolina early in this century. He was united in marriage to Maria Lybrook Dec. 4, 1845. To them were born eleven children, three of whom have preceded him to the land of rest. For eleven years he has been a consistent member of the German Baptist church. Funeral services conducted by the Brethren. W. MCWHORTER.

MILLER.—In Carlisle, Pa, Aug. 16, Mrs. Sarah Miller, aged 46 years, 9 months and 14 days.

Deceased was the oldest daughter of the late John Bowers, near Martinsburg, Pa. She leaves a husband and seven children to mourn their loss. She died in the hope of a joyous resurrection. Funeral services by Reverends Wert and Myers, of the River Brethren. JERRE KLEPSER.

HESP.—In Cedar Creek church, Kans., Sept. 20, sister —— Hesp, aged 66 years, 3 months and 16 days.

After several weeks of wasting sickness our sister has passed over the river to try the realities of a spirit world. She was not able to attend church since June, but bore her suffering patiently, and was fully resigned to the will of God. We can but look back and see her charity and kind acts. She was ever willing and ready to administer to the wants of those around her. Whatsoever her hands found to do, that she did. She was a mother in Israel,—an ornament to the church and society. I trust that she is also an ornament in the realms of endless bliss. She was a kind and affectionate companion, a loving mother and a devoted Christian. Peace be to her ashes!

Sister Hesp leaves a husband, and a number of children, all grown. Funeral services at the residence from Rev. 14: 13, by Eld. Jesse Studebaker. P. H. WATKINS.

TAYLOR.—In the bounds of the South Waterloo church, Iowa, Sept 15, sister Ann Taylor, aged 79 years, 2 months and 5 days. Funeral services by the writer.

W. IKENBERRY.

She leaves four daughters and two sons and a large circle of friends and relatives to mourn their loss. J. I. TYLER.

BURSON.—In the Sandy church, Columbiana Co., Ohio, Bro. Abraham Burson, aged 75 years, 8 months and 20 days. Funeral services by the writer from Heb. 4: 9.

J. J. HOOVER.

MOHLER.—Near Clyde, Kansas, Sept. 2, —— Mohler, aged 62 years.

The deceased was no member but had many good feelings for the Brethren. He was married in 1856 to sister Mary C. Bird. He moved from La Salle Co., Ill., to Clyde, Kans., about ten years ago.

CHAS. S HILARY.

DISTRICT MEETINGS.

Oct. 18 and 19, Second District of West Virginia, in Buchanan congregation.

Colonist Sleepers.

THE Union Pacific Ry., also known as The Overland Route, has lately added to its service a number of new cars (which, by the way, are built by the World-famous Pullman Company) entitled Colonist Sleepers, and which for convenience and comfort are but little behind the handsome Pullman Palace Car. The cars are designed for the use and comfort of the Colonist, who, with his family, intend moving West to grow up with the country.

The only difference between these cars and the regular first-class Pullman is that the Colonist sleeper is not upholstered. There are fourteen sections in each car, and separate toilet rooms for ladies and gentlemen. At night, by means of sliding head boards and heavy damask curtains, as much privacy is secured as if in the regular first-class sleeper. Plenty of fresh, clean towels and a good supply of water are also to be found. A uniformed porter accompanies each car to look after the comfort and attend to the wants of the passengers, and no smoking is allowed. It certainly seems that for cheap and commodious sleeping accommodations, while traveling, these cars can not be excelled.

"Not How Cheap" but "How Good!"

IT must not be presumed that HERBICURA is a high-priced medicine just because it is not classed with cheap trash. The first consideration is QUALITY, and next PRICE. The makers guarantee the lowest prices consistent with honesty, and those who order for the first time are entitled to a complimentary discount. This is preferable to giving Bibles and books as premiums.

CAMERER & BRO. are known to the public for nearly seven years, but only recently have they appeared in these columns. It is their avowed intention to make HERBICURA a household name, and will conduct their business by just methods so that reputable physicians will not hesitate to prescribe HERBICURA, and publishers will be proud to advertise it for them.

A common but erroneous theory is that an advertiser to succeed must not instruct the people but rather work upon the credulity of the credulous. The proprietors of HERBICURA have taken a new departure in this respect. Their motto is: "Everything to reveal and nothing to conceal." Underhanded work should be frowned down. If you desire a good family medicine for yourself or neighbors and can appreciate square and honorable dealings, then your patronage is solicited.

If a man who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, is a benefactor of his age, how much more are those who will be the means of conferring health upon mankind by introducing HERBICURA.

An agent can be sure of having what is called a "run" until all the afflicted people in his community have been restored to perfect health and from that time on there will be a continued demand for HERBICURA as a general household medicine. It is pleasant to take and is also a favorite with children and elderly people. It may be taken by either sex as a laxative and alterative. An opportunity is hereby extended to all persons who may feel inclined to work in this field of benevolence.

If a man has dyspepsia he can take red pepper freely and it will afford temporary relief; but it won't be long till the stomach refuses to be stimulated in this way, and then he is far worse than before, for the remedy has seriously injured him.

A tired, weak man can fill himself with whisky, and, for a short time, he may imagine he is getting strength, but it won't be long till that will fail, and he will be weaker than before.

What, then, is the right way? The only permanent and satisfactory remedy for most of the troubles of mankind is that which will invigorate and strengthen the whole system.

This can only be done by beginning at the origin of life, which is the BLOOD. No one whose blood is strong and healthy can be sick; therefore, if the blood is purified and invigorated, disease can not remain.

How many people of your personal acquaintance are constantly complaining of being "so tired," having "such a headache," of "not feeling just right," and a thousand and one other things, until it almost seems as if the world had become one huge hospital filled with incurables?

What is the cause of all this? Certainly it is not a natural condition, but, on the contrary, is one that should cause much anxiety and alarm.

Nothing will restore failing health, nothing will so quickly and surely bring strength, as HERBICURA.

Everybody knows that the blood is the foundation of life, and that so long as the blood is pure and healthy, disease can not secure a hold.

Are you tired and weary, overworked and overstrained? Do you wish that you could sleep? Are you sick of tossing around all night, ever trying and ever failing to get sleep and rest?

Do you ache all over, wishing the morning was night, and the night morning? Is life a burden and everything around you dark and gloomy? Take HERBICURA and you will wonder how it is you feel so well, and why the world is so bright.

Probably nobody wants to be sick just for the fun of it, and nearly everybody tries one thing and another in the vain hope that it will cure them; but, in most cases, they find themselves no better for the trial.

There is no reason why they can't be cured if they go about it in the right way; but they generally take the wrong way, and then think there is no use trying any more, and so keep getting worse instead of better.

Do you care whether you are well or sick? Instead of feeling tired and worn out, instead of aches and pains, wouldn't you rather feel fresh and strong?

You can continue feeling miserable and good for nothing, and no one but yourself can find fault, but if you are tired of that kind of life, you can change it if you choose.

How? By getting one bottle of HERBICURA, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Some people have been deceived repeatedly in so-called blood medicines, and it is natural that they should hesitate to order anything they have never heard of before, and this is why our friends, who are familiar with the virtues of HERBICURA, personally recommend it to others.

The best and quickest way to get HERBICURA fresh and pure, is to get it direct from headquarters, and thus get the complimentary discount and a FREE copy of "THE HERBICURIAN."

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.

"Set for the Defense of the Gospel."

Vol. 27. Old Series. Mt. Morris, Ill., and Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 15, 1889. No. 41.

The Gospel Messenger.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH, Editor,
And Business Manager of the Eastern House, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

AT our late church meeting it was decided to hold our Love-feast on Saturday evening, Nov. 2, at which time we will be glad to have some of our ministering brethren and others with us

WE have had, quite recently, some good news from the Philadelphia church. It is said that Bro. Gibson is growing in favor there, that he is doing good work and the cause is prospering.

OUR Sugar Grove brethren have been holding their Sunday-school, and also several preaching services, during the summer, in an old saw-mill, near by the old school-house, used for these purposes before. It has been torn down and a new one erected on the same foundation, where services will hereafter be held.

WE are informed that the difficulties in the Aughwick, Pennsylvania church have been adjusted, and that those who had withdrawn their membership have become reconciled and have been reinstated. We were pleased to learn this, as there should be no cause for those who are of like precious faith, severing their church relations or falling out by the way.

THE brick-layers have commenced the third story of our new "Normal" building, and if we have a few more weeks of good weather, it will be ready for the roof. This building, like the first one, when completed will be a monument of sacrifice on the part of the Board of Trustees, as all the drafting of plans, overseeing the work, soliciting of funds, etc., is done without a cent of pay. In addition to years of almost constant care and labor, free of charge, each member has given in cash, from $200 to $1,000, besides the same amounts in endowment funds. We don't say this in a boasting spirit, but to show our earnestness in the cause. Our desire and prayer is that our schools may prove a power for good to the church. Having this consciousness within our souls, we can cheerfully endure the abuse that is sometimes hurled against us by the envious and those ignorant of these facts, as they come and are to be met. We feel that hitherto the Lord, as well as many of our brethren, has been with us, and from present indications, is still with us, not in words only, but also in solid cash and patronage in the shape of the best set of students we have had for years. While we labor and pray for the success of the work here, we hold for our other schools the most kindly feelings. If our school is to be built up by trying to tear others down, it may sink into the dust before such work shall come from us. No, my brethren, if the Lord is to be with us, we must labor for the good of all, as it is the Lord's work and not our own. In his name it has been dedicated, and for his sake labor and even life has been laid upon the sacrificial altar, two, of the most self-denying, being already numbered with those on the other side, and though dead, yet they speak.

WE are glad to know that all our schools have, for the present term, an encouraging attendance, and that through them good work is being done. Our school work, like our church work, needs a unity of purpose, and to promote the cause, we should labor not to accomplish selfish ends. Any success that any one of our schools may get by placing demerit upon the others, will not be lasting nor honorable. To labor for selfish ends is a poor business, and any of us should be ashamed to be thus engaged.

ALTHOUGH we have not yet had any frosts, our surrounding mountains and hills are taking upon them the autumnal tinges of beauty, and wherever we look, there are spread out before us pictures of grandeur that outrival, in tint and shade, anything that the most skillful artist, with paint and brush, can place upon canvas. Does not God love the beautiful? Or why should he, with such munificent fullness, stamp, in his own way, so much beauty on everything which he has made? Even the bow of promise, to indicate the faithfulness of his love towards us, is made in colors grand beyond human art or skill. All the beauty that he has planted and painted throughout the universe is for our admiration and enjoyment. Let us praise him with our whole heart.

A LETTER.

UNION DEPOSIT, DAUPHIN CO., PA., Sept. 19, 1889.

My Dear Brother:—

I DO not get the MESSENGER, and seldom read it. My attention was called to your answers to queries in the issue of Sept. 10. Are you quite satisfied that you have caught the true meaning of the awful declaration in Heb. 10:26? Is it indeed possible for a finite creature, by sin of any kind or degree, to exhaust the provision of Divine Grace in Christ? There is truly "no other sacrifice for sin," because there needs be no other. God has not simply done for man what was REQUIRED by the necessities of his case, but all that GOD COULD do. No sin can exceed the possibility of the Atonement, so that an unpardonable condition finds its fatality in the constitution of the offender, and not in the limits of the Atoning sacrifice of Christ, once offered for all.

A sin unto death is necessarily the utter disorganization of our spiritual being, leaving no sensibility as a basis for reconstruction. The strain put upon the Hebrew believers was tremendous, and even the best of them had to be allowed a long rein of tradition for many years to keep them from utterly repudiating the claims of the new dispensation. To fall back into dependence on the legal order of things for salvation, and reject the new provision, was to take the ground that Jesus was an impostor, was justly crucified, and thus put Him to an open shame, and count His blood an unholy thing. "But there remaineth no other sacrifice for sins," as God has but one Son, and He can die but once to exhibit all His Divine-human resources; and to fall away to an inferior, obsolete dispensation, is to assume a position where nothing is left "but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries." A sin unto death leaves the door of Heaven as wide open as before, but it utterly closes the door of human receptivity. A rejection of the last and perfect revelation of Divine Grace does not reach the limit of that provision, but places us under the ministration of condemnation and death. Such a soul can possibly be restored. But the extinction by persistent sin of our spiritual receptivity, renders our renewal unto repentance impossible.

It may be that I did not fully comprehend your exposition in the editorials referred to, and that we entertain the same views of this solemn subject. If you can, without violating your sense of fidelity to the truth, give this to the public, it might, perhaps, be helpful to many of your readers. May God keep us all from sin, and if any have fallen from their integrity, and feel that they are under condemnation, let them not think that the one offering of Jesus does not suffice for their needs. C. H. BALSBAUGH.

WE quite willingly give Bro. Balsbaugh a hearing, not so much on account of any material difference in our views on the subject, as to ease the consciousness of those who are hanging out on the ragged edges of the boundaries of divine grace, debating whether they shall let go and drop down into the gulf of despair or hold on and wait for the rescuing angel. Our intention was not to frighten those who are in danger, but to warn them away from it. It is a bad policy to trifle with danger or to see how near we can keep to it without being lost.

As before said, we believe that there is a sin unto death, and for this sin there is no sacrifice—that there is a possibility of those who have been born again to die spiritually again. And, if so, there is no sacrifice that can reach them. We take the passage in its most literal and simple sense. "There remaineth no more sacrifice for sins"—not "there remaineth no other." This seems to be wherein we differ. While we believe that Christ died only once, and that that sacrifice was made to atone for only one death, Bro. Balsbaugh seems to think that this sacrifice is without limit, and that there can be no sin that it will not reach, when repentance and contrition of heart are manifested and felt.

In this last thought we agree; as long as there is a feeling of repentance and a desire for salvation, Christ is a ready sacrifice. But the position we take is that when those who have once tasted of the Good Word and have experienced the joys of pardoned sin, and have been made alive in Christ Jesus, when they crucify afresh the Lord of life and glory, they become so dead that they are past feeling. They are dead beyond the possibility of receiving light. They don't feel any more because there is for them no holy spirit to awaken. Even for such we are not to pray, because God will not hear prayers in their behalf. For them, no more sacrifice has been provided, and they can not be saved unless God saves them outside of the scheme of redemption, which has been provided through his Son for the salvation of the world. Hence there is no cause for despair on the part of those who are not past feeling, as all who feel are not dead. Only those are dead who don't feel, and who never will feel. And, therefore, the warning should reach us and be heeded while we have life, and we should prayerfully avoid that sickness which is unto death.

If our views on this subject are ultra or over radical, we shall be pleased to be enlightened in regard to it. As we can fully vote the latter part of Bro. Balsbaugh's letter, we are made to believe that our difference is more in manner of expression than in real difference of opinion. If, however, by our criticisms and explanations, the subject is made plainer to the general reader, our purpose has been accomplished.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THE QUIET HOUR.

A little rest in the twilight
After my work is done,
A little time with the Master
At setting of the sun.

The day has been one of trial,
Of failure oft and tears;
But Jesus knows all my weakness,
He knows my doubts and fears.

All sordid thoughts I can banish,
And let my spirit fly
Above the earth and its sorrow
To God's white throne on high.

The door of a place of refuge,
A place of quiet rest
Is near, and my soul is longing
To find that portal blest.

I come with my heavy burdens,
I come with all my sin,
I knock and the door swings open,
And Jesus lets me in.

My sin departs, and my trouble
Is lost in blissful calm,
This quiet hour with my Savior
Has soothed my heart like balm.

THE PERPETUITY OF THE CHURCH.

BY W. H. ROOSE.

"And upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Matt. 16: 18.

One of the sublimest spectacles, in this world of ours, is a man, standing in the integrity of holy principle and character, in the midst of universal corruption and evil. If no man can determine what his principles are, in relation to their inherent life and force, till he is brought into circumstances which admit of their being tried and tested, it naturally follows that the severer the trial to which they may be subjected, the sublimer will be the triumph. There is a difference between professing a religious life and living a real one. Life is real, and to get well through life we must be real men,—men of rare attributes and soul.

There is much to do in overcoming the everyday maxims and doings of the world. Truth, justice, honesty, mercy, are too often sacrificed to the gains of time and the amassing of wealth. Self is put in the room of God, and the claims of religion are lost sight of in the pursuits of business. A prosperous commerce leads to luxurious modes of living. With the increase of luxury comes the growth of corruption and vice, and as society becomes corrupt, its foundations become loosened and endangered. Yet these are the very conditions in which the integrity of holy principle and character should be most conspicuous. Look at the life of Noah! He stood like a rock in the midst of the ever-swelling tide of pollution and of sin, by which he was surrounded! Like some bright star in the firmament,—which, while the floods rise as if they would extinguish the lamps of heaven, shines with finer luster,—he attracted the eyes of the most vulgar. No one could call into question the purity and rectitude of his conduct! He not only kept his own garments unspotted, but he was an uncompromising and faithful witness for God, for truth, and for righteousness. His meekness and his constancy, his fidelity and his fortitude, his heroism and piety challenge imitation. We may not be able to stand as erect and true as some, yet we should manfully strive to do what we can.

These just and holy principles must find their source in the depths of the soul, hence our religion must be more than a mere form or an idle name. It must come out as a self-revealing power in the whole of our lives and conversation. Its existence can not be denied, and the memory of its impressions may survive the rudest shocks and revolutions of time. Then, among the faithless, we shall be found faithful. We shall be true to God, to ourselves, and to the world. Then will ours be shining lights, set on a hill. We shall be as stars in a night of darkness. They will often guide others to the narrow way as the beacon lights guide the vessels safely into the harbor.

We should not forget the fact, that the inner life of the soul can be maintained by deep and daily communion with God. As of Enoch, so of Noah, it is said, "he walked with God." His piety was nurtured in secret. He was a man of prayer, hence a man of power. His spiritual life was constantly increasing in strength and in progressive development, and in the degree of this inward vitality was his qualification for the most arduous and self-denying duties. He burnished his armor in the light of heaven, and feared not to face his most deadly foe. He gathered up his spirit into himself and was in constant readiness to do the will of God. The death-wave that swept out of existence millions of creatures, seemed only to lift him nearer heaven that he might walk among the purer and brighter lights therein suspended. He was a child of humanity, yet the purity of his heart entitled him to be a man of God. His life was not made up merely of feeling and sentiment, but also of stern and unchangeable principles.

All life has its source in God. The flower not only drinks the dew of the morning, but expands and glories in the light of day, and makes its bosom the bed of the sun. So the holy man rejoices in the influences, holy and spiritual. This might be the common happiness of all, while it is the rare privilege of the few.

In order to have our hearts replenished from the spiritual resources of the upper world, we must often divorce ourselves from the din and turmoil of life and have our moments of solitude and seclusion. Our whole nature must yield to the power of the ever-living and transforming Spirit. The way into the holiest is now made manifest, and we can often draw divinely near in the full assurance of faith. We now have a Mediator between God and man, and we may enter into immediate fellowship with the Father of our spirits, who will supply our waiting and worshiping souls according to the richness of his glory.

Another important truth is, that, though all life has its source in God, its development must be from within. Just as "the sun shines on the earth, and the exuberant earth returns the smile in flowers," so, in proportion to the replenishing and blessings we receive from on high, will our consecration be, and the devotion of our whole being to him who hath redeemed us, and through whose resurrection we have been begotten to a livelier hope,—the hope of eternal glory!

The lesson given us may be in suffering, or in persecution, yet we have a retreat from all the evils of the world in the bosom of Infinite Love. The ark being finished, at the age of six hundred years, Noah was commanded to enter it with all his house. This was not an act of arbitrary power, but one of Fatherly love. Noah was now to take his leave of the scoffing, impenitent world. This separation was to be forever. While Noah and his family were in the ark, awaiting the deluge, the people were busy outside, about their labors and duties. As they passed the huge structure, no doubt it provoked their laugh, coarse wit, and, perhaps, they expended their ridicule upon it and its builder, but Noah was the subject of inward quiet and calm.

Noah's peace was the rest of a soul drawn to the center of life and blessedness, and thither must we be drawn, should we wish to enjoy the peace that passeth understanding. How holy is the calm of that soul that is staid on God! All without may be disturbed, but rest dwells within! Our lot may be cast among a wicked people, but we can rise into the pavilion of the Highest, and humbly bow ourselves down to the shadow of his throne. The corruption of the times may assume a tide of no common force.

There is one tide which threatens to overthrow all the existing foundations of society, but we have a Rock upon which the church is built, and every one of us, who can look to it with a full assurance of faith, may cling to it with safety, however weak and feeble.

When the rains had ceased and the more prominent mountains were appearing with their summits above the mighty expanse of waters, and the ark rested on Ararat, the patriarch "sent out a raven, which went forth to and fro, till the waters were dried up from the earth." The dead bodies, floating on the water, afforded them both a resting-place and food, and they returned to the ark no more.

This is a fitting emblem of those who go out from the church of the Living God to the beggarly elements of the world. The world lures them away and the sanctuary knows them no more, nor is the Bread of Life their nourishment. Deplorable state, indeed!

Another Sabbath had been solemnized by the stillness of universal death and Noah sent forth the dove; but, unlike the raven, this gentle and lovely bird could not feed on carrion, nor find a resting-place on the drifting dead, and returned to the ark. So, in proportion as our nature is refined and transformed by the quickening powers of the Holy Spirit, will we seek to escape the pollution that is in the world and find rest only in the Lord our God. A true worker in the Christian cause can not return to the world and its lusts. His delight is to be with those who have been born into the kingdom of grace. It gives him pleasure to labor for the sin-stained soul that it may be cleansed in the atoning blood of Immanuel. He rejoices to know that saints are confirmed in "the faith once delivered unto the saints."

Who are the ravens? Who the doves? "Mark those that cause divisions among you." These human ravens never bring any "tidings of great joy," or bring "peace on earth, good will toward men." They are not the "lively stones" to which Paul refers as being saved by grace, but they are those who have died the second death and are kindling the righteous indignation of God. They rather aid in the destruction of the temple than in strengthening its walls, or in being helpers in perpetuating the church.

But notwithstanding all the opposing elements we have mentioned, we can console ourselves with the truth that the ark of the church's faith and the world's salvation will outride every storm. Its Founder so declared and his word will not return to him void, but will prosper in the thing whereto he sent it. The church of Christ has been subjected to the severest tests, but is mightier than ever for any future conflict. Were her strength derived from man, she could not stand, for we find where man has done his work in his own strength, he has ever striven to make the interests of the church conform to his own glory and honor. Hence the church always lost in proportion to the laurels won by the worker. Happily she does not rely upon the strength of man for her prosperity, but is nourished and defended by the power of God. Human systems and ecclesiastical organizations may perish, but these are not the church, and the church may exist without them. Here we have to do with men and not with things that have no power for good in the development of Christian character. The fires of persecution and of suffering may indeed burn our principles more deeply into the soul, and it is to the continued existence and reigning power of these principles that we must look for the continued existence and the imperishable duration of the church of the Living God.

We dare not look to anything inferior to this, for the progress and the perpetuity of the church and the world's freedom from the thralldom of sin and iniquity. All true liberty must spring out of the spread of Christianity, the triumphs of its faith, and from the Gospel of the Son of God. A freedom, not founded on truth, would but mock the expectations of the world. It is this for which all humanity sighs and waits, and this, with the faith of the church, is in the keeping of him who is head over all things. At his first advent he came, proclaiming liberty to a captive world, and before he comes a second time to perfect the work of human redemption, every fetter will have been broken, and over a ransomed and enfranchised world the morning stars shall sing together and all the blood-washed throng shall shout for joy.

Eventful times may yet be experienced, some of deep agitation and of mighty change. The still water of the sanctuary may yet be lashed into storm; but we fear not for the "old ship," for it will safely outride every storm and, ere long, will be seen resting in the harbor, gilded with the light of a higher world, and opening into a state where all things shall have become new, and perfect, and abiding.

Dear readers, you who are fellow-workers in the Christian cause, and you who have not yet had a foretaste of the unspeakable joys that await the redeemed in glory, "Prove all things and hold fast that which is good." Apply the Truth only, as that only will build you up, and establish your going.

CHRIST THE FOUNDATION.

BY S. T. HARNES.

"For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."—1 Cor. 3:11.

It is not here alone but in many other Scriptures, both of the Old and the New Testament, that our Lord Jesus Christ is held forth unto the church of the first born as the foundation of a great building. The doctrine of our Lord Jesus Christ is the foundation, and they that believe are the building reared upon that foundation. There is the same union and relation between him and them as there is between a foundation and a building. That relation and union should be very near,—the nearer the better. They that are joined to the Lord are one with him.

A foundation is very necessary and useful. A building can not stand without it. A foundation may stand long enough without a building upon it, but no building can stand without a foundation under it. So Christ might have been without us, but we cannot be without him.

Some claim that the apostles and prophets are the foundation, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone. Eph. 2:20; Matt. 16:18. It is not said "the apostles' foundation," but the "foundation of the apostles," that is the foundation on which they themselves rested. Had the apostles and prophets been asked, one by one, "What is your foundation? On whom do you build?—they would have said, "Jesus Christ." He was their all in all and, therefore, should be ours. Christ was the foundation which they built upon for life and happiness, and so they preached it to others.

Paul says, "According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon." There is no foundation but Christ. The prophets prophesied of him as the one to come. The apostle pointed to him as the one already come. "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," said John the baptist.

The "rock" spoken of in Matthew, does not mean the person of Peter. That would have been a poor rock for the church to be built on,—a rock shaken immediately (verse 22), and worse afterward. Matt. 26:70, 74. It is the confession of Peter, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God," that constitutes the rock. Matt. 16:16, tells us, "Upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Jesus Christ is called the cornerstone, but that does not hinder his being the foundation also. We read, "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold I lay in Zion for a foundation, a stone, a tried stone, a precious cornerstone, a sure foundation."

The use of a corner-stone is to unite the sides of the building, and also form a union with the foundation. This Christ accomplished by making Jew and Gentile one. In Jesus Christ we, who sometimes were afar off, are made nigh by the blood of Christ, for he is our peace who hath made both one and hath broken down the middle wall of partition between us. Eph. 2:13, 14. He that could join those two distinct sides and make them one, can certainly and, we hope, will, in his own due time, reconcile lesser differences.

The corner post is reckoned very necessary in a timber structure and so is the corner-stone to a foundation. The corner-stone "which the builders refused is become the headstone of the corner." Ps. 118:22.

What kind of a foundation is Christ? A laid foundation. Isa. 28:16. "I lay," that is God the Father,—one that knew well enough how to do it, a God of infinite wisdom and power. The Lord Jesus did not appoint himself to be a mediator; he was called to it, appointed of God for such a purpose, and this is our comfort and joy. God that could best tell what would best serve to satisfy his offended justice, here fixed upon his Son for that purpose. He found a ransom. Job 33:24. "I have laid help upon one that is mighty. I have exalted one chosen out of the people." Ps. 89:19.

In looking at a house, we see a building, but we do not see the foundation. So it is with our Lord Jesus Christ. He is out of sight,—though we do not see him, yet we love him. Believing, we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory, for he has promised to be with his people everywhere, for he hath said, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them." Matt. 18:20. "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Matt. 28:20.

Every building is not a temple. The church is God's temple. The foundation is a living foundation, and the superstructure is a living superstructure. "To whom coming, as unto a living stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious, ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 2: 4, 5. The material in this building are men and women, made spiritually alive, quickened with divine power, such as once were dead in trespasses and sin, but are now alive to God. It is a great privilege to be of that body,—a branch of the vine of which Christ hath said, "I am the true vine and my Father is the husbandman." Matt. 15:1.

How may we become living stones? We must be sure we are taken out of the quarry of a natural condition, by regenerating grace. There is much to do in this work. We must, through faith, repentance and baptism, receive Christ Jesus the Lord and make him our foundation, rest and rely upon him for righteousness and salvation, cleaving to him with full purpose of heart. Having done so, we must build up ourselves in our most holy faith, grow in grace, and add to our faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge; and to knowledge, temperance; and to temperance, patience; and to patience, godliness; and to godliness, brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness, charity. 2 Pet. 1:5-7. We should seek as much as in us lieth, the good of the building. If we can do nothing else, we can pray for it—pray for the peace of the church, that all differences be adjusted. Love should pervade all and bind them together. We must show the proper light. It is the church only that has the true light. If we are in the light of the Lord, let us walk as children of light!

"I AM THE WAY."

BY JOHN H. GARBER.

Christ said, "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." We are to follow after Christ in God's own appointed way; following in his footsteps toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. We must follow Christ, obey his commandments as he has given them (not as we want to). When he says, "Wash your brother's feet," do it, and whatever else he commands, that do with a willing mind, as obedient children. His words are full of grace and truth, and it pleased the Father that in him should all fullness dwell. Having made peace through the blood of the atonement, he reconciled all things unto himself.

In Christ are all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge. He has told us, "If ye continue in my words, then are ye my disciples indeed. Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." He has also promised that the Spirit of Truth shall guide us into all truth.

Pilate said unto Christ, "Art thou a king?" Jesus answered, "Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice." Then Pilate said unto him, "What is truth?" Christ tells us, "My words are truth." Paul says, "The house of God, the church of the living God, is the pillar and ground of the truth."

We should have our souls purified in obeying the truth through the spirit, unto unfeigned love of the brethren, seeing that we love one another with a pure heart fervently. We should have this mind which was also in Jesus. Paul says, "Let nothing be done through strife or vainglory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves." Let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and truth. If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.

We should search for the great truths that are in the Bible. Christ says, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they that testify of me." If we know these truths and do them, they will make us free, and if the truth make us free, we shall be free indeed! Dear reader, search the Bible for the great truths and do them, that you may have a right to the Tree of Life, where everything will be beautiful (where Christ is sitting at the right hand of God), and we can live with Christ throughout the eternal ages of bliss!

New Market, Va.

HOW MUCH FOR A SOUL.

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

FARMERS! FARMERS!

Town people, and everybody else in need of whiskies, brandies, rums, etc., by the pint, quart or gallon, for medicinal or other purposes, please take notice that the G——C—— is carrying a larger stock than any five houses in the trade, and at lower prices than ever. I purchased an immense stock before the whiskey trust got control of the market. My stock is so large that I was compelled to rent one of the largest cellars in the city for additional storage. My quotations are lower than the goods can be bought for to-day at wholesale.

A nice fresh glass of lager always on draught. Hot coffee and lunch at all hours. A LIQUOR DEALER.

FOR a number of weeks the above advertisement, with which is connected a price-list of liquors has occupied a conspicuous place in one of our secular papers, and I am wondering, How much for a soul, — the poor, deluded soul that is enticed into the drunkard's hell by the above issue? As the advertiser fails to annex the price, and I am wondering, too, WHY the laws of a civilized country permit men to carry on such a damnable traffic; and still more, HOW any being clothed with humanity can boldly issue such an inducement to draw men, — and sad to say, — women, too, into the snares and woes that lurk in every department of such an establishment.

I know from whence it comes. A house, with which is connected one of the finest restaurants in the city, meets the approbation of the majority of people under the garb of respectability. But the trail of the serpent can be traced through every apartment, and misery stands guard at the threshold,—a sufficient warning to all whose mental vision is not incrusted with the scales of sin. Sweetest strains of music are ever calling to the passer-by, and the gaity of luxury entices him to enter. But woe, woe, WOE to him who frequents here! Sorrow, anguish and death is the portion of him who tarries at the wine. Prov. 23: 29-32; Isa. 5: 22.

I wonder, O, I wonder, if all the blasted hopes, the ruined health, the loss of life, the blighted expectations, the defamed character, the discord of once happy families, the bankruptcy, vice, poverty, ignorance, slothfulness, reproach, and curse, caused by the liquor traffic, and all the tears and bitter groans of the drunkard's wife, all the destitution of the drunkard's children, all the unutterable heart-pangs of the drunkard's widow, all the hunger and want of the drunkard's orphan, all the souls that tremble in the awful anguish of the drunkard's fear, and the great multitude that goes down to the drunkard's hell would pass in panoramic view before the liquor dealer, whether he would ever again hand a glass of intoxicating drink over the bar,—whether he would ever have a bar? O, I wonder!

Great God, when shall our fair land be freed from this terrible stain? Tears, wails, groans, anguish and heartaches will not avail, for the tears alone that have been shed over darling ones contaminated by its curse, are sufficient, if gathered together, to wash all the stain away! But who, except thou, O God, canst gather or keep the record of them, or what language can describe, or heart conceive the enormity of the evil? And who but the Great Omnipotent can estimate the worth of the souls ruined thereby?

Well may we ask, How much for a soul? The precious blood of God's only beloved Son is the inestimable price of the soul ruined by rum. Yet the world with all its wealth will not balance a soul in the scales of eternal justice.

"Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also." Habakkuk 2: 15. We feel it is woe betide us if we make no effort to dash that bottle aside! O, for some legitimate means to take the drink from a neighbor's lips: God appointed us a sphere in which to work for his glory, and the welfare of mankind, and all that we can do, within the boundary lines, will be required of us. And we shall not be held guiltless for withholding our aid in a work so laudable, or removing a blightening curse from our land. As God's children we should always take our stand against evil in whatever form it may appear; then work with might and main for its removal. There are fewer greater — if any — evils than the soul-damning curse—liquor traffic. If there were no intoxicants manufactured, there could be no traffic in them; and if there were no liquor sold, there would be no drunkards; and if there were no drunkards, our fair country would be robbed of much of its vice, poverty and shame, and hell of a mighty host of ruined souls. How much, and how many, only the All-wise can estimate.

But, in an anguished wail, we cry, Shall our eyes behold that glorious day? Or will it be before the Lord of glory wipes away each stain of earth in the advent of his power, in the wonderful eternity, when time and sin shall be no more? We pray and wait; trust and hope; for in his own good time we know that the good shall be separated from the evil, and the wheat be gathered from the tares, and treasured in everlasting garners, where tears shall never dim the eyes, nor hearts bleed in agony for a darling of the household, contaminated by earthly sins. We pray and wait, but wail, O Lord, how long; how long!

SET THY HOUSE IN ORDER.

BY J. N. KEISER.

"SET thy house in order, for thou shalt die and not live," were the words spoken by the prophet Isaiah to king Hezekiah when he was sick unto death, but we learn that when he heard these words spoken by the prophet, he repented and prayed, and turned his face to the wall and wept. It seems he had neglected to set his house in order and was unable to do so, while on a bed of sickness, so the Lord heard his prayers and had compassion on him and lengthened out his life fifteen years, in order that he might have time to accomplish the great work.

What did the prophet mean by using this language? Paul says, in 1 Cor. 5, "For we know if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens: earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven." The prophet did not mean that we should build large barns and stately mansions, there to bestow our goods and say, "Soul, thou hast plenty of room now, and much goods laid up for many years; eat, drink and be merry, but he had reference to a more noble work,—that of preparing the soul for a future existence beyond the solitary confines of this world. The rich man had much goods laid up for many years, but the answer was, "Thou fool; this night thy soul shall be required of thee." How many do we see, in these last days, who profess to be the followers of the meek and lowly Jesus but who are deeply engaged in hoarding up wealth, living in style, and in the world's fashions, looking down with scorn and contempt upon the poor and lowly,—just as the rich man did of whom we read in the parable. Remember, God may, perhaps this very night, demand thy soul of thee.

Let us remember, kind reader, that all the vanities of this world do not fortify us against diseases and accidents of this life, and when the peals of thunder roar and the vivid lightnings flash, the poor man in his humble cottage is just as safe as the rich man in his stately palace. Sickness and death bring on a level the rich and poor and both sleep side by side in the silent tomb. In the resurrection morn both will have to come forth,—some to the resurrection of life and some to the resurrection of damnation.

The great importance of having our house set in order while we have time and opportunity, is apparent to all. Not every one may have his life prolonged, as king Hezekiah had, when on a bed of sickness. We all have a work to do in this matter, and the first place to begin is at home,—right at our own hearts. This we can see by looking into the Gospel mirror. We can see whether or not we are adorning the profession we made before God and many witnesses at the time we were received into the church.

Love for the world and its pleasures and its fashions often has a stronger hold upon the human soul than a love for the moral character suitable to the children of God. The church of God, in which we have a home, ought to be united in love as one family.

If we have our house set in order, we will let our light shine as we are commanded. It will be a bright light so that it may be seen at a distance. This light is nothing more or less than the whole outward appearance, as shown by our daily walk and conversation. The Savior says, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Then, dear friends, take warning before it is too late, and turn your attention to the other side and begin to labor for the good Master and bid the old one farewell, that you may not have to weep as Hezekiah did, when you come down on your sick-bed, nigh unto death. If the king could not set his house in order, while on a bed of sickness, can we at this day? I fear not. Let us be wise and prepare while it is day, before the evil days overtake us when we will have to say, "We have no pleasure in them."

THE WITCH AT EN-DOR.

BY JAS. Y. HECKLER.

IN 1 Sam. 28 we read that after the Lord had forsaken Saul and left him to be troubled by an evil spirit, an army of the Philistines made an invasion into the land of Israel, and Saul trembled for fear of his enemies. He was at his wits' end and did not know what to do because of that invading army.

In former years, when he was strong and the Lord was with him, he had defeated the Philistines in battle, but now, when he was weak and forsaken of God, those enemies came to be avenged upon him. What would he or what could he do? In his distress he called upon the Lord, but the Lord had rejected him for disobedience and would not answer.

He next sought out a woman with a familiar spirit, as an oracle, to divine unto him the dark future. He was at the head of the nation and to him the people looked for deliverance from their enemies, but what should he do? He concluded if he could only see Samuel who had anointed him to be king over Israel and had counselled him so often, he could tell him what to do. But Samuel was dead and could not be seen otherwise than through the wizard's magic glass. The way the narrative is written, it appears that the woman called up or brought up Samuel from the dead and that he and Saul really talked together, but we must, of course, understand that the conversation was all done through the woman, who acted as a medium.

The question arises, Were these things in reality so or did they only appear to be so? Did a wicked woman, as she was considered to be at that time, have so much power that she could, by her will, call up a man from the dead? Could she unbolt the doors of the unseen world, while sitting in her chamber, and bring forward a man for consultation? Could her spirit, while in her body, go down to the unseen world and single out the man she wanted? If this woman had power enough to do those things, she certainly did not receive it from God, because the Lord had forsaken Saul, neither did he countenance her work.

When Saul told the woman to bring up Samuel, Saul had Samuel on his mind as he used to be, and she saw him as he was in Saul's mind and knew Saul also. Thus she could tell Saul many things about himself and Samuel, and what the Lord, whom he had offended, had said and done. This Saul knew to be true. Even to-day fortune-tellers may tell us many things that we know to be true, but the things of which they tell us that we do not know, are often not true. Fortune-tellers, as they are now called, seem to have the same "familiar spirit" as the one at En-dor, three thousand years ago.

HOW TO BUILD UP A CHURCH.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

SELF PRESERVATION is a first law of nature. When we made choice of the church of the Brethren and joined in with God's people, by that act, if we were sincere, we gave our life, power and influence to the church. It is but natural that we desire to see the cause we have espoused prosper. This can only be done by a personal effort. We must attend meeting. The cause will suffer if we neglect the assembling of ourselves together. It is not enough that the minister go to meeting and preach to the unconverted. The presence of every member is needed to give strength and life to the services. What good will it do to preach to the unconverted when the membership is cold, lifeless and indifferent? Lively interest in the church will awaken an interest among others.

Supposing you stay at home on Sunday, as the manner of some is, and suffer your boys and girls to stroll around over the neighborhood, or attend the meetings of others, with no other object in view but to see and be seen, then you strike a blow that is fatal to the prosperity of the church, both to yourselves and your children. Take a lesson from other denominations, if you will. They do not neglect their own meetings. They go themselves and take their children with them. In this way they build up their own churches.

I fear that many of us are remiss in our duty to the church, ourselves, and our children. Now I do not oppose attending the meetings of other denominations at suitable times and places, but when we neglect our own meetings in our own neighborhood, and give our presence and encouragement to others, we are simply helping to build up other people's houses while we suffer our own to tumble down over our heads. There are no sensible people who will give us credit for such a course. Other people do not do so. We must be true to our colors. If we have unfurled the banner of truth, let us be found in line of battle for the right. Then we must work together with the minister. If the minister be a "poor" one, slow, awkward and the like, we must courteously hear him in his turn. You can not get rid of a poor preacher by talking of his faults in the presence of your children. You are talking to the wrong ones. You are prejudicing your children to the church and implanting in their minds the spirit of fault-finding,—seeds that will produce a growth of trouble to the church in years to come.

Last but not least we must not expect the minister to do all. We must assist in singing, in prayer and praise. If we wish life and spirit in our meetings we must put our energies into the services. We infuse an interest in proportion to the interest we take ourselves. Why not make the house of God our chief joy? Then give it your heart, your hand, your life!

HOW TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN.

BY J. F. BRITTON.

THE above question seems to be very mysterious to the natural, or unconverted, mind, but it is no great mystery when we look at it through the pure sunlight of inspiration. There are some people who teach that man has no power, and can not do anything pertaining to the conversion of the soul. They say it is the work of the Holy Spirit of God alone. It is true, the Holy Spirit has its respective work in the process of the new birth, but it is an undeniable fact that man has his work to do also. Every intelligent person knows, that we do not receive our bread, meat and clothes, as manna fell into the camps of the Israelites. God has blessed us with the fertile soil of earth, fruitful seasons, and all other temporal blessings necessary for the nourishment of our physical bodies, but it is also an unquestionable fact, that if we refuse to use the temporal nourishment, adapted to our physical nature, by saying, "I will not work, eat, or drink," our life will fade and disappear as doth a flower. So it is in a spiritual sense. God has surrounded us with all the means of grace necessary for the conversion and saving of our souls from the awful abyss of everlasting despair. The grace of God that bringeth salvation, hath appeared to all men. Tit 2:11. The Apostle Peter, when under the power of the Holy Ghost, opened his mouth and said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: But in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." Acts 10:34 35.

Jesus is standing to-day, crying mightily through his Holy Word, saying, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest: Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Matt. 11:28, 29. Isaiah, the prophet, says, "Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." Isa. 55:6, 7. Ezekiel, another one of the holy prophets, under the power of the Holy Spirit of God, gives a great light on this very serious question. "Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive. Because he considereth, and turneth away from all his transgressions that he hath committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die. Yet saith the house of Israel, The way of the Lord is not equal. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? Are not your ways unequal? Therefore I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord God. Repent, and turn yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin. Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel? For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye." Ezek 18: 27-32.

Oh, sinner, do you earnestly and sincerely desire to become a child of God and an heir of heaven? If you do, just bring yourself under the influence and power of the Gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Rom. 1:16. Read and study God's Holy Word, with an earnest desire of knowing his will concerning you, and, by yielding obedience and using the means that God has devised for the salvation of every soul, you will become a new-born creature in the kingdom of Christ. Which will you do,—accept the terms of love and mercy, and live and reign with Christ, or reject and die the awful death of the wicked?

"Come sinners, seek his grace,
Whose wrath ye cannot bear,
Fly to the shelter of his cross,
And find salvation there."

THE BRETHREN'S CARD.

BY LANDON WEST.

BE it known unto all men that there is a people who, as little children, Luke 18:17, accept the Word of the New Testament as a message from heaven, Heb. 1:1, 2; who teach it in all its fullness, 2 Tim. 4:1, 2; baptize believers by a trine immersion, Matt. 28:19; Mark 16:16; with a forward action, John 19:30; Rom. 6:5; and for the remission of sins, Acts 2:38; who lay hands on those baptized, asking upon them the gift of the Spirit of God, Acts 19:5, 6; Heb. 6:2; who follow the command and example of Jesus in washing one another's feet, John 13:4, 17; Phil. 2:7; in taking the Lord's Supper at night, John 13:30; 1 Cor. 11:23; and at one and the same time tarrying one for another, 1 Cor. 11:33, 34; in saluting one another with a holy kiss, Acts 20:37; Rom. 16:16; 1 Peter 5:14; who take the Communion at night after the supper, as did both the Lord and Paul, Mark 14:17–22; Luke 22:20; Acts 20:11; who teach all the doctrines of Christ, viz: Peace, Matt. 18:15, 18; love, 1 Cor. 13; 1 John 4:20; unity, Eph. 4:3–16; faith and works, Heb. 11; James 2:17,18; non-conformity to the world in vaindressing, wicked customs, etc, Rom. 12:2, 1 John 2:15; non-swearing, Matt. 5:34–37; James 5:12; opposition to war, John 18:36; James 3:18; anti-secretism, 2 Cor. 6:14–17; doing good unto all men, Matt. 5:44–48; who teach the anointing and laying hands on the sick, James 5:14, 15; and the giving of the Word, the Bread of Life and the common salvation, unto all men without money or price, Matt 10:8; 11:5.

Dear reader, for the above principles we contend earnestly, Jude 3: and you, with all men are invited to hear Matt. 7:24; to examine 1 Thess. 5:21; and to accept them as the faith once delivered to the saints.

KEEP still. When trouble is brewing, keep still. When slander is getting on its legs, keep still. When your feelings are hurt, keep still, at any rate, till you recover from your excitement. Things look differently through an unagitated eye. In a commotion once I wrote a letter, and sent it, and wished I had not. In my later years I had another commotion and wrote a long letter; but life had rubbed a little sense into me, and I kept that letter in my pocket against the day when I could look it over without agitation and without tears. I was glad I did. Less and less it seemed necessary to send it. I was not sure it would do any hurt, but in my doubtfulness I leaned to reticence, and eventually it was destroyed. Time works wonders. Wait till you can speak calmly, and then perhaps you will not need to speak. Silence is sometimes the most massive thing conceivable. It is strength in its very grandeur. It is like a regiment ordered to stand still in the mid-fury of battle. To plunge in were twice as easy. Learn to keep still.—Sel.

"THE TEN COMMANDMENTS."

BY LEWIS W. TEETER.

Number One.

In the investigation of this subject, we wish to bring forward some of the facts which are not usually associated with it, which will, we think, settle the matter as to what the Ten Commandments are not, if we shall not be able to determine what or where they are.

It is true that a subject, like the above, may go unvestigated, and be left to the disposition of the modern theologian, or divine, so long, that finally it will have gained a prestige in its favor, that it will almost appear cruel for one to controvert it.

We think that such is the condition of the "Ten Commandments." We do not say that there are no "Ten Commandments," for it is certain that there are. But the question is: What constitutes the "Ten Commandments" or Decalogue? You may ask almost any child of the age of six or eight, what the "Ten Commandments" are, and it will be able to tell you the chapters where you will find them, and, maybe, recite them to you.

You can go into the houses of hundreds of families, and among their wall charts will be the "Ten Commandments," variously brought out.

The printers of Bibles, even, have a design impressed in arabesque style, in gilt, portraying Moses with two tables of stone in his hands, upon which are indicated, what are called the "ten commandments," numbering I, II, III, IV, etc.

It is a well authenticated fact, that the original form of the books of the Bible was, that they were written throughout without a division into chapters or verses — not even into words, as we call them, with the exception of the Book of Psalms. It was simply divided into psalms.

But it is true, as stated, that there are Ten Commandments which were given to Moses, written on two tables of stone, but there is nothing to prove that those commandments that we see on wall-charts and elsewhere, are the same as the Ten Commandments that were written on the two tables of stone.

Those which are usually called the Ten Commandments are selections made by man out of the books of Moses. As the Hebrew seems to indicate, the writing on the two tables of stone was called "Ten Words." But who will assume the responsibility to say in which chapter or verses the Ten Commandments are found? No one can so definitely locate those ten commandments. The Lord gave Moses Ten Commandments but the Lord did not number them for Moses and say, such a commandment is the first, and such a one the second, etc. Neither did Moses number them, and it is certain that no one ever since had the authority or the wisdom to number them. Divinely-sent characters might have done so, but they did not do it. Then it remains that some man guessed which was first and which second, etc. This guess-service is very unsatisfactory.

When you read Ex. 20, and Deut. 5, you read, in the titles of those chapters, as the first item, "The Ten Commandments." But, as stated above, this is the assumed work of a man.

All this locating, summarizing, charting, and decorating and having what are usually called the "Ten Commandments" referred to, has a great tendency to fix them in the child's mind, as the very nucleus or heart of the entire Bible, including the New Testament, and inclines them to think that the popular "Ten Commandments" are more important than the New Testament Scriptures, and may, therefore, be one of the fruitful causes that make so many "moralists," as they invariably base their hopes on the "Ten Commandments."

If there had been such a numbering, as referred to above, would not the Savior have answered accordingly, when he was asked which was the first and great commandment? But hear him answer: "The first of all commandments is, Hear O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord! And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these." Mark 12: 29–31.

Notice the fact, that the Savior gives a first and second commandment, and says that there is none other commandment greater than these, but neither one of them is in the popular "Ten Commandments." The first one occurs in Deut. 6: 4, 5; the second in Lev. 19: 18, while all of the popular "Ten Commandments" are found in Ex. 20, and Deut. 5, which is clear proof that the Savior's numbering does not harmonize with man's numbering.

Then it is clear that the present numbering is not reliable, hence the "Ten Commandments" are no more binding than any of the other commandments in the Old Testament.

According to history, authors did not agree as to the number of the commandments, some having more and some less.

In our next, and concluding article, we will show the present condition of the "Ten Commandments," and their relation to the rest of the Scriptures, and why they should be clearly understood as to their condition, and the present practice of grouping those ten parts, and calling them "Ten Commandments," discouraged.

Let no one think strange of the course we are taking until he reads the next article.

"THE THINGS THAT REMAIN."

BY B. C. MOOMAW.

At this season of the year occurs, in most parts of the Brotherhood, the feast of charity, to which all the faithful members look forward with joyful anticipations. It is the great, spiritual season of the church, — the time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, which animates the minds and warms the hearts of God's people throughout the length and breadth of their temporal habitation.

These gatherings have never ceased to be interesting and popular, insomuch that thousands of friends outside of the immediate membership of the church gather to witness the altogether peculiar scenes which no other body of professed Christians can exhibit.

How great the opportunity then, to speak a word in season for the Master and for the Truth, when so many eager listeners stand ready to hear the proclamation of the Gospel! And how well prepared ought every minister of that Gospel be, to divide the Word aright, and give to every one his portion of meat in due season! There should be no uncertain sound, no needless waste of time in long harangues to little purpose,—in private interpretations of Scripture, in scattering talk, and weak exhortation.

On these occasions the fundamental themes of the Gospel are set before us in the strong light of vivid emblem. With what symbolic force and clearness are we confronted by the lessons of the cross,—the body which was broken for us, and the blood which was shed for us. All the fearful lessons of sin, and guilt, and death stand revealed amid the darkness and horror of the Judgment. All the blest realities and possibilities of atonement and pardon and salvation burst upon us like the rising glory of the "Sun of righteousness!" How plainly we can see that the great value of this sacrament lies not in the sign, but in the thing signified,—that the lasting benefit is the spiritual impression which is made upon the mind and heart, the quickened faith, the strengthened hope, the new kindling of love, the revived impulse toward holiness which is given to the whole man by this near approach to God, and this new vision of his love and grace. And this thought stands over against the natural tendency of the heart to rest in the external performance, rather than seek the internal,—the spiritual essence of the commandment.

The disposition to be satisfied with the "letter," and neglect the "spirit" of the Word is not confined particularly to any one sect, but shows itself to a greater or lesser degree in the history and present condition of all. And this is true because the disease is fundamental and universal. The human heart, careless of divine things, or insensible to spiritual influences, or engrossed with the flesh and the world, can not draw near to God in any real, personal contact. Strong repulsions, the deep sense of divergence, and the want of harmony with the divine will, and likeness to the divine mind, —a sense of distance and uncongeniality and estrangement, pushes the soul into the outer courts of dead formality, and unfeeling conformity.

There is a lack of faith, and a lack of earnestness, and a lack of holiness, and a lack of everything except unwashed guilt, of which there is, alas, too apt to be the greatest abundance. I say that this is a general condition among professing Christians, who can rest so much easier in outward form than in inward grace, because there is so much more crucifixion of the flesh in the latter than in the former.

Thought and feeling are natural and common in the flesh, but unnatural and uncommon, and difficult in the spirit. We are at home in the material. The spiritual is dim, and far away, and is strange. But this is the transplanting of the kingdom, "for the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal."

We must learn, if we have not yet learned in real experience, that acceptable worship is the worship of the spirit in the Spirit.

Paul "worshiped God in the Spirit, and had no confidence in the flesh." God is a Spirit, and they that worship him, must worship him in truth. True worship is the adoration of the mind, the sincere affection of the heart, the loyalty of the life. Without these things, without holiness, all doing, and running hither and thither, and labor of hands and feet, is but a hollow mockery. Over against it is written this word: "I am he who searcheth the hearts, and trieth the reins." Nothing can stand before this scrutiny but the righteousness which comes by faith, and the true holiness which is the fruit of it.

Now, every man would have enough to do to attend to his own case in these particulars, for here he is confronted with a spiritual test which is likely to bring forth the sweat of conflict and agony, the more he is exercised thereby, lest, peradventure, the Lord shall say in the great day of his judgments, "I never knew you." How shall we know him or be known of him, if we have never truly drawn nigh to him in faith and love?

Nevertheless it may be given to one or to another to speak a word in season, and to say that, as a people, we are in great danger of this very externalism which has always withered the tender branches of the Vine, and caused the leaves of its profession to droop, and the fruit of its holiness to fail.

There was a time when our spiritual fathers looked diligently into the hidden meaning of type, and symbol, and mystic utterance of the Word. They would proclaim it in the pulpits. They would gather in circles in the intervals of worship, or in Sabbath evenings, and discourse on the things pertaining to the kingdom, and make the letter of revelation luminous with the spirit of Truth. It is good to dwell in this region, for it is far away from this modern world. But these things have greatly changed among us, and in their place we have the loud and long contention about some of those external things which, without holiness, are altogether unprofitable. If we should not neglect these things, how much more should we not neglect the weightier matters,—judgment, mercy, and faith!

Yet there is too often judgment without mercy, and profession without faith. Happy the people who do not need this warning, or needing it, heed it! It is not expected of any man, or any community of men, in a world like this, to be so far removed from imperfection as to be free from moral and spiritual dangers. So much the more folly to ignore the danger, and so much the less reason to rest in imperfection as in an end gained; for as long as there is imperfection, as long as there is danger, the call to diligence and watchfulness remains imperative as seven thunders. And if these thunders became articulate, they would, with one voice, proclaim the urgency of continuous and heroic effort to draw nigh to God, and so to walk in the higher life which is lighted by the glory of his constant presence.

Ah, until the regenerated soul reaches the goal of its hopes, in a perfection which knows no blemish, in a strength which knows no weakness, in a glory which knows no cloud, it will not cease to struggle upward, though ten thousand years should separate it from the consummation, for the principle of the new life within it is immortal, eternal, and therefore takes no cognizance of the flight of time, nor of the difficulties and straits with which this temporal dispensation abounds. For all these things must perish, — this present world, the outward symbol, the stepping-stones of truth, and naught remain of all we see and feel but the human soul, clothed with what habiliments, whether noble or mean, whether of glory or of shame, it shall have gathered around it in this world, for its entrance into the world to come.

THE LOVED AND LOST.

BY BEN. F. RAYIM.

How beautifully true is the Scripture comparison of life to a flower, which springs up in the morning and blooms, but in the evening is cut down and withers away! Its exceeding beauty and comeliness, its delicate tints, rose-colored and golden, its virgin buds and blossoms, and the incense which it lavishes from its fragrant urn upon the summer air, as it leans forward for its gentle kiss—what are they all, and what do they avail? Alas, they are nothing. The beautiful flower, radiant in nature's sunniest smiles, and arrayed in her loveliest attire, which lifted up itself so proudly at noon, bows its head to the blast, is stricken down and withers away, wet with the dews of night.

So it is with life. We hardly enter the world, flushed with bright hopes and anticipations, ere we are summoned by the angel of Death to leave it! We hardly taste of its enjoyments and its pleasures ere the cup is dashed from our lips forever.

Honor and station, however high, have no power to arrest the hands of the destroyer. The silver locks of age bow before him Youth and innocence plead and smile at him, but he delights to feast upon their very smiles and dimples. And beauty—the impersonation of all that is lovely and excellent—is touched by the icy fingers of death, falls to the earth, and becomes the food of worms! Such is the common lot of humanity—such the end of all earthly hopes and aspirations! A reflection so solemn—pressed upon us as it is day after day and hour after hour, should teach us not to cling to life too tenaciously, or place our affections on earthly things. All—all must pass away,—and why, with this solemn admonition so constantly mingling itself with our thoughts, should we wish to live always?

I would not live on earth alway—
Oh, no! not of heaven I crave this boon,
When death shall summon me away
In life's bright morning or sweet noon,
And earth fades to my closing eye.
Father! be thou my staff and stay,
And bear me to thy realms on high—
There—oh there, I would live alway.

There I would live alway! What but the assurance of a happier existence hereafter would enable us to bear up under affliction? The flower, which is so emblematic of human life, is cut down and withers, but with the first breeze of the new spring it rises and blooms again in all its wonted beauty and glory. So with the flowers that spring up along the domestic path, and are sheltered by our firesides, they are taken away, but will they not rise and live again in an eternal spring in the Garden of Paradise? It is hard to part with those we love—and it seems like tearing away the heart strings to surrender them to the cold chamber of the tomb. Notwithstanding all the consolations which religion or philosophy brings to the wounded spirit, still the loss of those to whom we are endeared unmans him, who has a throb of kindly feelings in his bosom.

To see the lips pale in death, yet wreathed in a loving smile—to feel the brow cold and icy, and the eye eclipsed, all this moves us unless we have a heart of adamant. And then the light, bounding step so familiar and pleasant to hear—the voice of welcome at morning, noon and night — the eye that weeps over our misfortunes and fills with tears of joy at our success, the smile at all times, and always happy and bright and cheerful—the earnest prayer for the little ones — the care and watchfulness over them — the devotion and unceasing attention, the clinging love and more than earthly affection by the side of the sick couch at midnight, how can we forget them, or, remembering them, forbear to weep and mourn the loss of those who possess them!—Standard.

TREASURES IN EARTHEN VESSELS.

BY T. A. ROBINSON.

"We have this treasure in earthen vessels."—2 Cor. 4: 7.

In the above text Paul apprises us of the fact that in this body is a treasure of great value. This body is said, by the apostle, to be a tabernacle, also an earthen vessel or temple. God created man out of the dust of the earth, but when God breathed into it the breath of life, it became a living soul.

Man is composed of three parts, soul, body and spirit. When these are separated, it is death, for death is a separation. When the soul and the spirit leave the body, it is called a temporal death, and the body must decay because those living principles leave it. The spirit must go to God who gave it, and we would infer from the above text that the soul is the treasure that we have in earthen vessels. We have the privilege of saving it or being the means of its being lost. Every person has a soul to save. If this treasure within us is lost, God is not to blame for it, for he has given us the means of salvation, through his own dear Son. By faith we are saved. Faith is taking God at his Word, and if we take God at his Word, we dare not reject one of his commands. We will find no non-essentials in his will, for Jesus says, "Why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say? If ye love me, ye will obey my sayings!"

FAME.

What is fame? Is it sustenance of life? Is it happiness? Does it bring content? Does it produce the softer joys of life? Can it command the tender sympathy, and rule, with pleasure, wedded life? Does it smoothe the rough pages of existence, or mellow its asperities; make calm the tide of passions, or quell their boisterous overflowings? Does its tone sound in accordance with the still small voice of religion? Do its aims and ends agree with the moral law of God? What is fame? Is it to be spoken of by men in aftertimes? Then he that burnt the temple of Ephesus has as much as an Alexander, or a Socrates. Is fame the offspring of good actions or bad—or both? The question suggests the sufficient answer. What is fame? A vain shadow, unfit to taint the noble mind of man. Man should live to honor his Maker, and in doing so ennoble himself. —Sel.

GOD'S METHODS.

God has many methods of showing us his ways. He teaches us by his Word, which is as a lamp to our feet and a light to our path, and by which the man of God may be so taught as to be "perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." In that Word we find the fullest and most careful instruction. It meets us in every point in our existence, and, by general and comprehensive direction, shows us also the way in which we should go. He shows us also by his Holy Spirit, which guides us into all truth, which shows us things to come, which instructs us in the very wisdom of the Lord, which takes the things of God and shows them to us. He shows us by his providence, hedging the wrong path, opening the right way before us, warning us off from dangerous places, opening before us ways of pleasantness and paths that are peace.—Ex.

LOOKING AFTER IT OURSELVES.

Many people claim to trust God for all, and yet are anxious about everything. It has been said that we pray, "Give us this day our daily bread, and to-morrow, and next day, and the day after, and next year, and fifty years to come; and lest thou shouldest forget it, or neglect to answer us, we have undertaken to look after the matter ourselves."

But there is a hidden wisdom in this portion of our Lord's prayer. It is best for man that his maintenance should be in God's custody, to be called for every day; for if a man had his provision for many days in his own power, and God should cast off his care for him, either he would lavish it out too fast, or thieves might steal it, or vermin devour it, and then he might starve; hence the blessedness of "Give us this day our daily bread," spiritually as well as temporally.

"One of the crying evils of the present age is a prevalent superficiality and want of thoroughness in nearly everything. Outside show and glitter take with the crowd and are popular, while under this veneering lie mental barrenness and vacuity. In the midst of great physical activity we sigh for an age of old-fashioned intellectual thoroughness. Shall we have it, especially in religion?"

BRO. D. R. PROWANT, of the Auglaize church, Ohio, reports one baptized in that church recently.

THE Mission Board of Northern Illinois met at this place on the 7th inst. They considered matters pertaining to the interest of the mission work.

THE Brethren in the Silver Creek congregation, Ogle Co., Ill., are filling seventeen appointments each month, and still there are calls for more preaching.

BRO. CHRISTIAN HOPE has been laboring for the Brethren in Nebraska. He ought to be in the field all the time, but has not the means. He does efficient work in the ministry.

"A DISAPPOINTMENT, a contradiction, an injury received and endured for God's sake, is of as much value as a long prayer; and time is not lost which is spent in the practice of meekness and patience."

STANLEY, the African Explorer, has again been heard from, and it is now hoped that he will soon emerge from the dark continent, in which he has been exploring for several years. He will doubtless have a thrilling narrative to relate when he returns.

DURING the past five years nearly two hundred have been received into the Silver Creek church, at this place, by baptism. Of this number, about 150 were students. Surely the Lord has most abundantly blessed the work of the church at this place. May the good work continue!

BRO. J. G. ROYER recently held a series of meetings in the West Branch church, nine miles north-west of Mt. Morris. Three were added to the church by baptism and several others made application. At this writing Bro. Royer is holding meetings in the Milledgeville church.

DURING our absence from home our private correspondence was sadly neglected. We will now answer private letters as we find time to give to that work. Our correspondents will please bear with us.

WE have on file a number of queries which will receive attention in due time. Let no one become impatient if he does not get an immediate answer to his questions. It takes time to answer all the queries that are sent to the office. Many of them are answered privately.

OUR love-feast at Silver Creek was held on the 5th inst. The large house was filled with members, over 300 being seated at the tables. The meeting was a good one and will not soon be forgotten. Bro. D. M. Miller, of Milledgeville, officiated. Among the visiting ministers were brethren Levi Trostle and Samuel Lahman. Two were added to the church by baptism.

BRO. J. H. MOORE, of Waycross, Georgia, and sister Phebe Brower, of Denver, Ind., were united in matrimony at the home of Bro. F. W. Dove, Jonesboro, Tenn., Sept. 25th. We extend to the newly-wedded pair our hearty congratulations. May God bless them in their new relation to each other, and give them many happy and useful years in his service in this world.

THE following question is asked: "Were the seven brethren called by the apostolic church to perform a certain work, as recorded in the sixth chapter of Acts, deacons? If not, where do we get authority for the office of deacon?" We do not, at present, have time to enter into a discussion of this question, but will give it some consideration in the near future. It is a question of some importance.

BRO. ROYER informs us that the school at this place is enjoying an unusual degree of prosperity, —the enrollment for the Fall term being the largest since he has had charge of the school. The prospects for the winter are very encouraging. We are glad to note the prosperity, not only of the school here, but of our schools generally. We hope they may all be conducted so that they may be a blessing to the church and to humanity.

THE church should own and control her publishing interests, because it is a part of the church's work, and a manifest duty on her part to furnish her membership with religious instruction, both from the pulpit and from the press. In the general supervision of the Tract Work, this principle is recognized by the church, and why should it not include the church paper? Again, the support of the paper comes almost entirely from the membership of the church, and she should receive from it any profits that may accrue after paying expenses of publication.

THE Evangelist, hitherto published at Ashland, Ohio, has changed hands, and will in the future be printed at Waterloo, Iowa. E. L. Hilderbrand is the new proprietor, and he announces that Eld. H. R. Holsinger will fill the editorial chair. The retiring editor, A. L. Garber has conducted the paper in a Christian-like spirit. In his valedictory he expresses the hope that there will be no rival papers among them. Nothing so much disturbs the peace and harmony of a church as to have several papers published, each striving for patronage and each gathering around it those who are friendly to the policy pursued by the paper. In this way, eventually, party feeling is stirred up, and, as a result, divisions come. Our experience, as a church, in this direction, should never be forgotten, and herein lies a strong argument why the church should own the paper.

BRO. G. D. HAWK says: "The 'Miller and Sommer Debate' is received. I have been reading it with much interest. Bro. Miller's fourth address on the second proposition, Trine Immersion, is worth the price of the book." Others who have read the book are equally well pleased with it. The second edition is now being sent out. Orders are promptly filled. A copy of the work should be found in every brother's house. All profits arising from the sale of the book go to the mission work of the church.

BRO. AMICK started for the Pacific coast on the 7th, and by the time this copy of the MESSENGER reaches our readers, he will, if his journey be prospered, have reached the Golden State. He will spend several months in the West, and we know our readers will unite with us in wishing him a safe and pleasant journey to the land of the setting sun. We hope to have an occasional letter from him descriptive of his trip. On his way home he expects to stop in Kansas and visit the churches at Nickerson, Hutchinson and McPherson. For nearly eight years Bro. Amick has been closely confined to office work as Business Manager of our church paper and has richly earned his vacation. During his absence the business will be looked after by others not so familiar with the work, and if mistakes should occur, we ask the indulgence of our patrons. We shall do the best we can and are always ready to correct errors when they are pointed out to us.

A LITTLE boy saw his father engaged in writing, and, running to him, said, "Papa, let me write!" The father took the little one on his knee, placed a piece of paper on the table, filled the pen with ink, and gave it to the child and told him to write. The little fellow made an attempt, but succeeded only in making blots and scratches on the paper. Then the father took hold of his boy's little hand, and guided it. The less the boy tried to write his way, the better the father could guide the hand, and, finally, the little fellow, understanding this, gave his hand wholly into the control of his father, and the hand wrote as the father willed. So it is with those who trust fully in God. As they give up their wills to God's will, he works through them, and then, instead of scratches and blotches, plain writing and a clean sheet will be seen. How much better God's way is than our way, and he who walks in God's way will soon learn to love it better than his own way.

PEOPLE who believe alike and who accept God's Word as the truth and are willing to obey it in all things, will naturally live alike and this oneness of faith will produce more or less uniformity among them; and this, not so much on account of any arbitrary rule, but as a result of obedience to God's Word. Surely there will be among God's children a oneness in their faith and practice, coming from a desire in the heart to do the things that God has commanded them. Uniformity coming thus from the heart is to be much desired and labored for, but we should not forget that uniformity in itself can never make the heart right. The form without the spirit is but a dead, empty shell from which the kernel has been removed, and to have the form without the spirit is to be in the worst sense hypocritical. We need to be careful not to put our dependence in a form of godliness while we deny the power thereof. We must have the spirit and the form both. The first gives life, the second is an expression of an inward condition. Without the spirit death results, without the form we would have no means of showing that there is life in us. Who will attempt to say that life can be made manifest without a form, or who will affirm that a form without the spirit is alive?

UNDER date of Oct. 7, Bro. I. M. Gibson, of Philadelphia, writes as follows: "Yesterday evening one more came out on the Lord's side here, and others are near the kingdom. Our congregations are increasing. We feel that the Lord's spirit is with us." May the good work in Philadelphia continue until many souls are brought to Christ.

THE General Church Erection and Missionary Committee met at this place on the 8th inst. Help was given to assist several State Districts and to build three meeting-houses. Calls for ministers to go to Texas and Arkansas, and to open new points for preaching the Word in Denmark, were considered. The demands for help are increasing. The field truly is white for the harvest but the means are scanty and the laborers are few. A great and effectual door is being opened for the church in spreading the Gospel, and if she is faithful to the trust, she will grow strong in the Lord. Thousands of people all over the land are only waiting to have the truths of primitive Christianity presented to them. The great South, where our church is almost wholly unknown, offers an abundant field for work. Shall the ark of the Lord go forward? If so, let all the brethren and sisters in our great Brotherhood give to the work as the Lord has prospered them, and thousands, who are now without knowledge of the church, will be made glad in the God of their salvation.

WHILE traveling in the West, we found on the seat in one of the passenger coaches, a card on which were printed the rules and regulations governing the running of trains, and the duties of employees on the railroad. The first words attracted our attention; they were, "Study These Rules Carefully!" And at the close were the following words, printed in bold-faced type, so as to attract attention: "IGNORANCE IS NO EXCUSE FOR NEGLECT OF DUTY!" We thought what a good thing it would be if men would study the rules laid down in God's Book more carefully than they do; and then we wondered whether, in the Judgment Day, ignorance of God's rules will be accepted as an excuse for a neglect of duty. The words, "Where there is no law, there is no judgment," suggested themselves, but then who, in this land of Bibles, can say they do not have the law? Our responsibility does not rest upon what we know, but upon what we have opportunity of knowing. To be ignorant when we may, by a careful study of the rules, have knowledge, will not be excused. It is as much our duty to know, when we have opportunities given us, as it is our duty to obey when we do know. No man, who has God's rules, and the ability to study them carefully, will be excused in the end on the plea of ignorance.

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

The Warrensburg Church.

FROM Centre View we went to the Warrensburg church, where we spent several days very pleasantly, visiting among the members and attending meetings. The country around about Warrensburg is much more broken and hilly than in the vicinity of Mineral Creek and Centre View, but the ground is quite productive, as the heavy, ungathered corn crop shows. Much attention is given to fruit-raising and it is said to be profitable. The Brethren's meeting-house is two miles from the town. The location did not strike us as being the best that could have been made.

The Warrensburg church was organized in 1879, at the home of Bro. A. W. Reese, who is so well known to our readers as one of our able correspondents. At the organization the membership numbered seventeen; now there are about seventy members in the congregation. Bro. A. W. Reese is the active elder and is assisted in the work by Eld. D. M. Mohler. Brethren J. F. Ebersole and Levi Mohler labor in the second, and Bro. J. W. Brooks in the first degree of the ministry. With this ministerial force and a corps of four deacons, the Warrensburg church seems to be well equipped for aggressive work. She has had, and still has, her difficulties, but we express the hope that she may be blessed of the Lord and that her future may be a bright and prosperous one. In this world difficulties will assail us, but we should never allow them to impair our zeal and our love for the church, remembering that in all our trials God's grace is sufficient for us. The man whose heart is fixed on God, and on the word of his grace, clings only the closer to the cross when trials come to him. These are but the tests of Christian character, and he who endures faithfully unto the end, is accounted the good soldier of the cross. If, however, we grow cold and indifferent and are ready to give up when trouble comes, then the enemy has the advantage of us and we are not far from falling.

On Saturday, Sept. 28, we had the pleasure of attending a love-feast in the Warrensburg church. About seventy brethren and sisters surrounded the Lord's table and a number of spectators were comfortably seated in the house. The order was most excellent and those who came to witness the observance of the ordinances of God's house, paid the closest attention to what the brethren had to say on the occasion. Bro. Jacob Witmore officiated and in every respect the meeting was to us an enjoyable one, and we believe all who participated in the feast had the same feeling. At this meeting several members, who had united with the Old Order Brethren, expressed a desire to come to the church and they were received into fellowship. Recently some six or eight of these brethren have returned to the church at Warrensburg.

During our stay in the Warrensburg church we revisited Pertle Springs and enjoyed a quiet ramble in the grove and a boat-ride on the lakes. Our second visit to the place confirmed our favorable impression, and we feel sure that our Brethren will be pleased with the grounds for our Annual Meeting for 1890. We also visited a number of the members and were most kindly and hospitably received by all. Our stay in Missouri had exceeded our limit by a week, but we felt so much at home and enjoyed our stay so much that the visit seemed very short indeed when the time came for us to take our leave. We came away, bearing many pleasant recollections of our visit to the churches in Johnson County, Missouri. May the Lord bless and prosper them all and make them a power for good in the world.

From Warrensburg we returned to Kansas City, intending to spend a short time at that place visiting friends. Those who have been there will remember the elevated cable road running from the depot to the City, up the steep hill-side. The incline is about forty-five degrees, or about as steep as an ordinary house roof. We took seats in the cars and slowly ascended the hill. We had gone up a considerable distance and were thinking what the result might be if the cable were to break, when, suddenly, we heard a peculiar, rasping noise, the cars went back a short distance, and then stopped. The cable had broken, but fortunately, the brakeman was at his post at the moment the break occurred, and an accident was prevented which makes us shudder to think about. We immediately left the cars, and walked down to the foot of the hill, and, returning to the depot, took the first train for McPherson, Kansas.

McPherson.

We spent several days with the Brethren at McPherson, attending three meetings in the College Chapel. We felt much at home with them, for we were well acquainted with many who located in this part of Kansas before they came West, and others we had met and learned to know on previous visits. Our stay was short, but work at home demanded our return. We had a strong desire to visit the Salem, Pleasant View, and Newton churches before returning home, but we were unable to do so for want of time. Indeed, it required considerable self-sacrifice to turn our faces homeward without having had the privilege of meeting with the Brethren of the last-named churches.

We found the brethren, connected with the McPherson school, busy at work. Bro. Daniel Vaniman, we are glad to say, is much improved in health and seems to like his new home. Bro. M. M. Eshelman had just returned from Missouri, and started, during our stay, to visit several churches in Northern Kansas and Nebraska.

Bro. Sharp is busy in school work and is hopeful of the future. We spent some time in visiting the classes and were well pleased with what we saw of the work of the school. The teachers are enthusiastic and full of zeal in their work, and, as a result, inspire the students to do their best. Bro. Sharp informed us that the attendance was good, and that the prospects are that it will be largely increased during the winter term. The students impressed us as being earnest and thoughtful, and seemed to appreciate the fact that they are enjoying excellent educational advantages.

A number of carpenters were at work on the main building. Bro. A. W. Vaniman, the efficient Business Manager, informed us that it is their intention to inclose and cover the first story this fall and prepare the basement for recitation rooms. The building, when completed, will be unexcelled for school purposes.

We enjoyed a short visit at the office of Bro. J. M. Snyder, editor and publisher of our German paper, the Brüderbote, and the McPherson College paper, The Educator and Companion. His office is within a stone's throw of the College buildings. The Brüderbote should have the encouragement of our German Brethren, and, unless they give it their help by subscribing for it and helping to extend its circulation, the paper can not be made self-supporting. Let our Brethren generally help in the work. Send to Bro. Snyder the names of Germans who would likely be interested in the paper, and secure the names of our German Brethren as subscribers for the Brüderbote. In this way a good work may be done. Bro. Snyder is succeeding well with the Educator and is making it a very readable paper.

On Thursday morning, Oct. 3, we started for home, and reached Mt. Morris on Friday. And now we are again seated at our desk in the sanctum, after an absence of nearly four weeks. We look back and marvel that the days passed so rapidly away. We look forward,—but who can pierce the veil of the future? We settle down to work, thankful to God for past blessings vouchsafed, and with a hopeful trust for the future.

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor 16: 2

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." 2 Cor 8 12.

"THE religion of to-day needs more than anything else a strong infusion of the divine and Biblical element. It has become weak, flaccid, prattling. It says too many sweet, soft, pretty things to tickle the ear and catch the crowd. Men are needed with the power and spirit of Elijah to say strong, deep, powerful words. Then religion would reach the masses just as electricity reaches the subterranean streams."

BY referring to our list of tracts on the fifteenth page, it will be observed that the number has recently been increased by several additions. One has been added in Class C on the Sabbath, a very valuable production, by I. J. Rosenberger, in refutation of the doctrine of the Seventh-Day Adventists. Two in Class D, one on the "Lord's Supper," by D. L. Miller, and one on the "Prayer Covering," by S. N. McCann.—H.

"WE often hear it said that the Christian is to be a witness for Christ. We must confess that we are often very poor witnesses. Our testimony, instead of being always on the side of the Master, as it should be, is contradictory and, perhaps, on the other side. When Christ left this world, he gave a charge to his disciples, and that charge applies to us We are to be witnesses of him. Yet, how many are to-day living in a very low, spiritual state and in point of fact denying Christ?"

"CHRIST'S lowly, quiet workers unconsciously bless the world. They come out every morning from the presence of God and go to their business or their household work. And all day long, as they toil, they drop gentle words from their lips and scatter seeds of kindness about them, and to-morrow flowers of God spring up in the dusty streets of earth, and along the hard paths of toil on which their feet tread. More than once in the Scriptures the lives of God's people in this world are compared, in their influence, to the dew. Should we not scatter blessings so silently and so secretly that no one should know what hand dropped them?"

THE long nights are now coming on, affording more time for reading and study. There is no better time during the whole year than the winter season of long evenings, and bright firesides, to do missionary work. Not only should the minister, but also the deacons and laity, both brethren and sisters, make themselves useful in this way. Visit the aliens and strangers in their homes. Give them tracts, and by these and in other ways, as opportunity and circumstances may afford, interest them in the all important "one thing needful." Like Paul, reason with them of righteousness and judgment to come Great will be the reward of the fruitful!—H.

YOU CAN'T AFFORD IT.

"NONE of us can afford to be mean because we are poor. Some say, "I have so little that my offering would make little difference." It will make just as much difference to you as if you could give a million dollars. God's kingdom is our inheritance. Its advancement is our object. Those with whom God dwells will be generous toward the work God loves."

A MATTER OF OBEDIENCE.

CAN there be any plea more persuasive than is embodied in our marching orders? When Kochet-thing, a Karen convert, visited America, he was urged, upon a certain occasion, to address a congregation in respect to their duty to send out and support more missionaries. After a moment of downcast thoughtfulness, he asked, with evident emotion, "Has not Jesus told them to do it?" "Oh, yes," was the reply, "but we wish you to remind them of their duty." "Oh, no!" said the Karen, "If they will not obey Jesus Christ, they will not obey me."

KEEP AT YOUR WORK.

HAS God given you work to do? Then keep at it. Others may disapprove and criticise you. Keep at your work. Obstacles may be cast in your way. Keep at your work. Men may ask you to surrender your work to other hands. Keep at your work. Persons may wish to co-operate, till they co-operate everything out of your hands and into their own. Keep at your work. Men may threaten to hinder if you do not come under their rule—let them hinder, you keep at your work. If God has given you a work to do, he will give you strength to do it, and will bless you in the doing of it. Many a good man has allowed his work to be taken from his hands and wrecked by incompetent men, who never could or would begin such work themselves, but seem on the watch to capture and control what others have begun.

OUR TRACTS.

BY examining our list of tracts the reader will observe by a number of the titles that such are, doubtless, as needful and beneficial as instructors, circulated among the members of the church and their families, as among those having less, if any, knowledge of these matters.

I refer here especially to the "Prayer Covering," "Plain Dressing," "Gold and Costly Array," also, "Come, let us Reason Together." In places these subjects are much overlooked and, for the most part, their plain teachings so much neglected that they are passed by unobserved.

This is not at all as it should be. The neglect and unobservance of any religious principle or precept, is strong evidence of carnality and worldliness, to say nothing of their apostatizing influences and effects upon the religious life and character of others. The children of God must be examples of cleanliness, plainness, piety and holiness.

Two extremes are here presented. In one sense the two are synonymous; in the other, utterly incongruous and unassimilating. A sister in worldly attire, and a brother with his clothes, breath, mouth and beard stained and scented with tobacco, are, to all outward appearances, examples of pride and filth. The former is uncomely; the latter, to say the least, distasteful, if not also disgusting.—H.

EVIDENCES OF THE TRUE CHURCH.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

Chapter Seven.—Miracles.

SOME hold that miracles must still be performed as evidence of the true church.

We remark that miracles are for a purpose, and when the purpose, for which miracles were needed, is accomplished, they are no longer necessary.

Miracles were needed in the days of Moses to confound the Egyptians, to convince the Jews of the divine mission of Moses, and to lead them forth from bondage to the promised land. So, when God, through Christ, was changing from the Old to the New Dispensation, miracles were necessary on the part of Christ to confirm his divine mission. Hence it was with signs and wonders and divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost, that the divine mission and character of Christ were fully established.

But, after the Gospel became established, and its principles more generally known and acknowledged as being righteous and just, miracles were no longer necessary. The Gospel then could stand, Christianity prosper, upon its own merits, unaided by miracles.

Miracles reverse the natural order of things and present the supernatural in order to make the greater impression. If, however, miracles were a constant necessity in the church, as some affirm, they would lose their force, and the order of nature, as fixed by God, would be continually set aside. As a result, no real benefit could be derived from such a reversed state of things. Miracles would cease to be such on account of their frequency.

Confusion, disorder and corruption would be the result.

If miracles were constant, we would soon live in a world of chance, of irregularities, instead of a world governed by law and order.

Christ said truly, "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign." Matt 12: 38.

Supposing that miracles could be performed, as in the days of Christ and the apostles, then a few loaves and fishes could be blessed from time to time, and we would always have plenty without any labor scarcely. The raging storm could be calmed in an instant, and the sick all restored to health The dead could be raised to life again and thus annul God's own decree,—"Dust thou art and to dust thou shalt return again." Gen. 3: 19.

The test of miracles is an unjustifiable one, deceptive in its tendency, and is no evidence,—since the days of primitive Christianity,—of the true church, but rather the opposite.

PRACTICAL RELIGION.

BY GEO. L. JENNINGS.

RELIGION is vastly more than than a profession, though many are satisfied with only that. It is more than singing, praying, and shouting hallelujah. It is more than observing ceremonials, defending dogmas, and exposing the untenable doctrines of others.

Religion reaches the life, character and heart of a man and makes him a new creature in thought, feeling and conduct.

Active benevolence is inseparably connected with religion, and adorns the Christian character as fruit does the tree,—naturally and without constraint.

The religion of the world rests largely on doctrinal distinctions, drawn from obscure translations. In reality it matters less whether the soul shall sleep in the grave until the resurrection morning, than whether the life shall be filled with a grand record of charitable deeds,—adorned with unsullied manliness.

Integrity is a finer accomplishment than ability, to demonstrate the meaning of parables, and unselfishness of greater import than vaunted faith. While faith, prayer, and song are directly connected with religious worship, they are only factors to promote the vital essence of a godly life. Too many worship the instrument of growth, and ignore or fail to comprehend the part it was designed to fulfill in the economy of salvation. Formality follows this misconception until all virtue centers in the instrument, and the true end of worship is lost. The profession that follows gravitates toward a bigoted sectarianism, and the tithing of "mint, anise, and cummin" displaces the "weightier matters of the law." Thus sect after sect finds ample accommodation, and each, with a fragment of truth, settles down upon well-defined doctrinal limitations. It is needless to add that each one produces about the same quality of finished work, and that each manifests about equal zeal.

It requires but a few elements of truth to construct a denomination, and the liberality in the distribution of these elements is commendable. No denomination seems to have sought a monopoly. As a government is best known by the citizens it produces, so a church should value its products above its theories. Cause and effect are related in more than a physical sense. In spiritual things as well as physical they seem to hold their wonted relation.

There never was a time since Christ suffered on Calvary when a Christian life could be more completely exemplified than to-day. At no period was there more or better material at hand to work upon or show its power.

In the great race for wealth it is rather convenient and inexpensive to confine religion to praying, singing and shouting hallelujah. It conflicts but slightly with business, makes a fair showing; one falls readily into the idea that it is religion; but it is not if it stops there. Alone, it is as barren as the fig-tree that Christ condemned. Prayer means work. We pray for our daily bread,—then plow, sow and reap, and get the blessing. We pray that the widow be fed and the orphan clothed. Why not deposit a sack of flour at the door of the former and a bundle of clothes with the latter and see God answer the petition at once?

We pray for temperance. Why not work for it? We pray God to cheer up the broken-hearted. Why not wear a cheerful countenance and send a warm current of good-will and cheerfulness over the wide extent of our influence?

Often we leave the sanctuary, echoing with our hymns of praise and petitions for the sorrowing of earth, then go out and wear the grim visage of close dealing and unsympathetic intercourse with the very class for which we plead so earnestly?

Give religion its proper dominion over business and social relations and it will revolutionize the earth. It will then demonstrate its converting power by changing the iron nature of selfishness into open-handed charity and golden deeds of philanthropy. It will open wide the gates of pleasure, and flood the souls of those prayed for with the aroma of happiness and joy.

There must be something tangible associated with religion, to clothe it with vitality. Its forms must produce results or deteriorate into idolatry.

To worship a form is as hideous as to worship an image, and fully as degrading to heart and life. The example of Christ leads away from image worship and into the domain of practical philanthropy. It converts the soul to continue the example he set while treading the hills and valleys of Palestine on his mission of mercy.

PREACHING THE GOSPEL.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

"And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature."—Mark 16: 15.

THIS command of Jesus, the Son of God, was given to his disciples more than eighteen hundred years ago, and ever since he uttered those words, man has been trying to obey. But it seems that but little progress has been made, or but little has been done. In the words of the queen of Sheba, "The half has never been told." Yet the command never grows old; it is as fresh and as imperative to-day as it was when the disciples received it from the lips of him who "spake as never man spake."

When we take into consideration the fact that the Gospel is given unto us for such a wise and noble purpose, and that the command to preach the Gospel to the sons and daughters of Adam is so imperative, and our eternal welfare is dependent upon our obedience to the commands of God, both in preaching, hearing, and doing, how important that we, as disciples of Christ, improve our talents, knowing that the promise is unto those that do his commandments!

In preaching the Gospel it is necessary to preach Jesus as Philip did unto the Ethiopian, instead of our own opinions, and beliefs or notions. Jesus says: "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you." Then we have the precious promise attached, "And lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Matt. 28: 19–20.

It seems strange to mortal minds that the Gospel never becomes old or stale. The story of Jesus, of the works which he performed, while here among men, his miraculous cures, his meek and lowly life, his examples of obedience and humility to his Heavenly Father's will, is still the same sweet story. Almost any other theme will become threadbare, but the Bible is the same unchangeable word of an immutable GOD. We may read the Word of God time and again, and each reading will unfold new beauties, develop new truths, and become a source of enjoyment, not found in any other book.

PUSH.

BY A. BRICKER.

IF there were more push in the world, there would be fewer hungry, half-clothed, homeless suffering children, fewer broken-down dissipated men and women, less need of alms-houses, houses of correction and homes for the friendless.

Push means a lift for a neighbor in trouble. Push means a lift for yourself out of the slough of despondency and shiftlessness, out of trouble, real and fancied. Push never hurts anybody. The harder the push, the better, if it is given in the right direction. Always push up hill, — few people need a push down hill.

Don't be afraid of your muscles and sinews; they were given you to use. Don't be afraid of your hands, they were meant for service. Don't be afraid of what your companions may say. Don't be afraid of your conscience; it will never reproach you for a good deed.

Push with all your heart, might and soul, whenever you see anything or anybody that will be better for a good, long, strong, determined push.

Push! It is just the word for the grand, clear morning of life. It is just the word for strong arms and young hearts! It is just the word for a world that is full of work as this is! If anybody is in trouble and you see it, don't stand back! Push! If there is anything good being done in any place where you happen to be, push! Push! In the Lord's work-house are many duties! Remember that following Jesus is not a matter of feeling, but of duty!

Don't neglect to read the Bible! Go to church, to Sunday-school and prayer-meeting! Give something for the Lord's work, even though you do not feel like it. Rather say, "I will do my duty," feeling or no feeling. RIGHT DOING develops RIGHT FEELING. The closer you keep to Christ, the more you will become like him. When Peter once came to following Christ afar off, it was not long until he lied and cursed, and swore he did not know him. Have you ever fallen into the filthy, costly, worldly habit of chewing or smoking tobacco? Push! At once and forever part company with that evil! Abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good!

LOVE FOR THE CAUSE.

BY LANDON WEST.

AMONG the rarities that I find in my travels, I found one poor sister who loves the church and the GOSPEL MESSENGER so well, that she washes for her neighbors at fifty cents a day to aid in providing for her household and to get money sufficient to pay the postage on the old copies of the paper that she sends to those of her friends who are too poor to pay for the paper. Is there any one who can not do a part of the master's work? The widow's mite was valued highly, and so will be the gifts and mites of many poor ones, whilst others, with their abundance, will not have even a mite to their credit!

The South as a New Field.

IT is a fact well known, and especially with the Brethren in the Valley of Virginia, that the preaching of the Gospel, as understood by them, was not cordially received in times of slavery. Through the workings of Providence this obstacle has been removed and now there lies before us the beautiful "Sunny South," with its many attractions.

The expression "Sunny South" has a broad meaning. It means more than the congenial climate, and salubrious air. Here we have the mountains, with their hidden treasures, the valleys with their fertile soil, comforts and attractions too numerous to mention, and last, but not least the kind and hospitable people, whose generous spirits and large hearts are always ready for good works.

Many calls are being made, which have been responded to as far as possible. Since the abolition of slavery, elders Peter Nininger and B. F. Moomaw traveled into Bedford County, and there established several plants Satan, however, entered, causing black clouds of distress. Thanks be to God that these difficulties have been dispersed, and that a silvery ray is again beaming on the little plant. Bro George Graybill and the writer met with the little band Sept. 7, and remained until the 15th. The Lord blessed our humble efforts, and, as a result, thirteen were added to the church by baptism, and one reclaimed. On the evening of the 14th we all gathered around the sacramental board and over forty members participated in the blessed ordinances.

On Sunday, when the farewell address was delivered, and the parting hymn sung, many tears were seen to flow. A preacher of the Methodist church, who, for the first time, was an eye-witness to such meetings, came to bid us adieu. He said, "All I have seen or heard I can fully endorse and say 'Amen' to the same, for it is founded upon Gospel principles." Brethren, let us be true and faithful, hold fast to our blessed Christianity,—maintain her principles, and preserve her purity!

SAMUEL CRUMPACKER.

Bonsacks, Va.

From Croton, New Jersey.

OUR school at the Bethel church has become an evergreen one. During last winter, from Nov. 18 to May 12, we had school every Sunday except five, with about thirty-seven scholars on the list. The average attendance was sixteen. From May 12 until Sept. 15, we had school every Sunday, with an average attendance of twenty-five, and a total enrollment of forty-two. Perhaps our average would have been better, had it not been for the unfavorable weather, and the great distance at which some of our scholars live from the school.

Sept. 30. A. S. CHAMBERLIN.

The Great South.

THE article on page 588 of the MESSENGER, by Mr. T. F. Jeffries, of Rome, Ga., deserves more than a passing notice.

Mr. Jeffries is endeavoring to get our people to settle at Rome, and I feel to encourage him in the effort. Of late I have passed through Rome a number of times, but have always been too busy to spend more than a few hours in the city. It is one of the most beautiful, healthy, thriving and fertile sections in the State, where the winters are extremely mild and the summers pleasant. It is also a point at which our people will be welcomed and encouraged. Besides, it is on the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad, a main line over which much traveling is done between the North and South, where it would be so convenient for Brethren to stop off when traveling that way. I wish to urge our Brethren to investigate the claims of Rome, and, if they seem favorable, make an effort to locate a body of Brethren there. And, concerning Mr. Jeffries, I am informed by Brethren of Jonesboro, Tennessee, that he is a friend to the Brethren, and wants to see them more in the South.

I wish to further remark, that if the people of the North generally knew the advantages of Georgia for fruit raising, and other things at which a good-paying living may be made, they would come down here faster than they ever went to Kansas. I have been in the South long enough to know these things, and I have no ax to grind excepting the Gospel ax.

I also spent a few days at Jonesboro, Tennessee, the last of September. I had intended to attend the District Meeting, but being held so far from the railroad, circumstances would not permit. But I took occasion to look over the country with a view of recommending it to our Brethren in the North. To me it seemed a little rough among the mountains in Washington County, but for those living among the mountains of Pennsylvania it would seem like home, in a mild climate, with pure, cool water, fertile soil and good health. For those seeking a level section I would suggest that they examine the country for fifty miles on either side of Knoxville. Here I saw some as fine country as I have ever seen in any of my travels, and probably affording much better inducements than can be found in the West. I also suggest that some of our Brethren take a good look at the country in the vicinity of Chattanooga. There are also other points in the South that may be visited and examined to good advantage. This may be done during the coming winter, and thus foundations be laid for building up a number of churches in the South. In fact, we ought to have a string of churches extending all the way from East Tennessee to Keuka, Florida. I further learn that a number of Brethren will visit Florida the coming winter, and thus greatly revive and strengthen the work there. It also seems that the time is nigh at hand when our Brethren will inaugurate a grand move to the South, with a view of building up communities and establishing churches, and fortunate, indeed, will be the sections that secure these settlements, for it is a well-settled fact that our people are unexcelled for building up prosperous, wealthy, intelligent and moral communities where they settle. This fact is well known to Mr. Jeffries, and for that reason he is working to secure a settlement of our people at Rome, Georgia.

I have been at Waycross, Georgia, nearly two years, and am now fully convinced that it will be hardly possible to work up a settlement of our people here, for the simple reason that the land around the city is owned principally by men who take no interest in emigration. I know of no point where I would sooner undertake to locate a large body of our people, were it possible to procure land for them in a reasonable manner. Many would like to locate here if they only could. As I do not care to waste my time at a place where I can not work up a congregation of our people, I think of leaving here and giving my influence in favor of some other point, or, probably, return to Keuka, to my mind the most delightful spot in the South

After having said this much, I will now offer further suggestions in regard to missionary work in the South. I think the Mission Board should now give a good deal of attention to working up congregations in the Southern States, and, if possible, plant churches in the various sections where favorable openings present themselves. To do this successfully, they must have men who will take the field. These men ought to be adapted to work in the South; they ought to be men who understand the Southern people and their ways. I have been in the South long enough to know that this is an important matter for the Mission Board to consider. When in Tennessee, I took occasion to look into the manner of doing missionary work in that District, and I became convinced that the ministers they have in the field understand how to do work in the Southern States, and I, therefore, insist that the Mission Board should take men from that District for work in the South. They have some good men that may be used to good advantage.

Of course there are those who can not see the wisdom of selecting Brethren from the South to do mission work in the South, but all those who are acquainted with the Southern people will commend such an action upon the part of the Mission Board. For those who will work earnestly and prudently, there is a great opening in the South among that class of people, who are dissatisfied with the fashionable religion of the age. There is work here for scores of ministers. On these questions I have more to say by and by, but for the present I must say, that the Lord has a great field in the South, and there is a long, loud call for workers who will enter the field and work with a zeal.

J. H. MOORE.

Waycross, Ga.

Notes by the Way.

On Monday, Aug. 26, husband and I, with little daughter, Laura, started for our dear old home in Nebraska,—a journey of about three hundred and eighty miles. We traveled homeward day after day and had a pleasant trip, as the weather was fine and the roads all that we could ask for.

While traveling through the land of plenty, we were made to wonder how many hearts returned thanks to our Heavenly Father for his great goodness! We never saw such an abundance of everything as we saw in Kansas,—our home State. Sad to say, however, there was some complaint because, on account of the abundance, everything is too cheap. It seems to be difficult to please some people. They complain if they have not as much as they think they should have, and complain if they have a great abundance. But, oh, how good God is! He is kind,—far beyond what we poor mortals deserve.

We arrived at our destination in about eight days. We need not say we were made happy on meeting father and mother, for all that have been away from home and are permitted to return again, know the joys of such a meeting. I was glad to find them looking well and enjoying good health.

Among the dear ones we met that day was sister Ella Brumbaugh and her kind husband, J. B. B., and daughter, Ruth. Once more it was our happy privilege to be seated at father's table, surrounded by brothers and sisters. God has been good to us as a family, in sparing life. There have been some changes, and the grey hairs tell us that father and mother will not always be with us.

Sept. 10, was the day appointed for all to be at home. We had the pleasure of meeting all except Perry and William, but they were not forgotten.

Father and mother have done much for us. I remember when young they would tell us to do or not do something, and we thought hard not to have our way. But how thankful we are now that they gave us good advice and kept us in the right way! Children do not know what is best for them. God has given us kind parents in order to teach us aright, and the Bible says, "Children obey your parents." But, alas, how often they are disobedient to their father and mother and cause them to weep! By honoring father and mother, we have the promise of dwelling long in the land the Lord giveth!

MARY S. HARSHBARGER.

From the Arkansas Mission Field.

WIFE and I left our home, at Galesburg, Kans., Sept. 2, for the mission field in the south. Going by way of St. Louis and Cairo, we arrived at our destination,—Laforge, New Madrid Co., Mo, our first stopping place after a journey of two days and two nights. The brethren had been apprised of our coming, and had come to the station at two o'clock in the morning, to meet us. We had an appointment the same night, and continued our meetings for nearly two weeks, closing with two additions by baptism. We then held meetings one week, farther north, at Ogden school-house. There were no visible results at this point, though the congregations were large and good attention was given to the Word preached. I find here, as elsewhere, it takes time, patience and work to build up the cause. We were also in the adjoining County, Mississippi, where we had three meetings. We expect to go to that point again to-day to continue for a time.

We find the people quite intelligent, and giving good attention to the preaching of the Word. Wherever we met them they treated us kindly.

After one month's experience in our new field, we are made to realize more forcibly the magnitude of the mission work. Calls come from all sides for preaching. There are about twenty-five members here. One young minister resides here, who is willing to do what he can, but the field is too large for one.

This is a good farming country, producing excellent crops. While temporal resources are abundant, more help is needed in the ministry of the Word. Who will come? SIDNEY HODGDEN.

From the Cheyenne Church, Kans.

OUR love-feast of Sept. 21, passed off very pleasantly. Eld. Snowberger, of Colorado, and Bro. Short, of Nebraska, were with us. The brethren and sisters from Rawlins and Sherman Counties, Kansas, came over, and sister Scott, of Southern Ohio, and sister Snavely, of South-eastern Nebraska, who had been visiting here, were also present. We are always glad to have brethren and sisters from a distance visit us, —away out here, on what was formerly called the "Great American Desert." Come and see us and abide with us! We are few in number as yet, but hope to grow in such a manner as the Lord may direct.

We were made to rejoice at the close of our Communion meeting, to learn that two more were willing to go down into the water, and receive the ordinance of baptism. One of them was an elderly man, who had long been a minister in the Disciple church. The other one is a son of the former. We hope they will always be found at their post of duty in the warfare for Christ. Brethren, come and see us, especially ministers. You will be met at Bird City by addressing the undersigned. O. C. SLIFER.

THE Brethren of the Berlin church held their love-feast in the Beeghley church on Saturday evening, Sept. 28.

Elders Joel Gnagey, of the Summit church, and our own elder, Michael Weyand, officiated, assisted by the writer. In the afternoon five young sisters and two young brethren were persuaded to forsake sin and, consequently, were baptized, and joined us in our feast of love. The meeting was a solemn one and largely attended.

During the summer a new roof has been placed on the house and the church has been suitably painted within and without. All is peace, and hopes are bright. W. H. COVER.

From Minnesota.

As far as known to the writer, there are but three churches in this State. Why is this? Is not the church able to send ministers here, or is it for the want of a call on our part? Whatever the reason may be, I am sorry that such is the case. I have lived here for the last eighteen years, and have tried to get the Brethren to preach here. Several Brethren have been here, but always preached only two or three sermons. Consequently there was not much accomplished. There are four members living about ten miles west of here, and the writer lives about twenty miles west of the Lowiston church, at a little village called Dover, on the Winona & St. Peter railroad. One sister and one brother live on a branch road to Plain View, at Viola station. One brother and one sister are located on the same branch at Elgin.

We ought to have a minister located here who could preach for us regularly. Who will come? Do not all say, "We can not." It is not an easy task to live a Christian life, isolated as we are. If some of the Brethren of our large churches were isolated from the church for fifteen years, I think they would say, "I think we ought to send one of our ministers to Minnesota." Brethren, can you not spare just one? J. HARSHMAN.

Dover, Minnesota.

From the Log Creek Church, Caldwell Co., Mo.

A SERIES of meetings was commenced in this congregation on Sunday, Sept. 29. Bro. J. E. Ellenberger preached a very interesting sermon. The meetings were then continued by Bro. S. B. Shirky each night, until Wednesday night, when we all surrounded the Lord's table, to commemorate the death and suffering of Jesus. We believe all the brethren and sisters were much strengthened, and sinners made to think of their condition. May the good seed sown spring up and bring forth much fruit, is our prayer!

LYDIA C. MASON.

Norborne, Mo.

From the Salem Church, Kans.

THE members of the Salem church had a feast indeed and in truth Sept. 28. One hundred and three communed. We had good help in the ministry from abroad. Those present were brethren John Forney, J. Brower, L. Hillery, M. M. Eshelman, D. Martin, Levi Eby, S. Lehmer and our loving elder, E Eby. The brethren preached the Word with power. They gave us very much encouragement. Bro. L Eby continued the meetings until the evening of Oct. 2, when, with congregations increasing, the meetings closed. We hope and pray that the seed sown may spring up and bring forth fruit to the honor of our blessed Redeemer.

In his last remarks Bro. Eby admonished the churches to give the ministers encouragement. If all of the brethren and sisters would have heard the admonition, and would put it to practice, they could do a great deal of good. Let us, dear brethren and sisters, work in the vineyard of the Lord while it is day with us, for the night cometh, wherein no man can work. May we labor so that we may continue to stand united as one great Brotherhood, is my prayer!

L. E. FAHRNEY.

Sterling, Kans., Oct. 3.

From Pokagon, Michigan.

OUR love-feast occurred Oct 5. Twenty-nine members were present on the occasion. Bro. David Miller, from Berrien, was here to help our home ministers. There was one accession to the church. We think the members were built up in the faith, and sinners were warned to flee the wrath of God. We invite those that were here, and others, especially ministering brethren, to meet with us often. Come, we need you.

IDA STRETCH.

From Sabetha Church, Kans.

SEPT. 2, Bro. John S. Mohler, of Morrill, Kans., came to us and preached with power to good audiences until the 15th. On the 13th two (an aged couple) were led into the water and received baptism; they came forth, rejoicing in the God of their salvation. It seems a pity that, with such powerful preaching and earnest appeals, only two could make up their minds to choose that good part that shall not be taken from them.

Many expressed themselves as being ready, but some wanted to wait until their companions were ready. Some had other excuses. Oh, what a pity that they can not see their mistake! We believe that if we could have continued our meetings one or two weeks longer we would have seen greater results; but as the fair and other gatherings were at hand, we thought it best to close our meetings, as the minds of so many were drawn to those things. In our daily visits to private families we were received kindly, and, I think, many good impressions were made, that, I hope, will bear fruit in the near future. C. J. HOOPER.

From Fredric, Monroe Co., Iowa.

SINCE our last communication, death has claimed another one of our number,—sister McMullen, who was sick but a few days, and passed away in her eightieth year. But, while death lessens our number, others come home to fill their places. Two young sisters have been added to our little flock, this summer, by baptism, and are now walking in newness of life.

Our love-feast, now in the past, was very enjoyable. We had able help from our sister churches. Our Sunday-school has proved a success, and is well attended. HIRAM BERKMAN.

Oct. 3.

From Quinter, Kans.

OUR quarterly church council was held Sept. 29. After the report of the annual visit was considered, the church decided to hold her fall communion on Nov. 2, at 4 P. M. The usual invitation is extended to all to be with us. B. B. WHITMER.

Oct. 3.

TO-MORROW is like the rainbow which, in our childhood, we thought we could touch by simply running a short distance, but which, to our dismay, we found to recede as rapidly as we advanced; or like the horizon, which, we imagined, our steps could easily reach, and we be able to touch the sunset glory gilding it. To-morrow we never see. To-day we hold in a strong grasp. Use it ere it pass away. Time whirls rapidly on. All the to-morrows will be to-days, then yesterdays, and pass quickly far away into the past till centuries hide them from the living. Time is for us to use. If we waste it, anticipating future good or future ill, we lose to-day and all the days as they go on, till our last day will find us barren and unloving.—Sel.

THE Bible direction to pray "without ceasing," and to continue "instant in prayer" means that prayer should be one of the fixed and permanent habits of one's life. We can not, at all times, be formally engaged in prayer; and yet we can make prayer a habit, actually pray at short intervals, and always have the spirit of prayer. He who does this will keep up an acquaintance between his soul and God, and will find the acquaintance one of increasing spiritual profit and comfort to himself. He who omits it will be greatly the loser, and if he continues the omission, will be sure, in the end, to lose his soul.—Sel.

MEN'S lives should be like the days, more beautiful in the evening; or, like the seasons, aglow with promise, and the autumn, rich with golden sheaves, where good words and deeds have ripened on the field.

Notice to the Churches of North-Eastern Kansas.

At our last District Meeting it was decided that the Clerk should correspond with the churches of our District and ascertain whether they are in favor of holding a ministerial meeting the day preceding District Meeting, for the purpose of exchanging views, and deciding on plans so that we might work in unison, for the greatest amount of good and for the advancement of the kingdom of Christ.

Inasmuch, now, as the Appanoose church (in which the District Meeting will be held) has consented to hold said meeting, we request any or all churches who are opposed to said meeting to so notify the undersigned by card, and if we hear nothing by March 1, 1890, said meeting will then be appointed.

By order of District Meeting,
I. H. Crist, Clerk.

From the Root River Church, Minn.

We held our love-feast Sept. 14 and 15. Brethren Wm. Eisenbise and Frank Myers, of Mt. Carroll, Ill., were the only ministers present outside of our own. These brethren were accompanied by their wives. The interest was good, though the weather was bad. On Saturday there were not so many present. A funeral sermon of sister Cummings was preached on Sunday. She died a few days previous.

Sarah E. Bueghly.

Sister Susan Teeter, of this congregation, fell and broke her limb, Sept. 22. Though seventy-eight years of age, she is doing nicely thus far. The doctor thinks her recovery will take from eight to twelve weeks and the time will surely seem long to her, but in her pain, and tiresome days and nights, she asks the brethren and sisters to remember her in their prayers.

Bro. Emmanuel Hoff and wife, of Waterloo, Iowa, paid us an enjoyable visit after the Greene love-feast, while on their trip to Wright and adjoining Counties. We were very glad that they stopped with us on their way, and if others are going by, we would be glad to have them do the same. J. R. Dohner.

From Dayton, Ohio.

The members of the "West Dayton church" met Sept. 22 for the purpose of organizing a Sunday-school. Bro. Charles Elson was elected Superintendent, and Bro. Wm. Klepinger, Jr., as Assistant. Other officers necessary were also appointed, and we decided to begin our school Oct. 6, at 9 A. M. We further decided to have "teachers' meeting" on Thursday night of each week. We expect to have preaching and Sunday-school each Sunday. Ministers, passing through Dayton, are requested to stop with us and preach the Word to us.

We think of holding a love-feast yet this fall, of which further notice will be given in due time.

H. C. Butterbaugh.

From New Paris, Ind.

The Union Center church, after having their annual visit, met in council Sept. 28. All seemed to have a desire to promote a growth of holiness both in themselves and others. One feature added to the interest of the meeting and that was the reception of two into church fellowship by baptism. May God grant them grace to be faithful helpers in the cause! Our Communion meeting will be Oct. 10 at 4 o'clock.

Henry Neff.

From Beatrice, Nebr.

We think the Lord is still working with us. Yet he can do no mighty works, for there seem to be none of those great characters of faith. We walk too much by sight and not enough by faith.

Another penitent was added to the little flock on Sunday. Thus the prodigals return one by one, as we cross to the other shore one by one. We laid an old soldier of the cross in his cold bed only one week ago,—Bro. Jacob Kelso. A young volunteer comes to fill up the ranks. We are striving for more laborers by a protracted effort at the church in the country. May the God of our fathers send them. Bro. Teeter gladdened the hearts of the saints by giving them heavenly manna in three sermons; then had to go. The Lord is good! J. E. Young.

From Engel's Mills, Garrett Co, Md.

According to previous arrangements, Eld. C. G. Lint commenced preaching for the Maple Grove congregation on the evening of Sept. 8, and continued preaching each evening during the week. On Saturday evening love-feast exercises were held. It was a very pleasant and impressive feast. Ministering brethren present from other congregations were, C. G. Lint, Josiah Berkly, Joel Gnagey, Jeremiah Beeghly, and David Hochstettler. We had earnest and able preaching, with good attention and quietness, which was much appreciated. At 9 A. M., on Sunday morning, the church convened for the purpose of holding a choice for two brethren to serve in the ministration of the Word. The lot fell upon brethren A. L. Gnagey and Perry Bowser, both young and promising brethren. May the church remember these brethren at a throne of grace. After the installation services, at 10:30 A. M., Eld. C. G. Lint preached an able sermon to a large and attentive audience. One was baptized during the meetings.

YOUNG.—Near Tatesville, Pa., Sept. 20, friend David Young. Funeral services conducted by the minister of the M. E. church.

SHELLY.—At Williamsburg, Pa., Sept. 19, Nelson Clyde Shelly, son of Bro. Daniel and sister Sarah Shelly, aged 7 years, 9 months and 25 days.

His death was caused by typhoid fever and brain trouble. Last summer, in the month of July, his father was hauling in wheat. Nelson was going to an upper story of the barn after his father, but, while on the loft, stepped between two boards and fell to the solid barn floor beneath, his head striking a log, and inflicting an injury above the left eye. Through God's will and the good attention of his mother, he was spared a while yet. During his sickness he was patient till the Lord saw fit to call him home.

Mila Straley.

MAGILL.—In the bounds of the Ozawkie church, Kans., Aug. 27, of diphtheria, Lucien, son of Caleb and Nettie Magill, aged 3 years, 7 months and 28 days.

MAGILL.—Also of same parents, Frank W. aged 1 year, 2 months and 6 days. Funeral services by the writer.

David Kimmel.

KLINE.—Near Broadway, Rockingham Co., Va., Sept. 22, sister Mary Kline, aged 78 years, 2 months and 17 days.

Mother Kline was the widow of Bro. Samuel Kline who had preceded her to the spirit land. She was truly a mother in Israel. To her home and fireside she gave a welcome to all and, with a kind hand, she ministered to the wants of the stranger. Her eyesight failed gradually until it resulted in blindness a year or more before she died, but she bore her affliction with Christian fortitude and cheerfulness.

There is nothing more beautiful than the close of a well-spent life. Such was the life of sister Kline,—her sun set in peace beneath a cloudless sky. Funeral services conducted by Bro. S F. Sanger and the writer from 2 Tim. 4: 6 S. Daniel Hays.

LEVITS.—In the Brothers' Valley church, Somerset Co, Pa, Sept. 11, sister Barbara Levits, aged 75 years, 4 months and 7 days.

Deceased was a member of the church for about forty years. She was the wife of Eld. Wm. Levits, who preceded her to the spirit world only three months ago. Peace to her ashes! Funeral services by the writer.

D. H. Walker.

LONG.—In the English Prairie church, La Grange County, Ind, Sept 14, Bro. Daniel Long, aged 69 years, 6 months and 24 days.

Eleven children blessed his marriage, seven of whom survive him and, with the bereft wife, mourn their loss The deceased had been a member of the Brethren church for forty three years. Funeral services by Bro. J. V. Felthouse, assisted by Bro. Y. D. Yoder. N. H. Shutt.

McDOUGALL.—At her home in the Winona church, Winona Co., Minn., Aug. 16, sister Mary (Campbell) McDougall, aged 70 years, 3 months and 6 days.

Deceased was the eldest daughter of Donald and Janet Campbell She was born in Drummond, Lanark Co, Ontario, Canada, and married to Dugald McDougall in April, 1848. She lived in her native country until November, 1866, when she moved, with her husband and children, to Warren, Minnesota. Sister McDougall was the mother of seven children, five of whom, with their father, are left to mourn the loss of a most faithful wife and mother. The study of the Bible was her delight from childhood, and her knowledge of it was a constant source of comfort and strength to herself, and profit to others. During her long and painful illness, which she bore with such patience and fortitude as only the Christian can, she trusted in God and he proved himself "a very present help in time of trouble." Mary McDougall.

DENLINGER.—At Tippecanoe City, Ohio, Sept. —, B. F. Denlinger, son of Bro. Jacob and sister Sarah Denlinger, aged about 22 years. Funeral services by elders Stutsman and Smith. Jacob Coppock.

Have You Heard

about the Superb Pullman Dining Cars which have been recently placed in service via the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route?" If you have, and want to get a sumptuous meal while travelling, don't fail to take the train on which these Diners run They run on the fast Vestibule Express between Council Bluffs and Denver and on the Overland Flyer between Council Bluffs and Portland.

Meals, which can not be surpassed in any of the first-class hotels in the country, are served in these cars at 75 cts. each.

Colonist Sleepers.

THE Union Pacific Ry, also known as The Overland Route, has lately added to its service a number of new cars (which, by the way, are built by the World-famous Pullman Company) entitled Colonist Sleepers, and which for convenience and comfort are but little behind the handsome Pullman Palace Car. The cars are designed for the use and comfort of the Colonist, who, with his family, intend moving West to grow up with the country.

The only difference between these cars and the regular first-class Pullman is that the Colonist sleeper is not upholstered. There are fourteen sections in each car, and separate toilet rooms for ladies and gentlemen. At night, by means of sliding head boards and heavy damask curtains, as much privacy is secured as if in the regular first-class sleeper. Plenty of fresh, clean towels and a good supply of water are also to be found. A uniformed porter accompanies each car to look after the comfort and attend to the wants of the passengers, and no smoking is allowed. It certainly seems that for cheap and commodious sleeping accommodations, while travelling, these cars can not be excelled.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.

"Set for the Defense of the Gospel."

Vol. 27. Old Series. Mt. Morris, Ill., and Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 22, 1889. No. 42.

The Gospel Messenger.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH, Editor,
And Business Manager of the Eastern House, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

BRO. D. C. and sister W. A. Burkholder have left us to return to their former home at Fannettsburgh, Pa. They go with the best wishes of our people here accompanying them. While with us they were active and useful church-workers, and we hope that in their new field of labor they may find plenty of well-prepared soil in which to sow the good seed. The sower, no matter where he is, always "goes forth to sow." This is his part of the work. The Lord gives the seed and the soil. We are to till and sow.

WE are informed that George Q. Bechtel, a former student of the Normal, is quite ill. Last week he gave his heart to the Lord, and was baptized. The family also had a communion in their house for his comfort. George was a dutiful boy, and the only son of Bro. Joseph S. Bechtel, near Williamsburg, Pa. If it should be the Lord's will to spare to them their dear son, we so pray. The son and family have our sympathies and prayers, and we hope that, whichever way the Lord decides, affliction may work to the good of all.

JAMES CREEK.

BRETHREN Myers and F. F. Holsopple, of the Normal, attended the James Creek meeting, and as they were the only ministers present from abroad, they had plenty to do. They report a very pleasant, well-attended and interesting meeting. Bro. Holsopple remained and preached for them on Sunday evening.

Bro. Swigart was also away, attending meetings in Somerset County, so that our preaching force was all away on Sunday morning. But our deacon, Bro. William Beery, conducted the morning services, and, we are told, did it very acceptably to those present.

Ministerial aid at these meetings was unusally scarce, on account of so many meetings being held at the same time. The Warrior's Mark Brethren also called on us for help, but we were unable to respond. We have not heard from their meeting, but hope that they succeeded in getting such help as they desired.

WALKING ADVERTISEMENTS.

A WALKING advertisement is a good thing when the thing that walks is the advertisement. But it is a cheap sham when business men have one of their fellows dressed to order, with the advertisement of their business attached to his body, and then have him parade the streets for the benefit of their business and the public. The honorable way to advertise is to tell the people what you have, and then, when they come to see it, be able to bring it forth.

We always suspect the business veracity of men who stoop to make walking advertisements of their kin. And if the employer is of doubtful veracity, what can be expected of the employed? A "dummy" in a show-window, or in front of the store-room, commands some respect as a work of art, but a living, walking "dummy" is a disgrace to his kin. And yet we have them in all the walks of life.

As far as their own lives are concerned, it would be more honorable for themselves and the world were they made of wood, iron and paint, and their locomotion of steam or gas. Then they would be real machines, and the responsibility be placed on the originator. But for a living, rational, intelligent man to make a machine of himself, and become a walking advertisement, not of himself, but of his master's business, must be a great disappointment to God, his Maker, and frustrate the design of his creation.

God made man to be a man by the life that he lives; and when he is compelled to carry on his back an advertisement to represent himself, either what he is or who he is, it is prima facie evidence that he is short of original material. When a man stands up before the world and says, "Look at me!" he ought to command the same, or less, respect than the "dummy" does in the show-window and in front of a clothing store. When he walks and blows his trumpet, or rings his bell, he belittles his manhood and should be placed where he belongs—in the show-window, with his fellows.

Is it not a sad fact that those who depend upon artificial adornment as their life passport, are generally deficient in the graces that adorn true manhood and womanhood?

The young men or women who have well-developed minds, and possess the true Christian graces, need not advertise themselves, and will not be walking advertisements for others. Their lives tell it all, and tell it truly and well.

Fashion has made walking advertisements of her thousands of votaries. They become so manipulated through the putting on of the artificial that a real living being loses its identity, and becomes a mere dummy, upon which fashion-mongers hang their goods. They become so abnormal in their tastes and judgments that they cease to depend on their God-given graces as accomplishments, and the cry is, "To be out of fashion is to be out of the world!" and in it there is more truth than poetry. As Fashion rules the world, to be out of it is to ignore its ruling and power, which means expulsion from the kingdom.

But do we have walking advertisements in the church? Yes, we have, and two kinds of them. The first are such as offer themselves as dummies for the fashionable clothiers and milliners. They forget that they have come out from the world, and that they are no more servants, but children, and heirs of a better inheritance. They lower their Christian manhood and womanhood by making of themselves walking advertisements to show off the devil's wares. For them the Christian graces are not thought to be a sufficient passport to conduct them through life—hence the hankering after the husks of sin until the power of their religion is lost. God pity the human dummy!

The second class consists of those who run into the other extreme, and think that being separate from the world has reference to dress only; and, to get away from it as far as possible, want something that will designate at the first glance who are Christians and who are not. They make of dress a church advertisement, and seem to say to everybody, "Look at me, if you wish to see a model Christian!" In such cases the advertisement may be representative, while the subject on whom it is placed may be nothing more than a walking dummy.

There is nothing so foreign to the true Christian spirit as the conduct of those who boast of their dress as a sign that they are Christians. Such persons, as a rule, have nothing else to recommend them. It is a sign without substance—a sounding trumpet, a tinkling cymbal.

While plain and modest dressing is an essential Christian principle, and plainly commanded by the apostolic writers, it is not the designated Christian adornment. This is to be the hidden man of the heart—a meek and humble spirit. If the inward adornment is after the above sort, the outward will conform to it as naturally as wool grows on a sheep's back. While the wool may be the sign of a sheep, it is not the sheep, neither does it make the sheep. But it is the sheep that makes the wool. So the true Christian will make his raiment to correspond with the life within.

Both of the extremes are to be avoided. We should not make ourselves walking advertisements for sin; neither should we try to advertise ourselves as Christians by the empty form. When we take upon ourselves the form of godliness, let that form extend into our lives in such a way that it may be said of us, "The life is the light of men. With Christ "his life" was the indicator of the man. And so it should be with us. While the form of godliness is essential and expected, "the life" must so far overshadow the form that it will not be recognized as the distinguishing feature of the Christian.

We seem to naturally run into extremes. Some get so spiritual that they lose sight of all forms—even the form of godliness. Others become so formal that they lose sight of the spiritual, and base their salvation entirely on form. In the true child of God the two are harmoniously blended together, and thus he shows himself to the world the complete man in Christ Jesus. Are we such? If so, we have, in our lives, the sign and the substance, and we are living epistles, or letters, read and known of all men. Our light shines through our words, actions and dealings, and they should be such as will shine to the glory of God.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

ELYSIUM.

Hark! Glad notes of heavenly anthems
From celestial portals roll;
Strains of sweet, ethereal music
Greet my ear and calm my soul.
Clouds recede, and zephyr pinions
Bear my spirit far away.
Lo! my eyes, with holy rapture,
View Elysium to day.

Oh, I soar above earth's mountains,
And I fly beyond its plains,
Till I reach Elysian meadows,
Ripe with food and golden grains.
Lofty courts in brilliant grandeur,
'Midst eternal gardens loom;
And the air is light and fragrant
With the breath of sweet perfume.

Lovely scenes that intermingle
In this kingdom of delight!
Angel forms in gorgeous beauty
Hover near to bless my sight.
Holy state! Majestic fountains
Flow in never-ceasing streams;
And the joys are deeper, higher,
Than earth's fairest, sweetest dreams.

Oh, the love, the bliss, the beauty
Of this home exempt from sin!
Millions have passed through its portals,
Millions more are passing in.
Blessed are the host, and happy
In these realms of endless day;
No more heart-pangs, no more crying—
God hath wiped their tears away.

Haste, then, Time, on wheels of magic;
Speed more swiftly in thy flight;
Bear me from the toil and anguish
Of earth's cold and bitter night.
For I long to be with Jesus
In the mansions of the blest,
"Where the wicked cease from troubling,
And the weary are at rest."

Sept. 25. Sadie C. Brallier.

WHAT GOOD IS DERIVED FROM SUNDAY-SCHOOLS?

BY W. H. ROOSE.

This question has often been asked, and it is, no doubt, a pertinent one. Though pertinent, it is one that can not be fully answered. The good to be derived from Sunday-schools is the same as that to be realized from any other religious exercise. The good or success to be accomplished by any enterprise whatever, whether secular or religious, depends almost wholly upon the manner in which it is conducted, the zeal of those managing it, the laborers connected therewith, the justness of the cause and the motives of all concerned therein.

I can not see how any one can say that Sunday-schools are productive of more evil than good. When they are conducted with a view to accomplish good, they never fail in their purpose. Many meetings have come short of the good they were thought to accomplish, because there may have been discord dwelling in the hearts of some of the members, or, perhaps, there were some drones, who neither gave any of their means, nor exercised their talents to carry on the work successfully. Many churches have, by pride and other evils, almost, if not wholly, extinguished all the spiritual life they possessed, and as a result, their meetings have almost become total failures.

Why not use these facts as arguments against "the assembling of yourselves together"? They are not considered conclusive against the holding of meetings, and neither should they be used against Sunday-schools.

The church has not been able to hold all those who have united with it. Should we, for that reason, oppose the organization of churches?

I am a great friend of Sunday-schools and religious exercises of any kind. No one needs to be an enemy to an enterprise simply because all things do not correspond to his views. It is the wrong we should discountenance. Were we to prove ourselves enemies to everything upon which could be found the blemish of wrong, how many of us would have a single friend? The object of the Sunday-school should be, to instruct the children in the ways of the Lord, teach the youth their duty toward God and man, and to get some practical information for ourselves.

When a Sabbath-school is carried on in a proper manner, there is a likelihood of those who are taught the truths of the Gospel, becoming church members much sooner than if left without Christian training. I have made careful observations, and can say that ninety-nine out of every hundred families in our country, who do not send their children to Sunday-school, fail to restrict them in the gratification of their desires. Their children go here and there—wherever they wish. It has been truly said that "a child left to himself will bring shame to his mother."

We find in well-conducted Sunday-schools the tokens of a fruitful and prosperous church. When the children are taught and "trained up in the way they should go," there is far less trouble in the church from them, than when their wills have not been subdued by the good lessons taught in the Sunday-school.

The Sunday-school is the nursery of the church. Whatever the early history of Sunday-schools has been, one thing is sure—those who started them found them to be such a powerful auxiliary to the church that they considered it to be a matter of actual policy to have one in every congregation.

Sunday-schools were originally organized for the benefit of the poor children, but when their influence for good was once realized, the higher classes enrolled their children, until now it sometimes seems that, in some localities, a love of display has almost crowded out the poor children.

The primary requisite of a Sunday-school is a corps of efficient teachers,—earnest men and women, who are imbued with the spirit of the Good Shepherd, and who seek to rescue the perishing, feeling that the salvation of the soul is the momentous purpose of life. We need men who teach the doctrines of grace and the story of redemption.

The Superintendent should be a person of superior judgment and experience in religion. He should be particularly fond of children. This is one of the grandest secrets of success with children in whatever sphere you may place yourself. Children love to be noticed, and nothing in the world seems to gratify them more than to have an occasional word of kindness and encouragement spoken to them. The plastic mind of childhood ought not to be indented with superfluous formulas, ceremonies, etc., that there remains no ground for the springing up of the youthful fruits.

The genius of the superintendent will often suggest more convenient methods of conducting the school. His work varies, and depends upon circumstances. Generally he leads in prayer, or he may appoint some one else to do so occasionally, as he may feel proper. In case the Sunday-school should not have a chorister, the superintendent announces the hymns to be sung, before prayer. In some Sunday-schools he reads the first verse of the lesson and each alternate one, while the school reads the rest successively in concert. When the teachers get through with their classes, he may ask such questions on the lesson as he may wish. Then, when the lesson has been fully examined, he may have another hymn sung, and end with prayer. We would here remark that prayers should always be short, and in behalf of the Sunday-school work and the end to be accomplished by it.

The assistant superintendent should not, in his qualifications, be greatly inferior to the superintendent. The secretary should be a person possessing some ability for business.

Care should be taken in the selection of teachers. Persons are often chosen to teach classes, who know nothing of the doctrines peculiar to the church,—teachers who are, perhaps, lamentably ignorant even of the fundamental principles of religion. Were a child to question them concerning the lives of the patriarchs, prophets or Bible heroes, they would answer so vaguely or erroneously that the querist would not understand, nor could the impression become so fixed upon his mind as to remain as first conceived. Intelligence and Bible knowledge are not the only qualifications of the teacher,—he should keep himself "unspotted from the world." Children are the keenest of critics. They detect the uncertain cadence, the base metal, the sham piety.

No person whose religion is for Sunday use only, has any business to be a Sunday-school teacher. I well remember an expression made by a person, into whose hands I had been entrusted at Sunday-school. She was very strict on Sunday, and, after returning from Sunday-school, her little son misinterpreted something to me, whereupon his mother said, "You must not tell a lie on Sunday." While I had been taught to consider it as much a sin to commit a falsehood on any other day of the week as on Sunday, this expression gave an uncertain sound to me. Whatever the good woman may have meant, I am constrained to view it in a more charitable light as I grow older, and only hope it was a slip of the tongue, but this is the way we are seen of children.

There is no room in the ranks of those, who lay to heart their deep responsibility, for any triflers. No one is fit for an instructor of young or old who contents himself more in studying fashion journals or in searching the criminal records, than in studying the lives of holy men and the will of God concerning the human race. The true teacher can readily and intelligently guide the receptive soul to a home of safety. We should wear a sober costume; one that does not excite the envy of the poorer children.

Teach the children in such a manner that they will want to be Christians. Teach them that to be Christians is a noble stand to take. Teach them that a person is not a Christian unless he is like Christ. That will exclude all foolishness, pride or unholy ambition to become rich. All honor to the self-sacrificing cross-bearers who, through cold and heat, rain and sleet, are ever in their places, who diligently strive to attract the indifferent and reclaim the wandering. Such teachers are the very salt of the church! Teachers who are punctual and regular in attendance, always insure punctual and regular scholars.

THE WRONG AND THE RIGHT CONSIDERED.

BY JOHN A. ARNOLD.

We are living in a land of Bible liberties and privileges; yet portions of it are almost overwhelmed in a sea of misery and woe, and crimes of the blackest dye, all arising, more or less, from the use of intoxicating liquor.

It becomes necessary, then, that we, as Christians, carefully and prayerfully consider our duty, rights and privileges under existing circumstances. It is our duty to live Christ-like, and in full submission to our Heavenly Father's will. We must do all the good we can for our fellow-beings, keeping them in the paths of virtue and honor, and in the way of righteousness. When we see the vice and wickedness arising from intemperance, we are made to wonder, "How long will God forbear?"

In order that we may know better how and where to work, let us take a look at the fruits and ways of the two contending elements—intemperance and its opposite. Go to the city, and see the hundreds of saloons, dealing out their thousands of gallons every day! See the innocent children of the drunkard wandering about the streets, almost starved and naked, begging for bread and clothes! Growing up in misery and want, they become depraved in life and character. The slaves of "King Alcohol" fill our alms-houses and asylums, and, after committing the most horrible crimes, frequently end their lives in our penitentiaries or on the scaffold.

Look in some dark, gloomy garret, and see the once happy wife and her children, clothed in rags, awaiting the return of the drunken husband and father! Ah, what a sad waiting that is! Her face, once cheerful, is now bathed in tears. Poor woman! How she trembles at every approaching footstep! At midnight the door is rudely thrown open and her husband staggers in! The children are beaten and abused because they ask for food, and, after blows and curses are bestowed on the face and form he once loved so well, he settles down into a drunken sleep! The dram-seller has taken the money and manhood that would have made their home happy. When death comes at last as a welcome relief, these poor unfortunates gladly resign the sorrows of earth to the joys in the better land. Meanwhile the husband continues drinking, and what shall we say about his sad destiny?

Some people encourage the liquor traffic, because we are told in the divine Word to be temperate in all things. When we see that, from this sinful practice of using intoxicants, arise many great evils, and, as proven by eminent medical authorities, no good whatever, we are compelled, by the same high authority, to entirely "abstain from all appearance of evil," by not using liquor in any way, nor advocating its use. That which is evil, or has the appearance of evil, is not of the Lord. Jesus says, "He that is not for me is against me."

Others claim that "their relatives and friends are not under the baneful influence of liquor, and that they have no right to interfere with strangers; others may do the work, or the Lord will do it for them." The Lord works by means, and when he has put it into the minds and hearts of the authorities over us to let us have our choice, we must work. Then we have a right, and it is our highest duty, as Christians, to endeavor to check the liquor traffic by all lawful Gospel means.

The drinking man, in every place and land, is as much our brother as was the man, who fell among thieves, a brother to the good Samaritan. Then let us, as professors of the religion of Jesus Christ, fulfill the design of our creation in doing that which will prove most beneficial to precious and blood-bought souls,—working for Gospel temperance. We can thus aid in freeing our fellow-beings from the pollution and poisons of the saloon.

We are told that those who drink should govern themselves better. Alcoholic liquor is of such a nature that the more a man drinks, the more he craves. The devil knows this. He knows perfectly well how to work through the rum-seller and his liquors, to accomplish his destructive work on humanity. This blighting evil threatens the ruin of the rising generation! Let us pray that our young men and women may be freed from the enticements and degrading influences of this terrible evil, and that they may find places of usefulness in the church and Sunday-school. We will then see good husbands, happy wives, and kind parents, walking in the paths of piety, truth and soberness. Children will be brought up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." In their old age they will be kindly cared for by the children for whose welfare they worked, until they leave the shores of time, in hope of the bright glory beyond.

May we all stand firm for the right, working and exerting our influence for the good of our nation, and the salvation of the precious souls for whom Jesus died that they might be saved.

THE DIFFERENCE.

BY DANIEL HAYS.

THE governments of this world take men as they are by nature, and rule them peaceably if they can, forcibly if they must. The church, Christ's kingdom, does not so do. Men are converted before they become subjects of Christ's kingdom. It is an easy matter to govern men and women who are converted. When a member is unwilling to "hear the church," not willing to "give and take counsel," he is not converted, he belongs to the kingdom of the world, the church can not use him, and must withdraw fellowship from him.

In this the great principle of our church government is seen. All agree to be subject to the same Gospel rules when they enter the church. No force is used in getting members nor in holding members. All is voluntary. If all are converted, if all maintain the principles they professed, and fulfill the promises they made, there will be harmony, peace, and good will. The peaceable nature of Christ's kingdom must begin on earth. God is trying us to see if we are fit to take to heaven. God does not want any self-willed, disorderly people in heaven. So if we are unruly and troublesome in the church here on earth, it will not be likely that God will want us in heaven. We pray, "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." Then let us live what we pray for!

OUR CHRISTIAN PILGRIMAGE.

BY CLARA E. BALDWIN.

"But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same?"—Matt. 5:44-46.

ARE the above-named, gracious words of Jesus seriously and prayerfully weighed by us?

We surely do not expect to be liberated from the prison-house of sin, if we do not make an effort to follow our Liberator!

Jesus is kind and pitiful unto us in all our evil doings and coldness towards him. He knows that such have been taken captive by Satan who is full of wrath and envy, and, in great deceit, is taking captive every soul he possibly can. Who could not pity the captive? Jesus loved and pitied the captives so much that he left his blissful state which he had with his Father in heaven, and came down to this sin-cursed earth to endure the cruel mockings, scourgings, taunts and contradiction of sinners against himself, and to give his life on the cross. He was numbered with the transgressors, bearing our sins in his own body, that he might lead captivity captive and set the prisoners free. "Forasmuch then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin: that he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God." 1 Pet. 4:1, 2. "But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him. He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." 1 John 2:5, 6. "In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil: whosoever doeth not righteousness is not of God, neither he that loveth not his brother. For this is the message that ye heard from the beginning, that we should love one another." 1 John 3: 10, 11.

It is easy enough for any one to love those who love him, but to love our enemies as Jesus has commanded us to do, can only be done by those that are born of God, and if we are born of God, we will do his will, and, in doing his will, we find that we have a cross to bear, the flesh to crucify, a warfare before us. But how different is this warfare from carnal warfare!

The evil, malicious spirit of man can never be overcome by carnal weapons. Although the body may be overpowered and chained, yet the spirit of malice is utterly unsubdued. Then, if we are of those that gather with Jesus and not of those that scatter abroad, we must use the same kind of weapons of which Jesus, our Great Captain, makes use. We find that his weapons are love, meekness, patience and long-suffering towards all men. Therefore, if we want to gain a grand victory over our arch-enemy, we must love those whom he hath led into captivity, and if any hate us or despitefully use us, what better proof have we that they are in captivity?

If only all who profess to follow Jesus would truly obey him in all things what a power we would have over the evil one! The world would then be won to the cross, and myriads of captives be liberated that are now in bondage.

According to the words of Jesus at the head of this article, we have no reward if we only love those who love us. Oh, what will the harvest be, and what shall be our reward? "Now the end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned: from which some having swerved have turned aside unto vain jangling." 1 Tim. 1:5, 6.

To the carnal mind (the pitiable victim who is in captivity) it is altogether natural to retaliate injuries, either real or imaginary. By this we may know whether we are the children of God or the unregenerated children of wrath. Read how Paul describes the unregenerated, God's love and free grace in regenerating them, and their spirit after regeneration.

"And you hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins; wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of disobedience: among whom also we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh, fulfilling the desires of the flesh and of the mind; and were by nature the children of wrath, even as others. But God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ (by grace ye are saved;) and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus: that in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of his grace, in his kindness toward us, through Christ Jesus." Eph. 2:1-7.

We have now found what our mind and actions are by nature, and how God overcame that carnal nature. We will now proceed to see what is the mind of the regenerated.

Paul says of himself after regeneration, "But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, and may be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: that I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death." Philpp. 3: 7–10.

Let us examine ourselves and see whether we are the children of God or the children of the wicked one, and if we find that we come short of doing the will of our merciful Father in heaven, let us not be discouraged and cast away our confidence, "For we have not a high priest which can not be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need. Heb. 4: 15, 16.

DOES MY LIFE TELL FOR CHRIST?

Synopsis of Remarks at Chapel Prayer-meeting, Mount Morris, Ill, Oct. 10.

WHETHER our lives are expressive of Christian principles, will depend on ourselves. Men will judge of our religion by our actions. If we serve Christ as we should, our light can not be hid,—we will be as a city set on a hill. Sometimes, while surrounded by those of like faith, we find no difficulty to exert a proper influence, but, when resting under the stigma of scoffing associates, we often fail to let our light shine as we should. Too often we forget that our light should shine brightest where there is the most need for it. Why not be about our "Father's business" with such a zeal that we may be "living epistles, known and read of all men"?

We are told that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," and this teaches us that, by meekly and patiently enduring our afflictions, we are setting a bright example before those outside the fold. If our religion is worth anything to us, it should make us submissive while passing under the rod of affliction, and in that way our life can preach an eloquent sermon for Christ. We have too many "sunshine" Christians, who bask in the warm glow of prosperity, unmindful that they should be prepared also for days when there are clouds,—when all does not go so well. It is important that we be firmly rooted and grounded in the Truth. Like the sturdy oak, which withstands the fiercest storms, let us show to the world, the strength, the power, the beauty of a Christian life!

Our life will not tell for Christ as it should, unless obedience to the teachings of the Word is found in all our actions. As faithful soldiers we must be obedient to the Great Commander; then he will lead us on, from victory to victory. We look forward to a crown; let us not forget that the way of the cross leads to the glory of the crown!

Our lives often tell for something besides Christ. Sad thought! Too often the profession of a so-called Christian is the only thing that tells for Christ, and that is of no effect whatever, if the actions point in the contrary direction. We go further, even, and claim that the inconsistent Christian is a greater foe to the cause of Christ than the avowed infidel. Away with the profession, if the life be not in accord therewith! Would to God that every professing Christian might remember the great responsibility placed upon him, to be a true exponent of the Gospel of Christ!

There is comfort in the thought that, while our life should tell for Christ in all things, yet he does not require a great thing if we are able to do a little only. If the little we may accomplish is done to the honor and glory of our Blessed Master, he will say, "It is enough; come up higher." We know not the good that may arise from the small things of life, if the wondrous hand of the Master bless it to the doing of a mighty work.

While all desire to be "living epistles" and a true light to those around them, yet, no doubt, all realize that, of ourselves, we are unable to do so, and that only through the mighty grace of God we are enabled to walk circumspectly before all. Sometimes, when not on our guard, the adversary may entice us, and we may fall. But even then we should not despair. True glory does not consist in never falling, but in rising again each time that we do fall. "Watch and pray" was the admonition of the Savior to the disciples. He says the same to us. Let us not forget that our life will only then tell for Christ, when we watch that it is what it should be, and when we pray that his blessing may do for us what we can not do for ourselves.

Every means of grace, properly employed, makes us stronger, and if we become strong ourselves, we are then able to do something for some one that is weaker. "No man liveth unto himself," says Divine Writ, and it would be well if it were remembered more generally. A man, by his life, will either help or hinder those around him. Unconsciously he may affect their destiny for weal or woe. His life will preach either a loud sermon for Christ, or, on the other hand, for the powers of darkness. Which shall it be? It will not do to deny the power of our influence; it is with us now and will follow us beyond the confines of the tomb. Should not every true Christian so live that, upon his departure from this world, he will leave an influence for good behind him? Then heaven will be the richer for his having lived upon the earth, and for such there is a star-gemmed crown! May it be ours! L. A. P.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

"Please tell us through the columns of the MESSENGER who is responsible for church members drifting worldward in dress."

THE above request came to me some time ago from a party in Ohio, and again the other day from another party from a different section. I laid them away as too weighty for my pen. But, remembering that the Lord requires no more of us than we are able to do, I brought them out again, yet with a feeling that there is a greater necessity for something being DONE than said.

In the first place it is a many-sided subject—too many I fear for my feeble pen to intelligently expound. The responsibility of church members, drifting worldward in any direction, rests, to some extent, upon the elders or shepherds of the flock; and upon the ministers as teachers; and upon the deacons as stewards; and upon us all as exemplars; but the first and greatest responsibility rests upon the individual that drifts worldward. From this last conclusion I shall make my remarks.

The Word of God is free to all, and no one that is able to read has a lawful excuse for not knowing what it contains regarding his position as a disciple of Christ. Neither can the Christian lawfully claim the privilege for looking like or mixing with the world. While we live in the world, we necessarily have more or less to do with the world, but need not nor should not be of the world. The Bible teaches us to follow Christ, but when we go worldward we go directly away from him. He says, "My kingdom is not of this world." We, as subjects of his kingdom, should concentrate our efforts in building up that kingdom, rather than weakening its forces by giving a portion of our service and influence to the world.

In Heb. 12: 1, we learn that the Christian is sometimes encumbered with weights and sins which hinder him in the race for the prize of immortal glory. When the body is decked with the foolish fashions in dress, it must be a serious hinderance,—a ponderous weight. From the same Scripture we also learn, that, in order to run aright, every weight and sin should be laid aside. Here, too, we find that the way to win is to free ourselves of every incumbrance, then look directly unto Jesus. Whoever does not lay down the burden of the world can not expect to make any progress in the Christian race. Those that look steadfastly toward the world can not look unto Christ; hence they become transgressors on their own responsibility. No matter who goes worldward, we have no right to follow any one farther than they follow Christ "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ." Thus Paul taught the people. And again, "Be ye followers of God as dear children." Then, if shepherds would lead in the wrong direction, we should not follow them. Our duty is to follow Christ, and should teachers of the Gospel teach any other doctrine than the Word, that same Word tells us to let such be accursed. We are not to hear it, much less receive it, and should private members exhibit a worldly attire, we should not pattern after such an example. There is only one perfect pattern,—that is Christ. Every person must give an account to God for the deeds done in the body. Hence, every transgressor is responsible for his own transgressions, however great the temptation to trespass may have been, or how great the influence of error. To what extent they that are spiritual shall be held accountable for their example, only the Righteous Judge may say. But it is certain that every one shall receive a just recompense of reward, whether for good or evil.

And now, dear reader, whether you are traveling Christward or worldward, will you not pause for a moment to consider the great responsibility devolving upon us all, as followers of Christ and soul-winners? You can not go to heaven alone, neither can you go to hell alone. Your influence will lead some one to follow to whichever place you make your destination. Nevertheless, Jesus would have it otherwise. In sentiment, at least, he says, "You should follow me, regardless of the course others pursue." John 21: 21, 22. If each disciple of the Lord did this, there would be no need for such questions as the one at the beginning of this article.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.—Ex. 20: 3-17.

BY ANNA L. WOLFE.

THE ten commandments were written 1491 B. C., by the hand of God on the two tables of stone which were then placed in the ark of the covenant.

The first command tells us, "Thou shalt have no other gods but me." There is only one true God; he is eternal, without beginning and without end. He sees all we do and he knows all things,—past, present and future. God sent his Son to die for us, and if we believe in him, we may have eternal life. We must love him better than the world, for if we love anything better than God, we make an idol of that thing. Some people love riches and make money their idol; some love pleasure and make the amusements of the world their idols. Many poor, ignorant people, in countries where the true God is not known, love and worship images of wood and stone which can never save them. It is by the grace of God that missionaries are sent to the heathen lands, to teach these idolators to love and serve our great God as we are permitted to do.

The second command says, "Thou shalt not make any graven images, thou shalt not bow down to them nor worship them." It would be well if we, that are blessed with the privilege of knowing that there is a true God would serve and obey his commands. We, in this enlightened age of the world, can not say that we lack the necessary instruction. There is something expected of us when we have the Good Book before us. We must do better than the poor heathen that have no knowledge of the true God. We must show by our life that nothing is dearer to us than the worship of the one true God.

The third commandment enjoins upon us, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord in vain." Why is it that this command is so often disregarded? It is because there are so many disobedient people in this world. It is no wonder that we meet with so many profane persons. Many children have wicked parents and have not the opportunity of learning to reverence the name of God. Such children are to be pitied. Sometimes boys swear because they think it sounds big and manly. Boys, let me tell you, nothing is manly that degrades your morals. If you persist in profanity, you will lose a home in heaven and have eternal punishment hereafter!

The fourth commandment tells us, "Remember the sabbath day and keep it holy." When God had made all things, he rested on the seventh day; he blessed it and made it holy, and commanded us to keep it holy. We should sanctify the day to his service, for the Lord set that day apart to rest. "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God; in it thou shalt not do any work." Ex. 20: 8–10. When God sent manna upon the earth, he commanded the Israelites to gather enough on the sixth day for the morrow, for it was the Sabbath, and the Lord sent none on that day. He gave this as an example that we should make our preparations for the Lord's Day on Saturday. Sometimes we do not show the proper care in this matter. If we were served like the man who gathered sticks on the Sabbath and who was stoned to death, we would lay aside everything on that day and spend it in the fear of the Lord. We should make a special effort to work for the Lord on that day and do all we can to his glory.

The fifth commandment says, "Honor thy father and mother that thy days may be long upon this land." We should all obey our parents and always be ready with a helping hand to do all for them in our power. We should always yield a ready obedience, even against our own will, for our parents know what is best for those who are yet young and inexperienced. Disobedience to parents has been the first step on the downward road for many. Let us honor our parents by being obedient to them in all things that the Lord would have us do, and it will be well with us here and hereafter.

The sixth commandment is, "Thou shalt do no murder." Cain was the first murderer. He killed his brother because his own works were evil and his brother's righteous. Murder is often caused by anger, hatred and passion. People give way to angry passions and then it leads to striking, which often ends in death. The Bible tells us, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." 1 John 3: 15. If we always have God with us, we never need be afraid of getting into trouble or becoming angry.

The seventh commandment says, "Thou shalt not commit adultery." When we make a promise, we make it before God and our words can never be recalled, but very often there are promises broken between those who should be united for life. There are many unhappy homes on this earth because husband and wife have not kept their promise. This brings strife and trouble and causes unhappy lives.

The eighth commandment admonishes us thus: "Thou shalt not steal." Stealing is not all learned at once. It begins with small things and ends with greater ones. "He who steals a penny in his youth may steal a pound in his manhood." We read in the Bible of many persons who were robbers and thieves, and many persons of to-day are making their way through this world by stealing. All such should remember that God sees them. God's eye is upon them wherever they go. Stealing often leads to murder, etc. Persons that are guilty of stealing are not at ease; they are always restless and trembling with fear lest their crime be discovered. Even if their wickedness is not known now, it will all be known in the day of judgment, when the book of remembrance will be opened and read. It will be a dreadful punishment to be sent away from heaven forever. "It is better to die of hunger than to steal."

The ninth commandment is, "Thou shalt not bear false witness." This teaches us not to deceive, or tell things that are false, for God will punish the liar and it will be a severe punishment. He knows if we are speaking the truth. We may deceive man, but we can not deceive God. We should not speak ill of our associates. Perhaps we do not know all the circumstances. If we can not speak well, we had better not speak at all. Our conscience tells us when we are speaking in an untruthful manner, and even if no one else knows, God does, for he can not be deceived.

The tenth commandment is, "Thou shalt not covet." Coveting is wishing for what belongs to others. God has decreed what is best for us, and we must be content and not wish for more. He has given some people riches, and others not, but he has done it for some wise purpose. He has given us all we have, and if some people have more than we, we should not envy them. Coveting is often the beginning of stealing. We should be careful to guard against such evil thoughts, for we shall be judged by our thoughts and actions. The Bible tells us, "No covetous man, who is an idolater, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God." Eph. 5: 5. We should beware of covetousness, for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth. An humble heart and a contrite spirit are our greatest riches.

THE DREAM OF LIFE.—Ps. 73: 20.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

HUMAN life resembles a dream, in the checkered scenes that we may observe from day to day. We need not speak of the years long gone, to show how varied is human life. Light and darkness, sunshine and clouds, hope and despair, expectation and disappointment, pleasure and pain, enjoyment and sorrow, pass before us in a comparatively short period of time. How true the language of Holy Writ: "We know not what a day may bring forth!"

One hour we are with those whose hearts are fondly warm with love; the next sadly weeping over the departed, with a broken heart. Now the voice of melody and praise ascends high, seemingly outvying angels; then sinks low into the valley of sorrow and gloom. Now a numerous host of friends, amid the sunshine of life, is entertaining us pleasantly, then we are weeping alone, amid the storms of adversity, upon life's thorny way.

O, how checkered the scenes of human life! What close resemblance between the dream of a night and human life! While we are dreaming, imaginary objects, in wonderful variety, pass before us! In life there is also much that is seemingly imaginary. It matters not how we look at it, there is much, both in our dreams and our lives, of which we can say, "How fair and yet how false!"

Human life resembles a dream in the general forgetfulness of the events of the past. Soon we forget the most marked and singular dreams! So it is with past events. Joyful and sorrowful scenes or events are alike forgotten. O, the past, the past! How soon a cloud of general forgetfulness covers past events! Familiar names are remembered no more. Smiling countenances are forgotten. Thousands of the most agreeable objects, like a dream of the night, are soon forgotten. We scarcely remember childhood's innocent glee; youth's unclouded morning; manhood's cherished visions. A cloud obscures the brightest day. A general forgetfulness pervades every mind. One generation of mankind dies, and another passes unheedingly over their graves.

Human life resembles a dream in the sad disappointment at the moment of sure and eager expectation. How often, in our dreams, we possess large sums of money,—sometimes so much that it is difficult to secure it all. We feel elated, but how disappointed, when we awake and it is all a dream! Our vast inheritance has vanished! It was all imaginary,—a dreamy myth.

So is human life. In the very moment of, what seems to us, sure and certain expectation, we realize sad disappointments. Our most sanguine schemes come to naught. Our brightest hopes are suddenly obscured in darkness. Our most perfected plans suddenly fail. O, how sadly we are disappointed, and left alone to mourn the loss of earthly things!

Let us turn away from dreamy, imaginary objects, from vain and empty things, and turn to the real, the infinite, the unchangeable, the imperishable, the eternal. Beyond the dream of human life, everlasting possessions await the children of God. O, weary child, look up and see thy imperishable estate! Turn away from the seen to the unseen: "For the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal." 2 Cor. 4: 8.

As the most valuable treasures lie concealed in the ocean's nethermost caves, and, though unseen by human eyes, are superior to the seen, so heavenly and eternal things, unseen by mortal eye, are superior to earthly and finite things. Why should we be attracted by imaginary objects, and realize so many sad and painful disappointments, when we are so frequently, so affectionately invited to come and receive the title to that "inheritance which is incorruptible, undefiled, and which fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time?" 1 Pet. 1: 4, 5.

Dear reader, behold the heavenly way! See the way-marks of the many who have passed on before! No dreams are there! No checkered scenes! No strange forgetfulness! No painful separations and disappointments! There is only the lasting, the abiding, the eternal! O, for a home in that world, where there are no dreams, but bliss for evermore!

THIS SHALL BE A SIGN UNTO YOU.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To CLARA E. BALDWIN,

Dear Sister:—

YOUR letter is here: very unexpected, but very welcome. Often think of you, and often wished for a crumb, and lo, here it is, brimming with the very honey of the Gospel. I am too weak to write much, am penning this on my bed, with an old slate and magazine across my knees, in my death-desolated cottage, in the very room where the "insatiate archer" shattered my last earthly prop two years ago.

Your letter indicates that glorious truths have been revealed to you, which even many professing Christians brand as fanaticism. I trust they are not only part of your mental furniture, but blessed realizations of experience. The salvation of Christ is not only free, but full and present, a fact no more to be questioned than our existence. Working for it will never make it ours. It has been worked out for us, and we must work it out for ourselves, but between these two stupendous facts comes the great pivotal crisis of "believing to the saving of our souls."

Salvation must be imputed as the very genesis of eternal life. The germ given to faith involves all that Eternity will unfold. The mustard-seed develops the evergreen, wide-spreading tree of the ages to come. Grace manward, faith Godward—this is the sole condition of life, and in this Divine communication lies all the activity of the new man in every "form of Godliness."

The "crown of life" is an "ever-perfecting holiness in the fear of God." The Holy Ghost is the direct Giver of Life, "and this life is in the Son" of God, who is the Author of sacred ordinances for life's expression. Baptism is a symbolic representation of a personal experience: viz., the appropriation of faith by the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus, the Christ. The ordinance represents not only the provision made in the Great Sacrifice, but our personal and conscious acceptance of it. Feet-washing testifies to mutual service and self-sacrifice, growing out of the organic unity of the Mystical Body. The Eucharist symbolizes the incessant transforming operation of the Holy Ghost within, making the very Christ evermore and more our very selves; even as food is converted into the elements and tissues of our bodies. As commandments, these ordinances express our faith to our Lord and Master; as symbols, they testify to our position and relation and development as Christians. They are not religion, but they index it. They are significant, God-appointed object-lessons, pointing to unseen, eternal realities, both objective and subjective.

It is greatly to be feared that many mistake the shadow for the substance, quite content to be punctual and stringent in the observance of ritual and tradition, while not able to "make confession with the mouth unto salvation," because not "believing with the heart unto righteousness." Rom. 10: 10. No amount of obedience, however constant, and earnest, and faithful, can commend us to God. All human doing for salvation is forever set aside by the manifestation of God in the flesh for the express purpose of preparing a ground of justification sufficiently broad and solid to justify the greatest sinner who perfectly rests in it as God Himself does. Such faith is inclusive of all the fullness of Christ toward us, and of all obedience toward Christ. Eternal Life is a Gift; faith accepts it, and expresses it in all the modes God has prescribed. To make works the ground of hope, is to depreciate the merits of Christ. To dissociate works from faith, is to choke, and chill and kill the new being. Eph. 2; 8, 9. Gal 3: 2–14. We can not work too hard in the Kingdom of God, or be too loyal in our obedience to all that Christ has commanded; but we can very easily slide into legality by our very fidelity to the outward. This was the tendency, and error, and ruin of the ancient Theocracy, and it is the peril of the church to-day. To adhere firmly to the doctrine of salvation by faith, and not be Antinomian; and to be diligent in good works, and faithful to Divine prescription to the very iota, and not be legal; is the solemn and urgent problem of the present time. There is only too apparent, a jealousy of the symbolical, and a suspicion of the direct and full application of the blood of Jesus by faith, which augurs danger to our eternal interests, and to our true position and influence in the world. John 6: 63, is not only the great key-word to that mysterious chapter, but to the whole Bible, and to all genuine Christian experience.

The Sabbath question is altogether too big a matter for such a sick man as I am. Your position is impregnable. In the material creation, Sabbath comes last. And "there remaineth a rest," which will also come last, and yet be first forever. Our first day in Christ is Rest Day; after that, working days. Resurrection life to begin with, and all the week infused with the rest of faith. The first day of the week is the fit time to symbolize the great facts of redemption, and our participation in them. So did the Apostles, and so do we. To continue the Seventh instead of the first day, as the Christian Sabbath would be a strange symbolical anachronism. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God." "Come unto me, I will give you rest." We begin the week with rest: we end it with rest. It is not work and rest like under the Law; but rest and work, and rest in work, and rest after work. Jesus is First and Last.

Thanks for the two stamps. May God give you an equivalent in the broken thoughts I have scribbled for you. I am glad you pray for me, and I ask the continuance of your intercessions. I am only "a bruised reed, and smoking flax," and need "great grace" to send forth "judgment unto victory."

Your letter was Divinely delicious, with one exception: You think too highly of me. Please remember me at the Throne of Grace as one who has abundant "fightings without, and fears within." I have nothing to sustain and cheer me, nothing to give hope for time or Eternity, but that there sits a Divine Man at God's right hand, "who bore my sins in His own body on the Tree," and "who ever liveth to make intercession for me." "He loved me, and gave Himself for me." This shall be a sign unto you—GOD in swaddling clothes; the obscure Babe, and Crucified Nazarene on the Throne of Universal Empire. He sin for us; we Divine in Him. 2 Cor. 5: 21; Col 2: 10.

THE SCRIPTURE AND SECRECY.

BY M. M. SHERRICK.

MAN, living up to his highest possibilities, should seek the good in this world, but ever remember that "here we have no continuing city." There are some things, said to be good, which have no bearing on our future happiness.

There is nothing absolutely and truly good or wholesome, that stops short of universal application. The laws of God are very good, because the principles may be universally applied. The benefit derived therefrom is a benefit which covers humanity of every age, grade and clime, in time and eternity.

Our first point against any secret organization is: "A lie is written upon its face." It is professedly a Christian institution. It professes to be a benefit to humanity while, in reality, the good, emanating from it, is not universally felt. Hence its compass falls short of the radius of Scriptural principles, and is a proof that it is not good in the highest sense.

Our second point is: "A secret organization requires a violation of Gospel teaching in order that we may enjoy it" "Swear not at all, is the language of the Son of God." His instruction regarding the oath is too plain to need comment. Suffice it to say, whosoever binds himself by an oath, in any case, directly and openly refuses Christ as a Law-giver. We violate God's law when we partake of the fruits of darkness. Darkness, secrecy and crime go hand in hand. The strong denunciations against such are too positive to admit of cavil.

Our third point is: Secret organizations are a direct curse to humanity. All that is not of the Father, "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes and the pride of life," is embraced in secrecy. While not all the sin in the world is in secret orders, they have the tendency to go astray, for, since God does not sanction their workings, the evil one surely has something to do with them. Their "unfruitful works" are about as bad as Romanism in its worst forms.

America is certainly polluted with this curse. The laborer, in his secret gatherings, grinds his teeth and shakes his fist at the capitalist. Revenge is desired and, instead of a fair compromise on the principles of the Gospel, a vast amount of planning and scheming is done in secret organizations. The outcome is hatred, strife, envy and every evil work.

Principles that may not be universally applied for man's weal in this world, and the world to come, are not wholesome, good or true.

Principles that lead to a violation of the highest law are not of God, consequently unlawful.

Principles that prove a curse to humanity in this world, are certainly not calculated to enhance our enjoyment in the next.

HOW MAY WE BE KNOWN?

BY JOHN FORNEY.

"I know even as I also am known."

"Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh: yea, though we have known Christ after the flesh, yet now henceforth know we him no more."—2 Cor. 5: 16.

THE above two passages of Scripture may seem, at first sight, hard to reconcile, but, when we examine more closely, we see that Paul applies the first to man when he is made perfect in the future world, 1 Cor. 13: 12, and the second to the children of God in this present life.

We will first consider Paul's language, "Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh." "For the love of Christ constraineth us; because we thus judge, that if one died for all, then were all dead. And that he died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again."

For these reasons we should "know no man after the flesh." Although, we may have, at one time, known many after the flesh, yet must we not now, in the church of Jesus Christ, know any man after the flesh, for we are all members of that one body. Paul speaks of the believers and says, "We have known Christ after the flesh." Sure enough, that was all they knew about him. They knew he was the Son of Mary, that he was the carpenter, and a man of Nazareth, etc. This was all that they at one time understood about him, but things speedily changed, and he was known as a mighty prophet in words and deeds, and yet they only knew him in the flesh, until he had finished his mission on earth, — until he was crucified, rose again, and could say to them, "unto me is given all power in heaven and in earth." Then they had a deeper knowledge of him, and it could be well said, "We know him no more after the flesh, but we know him now as our Redeemer, our Savior, our High-priest and King, and our Advocate with the Father."

The question may still be asked, "In what sense shall we know no man after the flesh, in the church or body of Christ?" As Paul only wrote to the believers, we must not apply it to any others. Before we were converted and became members of the body of Christ, which is the church of the Living God, the ground and pillar of the Truth, we only knew each other as men and women in the flesh; our affections and love for one another were all of a flesh and blood-born nature, and this is the farthest that that kind of knowledge or love will bind even brothers and sisters in the flesh. While this affection remains unbroken between friends in the flesh, they will stand by each other, and defend each other, whether right or wrong.

When this fleshly friendship is once severed, then followeth envy, malice, hatred, with all the evil works of the flesh, and either extreme will sometimes cause men and women to do wrong, owing to the degree of their earth-born love or hatred, as the case may be, even to the extent of bearing false witness, either for or against, as the case may be. No wonder Paul says, "Wherefore henceforth know we no man after the flesh," because we are "born again of water and the spirit," or, in other words, "born of God," and are "now the sons of God," and have partaken of the divine nature of God. We now know each other as those who are led by the spirit of God.

We are known by a higher title than man can give us. We are now all brethren and sisters to our elder brother Jesus Christ, by a spiritual birthright, to the same household, and it matters not what we were before our conversion. We now no longer know them according to the flesh, or after the flesh, but recognize them all in the Lord, as our brethren and sisters. We must deal honest with them without respect of persons. Let come what may, we must always stand up for the right. Should any one commit a trespass against another, we should show no partiality on account of relationship, etc. Here the language of Paul especially applies, "To know no man after the flesh." If this language were generally understood, and properly applied, there would be less trouble in the churches, and difficulties would be more easily settled.

HOME.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

ONE among the sweetest and most hallowed words known to the human family, is this word, "home." Especially when reverting, in our thoughts, to the home of our childhood, the deepest emotions are aroused. We muse on the halcyon days of infancy and childhood, — the place where dwelt father and mother, brothers and sisters,—the place where we learned to lisp the names of our nearest and dearest ones, where the first and most lasting impressions were made on our minds and lives, even down to old age. We love to call to mind the dear old home with its sacred memories, and long to return to its honored and cherished endearments.

We occasionally throw aside the cares of the present and turn our faces homeward. How we put forth every exertion to make ready for the journey! As we draw nearer and nearer to the hallowed place, we become more and more anxious to see home and all the dear ones there, which makes our joy complete. When we arrive, we are met at the threshold by our aged parents, to welcome us home again! But, alas! some of the family are not there! Perhaps death has been there before us, and taken away some one, and time has greatly changed the surroundings. Yet we enjoy home, because it is a sacred place to us, however humble.

Thus it is with our spiritual home, — the place where we were first received into the household of faith, where we learned to love the Lord and to lisp his name and obey his words. Though we may travel far and wide, form new acquaintances, and new associates, yet our minds often carry us back to the place of our "first love," and if, after years of separation, we meet again at the Lord's table, to commune with him and his people, we feel that it is indeed the "Father's house," and that we are children of the same family,—heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ! Oh, how loth we are to leave the place! How our hearts burn within us when we must part from each other and say the saddest of words,—Farewell!

CHRIST, OUR EXAMPLE.

BY Z. ANNON.

"And being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."—Heb. 5: 9.

PAUL here speaks of the Son of God, and as we have "salvation" embodied in the text, it should deeply concern us all. Not only have we salvation embodied in the text, but we learn that it is eternal. While eternal as far as God is concerned it is conditioned on our life here. We may be delivered for the time being, but if we do not "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free," and become "entangled in the yoke of bondage again," we are not in a saved condition, and our last state will be worse than the first. See Matt. 12: 45.

Is this salvation for all? Yes, if you will admit of one proviso. There must be obedience. See Matt. 7: 21.

Obedience being a test of our faith, we have a universal salvation for all who believe. Does not the Bible have it so? Not all accountable beings, however, will be saved in the same sense that Universalists claim man will be saved, — without regard to faith or confession. Of one thing, only, we are sure,—if all obey, all will be saved! The one great trouble is, to get men and women to obey Christ in all things. Too many people today, forget that "to obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams." 1 Sam. 15: 22. Do not forget that this salvation is only to those "that obey Christ." Some one might ask, "In what?" We answer, in the language of the apostle Peter, "In all things whatsoever he (Christ) says unto you." Acts 3: 22.

We can see throughout the Bible that wherever any one disobeyed God, punishment swiftly followed. They were not justified, but, on the other hand, where they obeyed, God was well pleased.

This salvation,—this eternal salvation,—is obtainable in this life only, and if we do not obtain it here, where is our promise to obtain it hereafter? If we disobey God, we will be banished from the peaceful presence of God, and the glory of his power. Those that obey God, besides having a foretaste here, will enjoy eternal life in the land beyond the stars.

MUSIC.

BY FLORIDA J. ETTER.

WHAT is sweeter to the ear than music? It soothes our sorrows and lifts our thoughts up higher and higher, to an elevation which tends to strengthen us, so that we almost forget that we have been visited by adversity. I do not see how one, that has no ear for music, will dwell in heaven where the celestial band never ceases its heavenly strains. How blessed it is that Christians may meet in this earthly sanctuary and join in singing God's praise!

Music quiets our spirits and fills our heart with joy. We feel heaven to be very near us, and our thoughts are carried away to the home above, to join the songs of the heavenly host, in adoration and praise to our Blessed Redeemer. This happiness here below, however, is not to be compared to that over yonder. Here we join with each other in singing glad hosannahs, which only last awhile. There we shall never cease our singing. Here we sing many sweet songs, but over there we shall realize what we sang while here. All will be in reality,—TRUE! How sweet will it be!

There may evil result from music as well as good. Some love such music as leads them to do evil. The sinner, in his music, seeks only to please his own carnal mind. The Christian loves it, because he loves God and expects to join in the chorus with the heavenly throng.

COMFORT.

BY FANNY MORROW.

"Nevertheless God, that comforteth those that are cast down, comforted us by the coming of Titus."—2 Cor. 7: 6.

To comfort one is to console, to cheer, to strengthen. Human beings are many times sorely in need of comfort. Bro. Paul was no exception to this rule, and though his strong mind was stayed on high and holy things, he came often to the "Father of mercies, and God of all comfort" for strength and refreshing. His being comforted by the coming of Titus shows us that we are not wrong when we receive comfort one from another, as we are permitted to meet on the journey of life and take sweet counsel together. On love-feast occasions we partake largely of this comfort, when dear visiting brethren and sisters meet with us; especially when they tarry with us several weeks, as did Bro. Wolf, of Iowa, after our late love-feast, when he so kindly broke the Bread of Life to hungry souls. If only such laborers could be kept in the field for the comfort of God's people!

Osborne, Kans.

GOD'S presence is enough for toil and enough for rest. If he journey with us by the way, he will abide with us when night-fall comes; and his companionship will be sufficient for direction on the road, and for solace and safety in the evening camp.—Maclaren.

AN old writer says, "Perfection consists not in working miracles, nor in learning and knowledge of all things, nor in eloquence to convert the world, but in bearing all ills, injuries, injustice and despiteful treatment with patience and humility, We ought to keep an eye to this.

THANKS be to God there is something beyond the philosophy of the men who see no providence, know no Savior and trust no God. Where philosophy sits down baffled, faith gets up and goes to work; and when man is helpless, God is a present help in every time of need.

TO OUR AGENTS AND PATRONS.

WITH this issue of the MESSENGER we send, to each of our agents, in the form of a supplement, our annual prospectus and subscription list for 1890. If any one, who has heretofore acted in the capacity of an agent for us, does not find a prospectus in the paper, he will please drop us a card and we will at once supply him.

According to promise, made in our prospectus, and in the MESSENGER last year, we have enlarged our church paper, adding much to its size and general appearance. This was done at a considerable expense to us, and we have the satisfaction of knowing that our efforts in this direction have been appreciated. Our agents have labored hard to increase our list, and while the increase has not been large enough to cover the additional outlay, we are encouraged to hope that another effort on the part of our agents will help us out. Thankful to you, one and all, for what you have already done for us, we now ask you to take up the work again for 1890, and make a strong effort to add to your lists of names.

We offer the MESSENGER, for the remainder of 1889, free to all new subscribers for 1890. This liberal offer ought to bring in many new subscribers. Our agents, we hope, will take advantage of this offer to increase their lists. By taking a little time just now, to urge those, who do not take the paper, to subscribe, offering them, as an inducement, the paper free to the close of this year, many new subscribers may be secured.

The MESSENGER continues to grow in favor and influence in the church, and our Brethren, who best understand its power for good, are urging its use more and more as a missionary in new fields. Those who labor to increase the list of subscribers may feel that they are engaged in a good work, a work which they can consistently ask God to bless. Let a strong effort be now made to extend and widen the influence of the MESSENGER, both in and out of the church. Let each one of our agents secure at least a few new names for 1890.

Our members, generally, may greatly assist us in this good work. Renew your subscription at once, and try and secure a few new names and hand them to the agent in your church; or, if there should be no agent in your church, send the names and money direct to us. The MESSENGER will be sent, from the date the names are received, to Jan. 1, 1891, for $1.50.

To our agents who have labored so faithfully for us for many years, we, in this public manner, acknowledge our indebtedness and return our thanks. Upon your efforts largely depends the success of our work. You have done well in the past and we thank you one and all. And will you not enter upon the campaign of 1890 with a determination to increase your lists and thus extend the influence of our church paper? We hope you will. We promise to labor, as God gives us ability, to make the paper better in the future than it has been in the past, so that it may be in every way worthy the earnest and hearty support which has been given to it, and we ask our agents, and our brethren and sisters, again to make a strong effort to get new subscribers. Let work begin now. Don't wait for a better opportunity. Begin at once, and may God bless your efforts!

WE have an inquiry as to whom the Children's Mission money should be sent. Send it to Mary M. Gibson, Virden, Ill.

BRO. I. J. ROSENBERGER is laboring in the Master's vineyard in Dakota, where he will remain for some time.

BRO. I. M. GIBSON writes us that his address is now 829 North 4th Street, Philadelphia, Pa. His correspondents should make a note of this.

ON the 10th inst. we had the pleasure of attending a love-feast at Franklin Grove, Lee Co., Ill. The weather was delightful and, as a result, the meeting was largely attended, and, although the house was crowded, the order was most excellent. This was a marked feature of the meeting, and it speaks well for Franklin Grove. As a result of the good order and marked attention paid to the preaching, the meeting was in every respect a most enjoyable one. One was added to the church by baptism, and three, who had wandered away, made application to be received into fellowship again. An election was held for a minister, and Bro. Cyrus Suter was called to labor in the ministry. He was loath to accept the burden thus laid upon him, but, obedient to the voice of the church, which, we have reason to believe, if in the proper spirit, is the voice of the Lord, he consented, and was installed in office by Bro. D. E. Price. May the Lord bless our brother and make him a faithful and useful minister of his Word! Bro. Jacob Witmore, of Centre View, Mo., is expected to begin a series of meetings at Franklin Grove in December. We missed the faces of Bro. Jos. C. Lahman and wife, who have lived so long at Franklin, but while their absence is felt at home, we are glad to know that they are out in the mission field, laboring for the cause of Christ. May the Lord bless the labors of all his children!

THE SCHAFF-HERZOG ENCYCLOPEDIA.

THE Christian Literature Company of 35 Bond Street, New York, have issued an excellent edition of the above work in three volumes, at the low price of $9 00 for the set. The new edition is well gotten up in every respect and is meeting with a large sale.

The Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia is one of the most valuable additions to Biblical and religious knowledge made in modern times. It is a rich store-house of general information on religious topics, and will be found to be of great help to ministers and Bible students. It is based on the great German work by Herzog which has been a standard authority in Germany for many years. Dr. Schaff, whose name appears as editor, is one of the foremost Bible scholars of the day. He was chairman of the American Bible Revision Committee, to whose labors, in connection with its English colleagues, we owe the Revised Version of the Old and New Testament.

It is surprising what a mass of religious information has been collected, and upon examination of the work it will be found, for the most part, to be very trustworthy. Under the head of Tunkers appears a lengthy and a very fair and impartial account of the Brethren. A few minor errors have crept into the sketch, as, for example, "There is only one elder in each congregation," whereas there are often two or three in a congregation. In referring to our District and Annual Meetings we are told that each church sends two delegates to the District Meeting, "one of whom must be a minister," and that the General Conference, has, since 1866, been composed exclusively of ministers." These errors are, however, of minor importance and the article in question is such a decided improvement over what has been given to the public, for example in Buck's Theological Dictionary, the American Encyclopedia, and other works claiming to give accurate information, that we can readily overlook them. They should, however, be corrected in subsequent editions.

The work shows great care in its preparation, and Dr. Schaff has placed the English-reading people under new obligations to him in undertaking and carrying to successful completion this important compilation of religious information.

THE PRICE OF THE BRETHREN'S HYMNAL.

WE sometimes hear it said that our Hymnals and Hymn Books are rather high in price. There is no general complaint of this kind, but some have felt and expressed themselves to us that a lower price should be given. We have felt that the prices were low enough, and, when compared with the prices received by the publishers of Hymnals for other denominations, our prices are very low.

We have before us a copy of the new Baptist Hymnal, just published, and we give a comparison of prices so that our Brethren may know that our Hymnal is furnished much below the price asked for a similar work by other denominations. The book before us contains, without the index, 404 pages and 769 hymns. The Brethren's Hymnal has 391 pages and 818 hymns,—forty-nine hymns more than the Baptist Hymnal. The price given on these books for same style of binding as the Brethren's Hymnal is as follows: half leather, $1.75; full leather, gilt edge, $2.25; full extra leather, gilt edge, $4.50. Our prices are, half leather, $1.00; full leather or morocco, without gilt, $1.25; full extra leather or morocco, gilt edges, $1.50. By the dozen the Baptist book is sold, for the styles of binding named above, as follows: half leather, $16 20; full, $24 00; full gilt, $48 00. Ours, half leather, $10 00; full, $12.00; full gilt, $15.00.

These prices are given from the publishers' circular and they state that they are fixed and are the lowest quoted. They seem very high, as compared with the prices we get for the Brethren's Hymnal. Another item, largely in favor of the publishers of the Baptist Hymn Books and Hymnals, is the fact that they announce in their circular that more than a million copies of Hymn and Tune Books have been sold. Our sales are but small, indeed, as compared with this, and can be numbered by the thousand instead of a million. The larger the number of copies of any book sold, the larger the per cent of profit, so that, if the Baptist Hymnal were sold at the same price as are our books, they would make many times as much out of the business as it is possible for us to get out of it. Their prices are nearly 100 per cent higher than ours.

We believe when our Brethren fully understand that we are selling our books much below the price established by other publishers of denominational hymn and tune books, they will not feel that our prices are too high

CHURCH CENSUS.

We have received from Hon. Robert P. Porter, Superintendent of the Eleventh Census, the following communication, with the request that we give it a place in the Messenger. The Government calls upon us as a church to give the number of church organizations, meeting-houses, with their seating capacity, value of church property, and number of membership. As we are commanded to be subject "unto the higher powers," it will become our duty, at the proper time, to give such information to the Government as will assist them in perfecting their work.

Department of the Interior.—Census Office.

WASHINGTON, D. C. }
Oct. 1, 1889. }

To the Editor of Gospel Messenger,

Dear Sir: — Having determined to include Church Statistics in the special inquiries to be made for the Eleventh Census, I wish to announce to you and, through you, to your readers, my desire and purpose to obtain the fullest and most accurate results possible in this special department. I need not enlarge upon the value of such results to any who are in any wise interested in Church work and progress, and wish to know the numerical strength of the various religious denominations of the United States.

The inquiry will be broad enough in scope to embrace every religious body, of whatever name or creed, however few or many its churches and members, and it will be conducted with the utmost fairness and impartiality. The information sought will be arranged under five heads: (1) Organizations or societies; (2) Church edifices; (3) Seating capacity; (4) Value of church property; (5) Communicants. This is as much, in my judgment, as it will be wise to undertake in this direction for the Eleventh Census.

In order to prosecute this plan successfully and to make the results so thorough and accurate that they can not be impeached, the government will have to count largely on the prompt and generous co-operation of those in each denomination who are in a position to furnish the information desired. This information can not be gathered by the enumerators. They are already fully burdened; and the appropriations available for the Census will not admit of the appointment of special enumerators for this work. It is necessary, therefore, to make Church Statistics a special inquiry, and they must be gathered chiefly by schedules placed in the hands of some competent person in each of the minor ecclesiastical subdivisions of the various churches.

The conduct of this special inquiry has been committed to a gentleman whose qualifications for the work will I am sure, be instantly recognized. H. K. Carroll, LL. D., editor of The Independent, of New York, has consented to assume the duties of the position. Dr. Carroll is now engaged in preparing plans for such a division of the territory of each denomination as will make it comparatively easy for those to whom his inquiries will be addressed to give a prompt and faithful response. I ask for him, and I am sure you will heartily second me, such cheerful and generous assistance as he may require from officers of the denomination you represent. Very respectfully,

ROBERT P. PORTER,
Superintendent of Census.

TALMAGE ON THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Dr. Talmage, the eminent New York divine, is, without doubt, one of the most popular preachers of the day. His sermons are published each week and have an immense circulation. They also appear in thousands of the weekly papers all over the country and it is safe to say that they are more widely read than are the productions of any other living preacher. Even Spurgeon, the great London preacher, falls behind Talmage in this respect. Talmage preaches many good sermons, but he is somewhat sensational, and it is partly to this feature that he owes his great popularity.

Recently this eminent divine preached a sermon on the "World's Fair," which is to be held in the United States in 1892, and over the location of which there is a sharp rivalry going on between several of our large cities. He selected for a text part of Ezekiel 27: 12—"they traded in thy fairs." From these words, and from his own prolific imagination, largely from the latter, he drew a glowing picture of what he called, "The world's fair in the ancient city of Tyre." He described the prophet Ezekiel as leading him and his audience through the great fair. To give our readers some idea of the power of his imagination, and how far he was led from the true meaning of the prophet Ezekiel, we quote the following paragraphs entire:

> The chapter from which my text is taken, after enumerating the richest countries in all the world, says of Tyre: "They traded in thy fairs." Look in upon a world's fair at Tyre. Ezekiel leads us through one department, and it is a horse fair. Underfed and overdriven for ages, the horses of to-day give you no idea of the splendid animals which, rearing and plunging, and snorting and neighing, were brought down over the planks of the ships and led into the world's fair at Tyre until Ezekiel, who was a minister of religion and not supposed to know much about horses, cried out in admiration: "They of the house of Togarmah traded in thy fairs with horses." Here, in another department of that world's fair at Tyre, led on by Ezekiel, the prophet, we find everything all ablaze with precious stones. Like petrified snow are the corals; like fragments of fallen sky are the sapphires; and here is a date ablush with all colors. What is that aroma we inhale? It is from chests of cedar which we open, and find them filled with all styles of fabric. But the aromatics increase as we pass down this lane of enchantment, and here are cassia and frankincense and balm.
> Led on by Ezekiel, the prophet, we come to an agricultural fair with a display of wheat from Minnith and Pannag, rich as that of our modern Dakota or Michigan. And here is a mineralogical fair, with specimens of iron, and silver, and tin, and lead, and gold. But halt, for here is purple, Tyrian purple, all tints and shades, deep almost unto the black, and bright almost unto the blue, waiting for Kings and Queens to order it made into robes for coronation day; purple not like that which is now made from the Or[illegible] extinct purple, the lost purple, which the [illegible] to make out of the gasteropod mollusk of [illegible] Oh, look at those casks of wine from Helbon! [illegible] snow banks of wool from the back of [illegible] ured in Gilead. Oh, the bewildering [illegible] of that world's fair at Tyre!

It seems strange, indeed, that a man, with no knowledge of the Bible that Talmage is supposed to have, and filling, as he does, such a prominent place in one of the most popular churches in New York, should attempt to so entirely turn the meaning of the words of the prophet from their true intent. The most casual reader of the Bible will at once notice that Ezekiel pronounces a woe against the city on account of its great wealth and pride.

In the 26th chapter, 17th verse will be found this prophecy, spoken against Tyre, "How art thou destroyed, that wast inhabited of seafaring men, the renowned city which wast strong in the sea, she and her inhabitants, which cause their terror to be on all that haunt it!" The 27th chapter takes up a lamentation for Tyre, and the prophet, after recounting the great wealth of the city, her commerce and her merchandise, her ships and her mariners, her merchants and traders, and so predicts her total destruction in these words: "Thy riches, and thy fairs, thy merchandise, thy mariners, and thy pilots, thy calkers, and the occupiers of thy merchandise, and all thy men of war, that are in thee, and in all thy company which is in the midst of thee, shall fall into the midst of the seas in the day of thy ruin." Ezek. 27. 27. We quote from the Authorized, or King James' Translation of the Bible. Would it not be well for the preacher to give his hearers a sermon from these words, "Thy fairs shall fall in the midst of thee in the day of thy ruin"?

But there is still another point that an learned preacher must have known, that leaves him without even the shadow of an excuse for using the language of the prophet as he has done. For many years our best Bible scholars, such as Lange, Schaff and others, have known that King James' Translation was slightly at fault in the rendering of the prophet's language, and that the phrase, "They traded in thy fairs," is not a correct translation of the Hebrew. The Revised Version of the Old Testament drops the words entirely, leaving the preacher without a text. In spite of the sensational horse-fair, evolved from the inner consciousness of the eloquent divine, the Revised Version gives this reading: "They of the house of Togarmah traded for thy wares with horses and war horses and mules." His agricultural and mineralogical fairs share the same fate, as there is no mention of them at all in the Revised Version. Neither do the words as found in King James' Translation admit of the construction placed upon them in the sermon under consideration.

If Dr. Talmage wants to preach sermons or deliver lectures on the World's Fair, it is his business of ours. His work will be judged in the last day by the Living God; but we do protest against the violent twisting and misinterpretation of the words of God's Book. It is a clear case of perverting the words of the prophet to fit the subject and views of the minister. We understand that Dr. Talmage is about to start on a visit to the Holy Land. If he will, while in the East, take a ride to visit the ruins of ancient Tyre, he will find fully the words of the prophecy of Ezekiel concerning the proud, rich city of Tyre [illegible] fulfilled.

"THERE are two ways of dealing with the evils in the world which we justly deplore and wish to abolish; one is to attack and try to break them down forcibly, the other to dissolve or exhale them by the active presence of good. The former of these methods appears so much the more direct and obvious that it generally gains the first place in our attention. We see a wrong, and our impulse is to crush it; we see injustice, and we long to exterminate it; we observe an unrighteous institution, and we desire to overthrow it. The slower and less direct method of overcoming evil with good, of substituting a better way for that which is bad, of devoting the same energy to building up that we would have given to the work of tearing down, obtains a gradual hold over us only with time and experience."

PERSONS, spiritually too weak and sickly to work in the church, are, for the most time, quite strong in themselves. Those long in the church and still weak as a babe are frequently found to be strong as a lion in will, temper and disposition. Carnality is at the root of it all. Destroy the root and the branch will wither. A renewing is needed. Self-will and self-esteem are twins. They are giants as large as a Philistine Goliath, rocked in the same cradle, reared in the same house, taught by the same teacher. Self looks at self approvingly, boastfully, steel-armored. Humility is a David in disposition and war. It condemns self, and is small in its own sight. It is a lion in strength and courage. At one stroke of its uplifted hand, the giants are laid prostrate. "When I am weak then am I strong."—Paul.—H.

"FAITH AND WORKS."

BY S. W. HOOVER.

TAKING into account the nature and design of faith, and its relation and connection with works, so plainly taught in the Scriptures, does it not appear somewhat strange, after all, that it is by many so indifferently and incorrectly understood?

Hear the apostle James, "Shew me thy faith without thy works, and I will shew thee my faith by my works." James 2: 18. He was here speaking to believers who, doubtless, professed faith in the Lord Jesus and a saving Gospel, as well as himself. The inference is that at least some of those addressed misapplied faith to discriminating between persons, preferring the rich to the poor, because, in that way, they were assuming to be judges, which is not the office of faith, and to which they were not called. James 2: 1. "Ye commit sin," verse 9. Christ's followers are termed SERVANTS, the office of whom is obedience and good works.

Similar faith in the present age is, in effect, even more discriminating when applied to works. Works, in connection with faith, become the life of faith, hence, on account of such relation, the two are inseparable. What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

In connection with this the same discriminating tendencies are still further observed by persons assuming to themselves not only the right of preferences, but also to reject entirely. Especially is this the case in many places in respect to Sunday-school and missionary work, works of charity, etc. Such, says James, is not the work of faith, but of men partial in themselves,—such who are become judges of evil thoughts. James 2: 4.

Missionary work is ordered by direct commandment, as we have it in our Lord's commission to the apostles, Matt. 28: 19. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them," etc., is as binding upon the church as it was upon the disciples. The going and teaching has reference to the proclamation of the Gospel. It takes money to send out missionaries. It was money that was given to the servant and that he was to put out at interest, that when the lord came to reckon with him, he might not only receive it back, but also the increase. Giving is not to be done grudgingly, but cheerfully, "for God loveth a cheerful giver. 2 Cor. 9: 7.

The interest on a sum of money for eighteen centuries will many thousand times exceed the principal. The Jews had the Gospel presented to them, but they would not make use of it. The increase must be looked for from the Gentiles. The former were not guided by faith and works, "saying that we have Abraham to our father." They rejected both the faith and works by which he was justified and called the friend of God. In a like sense are the Gentiles now saved.

Again, Paul, in 1 Cor. 16: 1–3, concerning the collections of money for the uses of the church in other places, does not make that work a matter of faith at all, but of commandment, "As I have given order, let every one of you lay by him in store," that is, have it ready for the Lord, "and when I come, whomsoever you approve, shall take charge of it," etc.

We now come back to James again, who makes this particular point as to the relation that works sustain to faith, namely, that faith, in the absence of works, is not faith, but only the profession of it. "Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone. Thou believest that there is one God; thou doest well." It is true, devils also believe, but that does not save them, because they have not works. "But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?" James 2: 19, 20.

In the use of the word dead as here applied, the apostle has reference to the lifelessness, namely, powerless condition of such faith, because it lacks the elements of life, "WORKS," which give it spirit and force.

Faith without works is like a fish out of water. It is out of the element essential to its existence, therefore dead; so works without faith are like a bird without wings, which can not fly, because wings are essential to flight. Persons, mentally and bodily qualified, but spiritually too lifeless to work for the Lord, both in and out of the church, as means and opportunity afford, stand in great need of a renewing of faith, heart and life.

The apostle James makes another point quite clear in his analysis of faith, namely, that the person professing faith without works is vain,—empty, void, worthless, etc. In a similar sense is it true of the person who professes religion, "but does not bridle (keep in subjection) his tongue (keep it from evil, and his lips from speaking guile, but deceiveth his own heart), that man's religion is vain." James 1. In the one case the man is vain, in the other his religion.

The apostle here also shows the difference between faith and belief. This is another feature that must not be lost sight of, for it is to be feared that many professed Christians mistake belief for FAITH, and therefore are not in the faith, "THE," definite article, hence are not in a saved state. The apostle also shows that he does not refer to belief at all, the "belief that there is one God," etc., for that does not save, but to the faith which LIVES AND ACTS,—one that prays and pays, and prompts the person to every act of obedience, once in Christ, keeps him there. The test and testimony of its genuineness are being manifested in and by works.

The works included in the duties of attending upon divine services, hearing, praying, saluting one another with a holy kiss, washing one another's feet, eating the Lord's Supper, and partaking of the communion, do not include all of the works which the servants of God are called upon to perform. All the benefits, derived from a proper observance of these sacred duties and rites, it must be seen, COME to the individual and by them the "inner-man" receives afresh the spirit and energy of Christ's body and blood. He is renewed, purified and strengthened to the performance of every good work.

Thus qualified there must now be a GOING and a DOING, not least of which are deeds of charity and benevolence in support of our Lord's cause, and benefit of both saint and sinner. In this connection, furthermore, there is also to be a GIVING in which "EVERY ONE is included as God has prospered him." 2 Cor. 16: 2. Therefore, not as a hearer only, but a "doer of the work," is the child of God called upon and required to perform not only acts of charity with benefit to himself or herself, but also deeds of mercy and goodness for the benefit and blessing of others. With faith thus enthroned in the human heart, is the Christ-life most conclusively demonstrated by "faith and works."

Inactivity is an evidence of dead faith, hence so long as a person is dead to Christ and good works, he is alive to carnality, and carnality loves "the works of men" more than the works of God, fosters envy and strife, is partial, causing divisions. 2 Cor. 3: 3, 4. It is only when a person dies to these sins and remains dead to them, that he becomes alive to Christ. "For," says Paul, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Gal. 2: 20.

The unfaithful servant hid his talent in the earth. Many others do more wickedly than he. By hard labor and savings they yearly hoard up and thus vastly increase their wealth, but, because of dead faith, they return but little, if any, of the increase to the Lord. Such should at once examine themselves to see whether they be in the faith.

Faith lives in the heart, for with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, Rom. 10: 10. Works largely determine its nature by giving it force and character. Faith, thus enthroned, radiated into all parts of the system, both material and immaterial, subjecting the whole man, soul, body and spirit to the will of Christ. 2 Cor. 10: 5, Rom. 12: 1.

INQUIRY AND ANSWER.

WM. M. LYON,

Dear Brother:—

In reading your articles in the GOSPEL MESSENGER on "Spiritual Bondage," I see that one class of ministers is left out, which I think, should have been included in your articles. You speak of one class of preachers that fail to preach the duty of giving for the support of the ministry, because they are afraid of giving offence, and you say they are in the worst kind of bondage, but you fail to say anything about those that do not only fail to preach it, but fail to believe it to be their duty, and deny it to be a Gospel teaching. What disposition will you make of them? Please answer through the GOSPEL MESSENGER. LEVI SNOEBERGER.

Baldwin, Iowa.

REPLY.

Dear Brother:—

I am sorry to think that any minister should take the position to which you have referred. You ask "What disposition will you make of them?" If those who know the Truth and are afraid to preach it, are in "spiritual bondage," surely those who will not accept the Truth,—who deny it, are in much greater bondage, especially when this class claim to be Christians, and still worse, when they profess to be the ministers of Christ. The great commission of our Savior (Matt. 28: 19), and Paul's reasoning (1 Cor. 9), should be sufficient to convince the most skeptical. Paul gave the church at Corinth to understand that it was their duty to give, and also that he had a right to receive, but rather than make his "glorying void" (verse 15), he "used none of these things."

In order to silence the gainsayer, Paul did not avail himself of his liberty in the Gospel, but that does not set aside the duty and necessity of giving. The preachers' self-denial never pays other people's debts.

More than this, the class to whom you refer are not willing to make the sacrifices Paul made, neither would they undergo the cruel persecutions and sufferings endured by him,—all for the sake of Christ. They throw away Paul's teaching on the subject, and then refuse to accept his example and put it to practice. What inconsistency!

Why don't those preachers follow Paul in 1 Cor. 7, where he recommends celibacy in preference to marriage (verses 8 and 9)? The objector now says, "Paul did not get that from the Lord, but gave it only as his advice. Very well; on the other hand, he also says in 1 Cor. 9, "Have we not power to lead about a sister, a wife, as well as other apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?" (Notice he gets the power from the Lord, but does not use it).

Again, "If we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great thing, if we shall reap your carnal things?" If others be partakers of this power over you, are not we rather?" (Don't forget the power, and verse fourteen will tell what power.)

But he says, "Nevertheless we have not used this power, but suffer all things, lest we should hinder the Gospel of Christ." (Please read the entire chapter to the 18th verse.)

Now it is clear that the Lord here, through Paul, teaches the church that it is their duty to give for the support of the ministry, and if the good apostle did not claim his liberty in the Gospel, it did not, by any means, excuse those Corinthian brethren from the duty of giving. Just so now the preachers may support themselves and make great sacrifices on their own part for the cause of the Gospel, but all this can never lift the responsibility off the church, nor excuse them from giving. [See Paul also on the law of equality, 2 Cor. 8: 14; Gal. 6: 2.] Let the church give; let the Pauls refuse to take, if they choose, but let the work be done. (What a pity Pauls are so few)

Here is the whole truth of the matter: The Gospel teaches that the ministry should be supported, but Paul saw proper to support himself (partly at least), therefore people sometimes try to hide behind Paul's example.

To simplify further. The Word teaches that it is our duty to give. People sometimes choose rather than have their "good evil spoken of," not to accept the gift, therefore it is wrong both to give and to receive. But let us reduce the matter to its simplest form. Paul says, "Give." Paul declined to receive, therefore Paul actually set aside his own teaching—in other words — contradicted himself.

It is said the "workman is worthy of his meat." To illustrate: A. employs B. to do a certain work for his board; B. does the work, but chooses to board himself, therefore B. establishes a rule by his example that all work should be done for nothing.

Christ said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." What does all this giving and receiving mean? Take away all the receiving and you remove the necessity of giving. We all know the result.

For the present let this suffice.

HOW TO HELP.

BY J. H. MOORE.

EARNEST.—"Bro. Minister, I want a good talk with you on an important religious subject."

MINISTER.—"I love to talk when I think it will do good. What is the question?"

E.—"I see that our church does not prosper in numbers like other denominations. Why is it?"

M.—"It is largely because we are not doing enough in the way of converting the people. Other denominations work for converts."

E.—"Well, why do not our preachers work to convert the people too?"

M.—"They do, to the extent of their means and ability."

E.—"Why can not our preachers spend their time converting people just as much as other preachers?"

M.—"They have their families to support."

E.—"Well, do not other preachers have families?"

M.—"Yes, but their church members furnish means to support the families and preachers too, so that their preachers can devote their time to church work."

E.—"Do you think that is right?"

M.—"It is; whenever it becomes necessary for the preacher to devote his time to the work."

E.—"It seems that our preachers ought to succeed, for I am sure that God will stand by and help them."

M.—"That is true, but the church does not stand by and help the preachers. God does his part, but the members are slack."

E.—"If God helps, is not that enough? Is anything more needed?"

M.—"Yes, the help of the church is needed. God wants the members to help."

E.—"Can not God help the preachers without the aid of the church?"

M.—"That is not his way of doing. He believes in raising children that will work."

E.—"Did not God help the early disciples?"

M.—"Yes, and so did the churches."

E.—"Don't you think God will bless the preachers for their self-sacrifice?"

M.—"Certainly, but what about blessing the private members?"

E.—"I never thought of that."

M.—"How much of a family have you?"

E.—"Wife, two girls and two boys."

M.—"Do your children help you work?"

E.—"They do; we have raised them to work."

M.—"Why don't you and your wife do all the work so your children will not need to work?"

E.—"That would not be the right way to raise a family."

M.—"That is the reason the Lord does not propose for himself and the preachers to do all the work in the way of converting sinners. He wants his children to learn to work also."

E.—"I am a private member; how can I work for the Master's cause?"

M.—"Give of your means to help spread the Gospel."

E.—"Is there not danger of the money we give the preacher making him proud and indolent?"

M.—"Would that much money make you proud and indolent? And do you think the preacher is any less reliable than you are?"

E.—"I don't mean that. But we have five preachers in this congregation and they seem to be getting along well enough. I can not see why I should give them any money. They preach only on Sundays."

M.—"Do you not think that we ought to put one of them into the mission field, to devote his entire time to the work, while the rest of us will attend to the meetings here at home?"

E.—"If we select one and give all the money to his family, it might make the other four feel bad."

M.—"Would it make you feel bad if you were one of the other four?"

E.—"Oh no!"

M.—"Well, you must think preachers a very tender class of men."

E.—"It would cost $600 to keep a brother regularly at work in the field for one year."

M.—"Could we not easily raise that amount? We have two hundred members, and here is the Methodist church with only one hundred and forty-five members, and they raise $900 for their preacher. Do you not think we ought to have as much zeal as the Methodists?"

E.—"Will that not lead to the salaried ministry system?"

M.—"Not at all. Home preachers can generally get along. We need support only those in the field."

E.—"Did not Paul work with his own hands?"

M.—"When short of means he did. Some churches did not contribute to his wants, hence he had to stop preaching, occasionally, and work. Paul had no family and it did not take much to keep him, and, as some of the churches were very liberal, he did not have to lose much time from preaching in order to have a living."

E.—"Would it not be better for our ministers to divide the missionary work between themselves so as to save the necessity of supporting a minister in the field?"

M.—"What part of the work would the laity divide among themselves?"

E.—"Now, tell me plainly what you think we ought to do?"

M.—"I think we ought to do all we can in the way of spreading the Truth and building up more churches. Let us put at least one of our ministers in the field to devote his entire time to missionary work, while the rest of us will do what we can at home. As we do not need to raise money to pay our preachers like other religious bodies, we can certainly afford to keep one missionary in the field. This we can do year after year."

B— "I can endorse your suggestion and will give more than my part to support one of our members in the mission field, but I want to tell you plainly that I think you ministers are somewhat to blame for the present want of missionary activity upon the part of the private members. You have done much good preaching, have sacrificed much for the church, but you have these many years failed to teach us that it is our duty to help spread the Gospel. You have preached against paying preachers, and we have always thought that you were opposed to raising money and sending out preachers. In short, you have not taught us to work in this way, and that is the reason we are doing nothing. You say God wants children who will work, and I think the good Lord intended that you should teach us all about these things."

M— "I see I have not preached enough on the duties of private members in missionary work. I will do better after this."

E— "All you need to do is to teach us private members our duty and I assure you we will cheerfully do it."

Epistolary.

My dear Fellow-Pilgrim:—

Your sorrow-freighted letter dated Aug. 18, is before me, bearing the sad information of your dear father's death. It is sad from the view of this world's associations, because one near and dear to you is gone,—one in whom you trusted and confided all your hopes and fears, to whom you looked for counsel and encouragement, to direct you in your first tottering steps in the Divine life,—on whom you mainly depended for instruction in deportment, as a new-born babe in Christ.

This pleasant and profitable relation is now forever severed, and it is sad. I deeply sympathize with you in your pitiful wail of loneliness. No, "it will not seem like home now since father is gone." And, although "mother" is yet with you, one of the twin fountains of home is gone. All this is sad, and makes you weep, and when you think of anything you ever did or said that grieved or saddened him, oh, how your tears do multiply! How many bitter tears and sad lamentations, and even broken hearts, might be avoided if the Divine instruction to us children were strictly heeded!

Yes, you loved "father," with all a child's trust-loving confidence, and miss him sadly now. But do you not know, dear child of sorrow, that you can look up through the crystal fountain of your streaming eyes, and see God that father is safe in that "many mansioned house"? You know the afflictions of life will end by and by, that it was his painful lot to bear while here below. Then rejoice at the rest and liberty that he now enjoys. Can you not sympathize in the feeling with the other child,—your own sister,—that went off to Heaven a few years ago? You are weeping now, but are you not glad that they have met to embrace, and part no more?

Now, together, amid the associations of that "new bright world," they are "waiting and watching," for loved ones yet to come. By and by, if you are faithful, another child will rest her weary feet upon the golden shore, and, with a shout of triumph, join the embraces of dear father, and other loved ones who have found a home in the land of sweet deliverance, free from sorrow and pain, and from sickness and death. May God bless and sanctify your sad bereavement to your eternal good, is the prayer of your brother in Christ. THURSTON MILLER.

From Salem, Oregon.

SEPT. 11, sister Aschenbrenner, wife and I, left home to attend the District Meeting of Oregon, held in the Coquille church, Coos County, a distance of two hundred miles. We traveled by private conveyance, took our provision and tent, and camped when night overtook us. The eighth day we reached Myrtle Point, the place of meeting. We had preaching on the evening of Sept. 19, and continued until the evening of the 26th. The District Meeting was held Sept. 20 and 21. The business of the meeting passed off quietly, and, we trust, profitably. One paper goes to Annual Meeting of 1890. The Communion meeting occurred on the evening of the 21st. There were six ministers present,—brethren Bashor, Baltimore, Brower, Barklow, Bonawits and Lerew. The love-feast was an enjoyable occasion. One noticeable feature of the meeting was, that there were so many young members at the Communion table. The young sisters wore the plain, white cap during all the meetings, which shows submissiveness to Christ and the church. Oh, how consoling and pleasant it would be, if we could thus speak of all the churches! We, the members of the Salem church, are in great need of several good and faithful ministers. Who will come to our aid? We have a good, productive country and a pleasant climate. JOHN B. LEHMAN.

Upper Twin Creek Notes.

OUR aged elder, Jacob Garber, preached a very acceptable sermon for us, Sept. 14, from Acts 1. One was received by baptism after meeting.

Sept. 21 we had our "visit meeting," and a very pleasant one it was, indeed. Our church was found to be in peace and union, with very few exceptions, and a brighter prospect seems to be dawning before us than ever before. Elders Landon West, Resin Stevens, Jonas Horning and Jacob Garber were with us, and each one gave us a word of cheer. Brethren George Studebaker and Lehmer, of McPherson, Kansas, added to the interest of the meeting. Bro. George is a good, practical talker and found a warm place in the hearts of our people. At night he preached a good sermon to a large congregation of eager listeners.

Sept. 29, Bro. Daniel Garver, of Lower Twin church, met with us at Sugar Hill, and spoke to the edification of all. Brother Garver is young in years, yet his culture and modest demeanor has won him many friends since here. At the close of the meeting two more came out on the Lord's side and were baptized in the clear, sparkling waters of Twin Creek.

Oct. 5, two more were baptized. The prayers of our dear, Christian fathers and mothers are being answered. These five, above mentioned, are young in years, and all of them are Sunday-school scholars. Our communion season, which occurred at the time just mentioned, was one of the best we have ever had. Eld. Jeremiah Katherman officiated. His kind words and fatherly instructions will not soon be forgotten. Bro. S. W. Blocher, and wife, of Greenville, came with him. Bro. Blocher's preaching was very acceptable. Eld. Simmons, of Union City, Ind., came to us unexpectedly, but he was welcome as ever. Under his powerful preaching tears were seen to trickle down the cheeks of some of the most hard-hearted sinners. Thanks be to our Heavenly Father, that our church is in good working order once more, and we are "earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints."

Bro. Dove, of Tennessee, has been selected to hold a series of meetings for us, one for Wolf Creek, and one for Lower Twin Creek. There is a harvest awaiting the labors of faithful brethren. May God hasten the day!

A Dream which is not all a Dream.

OUR brother Calvin Bright has elaborated a solemn, startling, high-toned "Temperance Poem," entitled, "THE MINISTER'S DREAM." The Dream has been dreamed by many, and the awakening has always been the same.

Those who begin to read, will not likely lay it down until the last line is reached. There is not much poetry, in the strict sense, but the versification is quite creditable. It depicts scenes which have rent tens of thousands of hearts, filled tens of thousands of graves, and engulfed tens of thousands of souls in the bottomless pit. It is indeed a terrible picture of the woes wrought by the Prince of Darkness through strong drink.

With a master hand the infernal fascination and woful bondage of the intoxicating cup are delineated. It makes one shudder, and loathe, and pity, and almost gasp with sympathy and apprehension, as he moves eagerly along the lines. I hope it will be a timely and effectual warning to parents, and especially to young maidens, and stir up the profoundest devotion to truth and virtue, and allow no consideration to yield the affections to a slave of alcoholic lust.

The Poem should be in every family of the land. The church, especially, should heed its teachings. The descriptive part is thrilling, and the didactic and statistic stanzas packed with solid truth and astounding facts. Read it, heed it, preach it, live it.

God bless the author and his work!

From Huntington Church, Ind.

THE Communion meeting of the Huntington church, Huntington Co., Ind., was held Sept. 28. Services began at 2 o'clock, with a small congregation, but before the examination services, the house was crowded. More tables were prepared, but still there was not room for all to commune. Many remarked that it was the largest Communion ever held at this place. Quite a number of ministering brethren came to us. Among them was our old brother, Samuel Murray, of the Salamonie church. Though his head is covered with the frosts of many winters, his zeal for the Master's cause is unabated. We had many good exhortations from him and the others present, which, we hope, will be treasured in all our hearts. The order among the spectators was excellent.

Bro. J. L. Wright, of the Ogan's Creek church, is our elder, but we are much in need of a resident minister. We have preaching only twice a month. The members were much encouraged and feel that, though we are weak, numerically, we are not forgotten by the neighboring churches, and that the Lord will not forsake us if we gather in his name. This church has had her trials, but now we hope for brighter days! E. B. MILLER.

From the South Beatrice Church, Nebr.

OUR love-feast, held recently, will long be remembered. Our dear Bro. Hope was with us. We had a crowded house, although the North Beatrice church had a feast at the same time.

There were members with us from Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, and Kansas. Bro. Berkeybile, from Iona, Nebr., was also present. While sitting at the Lord's table, I thought of the many hundred engaged in the same work at the same time, as there were fifty such meetings published in our paper for Oct. 5. On Saturday Bro. Hope spoke on Heb. 12, and gave us an exhortation on faith, patience, and godliness. O, how glad we ought to be, that, when we feel discouraged, we can look unto Jesus, and ask him to help and strengthen us!

Sunday morning we had a children's meeting. Bro. Hope is a friend of children. After the children's meeting Bro. Hope spoke on 1 Pet. 5. He exhorted the elders to feed their flock, admonished the younger to obey, and all to be sober, watchful, and constant in the faith. In the afternoon he talked on the "Millennium." These meetings were very interesting to all.

In the evening Bro. Yoder told us about the Lord's house,—how it was built, of what material, and where it stood. He brought some new thoughts to our minds, and we all felt that it was good for us to be there.

There were no additions to the church, but we feel confident that there were some good impressions made, and we hope and pray that those who are deferring the wise choice, will not put it off too long, for God will not always strive with the children of men! LYDIA DELL.

From Lower Miami Church, Montgomery Co., Ohio.

OUR love feast was a very enjoyable occasion, one long to be remembered by us all. Several ministers from other branches of the church were present, among whom were brethren Teeter, of Indiana, and Landon West, of Ohio. Bro. Teeter officiated. A goodly number of members communed. The spectators gave the best of attention, and good order prevailed. On the following evening Bro. Teeter preached for us on the subject of "Lost and Gained." May the Lord's blessing rest upon their labors! We feel that the members were built up, and sinners made to see their condition. May the care of the divine Father ever be with us all, and may his good spirit lead all safely home to the haven of eternal bliss, is my prayer! SAMUEL T. HARNES.

Church News.

THE love-feast of the Landessville church, Grant Co., Ind., was held Oct 10, and was a very enjoyable season to the saints at this place. The weather was delightful, and quite a large number of like precious faith were with us from our neighboring churches. Ministers who came to our assistance were Eld. David Caylor, and that old veteran soldier of the cross,—Samuel Murray,—of the Salamonie church, Ind; also, brethren Wm. Toney, Brubaker, Stump, and others. Our meeting was one among the best we have attended during this Communion season. This church has for some time been as sheep without a shepherd, but, during this meeting, the brethren thought best to ordain one of our number to take the oversight of the church, and the work was given into the hands of our young brother,—Joseph Spitzer. Though comparatively young in years, he seems to have the cause of Christ and the good of the church at heart. May God's choicest blessings accompany him, and may he be an example and leader to the flock, walk worthy of the vocation whereunto he is called, and give no occasion to the adversary, to bring reproach upon the church. God grant that the brethren and sisters may each and every one stand by him in his duties, that they may ever work together harmoniously for the upbuilding of the Redeemer's kingdom on earth!

During the last year five have been received by baptism, three by letter and one wanderer has been reclaimed. All those who were received by baptism, were young sisters, in the bloom of youth, offering their young lives to the service of God. May they all keep their lamps trimmed and burning, and become bright and shining lights in the church. May their life and deportment be such that their young friends and associates may see their good works, and be constrained to glorify God, our Heavenly Father. Above all else the church should not fail to encourage them, but hold them up, let them feel that their endeavors are appreciated, ever remembering the words of our Savior to Peter: "Feed my lambs."

SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

From Johnstown, Pa.

OUR Communion meeting in the Johnstown church was held Oct 6. We had a very enjoyable feast. The membership was well represented, and, we presume, about two hundred communed. Bro. W. J. Swigart, of Huntingdon, Pa., and Bro. Geo. Rairigh, of Purchase Line, Indiana County were with us. We thank the brethren for their labors, and praise God for this season of grace. Just before services, three precious souls expressed a desire to unite with the people of God. They were accompanied to the water, where they were buried with Christ in baptism.

Two days before our feast, the messenger of death took from our number our beloved sister, Rachel Stutzman, and Bro. C. F. Detwiler. Bro. Detwiler was a minister of the Gospel, and labored earnestly for the cause of our dear Master. Both the church and homes feel their loss, but, if faithful, the dear ones, who survive them, have the assurance of meeting at that great meeting, to dwell together on the golden shore, where the faithful meet, nevermore to part.

MARY HARRISON.

From Rodney, Michigan.

SEPT. 27 we met in council. There was not much business to attend to, and the meeting passed off in peace and union. One was received by letter. On Saturday, Sept. 28, we had preaching both forenoon and afternoon. In the evening we met for love-feast exercises. Quite a number of members surrounded the table of the Lord, to commemorate the suffering and death of our adorable Redeemer. Many of those present expressed themselves that this was the most enjoyable meeting they ever attended. The ministers present were elders Levi Dague, E. Bosserman, David Baker and William Kree. The latter expects to stay with us. He is a minister in the second degree. Our church is in good working order at this time. May we ever prove faithful until death, is my prayer! J. TOMBAUGH.

From River, Ind.

OUR Communion in the Salamonie church is now in the past. We had a very good meeting, and a fair attendance, considering several other Communions in adjoining congregations, the day before and the day after. Only two ministers from other congregations were present, — Bro. John Wright and David Krider. About three hundred members communed. One was baptized the day of the feast. SAMUEL MURRAY.

From the South Morrill Church, Brown Co., Kansas.

WE held our love-feast Oct. 5 and 6. We had several preachers from churches near by. Our house was full Sunday forenoon, and we had the best of order and attention. We had a children's meeting on Sunday forenoon before preaching. The children were addressed by several preachers very pleasantly and lovingly, and cautioned against profanity, the use of tobacco, etc.

I think much good might be done, if on such, and similar occasions, the young were taught a temperance lesson. They would not so likely, then, fall into the terrible habit of drinking.

Statistics show that over 60,000 people die drunkards every year in the United States; hence the importance of teaching our youth to shun the vile monster, ALCOHOL! EDWARD B. WINSLOW.

From Bonsacks, Va.

OUR Communion meeting, which occurred Oct. 5, is now in the past. Three hundred members were at the tables, and the rest of the house was filled with spectators. Good order was observed, and good attention given to the Word preached. On Sunday about twelve hundred persons were present, and listened with interested attention to the Word preached. Our ministerial help was S. H. Love, of Lunenburg County, S. F. Sanger, of Rockingham, and a number from the surrounding congregations. B. F. MOOMAW.

From Maple Top Mission Point, Wyandotte Co., Ohio.

BRO. JACOB HEISTAND commenced a series of meetings here, Sept. 22, and continued for six days. His preaching was not with the enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and with power. He declared the whole Truth, showing plainly that if we wish to be saved, we must obey the whole Gospel. Many good impressions were made, but there were no accessions. S. L. FLOWER.

From Poplar Ridge Church, Ohio.

OUR series of meetings, which commenced Sept. 30, was conducted by Bro. Jacob Heistand. He held forth the Word with power and in the fear of the Lord. As an immediate result, two came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. We had our love-feast Oct. 5, which we all enjoyed. About 200 members communed and a great number of spectators was present.

Our Sunday-school is located in the northern part of the Poplar Ridge church. During the last season Bro. Simon Long was our Superintendent, who, with an able set of teachers, aided us in having a good and interesting school. We had a good attendance, and closed with an average of seventy-two in attendance. While the school was in progress, there were three baptized.

I. M. CARPENTER, Sec.

From Bijou Hills, Brule Co., South Dokota.

THE Brethren of this congregation expect to begin a series of meetings at the Bijou Hills, Oct. 10, to end with a love-feast, Oct. 30. Bro. I. J. Rosenberger, of Covington, Ohio, will do the preaching. Those coming from the East, should stop off at Kimball, Dakota, and inquire for Bro. S. J. Snyder and they will be taken to place of meeting by previously giving notice to the writer. All adjoining churches are especially requested to come. W. G. COOK.

From Astoria, Woodland Church, Ill.

OUR love-feast, now in the past, was truly a feast for the soul. Brethren H. W. Strickler and Masterson were present, and shunned not to declare the whole counsel of God. On the Sunday following, three precious souls were restored to their Father's kingdom through baptism. May God bless them and all his cross-bearing children, is my prayer! D. E. ESHELMAN.

Wayside Notes.

SEPT. 27 I left Goshen, Ind., for Defiance County, Ohio. I met with the Brethren of the Maumee district at their feast, where I was pleased to see Bro. Henry Frantz, of New Carlisle, Ohio, also Bro. Samuel Loose, of Sandusky County, Ohio. There were also other ministers present from adjoining congregations.

I had not been with those members for about ten years. I saw that many changes have taken place. At the feast, which was a pleasant one, three souls were made willing to unite with the church. Eld. Jacob Kintner has the charge of this congregation, which, to all appearances, seems to be in good working order.

On the evening of Sept. 29 we commenced a series of meetings in the South Poplar Ridge church. The Maumee River runs through this District and partly divides their territory.

Bro. Jacob Heistand, from Wyandotte County, Ohio, commenced meetings Monday evening in the North Poplar Ridge house. Both houses are in the same District, about ten miles apart. Our meetings continued until over the Communion meeting, which was held Oct. 5, at the North house. Three precious souls were added to the church, and one sister reclaimed.

An election was held for two deacons, the lot falling upon brethren Geo. Flory and Walter Lehman. May they be found faithful workers in the Lord's house! Many changes have taken place since I last met with those Brethren. Their elders, Jacob Lehman and Bro. John Harnish, have died. Bro. Simon Long has moved in from Kansas, which adds much to the ministerial force. Brethren Henry Flory, Daniel Lorosh and Wm. Hill are the ministers in charge. Some of the young members have "lusted after the flesh pots of Egypt" and fallen by the way.

No wonder the apostle Peter was so careful to warn the members of Christ's body to "be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." The great adversary of our souls knows our weak places. He will entice the sterner sex by drink, profanity, and other evils, but the gentler sex he attacks by pride and fashion How strange that the goddess of fashion holds women as slaves with such a strong grip! May we, as God's children, ever keep down at the foot of the cross! J. H. MILLER.

Goshen, Ind.

McPherson Notes.

OUR quarterly council was held Oct. 5. The spirit of the meeting was excellent, and all business was transacted, apparently, to the satisfaction of all. "Let each esteem other better than himself," Philpp 2: 3, is a good motto for a council-meeting.

The General Mission, Home Mission and Tract Work received a large share of attention from the meeting. When all the congregations are once fully organized to give unto the Lord at each quarterly council "as the Lord has prospered them," 1 Cor. 16: 2, then, and not till then, will the church have discharged her duty.

Last Sunday one of the students, a son of Bro. J. M. Snyder, ed tor of the Brüderbote, was received into the church by baptism.

Our church is in an earnest working condition, having nine places of preaching and eighteen appointments this month, filled by our ministers, besides the preaching they have done in other congregations. The prayer-meetings in the College Chapel, held by the church each Sunday evening, as well as the students' prayer-meeting each Wednesday, are great sources of spiritual benefit, and are well sustained. The Sunday-school was re-organized for a year with Bro. S. B. Fahnestock as Superintendent, S. Z. Sharp, L. Huber, Nannie Fahnestock, Salome Sharp, Laura Peck and S. B. Miller, as teachers; Nora Murray, Secretary; and S. J. Miller, Chorister. The teachers meet weekly to improve each other and consult as to the wants of the school, which is now in a very healthy condition, with a large attendance.

The College is in an excellent working condition and all the classes are doing good work.

The harvest excursions brought a great many friends from the East to McPherson. All of them seemed delighted with this part of the West and the location and character of the school. Among our visitors were some well known over the Brotherhood, as Paul Wetzel and Andrew Hutchison, who bought lots near the College with a view of removing here before long. Quite a number have bought lots for the purpose of retiring to this place and spending their declining years where they have excellent church privileges, healthy climate, railroad facilities, etc.

Bro. D. L. Miller and wife were among our many visitors this month. Bro. Miller lectured three evenings in the College Chapel, on "Bible Lands," to a crowded house. His visit was very much enjoyed here by his numerous friends, and his talks on the Bible were highly appreciated by all. It is surprising how much more effective a talk or a sermon is when one can say, "I was there and saw it." Bro. Miller should travel much and speak of what he saw of the scenes where our Savior sojourned on earth.

I am convinced of another fact, namely, that the Bible is studied more to day than ever before, and will be a more important book in the Brethren's schools than was even contemplated, at first, by the projectors of those schools. Yes, the Bible will be the book of our schools.

S. Z. SHARP.

From Beatrice, Nebr.

OUR love-feast was very enjoyable. Our new meeting-house was filled to overflowing. The best of order prevailed. We had one week's meetings before the feast. To-day, Monday, five were buried in the liquid grave and there are good prospects for more to follow. We expect to continue our meetings a few days longer, so that all may come who will. One lad, twelve years of age, is the youngest of a family of fifteen, all of whom are members. God grant that many more may come. The North Beatrice church rejoices, and we believe all rejoice with us.

A. VANDYKE.

"Too many have no idea of the subjection of their temper to the influence of religion; and yet what is changed, if the temper is not? If a man is as passionate, malicious, resentful, sullen, moody, or morose, after his conversion as before it, what is he converted from or to?"

MATRIMONIAL.

"What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder."

TINKLE—MILLER.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Sept. 25, by the undersigned, Bro. John W. Tinkle, of Landessville, and sister Mollie E. Miller, of Jalapa, both of Grant Co, Ind. J. D. RIFF

MILLER—WERTENBARGER.—At the residence of the undersigned, Oct. 3, Bro. Hiram Miller, of Kosciusko Co, Ind, and sister Nancy Wertenbarger, of Wabash County, Ind. ISAAC MILLER.

MILLER—WINE.—At the residence of Peter Wine, Sept 6, Bro. E. A. Miller and Luella Wine. SAMUEL DRIVER.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

VINCENT.—In Hunt County, Texas, Sept. 30, sister Parmenia J. Vincent, aged about 30 years.

She leaves a husband, two children, and two step-children, besides many friends to mourn their loss. Funeral services by the writer from Job 14: 10. W. WYLAND.

FULK.—In the Auglaize church, Ohio, Oct. 1, sister Margaret Fulk, aged 28 years, 6 months and 20 days.

She leaves a husband, three children, father, mother, brother and sister to mourn their loss. Funeral services by Eld. John Prowant. I. R. PROWANT.

WORKMAN.—In the Loudonville church, Ashland Co., Ohio, Sept. 25, Bro. Joshua J. Workman, aged 45 years, 7 months and 11 days.

Deceased was married to Jemima Rosenberger. Their union was blessed by nine children, one of whom preceded him to the "Land of pure delight." The rest of the children and his wife mourn their irreparable loss.

Bro. Workman belonged to the church of his choice for twenty-seven years, and was in the ministry sixteen years. He was taken sick Sept. 6, with typhoid fever and was confined to his bed for eighteen days. He bore his sufferings with much patience and resignation. Shortly before death came to his relief, his attending physician informed him of his near departure and if he had any information to impart to the loved ones, to attend to it at once. This he did and then expressed his willingness to depart. Without a struggle his soul took its flight to the spirit world.

The departed brother was a son of Eld. Morgan Workman, deceased, a brother of D. N. Workman and a brother-in-law of I. J. Rosenberger, both of whom are extensively known to the general Brotherhood. The dear brother was respected in life and honored in death. This was attested to by a very large congregation of sympathizing neighbors and friends at the funeral exercises. The text on this sad and solemn occasion was Philpp. 1: 21. The funeral services were conducted by the writer assisted by elders David Brubaker and Henry Keller. EDWARD LOOMIS.

BAUM.—At Shannon, Ill., Oct. 2, Elizabeth Baum, aged 67 years, 2 months and 27 days. Funeral services by Joseph Amick.

HART.—In the Four Mile congregation, Ind., Sept. 16, of typhoid fever, Bro. John Hart, aged about 68 years.

Deceased was a zealous member of the church for about ten years. He was a kind and loving husband and father in his family, a generous and kind neighbor, and a noble worker in the church and for the cause of Christ. He will be much missed by the Southern District of Indiana, as he was President of the Board of Trustees of the "Aged Persons' Home and Orphan Asylum." He was a faithful worker and always at his post when health would permit. While we sympathize with the family and their many friends, we are glad that we have the evidence that our loss is his eternal gain.

JAMES M. WYATT.

PANKSTAT.—In the Chippewa Creek church, Mecosta Co., Mich., Sept. 2, Bro. Gustave Pankstat, aged 17 years.

Deceased was raised in the Lutheran faith, but, not being satisfied, he united with the Brethren last November. We believe that our loss is his eternal gain. Funeral services by the writer from Rev. 14: 13

J. TOMBAUGH.

BAKER.—In the Clover Creek congregation, Blair Co, Pa, May 30, Maggie May, daughter of Bro. Jacob S. and sister Elizabeth Baker, aged 15 years, 2 months and 19 days.

Sister Maggie was one of the first to come out on the Lord's side at a protracted meeting held in the Clover Creek church, in the beginning of the year 1888, and has since lived a devoted Christian life She leaves, besides father and mother, two sisters, one brother and many associates, to sorrow for one they loved dearly, but their loss is her eternal gain!

STRALEY.—In the same congregation, July 26 Myrtle, daughter of Bro. David (deceased) and sister Leah Straley, aged 16 years, 7 months and 18 days.

Sister Myrtle suffered with consumption for a long time. Several weeks previous to her death she expressed a desire to unite with the church. She was carried to the water where she was baptized by Eld. John W. Brumbaugh. She afterwards called for the elders and was anointed, and died with the hope of meeting her Savior in that blessed home above. She leaves a sorrowing mother, two sisters and one brother to mourn their loss. Her father preceded her several years ago.

SNOBERGER.—In the same congregation, July 3, Bro. Henry Snoberger, aged 29 years and 9 months. Funeral services by elders John B Replogle and A. B. Burget.

NICODEMUS.—At the same place, April 7, Esther Nicodemus, aged 50 years, 4 months and 27 days. Funeral services by Rev. Pontius, of the German Reformed church, assisted by Eld. T. B. Maddocks.

SHELLY.—In the same congregation, Sept. 19, Nelson Clyde, son of Bro. Daniel and sister Sarah Shelly, aged 7 years, 9 months and 25 days. Funeral services by Eld. John W. Brumbaugh from 2 Sam. 12: 18–24. E. D. KENSINGER.

EUROPE AND BIBLE LANDS!

BY D. L. MILLER.

THE large sale of this work gives abundant proof of its popularity. The eighth edition is almost exhausted, and a new edition will be necessary to supply the demand. The following partial list will give an idea of the conten ts of the work:

Life in Germany.—Berlin.—The King's Palace.—Dresden.—The Crown Jewels.—Women in Germany.—The City of Prague.—The Martyrdom of John Huss.—The Habits and Customs of the People.—Bro. Hope's Work in Denmark.—Old Castles and Prisons of the Middle Ages.—Paul's Preaching at Mars' Hill.—Old Temples at Athens.—The Seven Churches of Asia.—Ephesus, and the Temple of Diana.—Jaffa.—The House of Simon, the Tanner.—Plain of Sharon.—Lepers and Leprosy.—Mountains of Judea.—Jerusalem.—Place of Crucifixion.—Mount Moriah.—Solomon's Temple.—Mount Zion.—David's Tomb.—Bethlehem.—The Fields Where the Shepherds Watched their Flocks by Night.—Rachel's Tomb.—Mount of Olives,—The Garden of Gethsemane.—Jericho.—The Dead Sea.—River of Jordan.—Bethel.—The Mountains of Blessing and Cursing.—Nazareth.—Cana of Galilee.—The Sea of Galilee.—Capernaum.—Damascus.—Ruins of Baalbec.—Customs, Manners, Habits and Home Life of the Arabs.

Bro. Miller visited the places he describes and tells about them in an easy, pleasant manner, which makes the book exceedingly interesting. It contains 439 pages, and 40 engravings, among which are a number of full-page illustrations of Palestine scenery. It is printed on heavy, tinted paper, in clear-faced type, bound in a good, substantial manner, and will be so'd at the very low price of $1.50 per copy, cloth binding, postage prepaid.

Have You Heard

about the Superb Pullman Dining Cars which have been recently placed in service via the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route?" If you have, and want to get a sumptuous meal while traveling, don't fail to take the train on which these Diners run. They run on the fast Vestibule Express between Council Bluffs and Denver and on the Overland Flyer between Council Bluffs and Portland.

Meals, which can not be surpassed in any of the first-class hotels in the country, are served in these cars at 75 cts. each.

Colonist Sleepers.

THE Union Pacific Ry., also known as The Overland Route, has lately added to its service a number of new cars (which, by the way, are built by the World-famous Pullman Company) entitled Colonist Sleepers, and which for convenience and comfort are but little behind the handsome Pullman Palace Car. The cars are designed for the use and comfort of the Colonist, who, with his family, intend moving West to grow up with the country.

The only difference between these cars and the regular first-class Pullman is that the Colonist sleeper is not upholstered. There are fourteen sections in each car, and separate toilet rooms for ladies and gentlemen. At night, by means of sliding head boards and heavy damask curtains, as much privacy is secured as if in the regular first-class sleeper. Plenty of fresh, clean towels and a good supply of water are also to be found. A uniformed porter accompanies each car to look after the comfort and attend to the wants of the passengers, and no smoking is allowed. It certainly seems that for cheap and commodious sleeping accommodations, while traveling, these cars can not be excelled.

Not "How Cheap" but "How Good!"

IT must not be presumed that HERBICURA is a high-priced medicine just because it is not classed with cheap trash. The first consideration is QUALITY, and next PRICE. The makers guarantee the lowest prices consistent with honesty, and those who order for the first time are entitled to a complimentary discount. This is preferable to giving Bibles and books as premiums.

CAMERER & BRO. are known to the public for nearly seven years, but only recently have they appeared in these columns. It is their avowed intention to make HERBICURA a household name, and will conduct their business by just methods so that reputable physicians will not hesitate to prescribe HERBICURA, and publishers will be proud to advertise it for them.

A common but erroneous theory is that an advertiser to succeed must not instruct the people but rather work upon the credulity of the credulous. The proprietors of HERBICURA have taken a new departure in this respect. Their motto is: "Everything to reveal and nothing to conceal." Underhanded work should be frowned down. If you desire a good family medicine for yourself or neighbors and can appreciate square and honorable dealings, then your patronage is solicited.

If a man who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, is a benefactor of his age, how much more are those who will be the means of conferring health upon mankind by introducing HERBICURA.

An agent can be sure of having what is called a "run" until all the afflicted people in his community have been restored to perfect health and from that time on there will be a continued demand for HERBICURA as a general household medicine. It is pleasant to take and is also a favorite with children and elderly people. It may be taken by either sex as a laxative and alterative. An opportunity is hereby extended to all persons who may feel inclined to work in this field of benevolence.

If a man has dyspepsia he can take red pepper freely and it will afford temporary relief; but it won't be long till the stomach refuses to be stimulated in this way, and then he is far worse than before, for the remedy has seriously injured him.

A tired, weak man can fill himself with whisky, and, for a short time, he may imagine he is getting strength, but it won't be long till that will fail, and he will be weaker than before.

What, then, is the right way? The only permanent and satisfactory remedy for most of the troubles of mankind is that which will invigorate and strengthen the whole system.

This can only be done by beginning at the origin of life, which is the BLOOD. No one whose blood is strong and healthy can be sick; therefore, if the blood is purified and invigorated, disease can not remain.

How many people of your personal acquaintance are constantly complaining of being "so tired," having "such a headache," of "not feeling just right," and a thousand and one other things, until it almost seems as if the world had become one huge hospital filled with incurables?

What is the cause of all this? Certainly it is not a natural condition, but, on the contrary, is one that should cause much anxiety and alarm.

Nothing will restore failing health, nothing will so quickly and surely bring strength, as HERBICURA.

Everybody knows that the blood is the foundation of life, and that so long as the blood is pure and healthy, disease can not secure a hold.

Are you tired and weary, overworked and overstrained? Do you wish that you could sleep? Are you sick of tossing around all night, ever trying and ever failing to get sleep and rest?

Do you ache all over, wishing the morning was night, and the night morning? Is life a burden and everything around you dark and gloomy? Take HERBICURA and you will wonder how it is you feel so well, and why the world is so bright.

Probably nobody wants to be sick just for the fun of it, and nearly everybody tries one thing and another in the vain hope that it will cure them; but, in most cases, they find themselves no better for the trial.

There is no reason why they can't be cured if they go about it in the right way; but they generally take the wrong way, and then think there is no use trying any more, and so keep getting worse instead of better.

Do you care whether you are well or sick? Instead of feeling tired and worn out, instead of aches and pains, wouldn't you rather feel fresh and strong?

You can continue feeling miserable and good for nothing, and no one but yourself can find fault, but if you are tired of that kind of life, you can change it if you choose.

How? By getting one bottle of HERBICURA, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Some people have been deceived repeatedly in so-called blood medicines, and it is natural that they should hesitate to order anything they have never heard of before, and this is why our friends, who are familiar with the virtues of HERBICURA, personally recommend it to others.

The best and quickest way to get HERBICURA fresh and pure, is to get it direct from headquarters, and thus get the complimentary discount and a FREE copy of "THE HERBICURIAN."

Spokane Falls New Line.

The Union Pacific Railway, having completed its line to Spokane Falls, Washington Territory, is running its trains direct to that point, thus forming the most desirable route from the East on account of its Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars, Pullman Dining Cars, and Free Pullman Colonist Sleepers.

Spokane Falls is situated in the Palouse country and is the distributing center for a section of the North-west, the resources of which are unlimited. As an illustration: 50,000 bushels of wheat have been raised from 1,000 acres of land. Another feature of the country greatly conducive to the raising of crops, is the rainless harvests, no rain falling while crops are being harvested.

Many desirable farms may yet be had in this remarkably productive region on reasonable terms, and a more favorable opportunity for procuring a farm cheap will not soon present itself again.

For pamphlets descriptive of the country, or for rates, time tables or maps pertaining to the Union Pacific Railway apply to your nearest Ticket Agent, any Agent of this Company, or the undersigned.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.

"Set for the Defense of the Gospel."

Vol. 27. Old Series. Mt. Morris, Ill., and Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 29, 1889. No. 43.

The Gospel Messenger.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH, Editor,
And Business Manager of the Eastern House, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

BRO. I. M. GIBSON, of Philadelphia, writes us that their meetings are well attended, and that additions are being made to their membership — one applicant now for baptism.

ON Saturday evening there was a love-feast held in Black Log Valley, a part of the Aughwick church. Bro. Swigart attended the meeting, but at this writing has not yet returned.

OUR son informs us that he, with other members from Huntingdon, attended the Communion meeting at Green Tree, Pa., on Saturday, Oct. 12 He says the meeting was well attended, interesting and profitable.

BRO. SWIGART, sister Lizzie Howe, and Miss Kirk, of the Normal, attended the Lewistown, Pennsylvania, meeting. Though the weather was somewhat unfavorable they had a pleasant meeting, and plenty of ministerial help.

FROM present appearance we will have a goodly number of evergreen Sunday-schools for the coming winter. Wherever we have church houses in thickly-settled districts of Brethren, or in towns and cities, the schools should be kept open the year around.

THE third story of the new addition to the Normal is under way, and will soon be completed, and if the weather is favorable, the fourth story and the roof will be on before winter sets in. By introducing steam heat, we expect to plaster and finish during the winter, so as to have it ready for occupancy for the spring term.

THE FALLING LEAF.

IN nature there is much that is instructive and beautiful, yet much of it is hidden from us because of our indifference toward that which our Divine Father has made for our admiration and enjoyment. Though we have ears we hear not, and eyes, we see not. Man is essentially God's creature. He is the one being for whom all things else were made—so that there is not a pearl in the sea, a diamond in the earth, a plant or tree that blooms and fruits, or anything else that has been made but what was, in some way, intended to contribute to man's happiness. Though much has been marred by sin, and we terribly unfitted for a high state of moral and religious enjoyment, yet the means for this enjoyment, to a considerable degree, has not been taken away from us.

When our hearts are pure and our consciences void of sin there are manifold sources from which we may derive real happiness, and through nature, as we have it spread out before us, we may recognize and worship Nature's God.

Only a few months ago there were to be seen, every-where, the swelling bud, and the opening pods. Later on, came the countless millions of flowers of form, odor and hue; soon they faded away and in their place came the fruits, all apparelled over with attractiveness and beauty, and we are thus reminded that the summer is past, autumn is lingering, and as it thus lingers, we have set before us scenes that can not but awaken within us feelings of gratitude and praise.

A few slight nips of frost — and we were made to say, How beautiful, how grand our forests and mountains and hill! Spotted over and interwoven in a thousand ways are seen all the rainbow tinges from the deepest green to a carmine red. But all this beauty seems to us as the sun paints the clouds at even-tide. We wonder and admire —then it passes away.

The first white frost of the season was yesterday morning. and as we walked down street, to our office, a few hours after sunrise, beneath the maples that line the sidewalks of our town, though so calm that the winds seemed yet sleeping, there was, seemingly, a shower of leaves. As we looked up, the trees seemed full, yet all around were to be seen the falling leaves, and the ground all around was thickly strewed over with the shapely and beautifully-tinted leaves that only a few hours before ornamented the tree that produced them.

Though the sight was a grand one, there was a seriousness connected with it that we could not drive away. Each falling leaf seemed to say: "So it befalleth man." In the prattling babe we have the opening bud. In the young man and woman, as they verge into manhood and womanhood, we have the flowers. In their maturer years comes the fruitage—in the gentleness of old age we have the autumnal tinge, and in the passing over, the falling leaf. Every day, these leaves, too, are falling, and towards this time we are all rapidly approaching. In the morning we come forth the picture of weakness. At noon, we glory in our strength, and in the evening, we fall asleep. May it be, to us all, the sleep of peace as is enjoyed when the day's labor is well done.

AUGHWICK MEETING.

On last Saturday morning we separated for a season, from home duties and labors, to attend the Communion with the Aughwick brethren.

On our arrival at Shirleysburg we were met by Eld. Jas. R. Lane, who has retired from the farm and is now living in the town with his estimable wife, Aunt Kate. Bro. Lane is well supplied with this world's goods, and it is meet that he should now lay aside the cares of farm life, and devote his whole time to his higher and holier calling, and we believe he is trying to do this. Why should he not? Why not all of us do so? This is our work, the fruits of which will serve us on the other side. All else we leave behind, therefore concerns us only while here.

In the afternoon he took us—self and wife—up to the Sugar Grove house, where the meeting was held, and we had a short preaching service, after which two persons received baptism. An unusual feature about this meeting was, a woman brought a child and presented it for baptism.

After being informed that baptism was instituted for believers only, and that we did not baptize children that were not old enough to know and believe the Gospel, she was quite as well satisfied. She made the request because her teaching was such, and she wanted to be on the line of duty.

After baptism the regular examination services were held, followed by the church ordinances, as we believe them to be taught in the Scriptures. As there were no other non-resident ministers present, the greater part of the services fell to our lot, and we did the best we could. The evening was pleasant and the congregation unusually large. Yet the attention was commendable, and the order very good. Brevity in these services always adds to the interest and good order of the meeting, and we are glad to know that short services are generally appreciated by the members. These meetings are profitable to the participants only as far as they are enjoyable. They are not to be cross-feasts, but love-feasts, and they should be made as lovable as possible.

At Bro. Geo. Garver's, where we lodged for the night, we met sister Bare, who is now in her ninety-third year, with good mind and fair health, considering her age. As she can not attend meeting we were requested to administer to her of the Communion emblems left from the meeting. She received them with much gladness, and enjoyed the short season of service. She is patiently waiting the call of the Master, and desires to go home where her kindred are.

On Sunday forenoon, services were again held, and the house was more than filled with attentive hearers to the Word preached.

This church, like some others, has had its discouragements and difficulties, and a few had decided to sever their relation with the membership. But they have reconsidered the course taken, and, we believe, all have come back again. Difficulties have been adjusted, and the church seems to be in a better working condition than before. This is the right thing to do, and can generally be done when the proper course is pursued. "Be reconciled" is the true Christian principle, and if we carry out the rule as given in Matthew 18, as we promise to do in our baptismal covenant, all ordinary difficulties will be settled.

In the afternoon we were taken to Mt. Union where we made a pleasant call with Bro. J. E. Garver's family till train time, as we had to go home to fill the evening appointment in the Normal Chapel.

On going there, however, we were pleasantly surprised to find Bro. J. Allen Myers present, who preached for us a very acceptable and interesting sermon — and appreciated by none more than ourselves. We are always glad to be thus relieved, and hope that such calls by our ministering brethren may be more frequent.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

I SHALL BE SATISFIED.

Not here! Not here! Not where the sparkling waters
Fade into mocking sands as we draw near;
Where in the wilderness each footstep falters.
I shall be satisfied—but oh! not here!

Not here, where every dream of bliss deceives us,
Where the warm spirit never gains its goal;
Where, haunted ever by the thoughts that grieve us,
Across us floods of bitter memory roll.

There is a land where every pulse is thrilling
With rapture earth's sojourners may not know,
Where heaven's repose the weary heart is stilling,
And peacefully life's time-tossed currents flow.

Far out of sight, while yet the flesh enfolds us,
Lies the fair country where our hearts abide,
And of its bliss is naught more wondrous told us
Than these few words, "I shall be satisfied!"

Satisfied! Satisfied! The Spirit's yearning
For sweet companionship with kindred minds—
The silent love that here meets no returning—
The inspiration which no language finds—

Shall they be satisfied? The soul's vague longing—
The aching void, which nothing earthly fills?
O, what desires upon my soul are thronging
As I look upward to the heavenly hill!

Thither my weak and weary steps are tending—
Savior and Lord! With thy frail child abide!
Guide me toward home, where all my wanderings endnig,
I then shall see thee, and "be satisfied."

AN INQUIRY ANSWERED.

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

Dear Sister:—

YOUR letter, in reference to "Loyalty in God's House," in MESSENGER No. 30, is here. Inasmuch as you say, "A certain paragraph in said article has given offense to many of the eastern readers of the MESSENGER," I shall reply through that medium, as the question you present may have occurred to other minds as well as yours.

The paragraph spoken of has reference to the privilege of laying aside the covering when not engaged in prayer or prophecy, and is based on the Word of God, which shall stand when heaven and earth have passed away. Man's opinion will not amount to a grain of sand in the scales of Eternal Justice, unless it is substantiated by the Eternal Word, but when it is founded thereon, God himself could as easily cease to exist. He has said, "My Word shall never pass away."

Then, if God's Word teaches us that woman should cover her head during divine services, and that she is under no obligation to be covered at other times, "let God be true and every man a liar." Taking 1 Cor. 11: 4, 5, 7 in connection with verses 3, 10 and 13, we can get no intelligent understanding but this: Either the man must always have his head uncovered, or the woman may uncover hers when not engaged in prayer or prophecy.

"If the covering brings the power," 1 Cor. 11: 10, "will it not leave us when we lay it aside?" No; for the covering is but the sign that we have the authority to pray, and, in itself, is of no virtue at all! There can be no life without form. Hence we have forms to represent the Christian life, and the prayer covering is one of these. It is the obedience to comply with the forms, that makes us recipients of the spiritual life. Just so we gain the power to pray and prophesy by our willingness to put a simple cover on our heads. Without that covering, no woman can lawfully claim the God-given privilege to pray.

You say, "Let us take this simple thought of reasoning: If, in your daily work, you do not wear the covering, and, while working away from home, anything serious would happen, would not prayer for the mercy and help of God be the first necessity? According to your reasoning, it would not be loyal to the church to pray with anything on the head but the cap."

In the first place, we can, by "simple" and logical reasoning, make the Scripture mean almost anything but that which its simple language conveys, but a simple faith, that believes and accepts the Gospel in its truthful simplicity, is life everlasting! O, let us labor for more of that kind of faith! If any serious accident, or danger, should befall you in your father's presence, do you think for one moment even, that he would wait to render you assistance till you asked his help? He would hardly be a father if he should. Verily, God is not less than man, and since he is a very tender, compassionate Father, as well as an omnipresent and omnipotent God, no child of his should enter upon the duties of the day before consecrating his life and actions to his care and keeping. It is safe to feel assured in such times of peril, that God will take care of us without our asking. Is not this the child-like confidence Jesus would ask, and every true parent desire from children? But, on the other hand, should we, in the condition you mention, feel the necessity of present prayer, I believe, a covering of whatever was at hand, would be acceptable with God. I do not want to be understood of ascribing to the act so much virtue that nothing else may take its place in time of necessity. Yet, when we can, just as easily as not, we should use the covering agreed upon by the church, in order to be loyal to the body, and it is certain that no woman need to appear either in the sanctuary, at table, or at family worship, without the cap. Those who wear it all the time, have the advantage of being always ready for prayer; yet those who lay it aside when prayer is done, and resume it again when occasion requires, tell, by actions, WHY they do so, thus showing a better light to the world. Which position would you occupy, since the Scriptures greatly favor the latter?

I know a young sister that has never gone to the sanctuary, without her cap on, since her baptism. But for some time, after uniting with God's people, she knelt in secret prayer with an uncovered head, feeling no consciousness of wrong, although she considered it a grievous wrong to pray thus in public. By and by the example of a sister taught her the necessity of having power on her head, at the private altar as well as in public. Example seems to be a wonderful teacher.

For a number of years she sat with bare head at the table, where a daily blessing was evoked. But from the dear MESSENGER she learned that due reverence to prayer required a veiled head during all seasons of worship, and, though men and women of the world and, sometimes, scoffers, daily sat at her table, she always was found with her cap on. Then, several years ago, she concluded that she could live nearer to Jesus by wearing it always,—that many a temptation would be overcome by the simple plea, "Jesus, help me." She felt that, while with her head uncovered, many a devotional feeling, that might have been changed into words of praise and prayer, had to be smothered, because to pray with uncovered head would have been a dishonor she could not bear. So she put her cap on as regular as day came, only to find that she stumbled more, rather than grew in grace and piety. Looking for the cause, she found that she had trusted the cap to crown her head with power, and the strength of her prayer, to secure her against temptation, rather than the mighty arm of Jesus. Thus awakened to the fact, that she had trusted more in the form and letter, than in the life and spirit of the Word, she laid her cap aside and wore it only during the services in which the Bible commands a covering to be worn upon the head.

If each one of Zion's daughters would thus earnestly enquire after the "good old way," and then walk therein, when they had found it, there would be less formal worship and more genuine piety and grace in the holy church of Christ. "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life." There are two extremes existing to-day:—life without form, and form without life. In the Christian religion either of these extremes is sure destruction. Let us be careful, then, to find the happy medium of Gospel liberty that will win eternal joy for us in everlasting habitations not made with hands.

Now I come to your last question, "Were you covered when you penned the second last line in your 'Loyalty in God's House?' True courtesy would accord to one the honesty of doing the things he so earnestly and zealously labored to induce others to do; and Christian love should be equal to courtesy, at least. This, then, must be my answer to your question. I should consider a minister as being very much out of place, and propriety, should he deliver a sermon from the sacred stand, with his head covered, and a woman would scarcely be less dishonorable in God's sight when writing for his glory, having her head uncovered.

THE TEN VIRGINS.

BY DELLA M. WOLF.

WE read in Matt. 25: 1–14 the parable concerning the "ten virgins," and the inquiry might arise, "What does this parable mean?" We understand Jesus to be the Bridegroom, and he invites us to be ready for the marriage feast which will take place in heaven. The lamp is the outward profession, and the oil the inward grace of the heart.

Jesus gives us time to prepare for his coming, and is now delaying his coming as did the bridegroom. Some day he will come, and then the wise virgins will have the grace of God in their hearts, and it will prove to be too late for the foolish virgins to do what they should have done before.

Christ says: "Now is the accepted time." We are commanded to "watch," for "in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh." Will we be ready? For what are we toiling? Is it for temporal or spiritual gain? Are we laying up treasures for ourselves in heaven? Where your treasures are, there will your heart be also.

In looking over the past, we can behold many missteps. By God's mercy we are yet spared, while others have been ushered into eternity. O, that we might all remember that life is brief, and that there is a rest to come, for the people of God, if they are faithful.

Jesus says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." David says, "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path." Ps. 119: 105.

Why not heed the voice of mercy, and flee from the wrath to come? True, we may enjoy a few trifling and fleeting pleasures, but these transient things will soon pass away. We need and want something higher and nobler, and to reach that we must become as little children, and obey God's commands; for "whosoever doeth the will of my Father in heaven," shall enter in and enjoy the mansions of the blest.

God's Word is our only true comfort. We must have faith in its teachings. "He that believeth not shall be damned." How can we bear to hear Christ say, "Depart from me, I know you not"? Let all remember that while they are lingering outside, they are wasting golden time. Make your stumbling-blocks stepping-stones to rise higher, and labor in the Master's cause.

Let us all remember, if we do err, we can look to that Heavenly Father, who is always ready to pardon.

On the great Day of Judgment, even those who are ready will not be able to help their dearest friends who are not ready. How sad to hear Christ say, "Depart from me!" How sad to be sent away into darkness forever! Let us keep our lamps well filled with the oil of grace, so that when Jesus comes, we will be ready to meet him. Let us remember well the condition of the wise and foolish virgins, and profit by the lesson. "Watch therefore; for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh." Matt. 25: 13.

ROYAL CRUMBS.

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

RECENTLY I was asked why I had ceased making "Crumbs," and requested that some more should be manufactured. The demands on my mental powers have been so numerous during the past six months that "Crumbs" could not be prepared. To produce them, so as to make them palatable to the saintly soul, is no small task. To write is an easy matter, but to write to edification of the body of Christ, requires soul-energy and sanctified affection, completely Christed.

While penning the foregoing, a widowed sister, seventy-five years old, sat by my side, telling of the cruelty of her children toward her. With tears in her eyes, and a broken heart, she told how her children mistreated her and then took her to the poor-house, though they have an abundance to make their dear old mother happy and comfortable. What must the end be of children whose cold hearts and unfeeling actions towards their mother drive her into sadness and sorrow, rending her heart and causing her last days to be crowned with misery? But whatsoever they sow, they shall reap. A little boy was seen by his father chiseling a trough, and when asked what he intended to do with it, said: "I shall use it to feed you, when you get old, just like you feed grandfather." His father was harsh and cruel to his own parent, causing him to eat out of a wooden trough, and this unkind treatment was getting into the little boy, who was preparing to give his father the same treatment. Oh, sons and daughters, be kind to your parents, for the sin of abuse and dishonor to those who cared for you when you were helpless, is a terrible one and hard to atone for. Think of how your mother fed and clothed you—of the pains and sorrows you brought to her,—of the sleepless nights, the watchful moments, the cares, the anxieties and the heart-burnings! Oh, what was mother not willing to do to make you happy and comfortable! Who can forget a mother's love? Only those steeped in sin and rolling in the gale of iniquity!

On arriving at Belleville, Kans., Oct. 2, we were met by Bro. R. E. Hillery, who cared for us. The 3rd the church met in council, and, as usual, the work was done cheerfully and in a becoming spirit. So far as we can judge, the members of the Belleville church are all poor, and we are, indeed, glad of it. Our souls rejoice in their excellent state and hope they may ever continue to be poor. We mean "poor in spirit." "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of God." This kind of poor own the kingdom of God; hence it is truly a happy state to be poor in spirit. We have enjoyed much of this spirit with the saints at this place. Satan sometimes tries to entice some of them to join themselves to his band, but his tricks and devices are too well known to succeed.

At Weeping Water, Nebr., we had the pleasure of associating with "those of like precious faith," the 5th and 6th. Bro. Andrew Hutchison was also there with the armor on, and the sword of the Spirit unsheathed, and for a week previous had done valiant work. At this meeting he also pursued the enemy, who fled when the Lord's truth was hurled at him. Here, too, are many poor saints—poor in spirit. They are devoted and firm, watchful and full of rejoicing. They are not moved by that subtle cry, "You are too particular," for they have read that Korah, Dathan and Abiram once uttered a similar cry against Moses and then miserably perished. These Weeping Water saints may not be able to publish abroad that ten, twenty, thirty, or fifty "have been baptized," but they can say that they care for principles and the whole work of the Lord. Neither can they say that pride, fashion, and going to worldly meetings, where there is gambling, reveling, and the like, is eating them as doth a canker. Numbers do not count with God—but principles.

* * *

Hurrying men and women into the church without their understanding being enlightened, is inviting vultures to gnaw and tear at divine principles. To pursue such a course means loss of time, waste of energy, wreck and ruin. But to teach the whole doctrine and to hold up the standard of truth, as believed and practiced by the church, means strength, power, union, goodness, success. Some men can not look beyond the meeting-house. If all appears pretty there, then to them all is well every-where, even if members do run into worldliness. Such is not the wisdom from above.

MEETING AND PARTING.

BY MARTHA CLICK.

NOTHING gives us more pleasure than meeting and associating with our friends. We often meet with some whose faces are not familiar, but if we are bound to Jesus by the same Christian tie, our association will be sweet.

But still, with our happy meetings, there is sadness connected. We are aware of the fact we must part. While attending a love-feast, not long since, the subject of my theme impressed me very forcibly. When we are surrounded by friends of the same Christian faith, we are reminded of the unity expressed in these lines:

"Blest be the dear uniting love,
That will not let us part:
Our bodies may far off remove,
We still are one in heart."

There, surrounding the tables of the Lord, we saw many who may, ere long, part with dear ones here, to be greeted on the other shore! Such partings are sad, indeed! But sadder yet, will it be if we should cross the river of Jordan unprepared. Should we not often meditate upon this important subject?

Awful will be our doom, if the "Righteous Judge," when dividing the "sheep and the goats," shall say to us: "I never knew you."

What a sad parting, when we seek in vain for sympathy, crying for the mountains to fall upon us! May God help us to be prepared to meet him in peace, where sad partings never come!

"It is the hope, the blissful hope,
Which Jesus' grace has given—
The hope when days and years are past,
We all shall meet in heaven."

ORTHODOX AND HETERODOX.

BY D. F. MOOMAW.

ORTHODOX is defined as follows: "Sound in the Christian faith according to the doctrine of the Scriptures." Heterodoxy is defined as "opinions or doctrines contrary to acknowledged standards, as the Bible, especially, on theological subjects."

Our object in this article is, to present, in contrast, Bible truth and the heretical interpretations given of them.

1. The Bible doctrine is, "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Heb. 11: 6. "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." Rom. 10: 17. "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works? can faith save him? Faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone." James 2: 14, 17. "Was not Abraham our father justified by works, when he had offered Isaac his son upon the altar? Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect? . . . And he was called the Friend of God." James 2: 21-23.

This is the orthodox idea of faith. The belief in the facts and truth of the Scriptures, with a practical love of them, and an affectionate belief in the person and work of Christ which affects the character and makes a man a true Christian is called a practical or saving faith.

2. The heterodox idea or interpretation of faith is that justification and salvation are by faith alone, that we need only believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, the Savior of the world and, individually, the Savior of each one, and the effect is indifference to divine authority and carelessness in the cultivation of the character and attainment of a higher life. This is termed, by the words of Inspiration, "a dead faith," "which can not save you." James 2: 14-26.

3. "But except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." "For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation." 2 Cor. 7: 10. The orthodox idea of repentance is, (1) conviction of sin; (2) godly sorrow for sin; (3) a hatred of sin; (4) forsaking of sin; (5) reformation; (6) conformity to the will of God as revealed in the Scriptures.

4. The heterodox or popular idea of repentance is a profession of Christianity, to unite with some church, and, in the main, select a church where the least sacrifice is required, where there is very little transformation visible, but where there is a conformity to the fashions and styles of society, however superfluous, and also the trifling amusements, as practiced by the unbelievers and sinners generally. In such a church there is a disregard for the ordinances and commandments of the Lord, as revealed in the Scriptures,—a proof positive that they are not orthodox,—not sound in the faith and doctrine according to the Scriptures. Such a belief is, in its effects, damaging to their character, morally as well as religiously. They become indifferent as to the Christian, the apostolic baptism, as commanded in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

5. The orthodox idea of baptism is, French, bapteme; Latin, baptisma; Greek, baptizo, from bapto, to dip in water, to immerse, to plunge under, to overwhelm in water. "An ordinance of the New Testament instituted by Jesus Christ,"

Matt. 18. 19, "whereby a professed believer in Christ is, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, immersed in and covered with water, and then raised up out of it as a sign of his fellowship with Christ in his death, burial and resurrection, and a sign of his own death to sin, and resurrection to newness of life here and to eternal life hereafter." So much for the ordinance, that it is by immersion, and that it requires an action in each of the names of the triune God.

6 But heterodoxy interprets it to mean, immersion, pouring and sprinkling, and this view is encouraged by Webster, by saying, "that it is usually performed by immersion or sprinkling. But, having a little too much respect for truth, he does not say that such is the meaning of the word. In time past heterodoxy tried hard to interpret the commission to mean a single action. Seeing the weakness of the premises, they now admit that it justifies a frequency of action, but have invented a substitute, and claim that the apostle wiped out the trine action when he baptized the twelve, at Ephesus, in the name of the Lord Jesus only, which is to say that he baptized them by the authority of the Lord Jesus, but according to the formula that Christ had given. Matt. 28: 19. If, as claimed, Paul would have taken the liberty to wipe out the commands of Christ, I would take the liberty to wipe out any injunction that he would propose, but I assert that he did not do it, nor would he presume to do any such thing, for we hear him say to the brethren at Corinth, "Be ye followers of me, as I also am of Christ." He would have them follow him no farther.

Again, a fair interpretation of the Scriptures indicates a forward action in baptism. We have the baptism of the children of Israel, going forward through the waters of the sea; the Savior's baptism in the garden, falling upon his knees and upon his face. On the cross Christ bowed his head in the baptism of his death. The baptism into death was now complete; the burying to follow was another thing. But the interpretation of heterodoxy is, that bury means to lay on the back the full length, as they baptize, and they ought to know that it does not mean any such thing, but that it means to "cover out of sight the body of a deceased person in a grave, a tomb, or the ocean. There is no allusion to posture at all, and it is well known that different nationalities bury differently. Athenians bury with the face to the west, Russians, to the east; Persians, toward Mecca; Polynesians, sitting, etc. Romans, to whom Paul's language was addressed, burned their dead and buried the ashes, in which case the posture would be out of the question. Drowning men catch at straws, which may well be said of the effort to maintain the backward action. The Scriptures say that the Savior, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water, and is interpreted to mean that he came up face foremost. The truth is he went up out of the water immediately, "without loss of time," "without delay,"—according to Webster's definition of the word.

How hard it is to yield a favorite practice, and make the Scripture the rule of our life, and, knowing in the meantime, that it is the only safe ground on which to secure eternal life! We might pursue this line of thought in connection with all the commands and ordinances with profit, —such, for instance, as feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, the Eucharist, non-conformity, non-resistance, self-denial, temperance, and entire consecration to God, etc., but if the reader of this essay becomes interested, it will be easy for him to take up the subject and study it for himself.

If we are God's children we need not fear the development of his providence.—Dr. R. Newton.

FRIENDLY CRITICISMS.—No. 5.

S. S. Mohler,

Dear Brother:—

The Brethren hold that there is no merit in works or anything we can do to merit our salvation. They claim that nothing but the blood of Christ can take away sin,—that his merits only can save or cleanse us from all unrighteousness. Then, taking this Scriptural view, why should any of us preach that obedience to the commands of Christ, — such as repentance, baptism, feet-washing, etc., is essential to salvation? Why not plainly preach that we are saved by grace through faith, and set the Bible doctrine boldly forth that, if we are to be saved by grace, we must have such a faith, as to lead us to accept and obey all the commands of God, otherwise our faith is not of a saving quality? And the reason we preach up the commands so strongly is, that the hearer may grasp the "all things" of the Gospel so that, in his faith, may be the earnestness of the Spirit to go on and do the "all things." In this way it is made manifest that the person has saving faith and then the blood of Christ will cleanse from all sin; otherwise it will not. Let us not say, we can not be saved unless we do those various commands, but, rather, say, we can not be saved by the blood of Christ, unless we have a faith that will lead us to full obedience. What say you?

J. S. Flory.

REMARKS.

It is quite possible that, to preach obedience to all the commandments of the Gospel, as being necessary to salvation, — may induce the belief that salvation is to be expected solely on the ground of such obedience, which, as a way of presenting truth, is less than half the truth on the subject.

It is not to be expected that the attempt to show what is essential to salvation would reconcile the religious world on the subject, since such attempt would put to the test the peculiar, distinguishing doctrinal tenets of the various religious bodies, or churches. Each of them adheres to its doctrine and practice with such tenacity, that it would show that the points of difference from other churches are, in their estimation, essential points, affecting men's salvation, for if this is not the reason for such differences, then there is no reason for them at all, neither for the sentiment which has become somewhat general,—that the difference between churches in doctrine and church polity is of any real importance, or of any bearing on the matter of salvation. Consistent with the fact of such differences, it is not at all a satisfactory reason to justify the existence of the various churches in the world.

If these differences are not held to be essential to the question, then every Christian impulse would say, "Away with them," but the fact that they are adhered to and perpetuated, is a sufficient denial to the popular plea that they involve nothing that is essential. So also the popular plea, that only the blood of Christ is the essential thing, stands denied by the perpetuation of the differences alluded to. From this conclusion there is no escape, and, as a matter of principle and of fact, it places all of the churches in the world on the same ground, asserting, as they do, by their respective faith, doctrine and practice, that there is something more that is essential to salvation, than merely the blood of Christ. If those who assert that the merits of the blood of Christ is the only essential thing, knew what they assert, and sincerely believed it, they not only should, but they would, meet in solemn conference on the subject, and would wipe out and banish all and every matter of difference between them; in doctrine, principle, faith and practice. The position taken would lead them to do more,—they would abolish all rule of faith and practice, and inscribe on their ensigns, "Nothing but the blood of Jesus."

What a remarkable set of thinkers these men are who urge, in opposition to and against the obligations to obey all of the commandments of the Gospel, as means to salvation, that the merits of the blood of Christ alone are essential, and yet, in the face of such a declaration persist in perpetuating their own peculiar church doctrine, faith and practice by which their identity as a church is also perpetuated!

The idea that something is essential to salvation, has become fixed in the minds of all, but just what that something is, seems to be an unsettled question, to which is to be attributed, to a large degree, the religious criticisms between those professing the faith of Christ. While one is fixed in his own mind that a certain thing is essential, another has something else, and yet all are so settled on the subject, that it is, perhaps, venturesome to suggest anything, differing from the common views on the subject. It is possible, however, that such is the fact, which we shall briefly notice. As introductory to this, we refer to the proposition which is universally accepted, that salvation is altogether due to the mercy of God. The evidence of this mercy is seen in the manifestation of his will, and in its exercise, beginning with the first promise to a fallen race, after the transgression, and continuing in the provisions and promises of the law and prophets until it was fully displayed by the birth, life, ministry, death, resurrection and ascension of Christ, and bestowment of the Holy Spirit for the salvation of man. This all goes to show, as said above, the manifestation and exercise of his will. That was the mission of Christ to the world, to fulfill the Father's will. Of this he says in John 6: 38, "For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." John 12: 49: "But the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak." John 5: 30: "I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me."

I need not add more texts on this point, as they will not be disputed. The truth taught here is, that the Father's will runs through all the work of Christ, i. e., that Christ's work is the Father's will. It is by that will that sinners are converted, —or born again. James 1: 18: "Of his own will begat he us." Jesus says, John 1: 12, 13, "that to those born of God gave he power to become the sons of God." God's will gave us the apostolic ministry and all spiritual blessings. See Eph. 1: 1–3. These together teach that God's will gave the first promise. It gave us a Savior as a Teacher, as an Atoner, as the Resurrection and Life. His will gave the church the ministry of reconciliation. 2 Cor. 5: 19. His will gives all spiritual blessings, crowned with eternal redemption and glory. What, then, is Christ to us as a teacher? It is the Father's will as an Atoner, the Father's will as a Mediator, the Father's will as everything to us. In what relation does Christ stand to the Father's will? As a means to make known and to fulfill his will. Then his birth, ministry, life, death, resurrection, mediation,—all are means to the Father's will.

Now, then, which is the most important,—the most essential,—the thing itself to us? Is it the will or is it the means used by that will to carry it out? Can we distinguish between the benefits of the Father's will to us, and the means which his will has employed to bestow on us these benefits?

The foundation for every hope of salvation is the "Father's will." The birth of Christ was no more a part of the Father's will than his baptism or his command to those who seek salvation to be baptized. The shedding of Christ's blood, and his death, was no more a part of the Father's will, than it was for him to wash his disciples' feet or command them to wash one another's feet.

Taking the will of God, as the foundation of the work which made salvation a blessed fact to a ruined race, and Christ as revealing that will to us, not any part of the work of Christ in setting forth and in fulfilling that will is more important or more meritorious than any other part of that will. Take away the Father's will from the shedding of the Savior's blood, and from the blood itself, and it has no more merit to save than has common blood. Put the Father's will into the command of water baptism, the washing of the saints' feet, "love your enemies," or any other, even the simplest precept of Jesus, and they each have the same merit in them as has the blood of Christ, because the merit in either or all of them is there only because it is the Father's will. All the manifestation of Christ in his life, while in the world on his mission, was the manifestation of the Father's will From this not anything in the life of Christ can be excluded. The important, underlying, controlling, and essential power, merit, and thing, towards the salvation of men is "the Father's" will, confirmed to the world, and sealed by the blood of the "crucified one," and his blood stands related to the Father's will, to save, the same as does the sealing wafer to a legal document and will, and as the seal of such a document must be opened and passed, to get at the contents of a legal will, in the same sense no one will get to the merits and mercies of the Divine Father's will, except through the blood of Jesus that sealed that will. The seal to a will is not the essential thing, but the essential thing is the will itself; so then, if I set aside the will of the Father on baptism, feet-washing, non-conformity to the world, the Christian salutation, the non-resistant precepts, non-swearing, the anointing of the sick, as in James 5: 14, honesty, purity, prayer, or any of the commandments of Christ, I thereby, and to that extent, set aside the merit there is in them, because I set aside the Father's will, as much as if I set aside the sacrifice and blood of Jesus; since it must be admitted that everything attending the life of Christ, while in the world, was included in the Father's will, and was the manifestation of it. Therefore, all the merit there is in any one thing, said or done by Christ, to save men, is there because, to say or do these was the Father's will. It is, therefore, of no greater consequence to set aside the Father's will in the blood of Jesus, than to set aside his will by refusing to accept and obey any one command or precept, given by Christ.

Neither is the Father's will more manifest in the death of Jesus, than in his birth, life, or teaching, including everything known of him in heaven or earth. A faith that does not make the manifestations of the Father's will, as shown in the life and precepts of Christ, as meritorious, as relevant to the will of the Father to save,—as strong ground of hope, or as full of comfort as is the blood of Jesus, — is a faith so restricted and defective, as to equal the setting aside of all that enters into the will of the Father as means to save. The blood of Christ is not any more a means to manifest the Father's will, than is anything else, connected with Christ in his mission to the lost.

The faith that saves accepts all of the manifestations of the Father's will, as that will stands revealed to us in all of the Savior's life, precepts and commands, as equally meritorious, and therefore equally essential, for as already said, the Father's will is the only thing that gives merit to anything said and done by Christ. He is the embodiment of that will to us in all he did, and just so soon as the will of those, who need salvation, surrenders in loving obedience to the will of the Father, just that soon do the blessed promises which cluster round and about the will of the Father, at any and every point, manifested by Christ, go out to them. While they bear the sorrows of the cross for Jesus' sake, they, too, like Jesus bear honor to the Father in saying, "Not my will but thine be done."

To preach the Truth, is not to enter the contest as to whether the blood of Jesus only is essential, or whether obedience to the Gospel is more or less essential, and made so by the blood of Christ, but that the will of the Father glories in his mercy, "sanctifieth those to be saved through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ." Heb. 10: 10. This should be preached. Rejecting anything taught by Christ, rejects the will and power to save. There is no need of confusion in this view, neither is it open to criticism.

If the blood of Christ is the seal to the Father's will, it is, therefore, the seal to any or all its parts, as well in repentance, faith, baptism, washing the saints' feet, etc, as in the sacrifice of Christ's body, and no one, in seeking salvation, can come to the merits of this will on repentance, faith, etc., without coming to the seal of the will, —the blood of Christ. "For by one offering he hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." Heb. 10: 14. "Sacrifices and offerings thou wouldest not, but a body hast thou prepared me. Then said I, Lo, I come (in the volume of the book it is written of me) to do thy will, O God." Heb. 10: 5, 7.

I HAVE BEEN WONDERING.

BY LIZZIE MILLER

In thinking of the church and of its strong opposition to the fashionable follies of the world, and that opposition is none too strong, I wondered why the use of tobacco could not be classed with these follies, and why it is that our brethren must have so much time to rid themselves of this folly.

I wondered what the church would do with a sister who would insist on having five or ten years to lay aside the fashionable garments she so much enjoys wearing, and whether it would not be well for the brethren to come under the same rule that is applied to the weaker vessel.

Not long since I heard a brother say, "The will can be managed just as a horse can be managed. There is no use for a member to say, 'I can not come into the order of the church.' We can if we just will to do it." He further said, "I was once a very fashionable man, but when I united with the church I put the fashionable clothes all aside. I said, I will, and I did." Yet, this very same brother does not seem to be able to overcome the habit of using the weed. I wonder why this brother did not control his will. Why did he not say, "I will give up the use of tobacco," and then give it up, especially since Annual Meeting speaks so plainly on this point?

I wonder, too, how elders, using tobacco, could say anything against its use when installing brethren in the ministry. Can they say, "My brother, this is forbidden, and can not be tolerated, you must give up the use of this weed or we can not install you"? In my mind they have no right to say this because they are not free themselves. Brethren, I have wondered what kind of an example you are setting for the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers? Will your example lead the young men of your congregation to be tobacco chewers? Many of you are tired of having this subject spoken of or written upon. It makes you uneasy, it makes you uncomfortable and unhappy. I wonder why.

And then I wonder, too, if it is any worse for the brethren who follow the fashionable folly of using tobacco to hear it spoken of again and again, than it is for the sisters to be admonished again and again to lay away some unnecessary adornment.

You, too, feel it your duty to talk, to admonish and insist that the sisters shall dress plainly, never thinking that you are asking more of them than you are willing to do yourselves.

You, my dear brother, are using tobacco, and you want time to rid yourself of this habit, but if the sisters should ask for years to think about laying off a much-enjoyed, fashionable dress or bonnet, I wonder if you would feel like granting. Would you not say, "My sister, the church will not tolerate it. You must put it aside or be dealt with as an unruly member."

I wonder why we hear it said, when speaking of old brethren who have been following this fashionable folly, "Just let them alone, they have been using tobacco so many years; don't ask them to give it up now." Brethren, would you say of a sister, who is old and who might like fashionable clothing, Let her alone now, she is old and has been doing this all the days of her life; brethren, would you let her alone? I imagine I hear you say, "She is old enough to know better, and we must do our duty." That is right, brethren, do your duty, but treat the brethren and sisters alike. A fashionable folly is a fashionable folly, no matter whether it is using tobacco or wearing a dress bonnet.

I wonder why the brethren who use tobacco are not as brave as the sisters who put aside all fashionable dress. I wonder whether the truth does not lie here, That the sisters ask the Lord to help them conquer self, and that the brethren do not.

Sisters, pray on; since we desire to be followers of Christ we must give up the things we at one time enjoyed, but let us do it joyfully and willingly. When the Lord calls us home I do not wonder, but I know he will reward us abundantly for the sacrifices we have made for him and his cause.

"HOW MUCH IS HE WORTH?"

This is a common question, which generally receives wrong answers. A man is worth precisely as much as he has capacity and inclination to be useful with. The miser is not worth anything. Not the tax-gatherer, but the balances of God decide a man's value. Neither polished marble nor lying epitaph. "He has left a large property." Yes, he left it. What a pity he was obliged to leave it! It was all his own. He earned it by dint of industry and economy. But he left it. Might he not have taken some with him? Is there no exchange between earth and heaven? —Sel.

DRINK.

It is the echo of the dungeon wall; the blight of each abandoned home; the dirge of each procession to the gallows post. "Drink, drink, drink!" It is the felon's fortitude; the gambler's goad; the harlot's hardihood; the coward's courage; the assassin's inspiration. "Drink, drink, drink!" Ask all the wives in England, and how they would condemn it! Canvass the cottages of Birmingham, and glean the suffrages of the women who sit beside their scanty fires, and who fly to the pawnshops for the children's crust; where the baby's blanket and the wedding ring itself have been bartered to fill the drunkard's glass; and learn the moral, as they hide their bruised and blackened bosoms, and press their hands against their broken hearts, of the home of the "drink, drink, drink."—Sel.

WHERE TO FIND ENCOURAGEMENT.

BY ROSA M. SELL.

"And David was greatly distressed, for the people spake of stoning him, because the soul of all the people was grieved, every man for his sons and for his daughters: but David encouraged himself in the Lord his God."—1 Sam 30: 6.

THERE are but very few persons that do not meet with discouragement of some kind. There are discouragements in business affairs and, also, in literary pursuits. Christians, because of the manifold temptations with which they meet, have their temptations. If, when we meet with such discouragements, there would be nothing to encourage us, we would despond, and sometimes, even despair. The sad experience may be ours that we have no friends to whom we can go for sympathy and encouragement, still there is comfort for those who seek God effectually, and who know him.

"David encouraged himself in the Lord his God." Here we are reminded of a source of encouragement that will never fail us if we have access to it, as we may all have. David regarded the God whom he served as a living, personal God. He felt assured that God would help him. It was with David as it was with Hagar in the wilderness, when fleeing from Sarah. She was in great trouble, but the Lord, whom she served, saw her, and knew well the depth of the sorrow of her heart, and an angel was sent to comfort her. She was made to realize that the Lord was with her. The God whom Hagar served saw her in her affliction, and sent her comfort.

David, knowing the character of his God, and knowing that his God saw him in the midst of his many troubles, and knowing that as a "father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him," Ps. 103: 13, he felt encouraged.

How very different is the condition of those who have a knowledge of the true and living God, as compared to those who know only the cheerless dogmas of agnosticism! All who know the true God, know that he loves them, and that he will help them in every time of danger and need, and so we can encourage ourselves in him. What a blessing it is to all who have this knowledge of the true and living God, — who can make that knowledge contribute to their comfort and peace when they are in difficulties and dangers! This David did, and this Hagar did, and this comfort all may have who encourage themselves in God.

David, when he had some important duty to perform, would call to mind what the Lord had done for him on some previous occasion, and by this was encouraged further to trust in the Lord. It was an eventful period of his life, when he accepted the challenge of the boasting Philistine, Goliath. David, though but a youth, went forward, not in the spirit of vanity and pride, but urged on by a solemn sense of duty. He said to Saul, "Let no man's heart fail because of him; thy servant will go and fight with this Philistine." 1 Sam. 17: 32.

David called to mind the gracious dealings of the Lord with him, in former years, when he was helped and delivered in his conflicts with the beasts of the wilderness. Having such a satisfactory experience in the past, he could now, with confidence, look to the same source for help. "He encouraged himself in the Lord his God," because he had tried him and found him faithful. So we all can do, and when we get into troubles and conflicts, we can encourage ourselves in the Lord our God, and successfully fight our battles, and endure our trials.

David was not disappointed. He trusted in God and was delivered. He found, as he had always found, that God is able and willing to help, and that he could confidently rely upon him. He inquired of the Lord whether he should pursue the Amalekites that had burned the city, and that had taken "their wives, and their sons, and their daughters captive." The Lord told him what to do. David obeyed, and the pursuit was successful. He recovered all that the Amalekites had carried away. David's victory was complete and he was well rewarded for his confidence in God. In all our troubles, perplexities, and conflicts, we can not do better than encourage ourselves in the Lord our God!

THE LOVE OF THE FATHER.

BY S. O. LARKINS.

"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God."—1 John 3: 1.

"The Holy one, the Lord of all,
Before whose throne the angels fall,
With crowns of thorns and fettered hands,
Alone before his captors stands."

DEAR reader, can our finite mind comprehend the fullness and magnitude of the great and wonderful love of God? It is as boundless as the great and mighty ocean, as high as the starry heavens, and of greater compass than the universe. It embraces all that is pure, and holy, and lovely.

No, the tongue and pen of man are unable to describe or define its wonderful extent, yet we learn from our text that the Creator of all things hath bestowed this wonderful love upon us, who, by nature, and much more so by practice, are wholly unworthy of anything so pure and good. Surely it can be nothing but the love of God that supplies our earth with its varied beauty, and cheers our journey heavenward with so much joy and so many blessings. O can we praise, adore and magnify his great name as we should for his great love? Yes, we are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people, and he regards us with all the tenderness of his great, expanding love.

As an earthly parent rebukes his wayward and erring child, even so must our Heavenly Father rebuke and often chasten us, "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." We are often forgetful as well as disobedient, hence he visits us with calamities and distress. In loving reproof he lifts the cup of sorrow to our lips, and O how often it contains the bitter dregs of death! A dear father, a loving mother, who shielded and protected us in our infancy, are taken away. A kind husband, a faithful wife, an affectionate brother or sister, a darling child are torn from our midst by the ruthless hand of death. We close our eyes to everything except our present grief, wholly indifferent to God's object in thus afflicting us. In bitter anguish of soul we cry, "O let this cup pass from me; I can not drink it." With aching and almost bursting heart we cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

But no; the all-wise Father thinks best to let us drain the cup of its bitter dregs. Then comes the hour of darkness. The sun seems to veil his face in darkness, and night gathers around us. How solemn, yet how sad we are! We do not realize that selfishness is blinding our vision and shutting out the rays of God's love.

Jesus, while in sorrow, was not alone in the garden. Angels came and whispered words of cheer and comfort, and wiped the sweat from his agonizing brow in that trying hour. He has told us that he will never leave nor forsake us. Can we not trust him fully? We are God's children and he watches over us with a pitying eye!

How often does the sin of unbelief obscure our vision and hide the genial rays of the sunshine of God's love, and shut out its warmth! Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us! Look! See, he is the same unchangeable Being to-day, yesterday and forever!

Our God is such a merciful and kind Father, and loves us to such a degree, that he wants our souls pure, even if he has to afflict them to make them fit to dwell in his Holy City; for it is written that nothing shall dwell therein that is impure. "For without are dogs, sorcerers, idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie." Our Blessed Savior has trodden the winepress of sorrow, and his great heart beats with each pulsation of our own, in sorrow. Should we not, with David, exclaim, "Praise ye the Lord, for his mercy endureth forever?" Even nature shouts in rapture the praise of God's love. The sweet singers of the forest, the winding brook of the mountains, echo back his praise. Then let us bow in meek submission to his will, and, when he calls us to pass through affliction's fiery ordeal, let us lift our eyes heavenward and kiss the rod that deals the blow, and say, "Not my will but thine be done." Let us trust him for what he has done for us, and is able to do. When we languish and grow faint, we forget the law of the Lord, and his promises to us.

When we are perplexed and in doubt, we are slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken. Verily the Lord is not deaf to our entreaties, neither hath he forgotten us, though his presence may seem to have been withdrawn for a season. Our Heavenly Father is so rich that he possesseth all things; so wise that he knoweth all things; so merciful that he will not withhold any good thing from us. Who is able to fathom the depth of his mighty power, or scale the height of his glorious and eternal majesty? Can we thank him enough for what he has done, and should we not trust him for what he is willing to do for us?

Let us look back to Calvary and see the agonizing Savior when he cried in the anguish of his soul, "Eloi, Eloi, Lama Sabachthani." The sun hid his face in darkness and refused to look upon the scene. The Son of God suffered. A calm, peaceful voice is heard in the stillness of that terrible hour, "It is finished." The earth trembles, the rocks are rent, graves are opened, their dead come forth, and the price of man's redemption is fully paid. Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, — and why? That we should be called the Sons of God, and made heirs and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ, our Savior! He calls us no more servants, but sons. This explains to us the deep mystery, and opens before our vision the cause of the costly sacrifice. Is it not, indeed, marvelous, yea wonderful that the great King of Heaven should feel such an interest in us, as not to spare his own dear Son, but allow him to be derided, evil spoken of, mocked, scourged and smitten for our benefit?

Behold God's amazing love! O, my dear brother and sister, can we fully realize its great worth? Do we desire to abide in, and, reciprocate this great love? Do we appreciate it to such a degree that we are willing to make any sacrifice to abide in it?

Will we not keep our faces Zionward, our backs upon the beggarly elements of the world, and, like Paul, forget those things which are behind, and press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus?

O may it be our aim to love the Lord, our God, with all our heart, soul, strength and mind, and may we make it manifest to the world by doing his commandments! May our aspirations be to walk in newness of life, that we may have that peace of soul and mind that passeth all understanding. Let us cheerfully exemplify in our lives any sacrifice required of us, that we may inherit the blessedness of those who do his commandments, and have right to the tree of life, and enter through the gates into the city.

In this life we must endure tribulation, but we shall, in the end, inherit his kingdom. That home, reserved for us in heaven, will be none the less sure, while we are tabernacling here below, kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation. And even now, amid the gloom of this lower world, we can, as we advance toward the heavenly city, enjoy many a foretaste of its imperishable delights.

"O think of a home over there,
By the side of the river of light,
Where the saints all immortal and fair,
Are robed in the garments of white."

May it be the consummation of our hopes and aspirations to dwell in that "City of Light!"

BY WHAT ARE WE KNOWN?

BY JOHN KNISLEY.

"And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."—Rom. 12: 2.

NOTHING in the vegetable kingdom fails to show what it is by the bark, the leaf and the fruit. We often find all these fresh and green and no fruit, but we never find anything that bears fruit without bark and leaves. We may have form without fruit, but we can not have fruit without form.

Everything that grows is known by its outward appearance. If a tree has only the bark and bears no fruit, it must be grafted. If we are grafted on Christ we will bring fruit in accordance therewith. If we derive our nourishment from the Vine, we should never wish to change our appearance from that which Christ would have us be. The apostle tells us in 1 Pet. 1: 14, "As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance." As the church is the body of Christ, and we love that body, surely we should conform to the body we love best. The worldly people conform to the regulations of their organizations. Should not the members of the body of Christ be as true to their Master?

Christians are compared to sheep. A sheep's coat is always the same. You may take off a sheep's coat as often as you will, and it will grow out again just as before.

Some say, "We can have a sheep's coat and a wolf's heart." That may be the case, but I do not believe that we can have a sheep's heart and a wolf's coat, or, even, any desire for it.

O, my dear brethren and sisters, let us all have an humble heart; then our appearance will be likewise. We will all speak the same thing and work by the same rule. There will be neither small nor great, but all will be one in Christ.

COMMUNION WITH GOD.

BY I. N. CROSSWAIT.

To know, and to enjoy such a blessed existence, our lives must be truly "hid with Christ in God." The carnal mind must be subdued. Then, and not till then, we can realize the truth of Rom. 8: 9. Then can we look back on our past life and see clearly that we were "none of his." When I read Bro. Balsbaugh's article on the "Blood of the Lamb," I felt that he gave my experience better than I could tell it. Though I have not yet attained to the degree of perfection I should like, yet I realize that my "affections are on things above, not on things on the earth."

My heart's desire is to see all the children of God awakened to a full sense of their duty. How many are ready for the marriage supper of the Lamb? How great would be the loss, should we fail to be ready, because he delays his coming? We can not estimate the gain in being always ready,—the blessed state of a blissful waiting is heaven begun below. While we wait we can live in hope to see the bride, the Lamb's wife, become ready, adorned to receive the Bridegroom. It would be a source of great consternation to the bride, if the groom were to come unexpectedly, and find her unprepared to receive him. I am very fearful that she is inclined too much to other things, such as love of the world, the pride of life, etc.

When we are in constant communion with God, it causes a feeling of loathing for our former life of inconstant love. Spasmodic love is of no avail,—we must love as Christ loves us. Then, by an eye of faith, we can see him at the right hand of the Father, interceding for us. O let us try to realize the grief he suffers when his people turn aside from the narrow way he marked out, and go into worldly ways. It gives only sorrow; we must weep when we are brought to see ourselves. Then, why turn aside from the way in which we should go? We should always strive to walk in the path he trod.

I have seen a beautiful illustration of this. A little boy went out to follow his father in the snow. The father saw him following and asked him if the snow was not too deep for him to walk in? He said, "No; for I step in your tracks, father, and so I get along finely."

So we should be careful to step in the tracks of our Blessed Savior, and we may thus pass safely through all the cares and trials of life, if we follow closely. Then, in case of doubt arising, we can thrust our hand in his riven side, and thus banish all doubt.

I can not see how any one can have communion with God through the blood of the Lamb, and not urge the bride to make ready to receive her Lord. It is surely wise to be ready, and it is truly joyful to work and await his coming. It is sorrowful to a true believer to see lukewarmness in the love of the bride. O, that she may awake soon!

A PROPER COURSE.

BY W. R. DEETER.

SOME time ago I was in a large dry goods and clothing establishment. A sister was there also, purchasing a coat for herself. After looking at a number, two were brought out, the goods of which were the same, and just what she wanted, but there was a difference of two dollars in the price of them, owing to the extra trimming on the higher-priced one. There was not a particle of difference in the comfort to be derived from them, as the goods were the same throughout.

The sister purchased the cheaper one of the two, and invested the difference in the price by purchasing a dress pattern for a little orphan girl. This dress makes the little one comfortable and happy.

How much better it would be, were all professing people to adopt the same course! Millions of dollars are spent annually by church members for superfluities, that neither add to the comfort nor health of the body, and might be spent to gladden the hearts of the poor, and making them comfortable. Thus the donors might lay up for themselves treasures in heaven, that are incorruptible, undefiled and that fade not away!

WE do no shake off our yesterdays and sustain no further relation to them; they follow us, they constitute our life, and they give accent and force and meaning to our present deeds.—Joseph Parker.

SPIRITUAL STRENGTH.

GROWTH is gladdening. He who grows in holiness grows in joy. Spiritual strength brings gladness. It is a poor, half-hearted religion—not spiritual power, but the want of it—that breeds gloom. The consciousness that a man is becoming stronger in his faith, clearer in his convictions, warmer in his love, must, from its very nature, be a glad consciousness. And the hope of greater strength yet to be attained, of loftier heights yet to be reached, is more joyous still. A story is told of Thorwaldsen, the sculptor, that on one occasion when he was adding a few finishing touches to one of his master-pieces — a statue of Christ — a friend called upon him at his studio and found him in a very depressed and desponding mood. On inquiring the cause of this unusual and apparently untimely depression, the sculptor gave this singular answer — pointing to his work, he said, "I can see no fault in it; my genius is decaying; it is the first of my works that I have felt satisfied with."

SORROW.

THERE is a story told, that, in olden times, Artaxerxes and another were engaged in a furious fight. In the middle of the battle a sudden eclipse happened; and such was the horror of the warriors, that they made peace there and then. Oh, if an eclipse of trouble should induce men to ground arms, and seek to be reconciled to God! Sinners, you are fighting against God, lifting the arm of your rebellion against him. Happy shall you be if that trouble which is now fallen upon you should lead you to throw down the weapons of rebellion, and fly to the arms of God.—Sel.

IT is rough work that polishes. Look at the pebbles on the shore! Far inland where some arm of the sea thrusts itself deep into the bosom of the land, and expanding into a salt loch, lies girdled by the mountains, sheltered from the storms that agitate the deep, the pebbles on the beach are rough, not beautiful; angular, not rounded. It is where long white lines of breakers roar, and the rattling shingle is rolled along the strand, that its pebbles are rounded and polished. As in nature, as in art, so in grace; it is rough treatment that gives souls, as well as stones, their lustre. The more the diamond is cut, the brighter it sparkles; and in what seems hard dealing, there God has no end in view but to perfect his people.—Sel.

AN excellent trait in one's character is modesty. True greatness is real worth, and it is best seen in modest garb. Young says: "High worth is elevated place, and real worth is high place, and place without worth has in it nothing but emptiness." If one assumes to importance, it is sooner or later apparent whether he be important or not, for time and circumstances are tremendous tests of what is in a man, and sooner or later the mettle in him is tested, and if he is only gilded or nickel-plated, it will soon wear through and show the brass inside. "All is not gold that glitters," nor is all precious stone that sparkles.—Sel.

THE wheel of life whirls around, and we with it, expecting that the motion will some day slacken, and that then life may be ordered anew, and omissions may be made good. But real wisdom consists in seizing the flying moment, and in pressing upon it the seal of the eternal and the enduring; that is the great course of moral endeavor under which life receives its due form, like the block of marble under the hand of the sculptor.—Sel.

THE Conference of the Episcopal church, now in session in New York City, has under consideration the revision of their book of prayer; and the Presbyterian Council is discussing the revision of the Church Creed. Wouldn't it be just as well, while they are about it, to accept the Bible instead of patching up old men-made creeds?

IN a private letter Bro. James Neff says, "I am glad to be able to tell you that the Lord is now showing me how immeasurably he can bless me beyond what I deserve. My health seems perfect." We are glad to hear of our brother's improved health and we trust he may have many years of usefulness in the work of the Lord.

FROM Quincy, Ill., our dear old brother John Metzger writes, under date of the 14th, as follows: "Wife and I are now at this place, visiting my wife's children, where we expect to stay until Oct. 16, when we shall start for Nodaway County, Mo., to visit one of wife's daughters. There we intend to stay eight or ten days; then return to Quincy and attend the Communion meeting in Adams County, Illinois. We are well, thank the Lord."

BROTHER and sister Amick are now enjoying the delightful climate of Oceanside, Cal., about forty-five miles from San Diego. They will remain a short time at the former place, and then go to Ventura County to attend a love-feast with the Brethren there. They will then attend a love-feast at Covina, and expect to start Eastward about Dec. 1, stopping at several places in Kansas. We are glad to know that they are enjoying their visit to the Land of Flowers.

ON the part of some there seems to be a misapprehension as to the plan adopted by Annual Meeting for sending out the Minutes. The plan provides that they shall be distributed by the churches, and the expense of printing and mailing them is to be paid by the State District Treasurers. Bro. J. G. Royer, the Writing Clerk of our last Annual Meeting informs us that it costs about two cents per copy to print and mail the Minutes and in cases where individual churches have ordered them, they should send at the above rate to pay for them. He also says that those who have not paid for last year's Minutes, and there is quite a sum unpaid, should send the money to him at once.

ANY Minister or Editor who has no copy of the Hearing (of both sides) before the Senate's Labor Committee, on the proposed "Sunday Rest Law," a volume of 149 pages, can secure a free copy by sending his name and address at once to the Washington office of the American Sabbath Union, 1,101, K Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

DR. TALMAGE'S church, known as the Brooklyn Tabernacle, was destroyed by fire last week. The loss is placed at $150,000, and was fully covered by insurance. The congregation is one of the wealthiest in Brooklyn, and yet an appeal is made by the eloquent preacher, to all who read his sermons, to assist in raising an additional $100,000 to be used in rebuilding his church. There are places all over this land where the people would rejoice, if they could raise the one-hundredth part of the latter sum with which to build a house of worship.

TWO letters, recently received from missionaries, one laboring in the United States, the other in Denmark, give a striking example of the different ways men have of looking at things. The letter from the home missionary says, substantially: "Religion is at a low ebb here; but little interest is taken in the matter by the people; sin and wickedness abound; it is a hard place in which to work." The foreign missionary who had but recently gone to the island of Morso near Denmark, reported that the people are in darkness and that there is but little work being done for Christ. The place is full of wickedness and it is a splendid place to work in, because there is so much need of work. Which one of the missionaries took the right view of the case?

BRO. E. S. YOUNG and family have moved to Morgan Park, one of the suburbs of the city of Chicago. Bro. Young is taking a course of study in New Testament Greek and Hebrew at the University located at that place, to better fit himself for the important work of teaching the Bible. He assists in the work of preaching in Chicago, where his services are much needed. The little band in Chicago now numbers about forty members. They have raised among themselves about $700.00 towards purchasing or building a house of worship. The Northern District of Illinois is making an effort to raise the money to complete the work. We hope this will be done, and it will be if the brethren and sisters will all do as the woman did who cast her mite into the Lord's Treasury.

POST-MASTER GENERAL WANAMAKER is considering the question of Sunday work in the Postal Service of the United States, and it is to be hoped that he will succeed in his efforts to give the employees, in this department of the Government, Sunday as a day of rest. Among the reasons given, for stopping all Sunday work in the Mail Service, are the following:

1. Such work presents, on the part of the Government as a corporation and employer, a wrong example to other employers, in that it interferes with the right of employees to the weekly Rest Day and with their rights of conscience.

2. Such Sunday work in post-offices and mail cars is an infringement upon the reserved rights of the original States, all of which had laws against such Sunday work, and had no thought of giving Congress the right to break them.

3. Such Sunday work is inconsistent with the provision of the Constitution against a "religious test" in that the requirement of Sunday work practically excludes church goers from this branch of the public service and so breaks also another provision of the Constitution—that against interfering with "the free exercise of religion."

4. London and Toronto prove that dispensing with Sunday work in the postal service works no real hardship either in emergencies of sickness or business, all of which are provided for in the telegraph, whose Saturday and Monday messages take the place of the emergency letters in the Sunday mail.

We have received, and are receiving, many copies of the poem, entitled, "The Church Walking with the World," with requests that we publish it in the MESSENGER. It has already appeared in our church paper a number of times, but as there seems to be a general desire to have it appear again, we will give it a place as soon as we can find space for it. The poem teaches an important lesson.

We receive a number of personal appeals for help, with the request that we publish them in the MESSENGER. We can not do this according to the rule adopted with the advice of our Advisory Committee. It is this: "Publish no personal appeals for help." The reason for adopting this rule was apparent to us. A great many appeals had been published, and some help received, but the number increased so rapidly that it was simply impossible to give them all space. Letters were received, saying, "I see that many others are receiving help through the MESSENGER, and why not I the same?" The publishing of one appeal, and a favorable response to it, brought many more, and these again, in turn, brought others. The way it grew, made it absolutely necessary to adopt the above rule. We believe in helping the poor, and are always willing to do our part, and we are glad that the church has made provision for such help. Those who need help should call on their own church, and if the congregation is too weak to help them, call on surrounding churches in the State District. This rule will work well if carried out, and to it we refer those who have recently sent personal appeals with a request that they be published in the MESSENGER.

We are glad to note the continued good health of our dear old brother, B. F. Moomaw, of Virginia. He is now among the oldest brethren who took an active part in our Conferences nearly forty years ago. In 1853 he was appointed on a committee, composed of the following brethren, to whom was referred the slavery question, which, at that time, agitated the church: Joseph Arnold, Benjamin F. Moomaw, of Virginia; John M. Umstead, Isaac Price and David Bosserman, of Pennsylvania; and Daniel P. Saylor and Henry Koons, of Maryland. The report of this Committee, submitted in 1854, and adopted, is a credit to the Committee and an honor to the church. It shows that in the dark days of slavery, the conscience of the church was all right. We give the report in full:

Agreeable to the ninth query of yearly meeting of 1853, concerning slavery, the Committee appointed to report the same, have had this subject under serious consideration, in the fear of the Lord, and do report as follows:

1. Under no consideration can slavery be admitted into the church.

2. In all cases where a holder of a slave, or slaves, wishes to become a member in the church, he be required to manumit all his slaves before baptism, upon the following conditions: The males to go out free at the age of twenty-one, and the females at the age of eighteen years. All those over and above these ages, when manumitted are to be paid by their former owner such a sum, either in money or goods, as may be judged right in the church in which the case may occur, and which is considered the best judge, being acquainted with all the circumstances as a compensation for their service over age. This will enable the manumitted to migrate to a land of liberty, and will relieve the conscience of the liberator from the burden of taking with him to the bar of God the wages of oppression.

With the exception of Bro. Moomaw, the brethren whose names appear on this Committee have all gone to their rest, and so, one by one, the old soldiers of the cross are passing away, and the Lord is raising up other men to take up the work, as the old veterans are, one by one, taken home. If the testimony of the church in the future comes up to the high standard of right, taken on the slavery question in 1853, she will not get away from the Truth as it is in Jesus.

QUERISTS' DEPARTMENT.

Christ Coming in his Kingdom.—The Resurrected Saints—The Elect Sister.—Polling the Head.—Rebaptizing, etc., etc.

1. Will you please explain Mark 9: 1? When did the kingdom come with power?

ANS.—The Scripture referred to in the above query reads as follows: "And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power." Matthew gives these words, "Till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom." Matt. 16: 28. Luke 9: 27 gives the words in this simple form, "Till they see the kingdom of God." The language refers to the resurrection of Jesus and to the extension of his kingdom. The grave was not strong enough to hold the Redeemer of the world. He burst the bars of death and triumphed over the grave. Coming forth from the tomb was a wonderful manifestation of his power, and thus he came in his power. When he uttered these words he was in the midst of his disciples, and of that circle only two died before the resurrection; viz., the Master himself and Judas. But we may give the words a wider significance. At the time the Lord spoke these words his kingdom was obscure and despised. The Jews rejected, ridiculed and persecuted the Savior and his work. But while this was true, the time was not far distant when his kingdom would be established with great power. Some who stood with him that day should live to see the time when his kingdom or church, which was now small and despised, would be strongly established and wonderfully increased. Of the apostles who were there with him, all save Judas lived to see the three thousand added to the church in one day. Some of them lived to see Jerusalem and the Temple destroyed by Titus, and the Jews scattered, and John, the beloved disciple, lived to see the Gospel fully established in Asia Minor, Greece, Rome, and in many other parts of the world. It was to comfort the disciples and to establish them more fully that the Master gave them this prophecy, and many of them saw it literally fulfilled. Some hold that the language refers especially to the day of Pentecost, but the events of that day were only a part of the fulfillment of the words. The conversion of Paul was an instance of the power of the Lord, and the great labor of the converted persecutor in the mission field was one of the means God used to extend and establish the church.

2. "And the graves were opened and many bodies of the saints which slept arose." Matt. 27: 52. In what age of the world did those saints live that arose at that time? Can any one tell? A. FLORY.

ANS.—The only answer, in the absence of all Scripture information on the subject, that can be given to the above query is, No. Lange says: "It is perfectly useless to speculate on the age and number of these mysterious visitors from the spirit world. So much only appears certain to us that it was a supernatural and symbolic event which proclaimed the truth that the death and resurrection of Christ was a victory over death and the grave, and opened the door to everlasting life."

3. Please give explanation on the second epistle of John, 13th verse. "The children of thy elect sister greet thee. Amen." Who is the elect sister and who are the children? LUCINA SIMON.

ANS.—In the opening of this epistle the writer addresses the elect lady and her children, and closes with the words of the querist. Two views are held in regard to this language. The one is that the epistle was addressed to an individual and her children. The other is that it is addressed to one of the churches; Elect Lady being simply a designation by which the church was known to the apostle, and her children were, in that case, the members of the church. This view seems reasonable and explains at once the question asked above. Commentators, however, are divided on the question; some holding to the former, and others to the latter view.

1. "Neither shall they make bare their head, nor suffer their locks to grow long; they shall only poll their heads." Ezek. 44: 20. How had they to poll their head, or what does the word poll mean? A NEEDFUL QUERY. BELL.

ANS.—The custom of shaving the head prevailed among the idolatrous priests of Egypt, and the Buddhist priests followed the same custom. Under the Law the priests of Israel were forbidden to follow this custom of the heathen. "They shall not make any baldness upon their head, neither shall they shave off the corner of their beard." Lev. 21: 5. Ezekiel refers to this law in the language of the query. Instead of shaving the head they were to shear or clip the hair, not suffering their locks to grow long, the word poll, meaning to cut short, or clip the hair. Compare with this language Acts 18: 18. Paul had his head shorn or polished. See also 1 Cor. 11: 14.

SOUTHBEND, IND.

DEAR BRO.

Will you have the kindness to answer the following questions: (1) Do the Brethren receive into the church members who have been baptized in the church without rebaptizing them? (2) Do they allow members of other churches to sit at the Lord's table and wash feet with them? (3) Do they have any creed but the Bible? If so, what? (4) What is the authority in the Bible for the [illegible] answering these questions you will confer a favor upon one who is in the faith, and who is a [illegible] and constant reader of your valuable paper, and who is [illegible]

JOHN M. BRO....

ANS. 1. The Brethren do not receive immersed persons into the church without rebaptism, holding that baptism is only valid when preceded by Gospel faith. In Acts 19 we have twelve men rebaptized after they had been fully taught the faith. By one spirit we are all baptized into one body. 1 Cor. 12: 13.

2. The Brethren are known as Close Communionists, and only such, as have been by one spirit baptized into the body are held as having the right to partake of the ordinances of God's house as commanded in the Gospel and observed by the church.

3. The church recognizes no creed except the Gospel of Jesus Christ. To determine matters of church government, and the best means to carry out the spirit of the Gospel, an Annual Conference or Great Council is held. This Conference gives advice, makes decisions upon questions in regard to which difference of opinion may arise, and settles such difficulties as may arise in the churches that can not well be settled by the congregation and District in which the trouble arises. For authority for such councils see Acts 15.

For Scriptural authority for the prayer covering see 1 Cor. 11: 1-16. Here the apostle declares that it is a shame for a woman to pray or prophesy with her head uncovered. The church holds that this injunction of the apostle, given by inspiration, by the dictation of the Holy Ghost, should receive the same attention given to other commandments, and hence the sisters wear the prayer covering.

Missionary and Tract Work Department.

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor. 16: 2.

"Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give. Not grudgingly or of necessity, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor. 9: 7.

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." 2 Cor. 8: 12.

FUNDS—SYSTEM.

BY S. W. HOOVER.

THE Tract Work requires funds wherewith to meet the expenses for printing and distribution. Such funds are in almost all cases the easiest and most readily obtained by having a good system. System is absolutely necessary to the successful prosecution and furtherance of any work.

Business, requiring money, must have a system of finance, well adapted to its wants, both for collecting and disbursing, or it will fail. It is precisely so with the church's work. Where system is lacking, there will be a corresponding failure to success, and, besides it, disorder, confusion and lack of interest and energy. In order, therefore, to a practical use in, and union of, all interests in church work, there must be system. It can not be said that either the church as a body or any individual member of it, is not, more or less, intereated in it financially. See 1 Cor. 6: 2. System means control; hence is not only practical but comprehensive.

Local churches having good systems by which to raise money for the support and furtherance of missionary and tract work, find it comparatively easy to regularly and frequently raise and contribute large sums, whilst those having either a very poor system or scarcely observing any at all, find it both difficult and unsatisfactory. The same will apply to the raising of funds for other church purposes, in a great measure including those of necessity. Again, where there is little or no system observed in a church, financially, it will also appear that the ministry are neglectful, and that there is little or no teaching by them in these matters. Local churches, however, having once a good system of finance adopted, make instruction, comparatively, both easy and practical for the minister. No system, rule or order of business, however simple or elaborate, can be effectual unless it is lived up to, and no matter whether the failure to do so is due to neglect or arises from any other cause or causes, the result is nevertheless the same.

The most effectual interests are those best served. None are so promising and none so great as those of the church and his, whose cause we have espoused, and hence should have the very best system of business and order in every department of its organization, financial and spiritual. System means regulation, control, success!

Permit us to urge local churches to contribute liberally to the "Work." How many new ones will we be permitted to enroll this year?

GOD'S WORD.

BY W. H. ROOSE

"And upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Matt. 16: 18.

THERE have been times in the history of Christianity when the church of Christ was not visible to the world. Persecution drove the faithful followers of Christ into the wilderness. They were often compelled to seek safety in dens and caves. The fires of persecution never totally destroyed the seed that "contended for the faith once delivered unto the saints." Somewhere there was a remnant to inspire and enlighten "honest truth-seekers," only to meet their fate at the stake, or suffer the tortures of a slow but sure death in the gloom of prison cells. It seems that many times the people offered prizes on ignorance Education and truthfulness were at a discount. Though the true light seemed almost extinguished, yet the leaven was working somewhere in the hearts of men. There may have been a score of years, at a single time, when there was no assembly of people that practiced the ordinances as they were delivered, but some may have believed in them nevertheless. As long as the Truth is in existence, there will be men to believe it.

The church of the Living God has been variously prefigured. Once we have it in the figure of the Ark, and once in that of the Temple. Paul says we are the Temple of God, the habitation of God through the spirit. Those who have the Kingdom of Heaven within their own hearts he calls "lively stones." One man does not constitute the Temple alone, but each child, that is born of God, is a part of the structure. It took many years to build Solomon's Temple, so the Temple of God,—the church,—will not be finished until Christ shall come in the cloudy chariot to take vengeance on those that obey not his words. The Temple we are speaking of is composed of spirits, not bodies It is a spiritual building, not a visible one, though the bodies, or caskets that enshroud the sanctified soul are used as agents in the consummation of the divine plan, or in perfecting the church of the Living God.

There is no salvation outside of the church of the Living God, and men or women that enter the saved state have their names enrolled in the Lamb's Book of Life. The stones from which the Temple was built, were prepared before they were put to their places; so with the spiritual temple. The spiritual part of man must undergo a change. Then it is ready to become a part of the Kingdom of God, and not before. There must be a fitting before a putting in place. Were we to draw an inference from the past records of the Christian church, we would be forced to the conclusion that many people have been trying to find a place in which to fit themselves, or to have some one fit them, but have never yet found a place that was in any way suited to them. Allegorically speaking, they wanted to be somewhere in a conspicuous place,—there or nowhere.

The organization of a church or assembly of believers does not imply salvation, yet it is essential to their spiritual welfare. Christ organized or established a church with members, laws and ordinances. He undoubtedly considered it necessary to unify the saints, encourage one another and help build one another up in the most holy faith. This being true, all those, whose spirits are built in the Temple of God, desire the companionship of one another. We know whether we are born of God or not, because the spirit of God bears witness with our spirits that we are the children of God, and, if children of God, we are heirs of God, and co-heirs with Jesus Christ, and are in the family of God. Many men have not been able to decide which was the family of God until they have made a diligent search and study of the Word of God, when at last they were fully convinced that such a church was the true one.

Brethren and sisters, let us ask ourselves, "Are we children of God, growing in grace and in the knowledge of the Truth?" Christ is the Vine and God the husbandman, or vine dresser. Christ is the Rock upon which all the redeemed are built,—they that hear Christ's sayings and do them. Schismatic principles and influences are the shoals and quicksands that draw the poor, deluded wanderer into the inevitable vortex of skepticism and infidelity.

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—Under date of Oct. 14, Bro. Geo. L. Studebaker, of Shideler, Ind., writes: "We closed our meetings in the Clear Creek church, Huntington Co., Ind., Oct. 10, with three additions. At this writing wife and I are with the Brethren in the Middle District church, Miami Co., Ohio. May God bless our labors!"

—From the Iowa River church, Iowa, Bro. Fetter Hall writes: "Our council was held Oct. 12. There was a good deal of business before the meeting, but everything passed off very pleasantly. Love and union seem to prevail. We expect to have a series of meetings in the near future. This is enough to make God's children rejoice!"

—Sister Susan M. Rhodes, of Ashland, Oregon, writes: "As we are commanded to ask for the prayers of the brethren and sisters in our afflictions, I would ask the intercessions of all in behalf of sister Van Horn, of our congregation. The hand of affliction is resting heavily upon her, and she feels that nothing but the mercy of the Most High will avail in her time of trouble. Brethren, pray, that, if it be the Lord's will, she may be spared a few more years."

—Under date of Oct. 14, Bro. Jacob Kintner, of the Maumee church, Defiance Co, Ohio, writes: "Our Communion meeting was one long to be remembered. There were members here from eight different congregations. Brethren J. H. Miller, Henry Frantz, Samuel Loose, and other speakers, from adjoining churches, were present, and helped to make an interesting meeting. Three souls were baptized,— all young mothers of families from other denominations. Brethren, pray for them!"

—Sister Charity White sends a short article, commendatory of the various essays on the "Prayer Covering," by sisters Gertrude A. Flory, Lizzie Miller, Sarah M. Saunders, etc., published in these columns during the last few months. Sister White says in conclusion: "Do you think, dear sisters, that the guardian angel will keep us in the way of rectitude, if we neglect to wear this power upon our heads, as commanded? I think not. Sometimes, I fear, there are things done by our sisters, which they would not do, if they were strictly in line of Gospel precepts, as observed by our Brotherhood. There is a safety in obedience to God's commands, for which we seek in vain elsewhere."

—Writing from Osceolo, Mo., under date of Sept. 8, Bro. J. A. Yost sends the following: "Our Communion was a feast to the soul. About fifty members communed. Brethren J. L. Jordan and T. J. Allen came to our assistance and labored faithfully for the cause. Bro. Jordan has moved among us, and expects to labor here. We expect Bro. C. M. Yearout to hold a series of meetings for us this fall. Three were added to our number by baptism, two by letter, and several wanderers were restored. May the Lord still continue to bless us!"

—Bro. N. S. Dale, of Cornell, Ill., writes: "Our Communion meeting, which was held Oct. 5, was a feast to the soul. Eld. Stauffer remained with us over a week, preaching every night to both saint and sinner, pointing them to the Lamb of God. One dear sister was added to the church by baptism. During the meetings we also had an election for brethren in the ministry and the deacon's office. Bro. C. B. Smith was called to the ministry, and I. I. Vandree to the office of deacon. May God bless those brethren in their new calling and give them many useful years in his service!"

—Sister Mary Weybright, in a short communication, regrets that our ministering brethren do so little work in the South. She says at the close: "We, as a church, will surely be held responsible for our neglect to improve the great opportunity presented to us in this Southern field. How can we be at ease, when souls are starving all around us? Many of our ministering brethren who can not stand the cold winters at the North, might spend the winters in the South to good advantage, and do a great work. Those who have not the means, could be assisted. Who is there that would not help in so great a work? Let all do what they can, and we will succeed."

—Under date of Oct. 12, sister Sarah A. Miller, of Lewistown, Ohio, writes: "The members of the Logan church, Logan Co., Ohio, held their feast Oct. 10. We had an excellent meeting,—we felt that it was good for us to be there. It was like heavenly manna coming from above. Several brethren from abroad were with us. It does us much good to have brethren and sisters come to visit us. It is encouraging to see them stand up and contend so earnestly for our most precious faith. There was one dear sister received by baptism on the day of meeting, making five received this summer. Two of the number are quite old in years, but could not stay outside of the church any longer. Our Sunday-school closed Sept. 29. We had a good, successful school all summer, and hope to organize again in the spring."

—Sister Ellen Bidinger, of Accident, Md., writes: "Dear brethren and sisters, all you who are heads of families, would it not be well for you to erect a family altar, or will you let the world excel you in this important matter? I hope we will try and so live that the world can see that we are Christians. Let us show by our daily conduct that we have been at the feet of Jesus and have learned in his school to be humble. I think it is a poor Christianity that does not make itself felt. It will not do for us, who are to be a separate and peculiar people, to take part in gatherings that are not at all Christ-like. If we make a loud profession and fail to live it out, the world will have occasion to say we are hypocrites. Let us be very careful to adorn the doctrine of Christ in all we do and say. The world is watching us, though we may not know it. Paul tells his Corinthian brethren that they are known and read of all men. 2 Cor. 3: 2. We, also, who profess to be the branches of the True and Living Vine, should ever try to be the epistles of Christ!"

—Under date of Oct. 16, Bro. G. W. Gibson, of Litchfield, Ill., writes: "I have just finished the first one of a twelve days' journey by private conveyance. This trip is made more especially for the purpose of distributing tracts. I find opportunities, for doing that work, far above my expectations. Last night I met with the young members of this place, who only recently united with the church, and joined them in their prayer-meeting services. These members are only from seven to thirteen years of age, and my heart is filled with joy to see the faith, zeal, and Christian fortitude they manifest. Just think of children, of that age, taking active part in prayer-meeting, and witnessing for Jesus!"

—Under date of Oct. 14, Bro. G. M. Throne, of the Maple Grove church, Norton Co., Kans., writes: "Our love-feast was held on the evening of Oct. 12. Our series of meetings commenced on Friday evening before, and continued over Sunday. Ministers present from adjoining churches were brethren John Ikenberry, from Quinter, Kans., and Jacob Nofsinger and Lomax Miller, from Nebraska. They fed us richly from the Word of God. Our feast was very enjoyable, and will long be remembered by all. We were made to rejoice to see two of our Sunday-school scholars unite with us by baptism. We expect Bro. Ikenberry to be with us some time this fall, to hold a series of meetings, with the hope of reviving the church, and adding some lambs to the fold. May the Lord help us in our efforts!"

☞Church News solicited for this Department. If you have had a good meeting, send a report of it, so that others may rejoice with you. In writing give name of church, county and State. Be brief! Brevities.

THE Olathe church has enjoyed another pleasant Communion season. The ministerial force was ample. Eld. Andrew Neher, from Cherokee County, officiated. One was added to the fold by baptism.

A few days after our feast, a number of the Olathe members boarded the train to attend the feast of the Wade Branch church, which was held in Forest Park, at Ottawa, the place where our Annual Meeting was held in 1887. The meeting passed off with excellent order. A number of ministers from surrounding churches were present and helped to make the meeting interesting and profitable. Eld. James Hilkey took the lead at this meeting. The church needing workers in the deacon's office, choice was made of brethren Jacob Brunk, John Cober and Louis Buckelew, and they were installed into their offices. Bro. Daniel Longenecker was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. We hope they will be a power for good to the church.

Not long since the writer was called to the above place to hold a meeting and baptize an aged man. There are but few members living in, or near Ottawa, but the prospect is good for an ingathering. They are now arranging to hold a series of meetings.

Sept. 30, wife and I left home to fill a call made by the Cherokee church, Cherokee Co., Kans., for a series of meetings. We met in worship each evening until Oct. 7th, during which time their feast was held. A number of the adjoining ministers and members were present. About one hundred members communed. During their meeting, this church also made choice of brethren N. S. Gripe, —— Housworth and Daniel Wolf as servants of the church in the deacon's office. I trust those brethren are imbued with the spirit of the Master and will be a power for good to the cause of Christ. Three were added to the church by baptism. The church in Cherokee County is alive to the good cause, and we see nothing to prevent her from greatly enlarging her number both by baptism and immigration. They have a goodly land and many advantages not found farther West.

This church has no meeting-house, and to supply this lack, the brethren met Oct. 2, and hauled posts and poles from the timber. They put up a shed, 16x56 feet, and boarded it up, excepting at one end. They then covered it with slough grass. While worshiping in this humble temple, my mind was carried back to the wealthy congregations with their large meeting-houses, but, after thinking over many good meetings we have enjoyed, I must confess I never attended one that excelled this one for brotherly love. The Spirit of Christ truly, was manifest. I pray that we may so live as to enjoy that grand reunion on the other side of the chilly stream, where all will have good accommodations.

If the Lord will, the writer expects to labor in the mission field most of the fall and winter. The calls are many, and I am often made to weep, because I can not do more for the advancement of Christ's kingdom. ISAAC H. CRIST.

Oct. 5, we held our love-feast at the Brick church, Floyd Co., Va. We had a very large attendance. Over four hundred members communed. One brother was born unto the church by baptism. Elders Isaac and Griffith Reid, of Pleasant Valley church, and Wm. Noff and S. G. Spangler, of Red Oak Grove church were the only visiting ministers present, excepting Bro. F. M. Coulson of Carroll County, who belongs to our congregation, but lives a distance of twenty-five miles from us. All the above did efficient work during the meeting.

The subject under consideration on Sunday was, "For God so loved the world," etc.

When we consider God's love as manifested towards the human family, we are made to realize the fact that it is unlimited and unbounded. One brother said "God's love to us is a measured love." We recognize the fact, as it has been demonstrated in different dispensations of the world, yet we can never fully realize the magnitude of that love while in this tabernacle of flesh. But if we are so fortunate as to get to heaven, there to enjoy what God has prepared for his people, we will more fully realize what God's love is.

BRO. Joel Glick, of Mound City, Mo., came to our place on Sunday, Sept. 22, and delivered a funeral discourse at 11 o'clock in the Presbyterian church. Although the deceased was a child only seven months old, there was a large concourse of sympathizing relatives and friends at the funeral. At night we met again, and had a large and attentive congregation.

Bro. Joel is very earnest in his preaching. He encouraged the few members at this place, and warned those, out of the ark of safety, to be reconciled to God before it is too late!

On Monday, Bro. J. S. Mohler, of Morrill, Kans., came to us, but as it rained in the afternoon, and the nights were dark, we did not have preaching on that evening. On Tuesday night we had preaching, and then continued the meetings until Sunday night, Sept. 29. We, as well as the angels of heaven, rejoiced to see one dear brother come out on the Lord's side.

On Monday morning we met at Bro. Frederick Garst's and had services; then went to the riverside where prayer was wont to be made, and the brother was baptized into Christ. Our prayer is that he may grow in grace and in the knowledge of God!

We were very sorry that Bro Mohler could not stay longer, as the meetings were growing in interest, and I think there were others near the kingdom. We appreciate his labor of love, and hope it will not be long, until he can come back and hold a series of meetings for two or three weeks.

Our Sunday-school, which was re-organized April 7th with Henry Orr, Superintendent, and an able corps of officers and teachers, closed Sept. 29. We had good attendance all summer, both by old and young, and we do hope that good results may grow out of our Sunday-school, though we can not see the final end now. Our school closed with the regular lesson, and several essays, read by some of the attendants. We also had an address by our Superintendent and by Bro. D. D. Sell. We have organized a prayer-meeting and Bible class, to meet every Wednesday night during the winter.

McPherson Notes.

Our love-feast was held at the East McPherson church Oct. 12 and 13th. We have, in our congregation, a meeting-house about nine miles west of the City, and one the same distance east, and have been holding our love-feasts in both these houses, as well as in the college, alternately. Our meetings were characterized by the unity of the spirit and the deep solemnity that prevailed.

We have been favored by a large number of visitors, recently, who availed themselves of the last harvest excursion to see the West. Among the visitors were brother and sister Bowman and sister Kuns, of Cerro Gordo, Ill; Bro. Swigart, of Astoria, Ill.; sister Eby, of Lena, Ill.; brother and sister Dierdorff, of Franklin Grove, Ill.; sister Yarger; brother and sister Reber, of Waterloo, Iowa, and others. All visited the school and seemed to take a deep interest in the exercises. We are much encouraged to see such a general interest manifested in the education of our young people, and that the religious training should be the leading one in our schools. Bro. Levi Eby and wife also paid us a visit and took in the entire school. Both having taken a course of instruction in one of our Brethren's schools, were prepared to judge of the merits of our school. We might also add that the advantages they enjoyed in a Brethren's school have made both of them more efficient workers in the church, as it will every one who comes into one of our schools with the right spirit.

We are gratified to hear of the progress at the school at Bridgewater, Va, at Huntingdon, Pa., and Mt. Morris, Ill. Our aim is one, and "if one be honored, all rejoice with it."

By Telegram.

ON Saturday, Oct. 19, wife and self were called to Nora, Ill., to attend the funeral of our esteemed sister Carolina Moore. By 10 o'clock on Sunday morning a large number of Brethren and friends had gathered, to follow to her last resting-place, one,—a wife, mother, sister in Christ,—dearly loved by all. The occasion was improved by a very appropriate and instructive sermon, preached by Bro. Allen Boyer from Rom. 6: 23. To the Christian

"Death is the crown of life!
Were death denied, poor man would live in vain;
Were death denied, to live would not be life:
Were death denied, ev'n fools would wish to die."
—Young.

The deceased, a daughter of Eld. Isaac Myers, was born in Union County, Pa., Feb. 2, 1830, and died Oct. 18, 1889, aged fifty-nine years, eight months and sixteen days. She was married at the residence of her father, to Wm. K. Moore, Dec. 4, 1856. Bro. Moore and family moved to Northern Illinois in 1869. Two children, Emma and Kelly, were born to them. Emma died at the same hour of the same day of the same month (Oct. 18) nine years ago. Kelly and his father survive the mother and the daughter. There are two thoughts which should occur to every serious mind when in the presence of a community assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to the departed. The one is the influence which the community, as a whole, exercises upon every individual member of it; the other is the influence which the individual may exercise, and, at least, some do exercise upon the sentiments and character of the community as a whole.

It is right that we ask ourselves, "What have I done,—What am I doing to lift up the church,—the community in which I live?" Eternity alone will reveal to what extent the departed Christian has been a factor to mould for good the sentiments of the community in which he lived.

J. G. ROYER.

Messages Dropped by the Way.

THE love-feast, Oct. 5, in the Novelty congregation, Northern Missouri, was a meeting long to be remembered. The work in this mission field of North-eastern Missouri is prospering finely. On the second day of the meeting at Cherry Box, one precious soul came out on the Lord's side, and, on the third day, two more,—all heads of families.

The meetings at Millport, Knox County, did not continue long enough to produce visible results. They were occasioned by a three days' delay on the part of my co-laborer (Bro. C. Lapp), who was to meet me there, and accompany me to Clark County, whither we went to develop the grand opening made last June. While there were no additions at the time, many encouraging features lead us to hope that many will verify their promise to come soon.

The sure evidence of interest in the work here is the attendance of the older people, especially, and the constant increase of attendance, crowding the house to its utmost capacity.

For the benefit of Brethren, passing this way, over the Chicago and Santa Fe Route, we would state that Kahoka is the station six miles north of the place of meeting, and, by addressing Richard Rose or John Goodman, at Hope, Mo, you will be met at Kahoka, and find an attentive audience assembled to hear you.

I am now en route for home, being distant about two hundred miles from the cluster of Northern Missouri congregations. C. C. ROOT.

Hudson Happenings.

WE have just enjoyed a very pleasant season of spiritual refreshing. Our little church convened on the evening of Oct. 12, to commemorate the death and sufferings of Christ. The weather was all that could be desired. We were gladdened by the presence of brethren P. S. Myers and wife, P. A. Moore and wife, J. J. Kindig and wife, and others from adjoining churches. Bro. P. S. Myers officiated. The best of order was maintained by the spectators. The remarks made at the examination services, and throughout the following services were well calculated to prepare the minds of the members for the spiritual repast, designed to produce a growth in grace.

Sunday morning, at 10 o'clock, our Sunday-school children and others convened for "Children's Meeting." The devotional exercises were opened by Bro. Charles Penske. Bro. J. J. Kindig then addressed the meeting for about forty minutes to the satisfaction of all. At 11 o'clock Bro. P. S. Myers preached to a goodly audience with power, and again in the evening, in such a way that he made many friends Bro. P. A. Moore preached on Monday evening, and gave us great encouragement from the words of David, Ps. 46, "There is a river the streams of which make glad the City of our God." Thus ended one of the best meetings it has been our lot to enjoy. One thing we regret,—that the appointment of our meeting was of such short notice, that several of the members did not know of it. Hereafter we will try to have it inserted in the GOSPEL MESSENGER at least three times. THOS. D. LYON.

JAMES 4: 14 says: "What is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." This Scripture was very forcibly brought to my mind yesterday, when wife, two small children and I, started to go to town. Just as we started, the team became frightened, ran a few rods, and finally upset the wagon in making a turn. Wife and I were unconscious for some time. Sister Crist is suffering from a dislocated shoulder and a severe shock to the nervous system. I sustained a few severe bruises, but hope to engage in the mission work again before long. We have great reason to thank the Giver of good, that we escaped as well as we did.

Sinner, do you realize that your life is only as a vapor, and may vanish in a moment? Why do you not prepare for the life to come, and then, when death comes, you will realize what it is to be ready!

We are in the midst of a series of meetings at our home school-house. We hope our meetings will result in good to ourselves, and to the glory of God. J. H. CRIST.

From Middletown, Mo.

WIFE and I left our home near Middletown, Mo., for Morgan County, Mo., arriving safely at Bro. David Bowman's, where we were kindly received. We attended a series of meetings, held in the Prairie View church, conducted by Bro. F. Culp, of Johnson County, Mo. We remained there until after the love-feast, which occurred Sept. 10. While there, wife identified herself with the church. After the love-feast we took our leave of the brethren and sisters and arrived home safely.

One week later, Bro. David Bowman came to us and held a series of meetings. He preached the Word with great power, remaining with us until Oct. 14, preaching, in all, twenty-five sermons. As an immediate result of his labors, seven were brought to the fold of Christ Many others were almost persuaded. A good interest was manifested throughout the entire meeting. One old sister, eighty-two years old, came forward and was baptized. The youngest received was seventeen years old. I hope the good news of salvation may be spread until many thousands, that now know not the Truth, are brought to the cross of Christ! H. K. GARBER.

From Limestone, Tenn.

TUESDAY, Sept. 24, I left home in company with Eld. E. Newcomer, of Jefferson County, for the Flat Rock church, Ashe Co, N. C., to attend our District Conference, distant from here about eighty miles. In Jonesboro, our County-seat, I met Bro. J. H Moore, of Waycross, Ga, who had just arrived on the morning train to attend the meeting. Business detained him for a day or two. Not knowing the meeting was so remote from the railroad, and his time being limited, he could not attend the meeting.

Wednesday morning about sixteen brethren and one sister were on their way to the old North State. In the evening we reached the little band of members in Johnson County, Tenn., where an appointment had been made for preaching in the Methodist church. Bro. Newcomer did the preaching. We have only a few members living here, with one preacher, Bro. Melvin Crosswhite. One of his children being very sick, he could not go with us to the meeting

On Thursday, after a drive of twenty-seven miles among the mountains, we arrived at the place of meeting. This was the first District Meeting ever held in the State, but the brethren and sisters had all things in order. Our meeting commenced Friday morning The congregations were not all represented by delegates, and several not even by letter. As this is the extreme eastern border of our District, there was not much business before the meeting, and it was disposed of satisfactory to all The utmost unanimity seemed to prevail throughout the whole meeting. One query goes to Annual Meeting, with regard to a change in the time of beginning Annual Meeting, thinking that a change from Friday to Monday would dispense with so much Sunday traffic, excursions, etc. Bro. Joseph B. Bowman was chosen a member of Standing Committee to next Annual Meeting.

The Brethren had their love-feast Friday night. We deferred a part of our District matter until Saturday morning. The feast was one that will never be forgotten. After a short session on Saturday, the remainder of the day was spent in preaching. We had three sermons on Saturday. On Sunday morning all left except brethren G. C. and S. J. Bowman, who staid to preach on Sunday and Sunday night. We stopped on our return with the Brethren in Johnson County, where we had meeting again at the same place as before. The people seemed anxious to hear the Word preached.

I can not close without expressing my thanks to the brethren, sisters and citizens of Flat Rock and vicinity, for their kindness and hospitality shown us while there. We hope the Lord will reward them! We arrived home on Tuesday and found all well. Thanks to the Giver of all good!

F. D. REED.

From the Spring Creek Church, Kosciusko Co, Ind.

Our love-feast occurred Oct. 11 and a feast of love it was to our souls. Quite a good many of God's children came to us from adjoining churches, and partook with us of the emblems of the broken body of our Lord Jesus Christ. Though the ministerial force was not so large as at some former times, we had a very good meeting, and the very best of order. One dear sister made application to be received into the church by baptism, which was attended to with much joy. We hope she may prove to be a shining light in the church, so that others may see her good works and thereby be constrained to follow her pious example.

We also held an election for two deacons. It so happened that three brethren received nearly the same number of votes, and it was thought best to let all stand. The lot fell on brethren Isaac Connell, Aaron Mishler, and John Ross. These brethren are good workers in the church, and we hope they may all prove faithful to their high calling!

The Spring Creek church is now in fair working order, and we hope soon to be able to give other encouraging reports. E. MILLER.

From Cartersville, Va.

Once more we feel to thank the Lord! Bro. E. L. Brower, of Waynesborough, Va., came Sept. 27, and remained until Oct. 7th. His wife accompanied him and we enjoyed their visit very much. The words of encouragement will long be remembered. We have much to be thankful for. How happy would we be, if we had Bro. Brower, or some one like him, to remain with us and cheer us on our pilgrimage!

During our meetings we sang the sweet words, "God be with you till we meet again" We may never have the pleasure of meeting here again. God only knows! But if we never meet again while here below, we can surely meet again at the feet of Jesus, on the great Judgment Day, never to part again.

We expect to hold our love-feast Nov 9 and trust all will be with us that can We trust the good seed, sown by Bro. Brower, will bring forth a rich harvest and that, in due time, he may reap a glorious reward for his labor. May we apply a part of his brotherly admonition to ourselves! FLORIDA J. E ETTER.

From the Pine Creek Congregation, Ind.

Our love-feast was held Oct. 9. We had a pleasant meeting. Our large and commodious house was filled to its utmost capacity. About four hundred members were seated at the tables. A number of our adjoining brethren and sisters were with us. Bro. Daniel Wysong, of Nappanee, Ind., officiated. He was assisted by the adjoining elders and ministers, including James Miller, Daniel Whitmer, Thurston Miller, Hiram Krieghbaum, and a number of others. We rejoiced when, during the afternoon exercises, four applicants presented themselves for baptism.

On the next morning after our pleasant feast we held an election for two deacons, which resulted in the choice of brethren William Baughman and Judson Beck. May these brethren be faithful in their important position! Bro. Daniel Whitmer officiated in the installation.

Eight souls have been received by baptism quite recently. Our church is moving along slowly, but the outlook seems favorable, for which we thank the Lord! Our dear old elder, David Rupel, is still able to be with us, and does some preaching. Bro. Knisley also has the same zeal he always had for the good cause! May the Lord bless those old soldiers!

Bro. JOHN SAYLOR, father, and I, left our homes Tuesday evening, Sept. 24, for the District Meeting to be held in Flat Rock church, Ashe Co., N. C.

Traveling the entire distance on horseback, across creeks, mountains, and rivers, we arrived at the church on Thursday evening, Sept. 26. Next day we met a goodly number of the brethren and sisters from far and near, and, after an organization was effected, letters were read from the various congregations, expressing fraternal love and peace with the General Brotherhood. There was but little business to come before the meeting. A Communion was held on Friday night, Sept. 27.

After enjoying a few meetings with them, we turned our faces homeward on Sunday morning, Sept. 29 We were sorry to bid farewell to our brethren and sisters, whose acquaintance we formed during the meeting. The meeting was marked with good order and attention, and all seemed to enjoy the services. We reached home Oct. 1, and found all well, thank the Lord! CHAS T. CAREY.

Literary Notes.

MRS HARRIET BEECHER STOWE is passing down the declivity of a revered old age. She has finished her literary labor—a noble work, such as few have ever equalled. As a memorial of her worth in the literary world, and for the benefit of those who may wish to learn much of her character and writings at small cost of time and money, a book has been written by Florine Thayer McCray, and will soon be published by Funk & Wagnalls, of New York. It is entitled "The Life Work of the Author of Uncle Tom's Cabin." The writer, who is a personal friend of Mrs. Stowe, received permission two years ago to write this work from both Mrs. Stowe and her son, Rev. C. E Stowe, and received valuable assistance from them and other members of the family. It is to be finely illustrated, and contains about 450 pages. We are informed that, while this work dwells at some length on the history of "Uncle Tom's Cabin"—that master-piece which thrilled the world and contributed so largely toward the overthrow of American slavery—it also gives an interesting account of Mrs. Stowe's habits, travels, methods of work, and reviews and commentaries upon the numerous other books that fell from her facile pen. The forthcoming work, to be ready in October, is bound to have a wide circulation. Look out for it.

PRATT.—At the Brick church, Floyd Co., Va., Oct. 4, Clara, infant daughter of Bro. George and sister Emma Pratt.

Little Clara was a very intelligent child of not quite 4 years of age. She often told her mother how she would help her when she got larger, but the Good Master called her home, and now, perhaps, she will help her mother to love Jesus more, and finally go to heaven and spend an eternity with her angel daughter. Funeral by the Brethren from 2 Cor. 5: 1.

WEDDLE.—In the Brick church congregation, Floyd Co, Va., Sept. 26, sister Mary Weddle, wife of Bro. Samuel Weddle, aged 63 years and 2 months.

The deceased was a daughter of the late Eld. Christian Bowman. She had been a member of the Brethren church for about forty-two years. For the last few years she was a great sufferer but was never heard to murmur over her afflictions. Funeral services by the Brethren from Rev. 14: 13

C. D. HYLTON.

RUPERT.—In the Rockton congregation, Clearfield Co., Pa, Aug. 19, of spinal disease, Emma, daughter of Bro. and sister Canada Rupert, aged 3 years, 3 months and 17 days. Services by the writer.

ALBRIGHT.—At the "Aged Person's Home, of the German Baptist Brethren's Church," Henry Co., Ind, Oct. 9, Mary E. Albright, aged 75 years, 8 months and 10 days.

Deceased leaves three children. Five children preceded her in death. The funeral services were conducted by Bro. David Replogle, of Rogersville, and Bro. Lewis Kinsey, of Hagerstown, Ind. Her body was laid to rest in the Brethren's graveyard, two and one-half miles east of Middletown, Ind.

GEO. L. JENNINGS.

ULERY.—In the North Fork church, Carroll Co, Ind., Aug. 23, sister Hannah Ulery, aged 50 years, 4 months and 20 days.

Deceased was born in Tippecanoe County, Ind. She was the daughter of Samuel Studebaker and had been married three times. She was the mother of nine children, of whom seven are yet living. She died, surrounded by those whom she loved, and on the farm where she had lived for so many years. With a Christian spirit she administered to the wants and necessities of those around her, and many were the kind acts that were administered by those charitable hands that now lie cold in death. Funeral services by Eld. S. H. Saylor. ISAAC WAGONER.

MILLER.—At Rome City, Ind, Oct. 4, William A. Miller, aged 50 years, 6 months and 11 days. Funeral services by the writer, in the M. E. church, from 2 Kings 20: 1. May the blessing of our Father in heaven rest upon the bereaved wife and children. J. H. CRUME.

YOUNG.—Near Rocky Mount, Franklin Co., Pa., Abraham, son of John Young, aged 3 years. Funeral services to a large congregation by Eld. John O. Boon.

JAMES F. LUKE.

FESLER.—In the Oak Grove congregation, Johnson Co., Iowa, Oct. 2, sister Frances Fesler, aged 77 years and 8 months.

Sister Fesler was a member of the Brethren church for about thirty-five years. She was the mother of nine children, three sons and six daughters, all of whom are left to mourn the loss of a kind, affectionate mother, but they mourn not without hope, for their loss is her gain. She often expressed a desire to be with her Savior. She was a zealous, working Christian and always ready to work in the Master's vineyard. The poor and needy always found in her a friend, ready to minister to their wants. The church loses a bright and shining light, and truly may it be said, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord, that they may rest from their labor and their works do follow them." Services by Eld. John Funk to a very large congregation of sorrowing friends.

M. B. CLINE.

STUDEBAKER.—In the Hickory Grove church, Miami Co., Ohio, Aug. 22, of cholera infantum, Paul, infant son of Bro. Samuel and sister Anna Studebaker, aged 5 months and 24 days.

May our brother and sister realize that they now have one more treasure in heaven. May death's first and sad visitation to their quiet and happy family be the means of bringing them closer to their Savior Funeral occasion improved by the writer, from Matt 18: 3 D. S FILBRUN.

ROSE.—Near Hicksville, Ohio, Oct. 13, of rheumatism and dropsy, sister Sophia Rose, aged 69 years, 6 months and 28 days.

Deceased was the daughter of Eld Jacob Sommers, and united with the Brethren church when about seventeen years old.

LYDIA DELL.

WORST.—In Dry Fork church, Jasper Co., Mo., sister Emma A. Worst, wife of Bro. Samuel Worst, aged 27 years, 9 months and 28 days.

Her husband has lost a true companion, and her children, five in number, have lost a good, kind and faithful mother. She was respected by all who knew her. Funeral services by the Brethren. W. N. HARVEY.

GUMP.—At Cedar Creek, Ind., Oct. 11, Jeremiah, son of Bro. David and sister Amanda Gump, aged 8 years, 6 months and 14 days.

This little boy had been sick for several weeks, but bore everything patiently until his Heavenly Father took him home. The funeral services were conducted by Eld. Jacob Snell, of Collamer, Ind, from 1 Sam. 20: 3.

SHIRKEY.—In the Greenmount church, Rockingham Co, Va., Sept. 23, Maria Catharine, infant daughter of Bro. J. H. and sister Jennie Shirkey, aged 3 months and 6 days. Funeral services by brethren Benjamin Miller and J. P. Zigler from 1 Thess. 4: 18. FANNIE H. ZIGLER.

Have You Heard

about the Superb Pullman Dining Cars which have been recently placed in service via the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route?" If you have, and want to get a sumptuous meal while traveling, don't fail to take the train on which these Diners run. They run on the fast Vestibule Express between Council Bluffs and Denver and on the Overland Flyer between Council Bluffs and Portland.

Meals, which can not be surpassed in any of the first-class hotels in the country, are served in these cars at 75 cts. each.

Spokane Falls New Line.

The Union Pacific Railway, having completed its line to Spokane Falls, Washington Territory, is running its trains direct to that point, thus forming the most desirable route from the East on account of its Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars, Pullman Dining Cars, and Free Pullman Colonist Sleepers.

Spokane Falls is situated in the Palouse country and is the distributing center for a section of the North-west, the resources of which are unlimited. As an illustration: 50,000 bushels of wheat have been raised from 1,000 acres of land. Another feature of the country greatly conducive to the raising of crops, is the rainless harvests, no rain falling while crops are being harvested.

Many desirable farms may yet be had in this remarkably productive region on reasonable terms, and a more favorable opportunity for procuring a farm cheap will not soon present itself again.

For pamphlets descriptive of the country, or for rates, time tables or maps pertaining to the Union Pacific Railway apply to your nearest Ticket Agent, any Agent of this Company, or the undersigned.

Colonist Sleepers.

THE Union Pacific Ry, also known as The Overland Route, has lately added to its service a number of new cars (which, by the way, are built by the World-famous Pullman Company) entitled Colonist Sleepers, and which for convenience and comfort are but little behind the handsome Pullman Palace Car. The cars are designed for the use and comfort of the Colonist, who, with his family, intend moving West to grow up with the country.

The only difference between these cars and the regular first-class Pullman is that the Colonist sleeper is not upholstered. There are fourteen sections in each car, and separate toilet rooms for ladies and gentlemen. At night, by means of sliding head boards and heavy damask curtains, as much privacy is secured as it in the regular first class sleeper. Plenty of fresh, clean towels and a good supply of water are also to be found. A uniformed porter accompanies each car to look after the comfort and attend to the wants of the passengers, and no smoking is allowed. It certainly seems that for cheap and commodious sleeping accommodations, while traveling, these cars can not be excelled.

And Business Manager of the Eastern House, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

HARD frosts, of late, have been the rule. The beauty of the forest foliage has all faded under their blightening touch, and soon the winter winds will howl through the nude branches that, a few weeks ago, were robed with so much beauty.

LOSS and destruction often follow the trail of pride and extravagance. When men forget God, and worship their accumulated wealth, it is not a strange thing that the Lord follows with his judgments. Indeed, we are made to wonder at his patience and long forbearance!

THE Brethren's Almanac for 1890 will soon be ready for distribution. We think it will be one among the best yet published, and solicit the patronage of our readers. The price is the same as before—single copy, 10 cents, or $1.00 per dozen, postage paid.

LAST week we had a pleasant visit from our father. He is now in his eighty-first year, with mind and strength seemingly unimpaired. He finds much enjoyment in visiting among his children, in whose welfare, socially and religiously, he is always deeply interested. His unceasing, fatherly care is highly appreciated by the families.

ONE remarkable fact on the part of Christ and his disciples, in introducing the Gospel, is that they did not antagonize the general manners and customs of the people with whom they associated and labored, with reference to their social life. It was the principles of the new Gospel that they set forth and preached. And the acceptance of this religion was to affect and change their social relations so far as it was essential to their well-being.

THE year is drawing towards a close, and we are reminded that with it comes the time for all settlements to be made. Let us all make a note of this and prepare accordingly. Our life is to be the light of the world, and honest debts are such a dark thing that Christian light can not shine through. No man can live a Christian life without paying his debts as soon as it is possible for him to do so. We are excusable only when our possibilities have been conscientiously exhausted.

WE had the pleasure of a short call from sister Sue Brumbaugh, from the Eastern shore of Maryland. She has been making a visit of several weeks among her friends of this and neighboring Counties, and left this morning for home. She speaks encouragingly of their church prospects in their new field, and tells us that they are gradually gaining in membership. Their accessions, so far, have been largely by letter, from Eastern Pennsylvania. They have one good church-house, and are now preparing to build another. They have a membership of about forty.

ONE among the most touching and pathetic stories of the Bible is that of Joseph. And yet, wonderful as it is, and as good a man as he was, his lineage is lost in his own family, and we almost feel disappointed that the Christ did not come from him instead of Judah. But such has been family history in all ages. Natural good is not always a hereditary legacy.

BRO. SWIGART reports a pleasant meeting with the Black Log Valley Brethren. Though the membership is somewhat isolated from railroads and other modern conveniences, they are not lacking in Christian hospitality and other Christian characteristics that are essential to a Christian home. What are considered the higher rounds of civilization do not always add purity to the status of the religion of the people. At every open door of seeming good Satan is sure to slip in, and he never losses opportunities for doing his work. In the track of the missionaries, as they entered the benighted regions of Africa, followed the whiskey fiend, gloating for gain, to the great detriment of the cause of religion among the natives. Make a nation of drunkards, and there is no foothold for the Gospel. Sin enjoys noise, bustle and push.

INDIAN SUMMER.

THE Indian summer seems to be dawning, and with pleasure it will be welcomed. Not yet are we ready to receive gladly the storms of winter or the frosts and snows that redden the cheeks, numb the fingers and chill the blood. No, we prefer the sombre hues, the smoky days, and the soft winds of the old-fashioned Indian summers, that in former years were looked for as certainly as seed-time and harvest. What the Indian had to do with this extra season, we know not. It may have been his time for special good, the glory of the hunting season, when, Nimrod-like, he went forth with bow and arrow, sure to return with the savory meats from which was made the broth that well-nigh turned Esau's head from wisdom's ways.

Ah! Japheth, where art thou gone, and where the children of thy line? If, indeed, to be found in the Red Man's race, soon, soon will it be known no more on the earth! And the question comes to us with some force: Have the pale-faces been kind to their red-faced brethren? The Good Father saw their tears as valley after valley was by them vacated—not by choice, but through the force of violence—for the plains and plateaus of the West. But pursued, as the deer by the yelping hounds, their tenting-places were invaded, and, filled with hate and revenge, they year after year fled Westward before the, to them, destructive avalanche of civilization until to-day their homes, if such they can be called, are found on the sterile plains, and in the ravines and gorges of the Rocky Mountains and the territories north.

Here in these homes are related, by father to son, the joys of the Eastern hunting-grounds where, years and ages ago, their fathers and fathers' fathers lived in plenty, the rivers and lakes filled with fish, and the valleys and hills with an abundance of the choicest of game.

From what we can learn, our own and adjoining Counties were the Indians' Paradise, and, when forced to vacate their wigwams, that were staked along the banks of the Raystown and the Blue Juniata, they took up, in weeping, the marching wail, "Hunting(is)don!" And to-day, as we turn up with plowshare, pick and spade, the pointed flints and rude tomahawks, we can not but feel a sigh of sadness for the red men, whose bodies and homes are lost to view, but whose hearts remained as angels of mercy to hover over and protect the graves of their fallen fathers and brothers.

"But," say we, "they were treacherous." They were. "But," say we, "they were revengeful." They were—and for cause! "But," say we, "they were murderous." And so they were. What else could be expected of them after the treatment they received, and the character of their education? Had the peaceable Penn system been faithfully carried out with them, long ere this they would have been recognized as fellow-citizens, and, perhaps, fellow-Christians. "Steel sharpeneth steel," holds good with mind as well as matter, and when we learn the treatment they received from a professed Christian people, we need not wonder that they continue to worship their sun-gods, the Great Spirit, and joyfully look forward to the happy hunting-grounds, where there will be no pale-faces to intrude or disturb.

God never made any of his creatures great and wise that he might set his foot upon his brother's neck, and rob him of his possessions. Under the rule of the King of peace and mercy it is the mission of the good and the wise to raise up the down-trodden, and to restore to those who have been robbed. If this mission is not filled by us, the time will come when it will be done. The Lord's Jubilee does not make haste, but the leaven is at work, and slowly but surely the work will be accomplished. And even Jacob and his mother may have to take a back seat until Esau, though foolish he was, gets part of his own.

Because we can is not always a reason why we should. Right is the rule, no matter where the power be. And all this we have summed up in the two great commandments: "Thou shalt love the Lord, thy God with all thy heart, mind and soul, and thy neighbor as thyself." These are as fundamental as they are comprehensive. They reach and embrace all the nations of the earth, and make us, essentially and religiously, our brother's keeper.

The name Indian summer is derived from the custom of the Indians to use this time in preparing for winter by laying in stores of food; or from their belief that it was caused by a wind blowing directly from the court of the south-western god, Canton-tow-wit.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

INTO LIGHT.

"Into light the world is rolling,
From the darkness of the past.
Superstition's doom is tolling,
And her reign shall end at last.

"Tyranny and sore oppression
Must give place to God's wise plan;
Every clime shall make confession
To the brotherhood of man.

"Peace, good will and true affection
Shall prevail o'er all the earth.
Christ must rule and give direction
To each law of heavenly birth.

"Hasten, mighty King of heaven,
The glad day in all its power;
Let thy strength and grace be given
To secure earth's promised dower."

OUR PRIVILEGES.

BY A. L. SNOEBERGER.

It is the Christian's privilege to enjoy much of God's goodness, but how few of us do prove the Lord, so that he can open the windows of heaven upon us and let the glory and joy and peace of the Spirit come into our hearts? While we enjoy many seasons of worship and the heart is made glad by the blessed influence of God's Spirit and the hope of eternal life, yet how many times are we cast down with a load of this world's cares and fail to see the blessings about us, and fail to remember that "all things work together for good to them that love the Lord!" The business cares and labors of the week occupy so much of our time and attention that we seem to have little time in which to consider God's goodness and mercy daily extended unto us, and the comfort and hope we might have even amidst the perplexing cares of this life. Family worship and daily Bible reading are neglected and the energy, thought and life are put into the daily work. In this way we lose much that we might otherwise enjoy.

A short season of communion with God each day, calling upon him to guide and deliver us; a little while to think upon the goodness and love of God; upon the condition and destiny of sinning man, as revealed by the Scriptures; upon the joy and peace and growth in the divine life; upon the blessed privilege of knowing that we are counted worthy to serve the Lord; and the happiness it gives us to know that our life is a light that is leading others to follow after him who is "meek and lowly in heart:" these are some of the many privileges of the Christian. Is it because we do not have time to give to such matters that we neglect them? If so, would it not be well for us to remember that we "are bought with a price" and that our time belongs to God? True, the things of this life must be cared for, but when we consider that we are strangers and pilgrims here and are seeking "a city out of sight," are we not impressed to make these earthly matters secondary to the one great object of our creation, to fear God and keep his commandments?

But is it because we have no time that we do not spend a little while each day in worshiping God and studying his Word? Is it because we have no time, or is it because we have no inclination to do so? Is it a cross to thus devote a short time each day? Does the heart not enter into a service of this kind? Have we no desire to become better acquainted with God and his will concerning us? If such be the case, might it not be well to consider the parable of the sower and to take heed lest the seed in our heart has found "thorns" and "stony ground"? Let us beware, lest the deceitfulness of riches and pleasures of this life again lead us captive!

Our Savior overcame all these things of earth, and, if we wander away from the truth, we have him as our advocate, and, by calling upon him, we may have the influence of the Holy Spirit to help us overcome the evil within and give us a heart that rejoices in doing God's service and singing his praises to the children of men. The very fact that the worship and service of God is a cross that we shun, shows that we most need just this means of grace to help us out of the mire and the clay. If any who read these words are bowed down with the cares and sorrows of life, go to Jesus with it all and he will surely help you. The short time each day, spent in singing his praises, in reading his Word, and in calling upon his name, will become the most pleasant hours of the day, and by these means we learn to look more and more away from the present to the future, when we shall have overcome in his strength and shall be at rest from the sin and sorrow of the present life. The more we give ourselves to God, and the more of his Spirit we receive, the nearer we come to him; and in coming nearer to him, we receive more power to battle against the wiles of Satan and more power to help others on the way to that home where saints do rejoice and where the weary are at rest.

CARDIPHONIA.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Sister E. A. McGaughey: —

My capt on grew out of, or rather sprang from, a circumstance. For nearly two years I have been chasing up and down this country and England in quest of a miniature volume of poems entitled, "Heart Whispers." Yesterday it reached me from London, in the same mail that brought me your letter. Being somewhat short of paper, I use for this article the wrapper that came from England around the volume of poems.

"Heart Whispers" suggested the Heart-dealings of God with sinners and saints, of which I will try to write briefly, as my enfeebled state will allow. Your letter to me would have been an impossibility, but for these inner interviews which God holds with the souls He has made and redeemed. There is a pivotal, all-determining centre in human nature, a Holy of holies, where God meets and owns and holds and governs us. There are Heart-voices of God to us, and Heart-voices in us,—voices to awaken, and voices to identify, calling, claiming, and moulding us into the very consciousness of God, and thus making us all the more truly and gloriously Human.

It was by a Heart-voice of God we came into being. "God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." Jesus is the Eternal Word, the Cardiphonia of the Everlasting Father. "God manifest in the flesh," is the restoration of that inner communion which was interrupted by sin. When Eve was yet in Adam, the consciousness of self was the consciousness of both, and both so akin to God that all Heart-whispers were God-whispers. All this comes back in Him who is God and Man in one Person.

"This is a great mystery," but a sweet, blessed, glorious, thrilling reality to all who, by a real, unmarred heart-faith in Christ, know the meaning of these forever unfathomable words—"I IN THEM, AND THOU IN ME," "HAST LOVED THEM AS THOU HAST LOVED ME." John 17: 23. Only faith can enter into this Labyrinth, and only love can feel and silently voice what reason can never grasp, and tongue never utter. The double cardiphonia of the God-enshrining, God-living, God-expressing heart, will remain an eternally unworded rapture. The tongues of men and angels can not put it into literal phrase. For ever and ever the outburst of the inner mystery will be, "Behold, what manner of Love;" "oh, the depth"!

> "Oh, utter but the Name of God
> DOWN IN YOUR HEART OF HEARTS,
> And see how from the world at once
> All tempting light departs.
> "Oh, keep THY CONSCIENCE SENSITIVE;
> NO INWARD TOKEN MISS;
> And go where GOD entices thee:
> PERFECTION lies IN THIS."

"My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me." How superficially and theoretically and heartlessly we pronounce the words that were speaking themselves in Love in the Godhead from eternity! "In the beginning was"—not came to be—but "was the Word"—with God, was God. "Made flesh." "We beheld his glory." "We have heard, have seen with our eyes, have looked upon, our hands have handled the Word of Life." 1 John 1: 1. Is it so? Dare we say it? Is our life the proof? Is the "known" of 1 John 5: 20, the true, deep, central, abiding, all-pervading fact of our existence? What doth it profit to say Lord, Lord, make broad our phylacteries, and impoverish ourselves with alms, and macerate ourselves even to martyrdom, if our life, from core to circumference, is not the cardiphonia of the living God? "They follow Me." No money-greed, no envy, no self-idolatry, no love of popularity, no tobacco-scent, in the foot-prints of the Man, Christ Jesus. O, what a dark, withering, damning, soul-blasting, God-defying, God-slaying "root of bitterness" is the love of self! The underscoring and exclamation point fitted to emphasize this awful verity, must come from Sinai's fiercest tempest, blackest horror, and loudest, most appalling thunders.

Self is the synonym of sin and hell. When the Heart of God and the heart of man are merged, the breach of Eden is closed, and God and Man are one. This is Emmanuel—God with us. Every true believer is a repetition of this mystery. "Christ dwells in our heart by faith." Eph. 3: 17. Christ in us is our hope of glory. Col. 1: 27. This is the only hope that maketh not ashamed. Rom. 5: 5. What a wonderful testimony is that of Paul in Gal. 2: 20. But it is no more than the common experience of all saints. No one can be a believer in Christ without appropriating the life of Christ. This goes before all ordinances and all symbolical obedience, and is the root and life and power and glory and blessedness of all that follows. "The kingdom of God is not meat and drink,"—consists not in the sensuous and tangible—"but is righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." Organization and form will take care of themselves where God Himself is the developing and formative principle.

The reason we have so much trouble with the external, is because we so misapprehend the mystery of the Divine Incarnation, and mar and hinder His work by our ignorant, Pharisaic, clumsy mishandling of the God-given, God-perfecting life of faith. They hear My voice, and they follow Me. Abraham's body must be dead, and his carnal cogitations and expectations utterly set aside, before Isaac can be born. The great letter "H," which, in the Hebrew, is the very core and pith of the Name of Jehovah, must be set in the very heart of his name, before he can become the father of many nations. That H is the aspirate, the very breath, the Cardiphonia of the Eternal God. It is the Son, the Word, the Spirit, the Life, the Uncreated Source and Glorious outcome of Redemption. We are Christ's, and Christ is God's. 1 Cor. 3: 23. Jesus declared that he did always those things that pleased God. Our high calling in Him is exactly the same. Let us ponder well word for word in Col. 1: 10 and 1 John 2: 6. The Cardiphonia of God in Christ, and the cardiphonia of Christ in the believer, is the same voice—Glory to God in the highest! The "Thine" in Matt. 6: 13 is the cardiphonia of the redeemed for ever and ever.

THE AUTUMN GLORY.

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

How beautiful is the forest, arrayed in the autumn glory of crimson, green and gold! We feast our eyes upon its loveliness, and wonder why the poet called the time of ripening fruits, and brilliant hues of forest: "The melancholy days; the saddest of the year." We know this glory is a presage of decay and blight. But why should this make us sad, when we know that the leaves and flowers only fade in autumn glory, to be clothed in fairer beauty, when the snows of winter have passed into the deliciousness of spring?

This is a beautiful day,—lovely in the bright tints of autumn. The sun is sparkling on the bosom of the tranquil waters, until its bright gleams seem like millions of diamonds set in silver. But in retrospect we view another day, one year ago, when the birds had hushed their songs, and the flowers shed their bloom;—a day when we sat in the old home in Ohio, and penned the opening paragraph of this article. It was a prelude to a song of immortality that was blending in harmonious chords within the citadel of the soul. A longing, to share this feeling with others, filled our heart, but the prelude is yet unfinished, the song is unwritten, and the inspiration is gone!

Rising from the desk to attend to some pressing duty, a sudden, though severe illness intervened, and for many months life trembled on the verge of eternity. And, while waiting for a cessation of pain, the autumn passed into the bleak winter, and another pen, more eloquent than ours, painted the autumn beauties for the MESSENGER readers. In our human weakness we wept great, swelling tears, that the work we treasured as our own, had been snatched from our hands and had been given to another to perform.

To-day we take up the old prelude and the same sheet of paper; but in a new home very unlike the old. Then, too, our thread of thought is different from that of a year ago. Changes, both sad and joyous, have come and gone. Tears and smiles have mingled in our songs; sighs and groans have drowned the melody of our praises, and wails have oftener been our prayers, than words. But in it all God's hand is seen. What if the storm is raging hard within! Is not the sun without? By and by there shall be peace and light within and without when the victory is won, and our labor all is done. Then we shall understand why our plans are spoiled, our hopes dispelled, and our prospects fade away from view.

The birds have sought a sunnier clime; the flowers,—where are they? The fleecy clouds have lost their lovely blue, that they were wont to wear in summer days, and even the sunshine glimmers through a misty haze. Yet the forest is clothed in a grandeur almost sublime,—fairer than spring time flowers or summer's bloom,—the fruitage of the vernal bloom! So, too, our griefs and joys shall ripen into golden fruitage when death's chilling blasts, like autumn frosts, have swept over our lives, and we awaken in a glorious vernal tide, in that land where sorrow's winds have never blown!

FORGIVENESS.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

THIS is a trait of Christian character which is, to a great extent, ignored by professing Christians, though it is one of the most dignified and profound attributes of Christ and his disciples. While our Savior was here among men, his mission was to do his Heavenly Father's will, and to make known to man his duty to God and his fellow-men. In that most sublime prayer which he taught his disciples, while on the mount, he said, "When ye pray say, Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those that trespass against us." When he was drinking the bitter cup in the Garden of Gethsemane, he called unto His Father in Heaven, "Father, forgive them," Luke 23: 34. When the apostle Stephen was being stoned to death, he "cried with a loud voice, Lord lay not this sin to their charge." Acts 7: 60.

In Matt. 6: 14, 15, the Savior says, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Heavenly Father will also forgive you, but if you forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." The language is plain and emphatic, and no person can claim that it does not mean just what it says. There are those who, when some one trespasses against them, or, in other words, wounds their pride, either intentionally or otherwise, will say, "I will never forgive them." How can they ever ask God to forgive them their sins and trespasses against him?

If we pray to God, "Forgive us, as we forgive others," and absolutely refuse to forgive our brother, we virtually ask God to never forgive us! What a horrible thought,—asking the Eternal God to condemn us!

Again, some of the things which we may consider in our frailty as being trespasses against us, are only imaginary. Doubtless, if we were not stubborn and would ask an explanation of our brother or sister, in the spirit of Christ, we would not feel so much as though we had just cause to be offended. Perhaps we would find that we were in the fault ourselves.

Our life is a vapor that vanishes away, and time is fleeting. To-day only is ours, to-morrow may never come. How necessary, then, it is that we all feel our responsibility to our Heavenly Father, realizing that we are all weak, sinful and short-sighted creatures. Let us all try to live closer to God as he has said, "Draw nigh unto me and I will draw nigh unto you." Submit yourselves therefore, to God, Jas. 4: 8, so that you can, with clean hands and a pure heart, say, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those that trespass against us."

THE HEART.

BY ENOCH EBY.

THE heart is related to a person's character, as a fountain is to a stream. If a fountain brings forth clear, sweet water, the stream will be in harmony with it, but no fountain can bring forth salt water and fresh. So the good man, out of the good treasure of the heart, bringeth forth good things, hence a good life or character. Likewise the evil man, out of the evil treasure of his heart, bringeth forth evil things; hence an evil character.

Fountains are often so near each other as to form but one stream. At Idaho Springs, Colo., for instance, cold and hot water is pumped up about thirty feet apart, so popular Christianity mixes the love of the world, the lusts of the flesh, the lusts of the eye, and the pride of life, and divisions, and heterodox doctrines (more Scripturally called, doctrines of devils) until nothing but Skeptics, Infidels and Atheists can relish it. The fallen angels rejoice over such work.

Ephraim mixed himself with the people, and the Lord compares him to a cake not turned,—only one side baked! He is called "a silly dove," without heart; he lacked the courage to stand up for his principles; hence mixed with surrounding influences until his fidelity to God was almost entirely lost. Now-a-days there are many like Ephraim, who, with all their sins, claim to have good hearts.

GATHERED GEMS.

BY J. S. FLORY.

CHINESE proverb: "They who know the truth are not equal to those who love it; and they who love it, are not equal to those who delight to walk in it."

* * *

Disposition of youthful character is builded up by the fashioning of first impressions. With his mother's milk the young child drinks in education. Let him see thee speaking to thy God; he will not forget it afterward. Scratch the green rind of a sapling, or wantonly twist it in the soil, and the scarred and crooked oak will tell of thee for centuries to come.

* * *

Deep is the sea, and deep is hell, but pride mineth deeper!

* * *

Love:—what a volume in a word, an ocean in a tear!
A seventh heaven in a glance, a whirlwind in a sigh!
The lightning in a touch, a millennium in a moment!

They that love early become like-minded, and the tempter toucheth them not. They grow up leaning on each other as the olive and the vine.

There is no mean between light and darkness, love and hatred, life and death, God and the world. Wherever spiritual life is, however weak, there darkness and death no longer reign. Love supplants hatred, and Luke 9: 50 holds good. Wherever life is not, there death, darkness, the flesh, the world, hatred, however glossed over and hidden from man's observation, prevail, and Luke 11: 23 holds good. Where love is not, there hatred is; for the heart can not remain a void.

* * *

Love not the world that lieth in wickedness. Love it as God loved it, with pity and compassion, but not to be in congeniality and sympathy in its alienations from God. We can not have a love for the world and also love God.

* * *

That doctrine which, being believed, destroys sin in the heart and life of man, and produces right living, is none other than the truth of God.

"Yes, in that great time that is coming,
When loudly the trumpet shall sound,
And they who have labored and rested,
Shall come from the quivering ground;
When they who have striven and suffered,
To teach and ennoble the race;
Shall march at the front of the column,
Each one in his God-given place.
As they pass through the gates of the city,
With proud and victorious tread,
The true, humble preacher and teacher,
Will travel not far from the head."

"THE MONDAY PAPER."

BY REV. WILBUR F. CRAFTS,
Field Secretary of the American Sabbath Union, 23 Park Row, N. Y.

In a certain city the people were divided by their occupations into six sections, each residing in a different district, with a separate gate—the professional men, the mechanics, the merchants, the hucksters, the carriers and the amusement venders. There came a giant against the city, and with his battering-ram broke down, one after the other, the six gates that protected these six groups and all they held dear, and let in his hungry horde of followers upon them.

"These things are an allegory." The city is the citadel of the Sabbath, which protects these six great groups in that which is almost the dearest treasure they possess—their Sabbath of rest. The giant that breaks down all these gates is the Sunday newspaper. He breaks down the gate that protects the Sabbath rest of the professional man by requiring Sunday work of the editor; he breaks down the gate that protects the Sabbath rest of the mechanic by requiring Sunday work of the printer; he breaks down the gate that protects the Sabbath rest of the merchant by requiring Sunday work of the news-dealer; he breaks down the gate that protects the Sabbath rest of the hucksters by requiring Sunday work of the newsboy; he breaks down the gate that protects the Sabbath rest of the carrier by requiring Sunday work of the men in the mail service and on the trains. He breaks down the gate that protects the Sabbath rest of the amusement venders by sending out the Sunday newspapers on the plea of amusement, thus opening the way for dime museums and theatres to claim the same right There is not a single form of labor or business, nor a single form of public amusement which a man can consistently condemn, who either publishes or patronizes Sunday newspapers.

In this allegory is the conclusive answer to the shallow excuse that "the Monday paper requires most of the Sunday work." There need not be any Sunday work done on a Monday paper, and in some cases there is none. There are twenty-four hours, outside of the Sabbath, in which to make it up, if there is no Sunday paper issued. It is as if I gave a tailor a day's work to do for me between Saturday morning and Monday morning. If he uses the Sabbath instead of Saturday, it is his fault, but if I require the same amount of work daily seven days in the week, it is partly mine. As a matter of fact, the editorial staff and printer do usually perform more or less of Sunday work on the Monday paper, but this work of making up a paper, done by a few persons in the early hours of the Sabbath, is as nothing to the work of the hundred times as many who distribute a metropolitan paper after it is made up—the news-dealers, news-boys, post-office employees, express-men and railroad men who handle the paper all day long. These have no Sunday work to do on "the Monday paper."

The number of persons who do Sunday work in distributing a Sunday paper is, in some cases, a thousand times as great as the number that work in making up its Monday edition. The Sunday newspaper, then, from the stand-point of the civil Sabbath, is chiefly objectionable in that it involves and sanctions almost every form of Sunday work, manufacture, trade and transportation. To buy one of them is not a small vice, but lending a hand to the rope that draws the car of Juggernaut, under whose wheels the health and conscience of two millions are being crushed with Sunday toil.

If Sunday newspapers were like the tutti-frutti gum machines into which you drop a nickle and out comes what you desire, by a purely mechanical process, the objection to them from the stand-point of the civil Sabbath might be removed. But they mean work, and work of almost every kind. He who holds in his hands a Sunday newspaper, can not consistently oppose the doing of any other form of Sunday work. Equity requires that all needless Sunday work should be impartially suppressed.

Equity should be used as a watch-word for the enactment, improvement and enforcement of our Sunday laws. In the general suspension of Sunday work and business, there are three notorious exceptions in many places. The saloons, the trains and the newspapers are allowed to carry on business secretly or publicly in the interests of their rich proprietors, while the peanut-stands and the little stores of the poor are closed. A few Sabbaths since, in New York, when all the rich florists were selling flowers without resistance, contrary to law, a burly policeman arrested an Italian who was selling five-cent button-hole bouquets, and doubtless in five minutes made him and all his friends anarchists. If such discrimination is made in the law itself, the legislature perpetrates a crime against equity. Such law is violation of law, and can not long be enforced. The only law that can be either justified or maintained in practice, is a law which impartially forbids, in rich and poor, forms of Sunday work that are not works of mercy or necessity.

My own belief is, that Sunday advertising, which is the mainstay of the Sunday newspapers, is a craze, like roller-skating rinks, that has not "come to stay," but has got to go. The two first merchants in the land, John Wanamaker and Marshall Field, get on without Sunday advertising, and many who are less wise will some day learn that the days to advertise are the days when readers can buy what is advertised. It is absurd to suppose that, with a score of blanket pages of gossip to read, and other members of the family waiting for their turn, the advertisements in the Sunday paper are so carefully read as to be remembered to the next day.

When our Christian business men come to realize how they waste their money, as well as kill their influence for good, by opening their business on Sunday in newspaper columns—it might as well be at their stores—the Sunday newspaper will lose its mainstay, and give its employees and the public a rest.

GATHERED GLEANINGS.

BY FLORIDA ETTER.

Blessed thought!—when we are in the furnace of affliction, to know that there is a better day coming by and by, when we shall exchange a world of tribulation for one of happiness. It is a blessed thought, when we lose our friends and relatives, to know that we can meet them again in a better land if we are faithful. Our hearts rejoice to know that we shall meet with dear Jesus, never to part again. There we shall see him as he is, and join the heavenly host in chanting the sweet anthems forever. It will not only last one day or a week, but all through the ceaseless ages of eternity! How this should encourage us to serve our Lord and Master!

We are surrounded by temptations of all kinds, some of them hard to resist; but there is none so hard but that there is a way of escape. God will allow us to be tempted, as he did Jesus, but we must steadfastly resist, as he did. Temptations are all for our good; let us be faithful, and follow closely in the footsteps of Jesus, and we shall never fall. There is much in store for the Christian to make him happy. He has a hope that will sustain him through every trial, and will lead him home. Be patient, and try to resist Satan in all of his pernicious ways, and Jesus will aid you in every trial and difficulty.

* * *

How sweet it will be to reach that beautiful land of the blest, where there are no dark clouds, but all is pure and lovely—where all is joy, peace and love! There we can meet King Jesus and all the happy hosts around the throne! There we can strike glad hands and sing praises all through eternity! Who does not want to join that band? If we take that good old ship of Zion, we will reach that land in safety. Jesus is the Captain—one in whom we can trust. Oh, what must it be to be there! No tongue can tell what it is to meet Jesus and all the loved ones gone before! Be faithful, be zealous in the Master's work, and you shall receive a crown that fadeth not away!

God so loved the world that he sent his own dear Son to die for us. There is none so great as he. Who among us would suffer thus for our friends? Not one. But our Father's love was so great for us that he would not have one of us lost, so he opened a way for us to be saved if we will. He is not willing that one of us should perish. We can never repay the great debt we owe him. Are we going to try to do our best by obeying his Word, or will we reject him, and serve the devil? Now is the time to decide the great question. If we put it off now, we may never have the opportunity, as we know not what one day may bring forth If we love him as we should, we will prove it by our actions.

Some one may say, "There is so much to be obeyed that I am afraid I can not obey all. God says if we reject a part of his Word we are guilty of the whole. God requires us to do the best we can and follow all of his commandments as near as we can. Then all will be well with us.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS DURING THE WINTER.

BY H. W. KRIEGHBAUM.

The question arises, "Why are so many of the Brethren's Sunday-schools closed during the winter?" There are a number of excuses offered. We have heard the remark that the days are so short and the weather is often too stormy for our children to attend,—that it is discouraging to the officers and teachers, when the attendance is declining! Oh, dear brethren and sisters, it is an easy thing to be a soldier for Christ when everything is moving along prosperously and pleasantly, but when trials come and Satan tells us it is not necessary that we put forth such a great effort,—that it is too much trouble to run a Sunday-school during the winter season,—we feel, perhaps, sorely troubled.

Some who advocate closing schools during the winter, say, "We can begin next spring and regain what was lost during the winter." But who will be responsible for what might have been gained during the winter? Is it a fact that the weather is too inclement for our children to attend Sunday-school? Let us see! We want our children to go to day-school every day during the winter. No matter how bad the weather is,—if it is too stormy for them to walk, we will see that they get there some other way. We want them to get all the secular knowledge they can, while the spiritual is too often neglected. When they arrive at the years of maturity we wonder why they do not join the church.

Will the Lord hold us guiltless for neglecting those whom he has given into our care? These innocent little children we are commanded to bring up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Solomon said, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and he will not depart from it when he is old."

There is Scripture enough to show us our duty. Will we try to do it? May God help us in all the work that he has given into our hands, that we may have a zeal according to knowledge and manifest that zeal by our walk and conduct in life!

"CALLED."

BY LIZZIE A. MILLER.

DEAR reader, you have, no doubt, been called by the spirit of God in many ways, to flee from evil, sin and the wrath to come. In reading and hearing the Word of God preached, you have been called to come out on the side of the Lord. You have been called by the many prayers that have been offered up to God at the Throne of Grace for you by the people of God and the friends who would rejoice to see you lead a Christian life. When you heard the great thundering and lightning and saw the floods of water, you were caused to think and say, "Surely, there is a God and a higher power than that of man!"

In all we can look upon we are called to see the works and goodness of God. Perhaps you have been called by the death of a dear friend,—brother or sister,—and perhaps you were called and brought to a sick-bed of affliction and near to the very gates of death, and when you saw your lost condition out of Christ, you made a promise that if God would spare your life and restore you to health, you would love and serve him and keep his commandments. Have you done so? Take warning, pay your vows and promises; "it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of a living God," unprepared, "and he that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin." "God is not mocked; whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." Therefore, with the grace and help of God, flee from all evil and sow to the spirit that you may reap of the harvest of everlasting life, and not grieve the Spirit, for the spirit of God will not always strive with man, and it is appointed unto man once to die but after this the judgment.

Then, how careful we should be in obeying the call, "Come out on the Lord's side; take up your cross daily and follow the Savior." Then, when we are called to give an account of our deeds done here in the body, we can come with joy and not with grief, and have part in the first resurrection, on which the second death hath no power.

FRAGMENTS.

BY M. M. SHERRICK.

"EXAMPLE has a more powerful effect on the minds of men than either precept or punishment."

* * *

There are many men in the world leaning toward the church, while there are members in the church leaning toward the world. Both classes come short of their high calling.

* * *

A very good rule, "Hear all you can, believe half you hear, and tell half you believe," is often reversed by scandal-loving people, to the great sorrow of neighborhoods.

"We do not want a Christian religion which, like a garment of flexible material, may be thrown off at will, but a Christian religion which crystallizes as it Christianizes.

Conscience, which so many people fall back upon as a criterion, when reproved for wrong-doing, is necessarily a creature of education, subject to free moral agency. Unless, therefore, it is properly taught and exercised, its mandates are of no practical account.

"Temperance, in the apostles' time, was considered a Christian virtue. It should so be considered by us. Our duty should be to maintain such principles in the church as comport with a people professing godliness. But when we unite with the world on any question of national issue, we risk, in doing so, our profession of separateness from the world. The end to be attained may be right, but the means are questionable. Intemperance is a bane to society and a curse to the country, yet it is not brought about by the saloon-keeper alone, nor is the nefarious business carried on by only one set of men. The distiller, the wholesale merchant, the saloon-keeper and the consumer, are concerned in the evil. What does the church do with these men? (The term church is here used in a general sense.) The saloon-keeper may possibly be denied the communion, but the moderate drinker, the man who patronizes saloons, may enjoy all the rights and privileges of the church. Then there is the rich, aristocratic distiller who furnishes the saloon-keeper with his wares,—what of him? "Oh, well, he pays a large part of the preacher's salary, and gives considerable in the way of pew rent Let the holy sacrament be administered to him!"

Reader, the church should be "the light of the world" in such cases. I am glad that our Fraternity has always labored in a lawful way for the promotion of temperance, and I pray she may keep her fair record unsullied, and permit no unholy co-operation with the world in any respect.

MENTAL IMPRESSIONS.

BY G. W. KAETZEL.

THAT impressions, made upon the mind, are indelible is a fact that needs no argument. That faculty of the mind which we call memory, and by which the ideas of past objects are so retained as never to lose their impressions, is one of the greatest of human endowments. Were it not for the existance of such a faculty, the efforts to gain knowledge would be fruitless.

We do not pretend to say that memory has any such power as to be able to exhibit at will all her treasures ready for use. This is not man's privilege. What we mean is, that mental impressions are, in themselves, so indelible as to be capable of being recalled by similar circumstances; and not only do things, that impress our minds, recur to us here, but we believe that they will be recalled in eternity. Who can tell the effect on the mind of the coming of the last messenger or the blowing of the final trumpet? It is impossible to imagine how vividly all the emotions and events of the present life may reappear when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption. The case of the rich man is an illustration of this. Here is a man who, after wasting his life in self-indulgence and sumptuous fare, has just reached the eternal world. Time with him has become eternity, but there is no fame in the working of his memory. His prayer for a drop of water, and his anxiety for his five brethren tell how his mind is employed. The loaded table, the neglected beggar are all recollected and each adds bitterness to his cup of woe. Oh, the overwhelming power of memory! Give me pain, give me poverty, give me anything in the long catalogue of human ills, sooner than make conscience my tormentor!

Have you seen the idle boy cutting his name into the bark of a tender tree? Little does he think, as letter after letter is formed, how they will all grow and stand out more distinctly as the tree grows and every letter becomes plainer and plainer as time elapses?

Thus it is especially with the youthful mind; hence the great necessity of having the minds of our children engaged in holy thoughts when their hearts are young and tender. Next to the parents' tender words, the Sunday-school, properly conducted, is the best place to fill their little minds with heavenly aspirations. There are only two paths to tread; the one will lead to virtue, honor and heaven; the other to vice, infamy and hell!

WHY DO THESE THINGS?

BY A. FLORY.

THIS question has troubled the minds of men in all ages. It seems they did not understand why God required them to be so precise in obeying his commandments. Why was this? It was simply because they did not like to give up their ways. Isaiah says, "Let the wicked forsake his ways." No doubt King Saul thought if he would spare the king of the Amalekites and the best of the flock, to offer an offering to the Lord at Gilgal, God would be pleased with him because he intended it for a good purpose. He failed to see why he should fully obey this command.

Naaman, the leper, did not understand why the prophet of the Lord wanted him to go into Jordan to wash. Korah thought fringes put in the garments of the Israelites would be of no benefit. He failed to see why they could not be holy without them.

Thus it has been in time past. How is it now? Do men better understand why they should be so precise in obeying God's commands than they did then? I think not This matter is as little understood now as it ever was.

Farmers have different reasons for doing different kinds of work. They plow corn for the purpose of mellowing the soil and killing the weeds. They make hay while the sun shines, simply because it will not dry when it is raining. There is but one reason, however, why men should obey God in all things and that is because he told them to do so. Numbers of men and women reject the ordinance of feet-washing because Christ did not tell them the reason why they should obey this command. Christ says, "If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them." If we can reject this command because we know not the reason why it was given and can still be happy, we can reject all other commands for the same reason. We can reject the command of prayer. Christ says, "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him." Matt. 6: 8. You can not tell God anything that he does not already know; yet he tells us to ask him for our daily bread. He can supply our wants just as well if we do not ask, as if we do,—why, then, ask the Lord for anything? Why not depend on his great power and wisdom?

Christ has not told us the reason why we should obey the various commands of the New Testament. If you can be happy without obeying the ordinance of feet-washing, you can remember Christ without eating bread and drinking wine. The surest evidence of unbelief is manifest when men will say, If I knew the reason why God desires me to do his commandments, I would do them. The faithful never question God's Word. When Abraham was commanded to offer his son for a burnt offering, he started for the appointed place without a murmur.

LIVES OF THE CÆSARS.

BY W. B. ROOSE.

Number Seventeen.—Claudius.

CLAUDIUS began to rule A. D. 42, and held the reins of government thirteen years. His intellectual attainments were of a much lower grade than any of the fourteen Cæsars. In fact, he was considered to be almost an idiot from childhood. He merely lived and that was all. Neglected and despised he passed away his days. He was an uncle to Caligula, and was fifty years old on the day of his nephew's assassination. He had disappeared, fearing his life would be taken from him, and in this state he was incidentally found by some of the soldiers.

The Romans were very agreeably surprised in the change that took place in the affairs of the government. The beginning was very promising of a successful reign. Though he was not considered bright and intelligent, he had common sense enough to know it was wrong to worship him. It would be far better if many of admiring men of our own times had more real common sense, and not so much anxiety to be honored and applauded by their fellow-men.

Claudius strove to have all former differences settled and offenses forgotten, and endeavored to have justice administered with mildness. Judea was restored to Herod Agrippa, nephew of Herod Antipas, the beheader of John the Baptist. Caractacus, the heroic king of Wales, was pardoned. The curiosity of the Roman people to see a king from so barbarous a country, which they believed to be perpetually covered with fog, was gratified. They esteemed Caractacus for his heroism, and when he was led through the streets of Rome "he was dignified even in misery." This king was amazed at the beauty of Rome and said, "Alas! how is it possible that people, possessed of so much wealth and magnificence at home could envy me a humble cottage in Britain."

As we said before, the Roman people rather congratulated themselves on having such a change in government, but their congratulations, in a short time, gave place to condolence. Unlimited power and wealth seemed to have the same effect on the mind of Claudius as on all other bad emperors. A bad wife had a very great influence over him for evil. The people saw what the end would be should she be permitted to live; so they finally gained the consent of Claudius to put her to death.

It is strange, since man is the head of the woman, that he is controlled by her to such a great extent for evil or for good. We have known men who exhibited only a small part of the divine image, but who were reclaimed and made noble and useful by their wives. On the other hand, men who stood high in their community for their strict integrity, have been led astray by their evil-disposed companions.

When the Empress Messalina discovered she was to be killed, her friends all forsook her, excepting her mother, to whom she had been very unkind in days when things looked prosperous. The experience of Messalina is the same as that of all of us, who have had the blessed privilege of enjoying the loving ministrations of a mother. The love of a mother is unfailing and will last when all earth seems to forsake us!

It must have been a sad sight to have seen Messalina alone with her mother in the garden, mourning over her departed greatness, while her mother was vainly striving to comfort her, and advising her to die like a Roman empress, by taking her own life. She had not the courage to do this, but she had not long to wait, as a tribune, named Erodus, opened the gate and killed her with a single blow.

Claudius was not satisfied with his lonely state, so he married another beautiful wife,—Agrippina, who was almost as cruel and tyrannical as Messalina. She drove him to many cruel acts, so that once he was heard to say in one of his revelries, "It seems always my fate to bear, for a time, the misconduct of my wives, and in the end put them to death."

Agrippina was informed of what he said, and became considerably alarmed about her safety. She at last decided Claudius should be murdered.

The Emperor was very fond of stewed mushrooms. Agrippina prepared him a dish of them, which seemed to be relished by him more than commonly. Little did he think that there was poison in the sauce. He became suddenly ill, but did not die. Agrippina, fearing her dreadful deed would be discovered, called a physician, whom she bribed. Pretending he wanted to examine his throat, he thrust a feather down Claudius' throat, which was saturated with deadly poison. This did its fatal work.

To be a Roman emperor in those days, was the grandest station to which one could attain, but of all those men who obtained it, few were worthy of it, few remained happy, few had any real friends, and few lived out their days in peace, or died a natural death at last.

THE PURCHASE OF THE CHURCH PAPER.

BY S. S. MOHLER.

As the Annual Meeting of 1890 is fast approaching [illegible] the matter of transferring the publishing interests (now controlled by the Brethren Publishing Company) to the Brotherhood [illegible] upon, and as the subject is of much importance, it should receive the most careful [illegible] because the future condition of the church [illegible] to a great extent, be formed by the influence which the press exerts, and every lover of the Truth, as it is in Jesus, must feel concerned that those influences be of a safe character and steadily maintained. This can only be fully assured by placing our press under the direct control of our General Conference. If its present management, and its policy held,—as now conducted,—could have permanency, then the principal reason that now urges a transfer, would not exist. But our experience in the past, with several papers published, each soliciting patronage, should call for every possible safeguard to be thrown around the press, in which individual or personal interests would be warded off, and could not become a factor in shaping its policy. The fact that our present editors are doing nobly, is no guarantee against the effect of personal interests or ambition in the future editing of papers among us, and to guard against these effects, is not only a matter of prudence, but one of positive necessity, admitted even by our brethren who now control the publications among us, and who, for the welfare of the church, propose to surrender a fairly-earned patronage to the church.

The success to which the publishing interests have attained financially, while affording no more than the brethren deserve for the capital invested, and years of care and toil that were required to secure it, affords a safe basis of calculation to meet the obligations, necessary for the church to assume, in the purchase of their interests. Section 8 of the Committee's "Report on Publications" (see Minutes of Annual Meeting of 1888), will need alteration to apply to the condition created by deferring action on the report.

The provisions of this section, providing the means for the purchase of the Brethren's Publishing interests, seemed to be the point feared when the report was submitted. I will here suggest, what I, at the time, held to be a basis that might be utilized, to remove the fears that were then apprehended, and would constitute the basis upon which the bonds or other securities might be placed, and would provide the most effectual method to carry into effect the principle involved. It is known, by the report of the Church Erection and Missionary Committee, that it holds interest-bearing notes to the amount of $27,700; bequests, $10,050. The Book and Tract Work holds upwards of $20,000.

The greater part of this amount is a perpetual fund, and only the interest can be used in the purpose for which it was given.

Now, as this fund is to be placed on interest, it would seem that the church could utilize the fund as security for the bonds issued, — as stock in the purchase of the "Brethren's Publishing Interests." When those interest-bearing notes become due and are paid, let the proceeds be invested in the "Publishing Interests," for if the paper is carefully conducted, the proceeds would pay the interest on the money invested, and, by soliciting funds as provided by Sec. 8, as bequests, donations, etc., not a very great amount of the sum total, to purchase the "Brethren's Publishing Interests," would remain to be secured as aforesaid.

This is offered only as a suggestion, in the hope that it may cause thought on the subject, toward providing ways and means to effect the transfer of the paper, etc. We should come up to our next Annual Meeting, prepared for the question, and I would favor a meeting of the Committee with the Church Erection and Missionary Committee, and Book and Tract Work some days previous to any other business, at our coming Annual Meeting, to look the ground over carefully, so as to be prepared for the question when it comes up. I invite suggestions on the subject, sent me privately, or by the MESSENGER. Let the subject be opened for consultation, as the time is here to give attention to this important subject!

THOUGHTS AS THEY OCCUR.

BY P. FAHRNEY.

ONE can not read the church paper and church literature week after week, month after month, and year after year, for nearly forty years and remain ignorant and disinterested in what is going on and is being done in the church, nor is it likely that one can live, for over twenty years, in a large city, without coming in contact with people of nearly every religious persuasion in Christendom and thus learn the feelings of those outside the church.

But such knowledge will profit nothing unless it can be utilized for some good purpose. It was truthfully stated in a late editorial paragraph that there are some things that people had better not know—yes, it is unimportant that every one should know about the "Crusade," Peter the Hermit, the "Thirty Years' War," or about the Massacre of St Bartholomew's Day and ten thousand other things that are not edifying or profitable. Knowledge is stimulating, like some kinds of food and drink that should be avoided. We read that "Knowledge puffeth up."

Education, knowledge and wisdom are sometimes taken together as meaning one and the same thing, while, in fact, they do not. Education is a system of mental training,—one may be well educated and still not have a general knowledge of things,—while one who never had any training, yet had opportunities to observe, may be able to accumulate much knowledge. A third person may have no opportunities for study nor observation and still be endowed with wisdom—which consists in prudent forethought and good judgment. The man who knows too much is oftentimes as much of an object of pity as one that knows too little. The fundamental truths of Christianity are easily comprehended when the mind is not beclouded with speculative theology and superstition.

There is a law in nature which is also the law of God,—that one can not be truly happy unless he does what he can to make others happy. In other words, you can not wrong another without doing yourself a greater wrong. When a savage has once learned to comprehend this grand truth then he has taken a long stride towards civilization.

Christian people may sometimes offend others without realizing what they are doing, as well as those who crucified Christ, and of whom he said, "They know not what they do," hence a knowledge of Christian etiquette is desirable. Undue familiarity is not brotherly love

There are four kinds of "good,"—such as feeling good, being good, making good, and, last but not least, doing good. One may feel good while inspired by a false hope. A man may "be" good when harmless. A hermit may be very good while living in his mountain cave, but his opportunities for "doing" good are limited.

Another man may feel restless unless he is engaged in making some one good. Presuming himself to be good, he wants to make others like himself. His own character, and not Christ's, is his model. If he is a Roman Catholic, he wants others to be such. If he happens to be a Mormon, he works to convert others to his faith. But a true Christian tries to preserve his individuality.

"Doing good" is most fully developed, when an individual is practical and not merely sentimental. If he gives a cup of water in the name of a disciple, he shall have his reward, so says the Savior.

Let us be known, not so much by our church name, as by our good works.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

BY LEWIS W. TEETER.

Number Two.

WE will first consider the present condition of the Ten Commandments, and introduce this by making the following assertion: The Ten Commandments that were written on the two tables of stone, or the Ten Commandments, as grouped together by man, are all superseded by, and have their fulfillment in, the New Testament, and are, therefore, not in force at the present, and have not been since the death of our Savior, Jesus Christ. Their destiny was already clearly declared in the preaching of Jesus, referring to John the Baptist's preaching. Then already they were, in a measure, out of force, for Christ says, "The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it." Luke 16: 16 "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." Matt. 5: 17.

The law of circumcision went out of force at the same time, but when churches were established, certain men came down from Judea to Antioch and "taught the brethren and said, Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved." Acts 15: 1.

This caused a disturbance in that church,—so great that Paul and Barnabas were not able to quiet it. They then carried this question up to Jerusalem to the apostles and elders who, after considering this matter, sent them this instruction: "Forasmuch as we have heard, that certain which went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, Ye must be circumcised, and keep the law; to whom we gave no such commandment" Acts 15: 24. "For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay upon you no greater burden than these necessary things; that ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well." Acts 15: 28, 29.

From the above we see that the apostles and elders, in council, decided that it was improper to circumcise, or keep the law. The Ten Commandments are in the Law, therefore the Ten Commandments are not in force any more than the rest of the law.

Here, perhaps, some one says: "Well, if the Ten Commandments are not in force, then I can make and worship idols, take the name of the Lord in vain, desecrate the Sabbath Day, dishonor my parents, kill, commit adultery, steal, bear false witness, and covet."

No, sir; not so. Is not the fulfillment of a law better than the law which is fulfilled? Is not the 20-dollar gold piece worth more than its impression? Is not the object which casts the shadow worth more than the shadow? Well, what is the law? Hear Paul say: "Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ." Col. 2: 16, 17.

Here Paul clearly states what the Law is,—it is only a shadow, "but the body is of Christ." "Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made. . . . . Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid: for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law." Gal. 3: 19-21. "Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster." Gal. 3: 24, 25. "For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices, which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect." Heb. 10: 1.

Then, since this was not sufficient, said he (Christ), "Lo, I come to do thy will, O God. He taketh away the first [the Law], that he may establish the second [New Testament]." Heb. 10: 9, "blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross." Col. 2: 14. This shows clearly that the death of Christ ends the observance of the Law.

Then, as said above, the New Law is better than the Old Law, "In that he saith, A new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth, and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." Heb. 8: 13. Christ, in his Sermon on the Mount, compares parts of the Law with the Gospel, whereby is shown very clearly the excellence of the Gospel over the Law in points of refinement and spirituality. Read Matt. 5.

1. "Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment: But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment." Matt. 5: 21, 22. Here it will be seen that the man that is angry with his brother without a cause is as guilty under the New Law, as the man was, who killed another under the Old Law, — in danger of the judgment.

The new law will not allow a man that is controlled by it, to even think of killing a man, for this new law is written in his heart and mind, and he is full of the Holy Ghost, so that it is impossible for him to harbor a thought of killing a man. "This is the covenant that I will make with them, in those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them." Heb. 10: 16. "For it is not ye that speak, but the Holy Ghost." Mark 13: 11.

2. Under the new law for one to look on a woman to lust after her, is committing adultery in his heart.

3. Instead of performing unto the Lord the various oaths, Jesus says, "Swear not at all, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. But let your communication be yea, yea, nay, nay, for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil."

4. Instead of an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth, RESIST NOT EVIL, is the great principle in the new law.

5. Instead of hating your enemies love them, "Bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you."

Those citations show the excellence —even perfection,—of the new; likewise the imperfection of the old.

In travelling around, through the Brotherhood, I have, a number of times, been at places where the keeping of the Seventh Day as Sabbath, according to the "fourth commandment," had been preached. Even some of our Brethren have said that "it does look as though the Seventh Day ought to be kept," or "it does look as though there was something wrong."

Now I will say that it does not only look that way, but I say that the seventh day must be kept, and something is wrong, if the "Ten Commandments" are in force; and if the Sabbath commandment,—to keep the seventh day,—is in force, the whole law is in force.

Now, in conclusion, we wish to say, that the Law, including the Ten Commandments, is in harmony with the Gospel, and not the smallest contradiction exists between the two, if they are considered in their proper relation to each other, that is, to behold the Law as a type or shadow of the Gospel, and that the thing fulfilled is always better than that which aids in fulfilling, 'for if that first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." Heb 8: 8. We will then have no trouble with the "Seventh-Day theory."

Let us hold up the GOSPEL COMMANDMENTS as the "more excellent way," the superior, the PERFECT LAW, as the great rule of life and salvation, and not make so prominent the few man-chosen mandates, called the "Ten Commandments," because it makes an impression on the child's mind that can not easily be erased.

I recollect a copy which I tried to imitate in my earliest efforts with the pen, as follows: "Commandments ten, God gave to men." This, in connection with the teaching as to what constitutes the "Ten Commandments," had a great tendency to make me think that there were two plans of salvation, (1) The "Ten Commandments," (2) The Gospel. What is embraced in the popular selection of "Ten Commandments," is as a city of refuge, to which the "moralist" will flee when he is assailed.

It is our mission to show them that the walls are thrown down, and that there is no security there, and invite them over into the "City of "Peace," where there is positive protection.

THE Brethren at Newton, Kansas, have about finished work on their meeting-house.

BEFORE his return east Bro. Amick will probably visit Northern California, Washington and Oregon.

BRETHREN S. S. MOHLER, Enoch Eby and Geo. Myers did some committee work in Bourbon County, Kansas, recently.

BRO. AMICK will probably return home via Portland, Ore., visiting on the way San Francisco and other places of interest.

"'LEARN of me,' says the philosopher, 'and ye shall find restlessness.' 'Learn of me,' says Christ, 'and ye shall find rest.'"

AGAIN news has been received that Henry M. Stanley, the African explorer, with Emin Pasha and an escort is marching toward the coast.

BRO. J. H. MOORE may again return to his pleasant home by the lake, at Keuka, Florida. Those who have visited the place say it is beautiful.

BRO. S. BOCK, Secretary and Treasurer of the Tract Work, with his family, was recently called to Indiana, to attend the funeral of Bro. Bock's aged father.

HAVE you read the "Miller and Sommer Debate"? If not, order a copy at once. Price by mail, postage prepaid, $1.50. Profits all go to the Mission Fund.

BRO. M. M. ESHELMAN desires us to give place to the following notice: "WANTED.—The name of the brother at San Diego, Cal., who wrote me last August concerning the illness of my brother. If this meets his eye, he will confer a favor by addressing me."

BRETHREN L. H. EBY and S. Lehmer recently held some meetings for the Brethren at Salem, Reno Co., Kans. Their labors were much appreciated by the church.

OUR friend, G. L. McDonaugh, will start with a party for Southern California, Nov. 27th. We understand Bro. M. M. Eshelman, of McPherson, will be one of the party.

BRO. J. W. METZGER, who is now in the Canada mission field, is not enjoying good health. Unless he improves he will have to return to his home in Indiana, at least for a while.

LAST week, in announcing Bro. I. M. Gibson's change of address, an error occurred. Instead of "North Fourth Street," it should read, "829 North Tenth Street" Please make a note of this.

BRO. D. E Price will start in about two weeks for Idaho and Washington to look after and assist in the [illegible] work in the Far West. He will spend [illegible] winter in that field of labor.

IT is estimated there are 195,000 saloons in the United States, where drunkards are being daily manufactured. To what an alarming extent has the evil of strong drink taken hold upon our people!

WE have not, as yet, received a single reason for closing Sunday-schools during the winter months, but, on the contrary, we are receiving a good many very strong reasons for keeping them alive all the year around.

THE next meeting of the General Church Erection and Missionary Committee will be held at Mt. Morris on Tuesday, Jan. 7, 1890. Those having business to bring before the Committee will [illegible] to the Secretary in ample time.

PRAIRIE fire has swept over the north-eastern portion of the Pan Handle of Texas and entirely destroyed the pasturage. Many of the people living there were compelled to go north into the Indian Territory to get pasturage for the flocks and herds.

"WHEN God intends to fill a soul, he first makes it empty; when he intends to enrich a soul, he first makes it poor; when he intends to exalt a soul, he first makes it humble; when he intends to save a soul, he first makes it sensible of its miseries and nothingness."

WE have received part of the notes for the first quarter of our Sunday-school Quarterly for 1890. They were prepared by Bro. James M. Neff, of Covington, Ohio, who takes Bro. Huber's place in this work. The lessons for 1890 are all found in the New Testament.

BRO. MARTIN BOWERS, of Colfax, Ind., desires to inform the Brethren of the Southern District of Indiana, where he has been appointed as one of the missionaries, that he is detained at home on account of the sickness of his daughter, who is suffering with consumption.

BRO. S. J. HARRISON, of Lanark, Ill., accompanied by sister Harrison and their son, Homer, paid us a visit last week. Bro. Harrison preached three interesting sermons in the Chapel to appreciative audiences. We enjoyed the visit very much and hope they will come again.

BRO. J. S. MOHLER, of Kansas, is expected to conduct a series of meetings at Lanark; Bro. Jacob Witmore, of Missouri, at Franklin Grove; and Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Pennsylvania, at Pine Creek—all in Northern Illinois—this winter. These Brethren will remain in the District some time and visit other churches.

TWO-THIRDS of the church membership in the United States are composed of women. Of the sixty thousand inmates of the penitentiaries, fifty-five thousand are men. Who says women are not better than men?

THE Office Editor would like to secure the Reports of our Annual Meetings prior to 1876. Any one having copies of such reports in good order and willing to dispose of them, will confer a special favor by writing to us, giving the year and price of the Report. Please write at once.

DR. WILFORD HALL, known to many of our readers as the author of the "Problem of Human Life," claims to have made a wonderful discovery in the treatment of disease. He claims that by the use of his discovery, without the use of medicine, good health and long life may be assured.

SISTER CENIE PEIFER, nee Long, of Waterloo, Iowa, in company with sister Swab, of Lanark, Ill., visited our office last week. In the days of the Brethren at Work sister Peifer set type in the office. She has not forgotten how to manipulate the letters, as she proved to us by going to the case and setting a stickful of type.

IN Northern Michigan there are many Counties without a church of any denomination. There are thousands of people growing up in the towns and in the woods who were never inside of a church and who have never heard the Word of God preached. Surely there is need of mission work near our own homes.

THE fifth annual report of the General Church Erection and Missionary Committee may be had free by addressing the Secretary, D. L. Miller, Mt. Morris, Ill. It is a 16-page pamphlet and contains much interesting information. Every solicitor in the Brotherhood should send for a copy, and all who are interested in the mission work of the church should not fail to read this report.

BRO. GEO. L. SHOEMAKER asks us to change his address to 437 Thirteenth Street, Chicago, and says, "I am well pleased with my school work here. I find the brethren and sisters, here in the city, to be very zealously engaged in the work of the Lord, and of course the blessing will follow. However, results may not come as fast as some, who are unacquainted with city church work, may expect. But the right kind of effort will win."

EVERY few years we hear of the discovery of some so-called scientific truth that appears to be inconsistent with the teaching of the Bible, and then infidels rejoice and predict the overthrow of God's Book, and learned theologists enter into very lengthy and oftentimes very obscure dissertations to prove that there is no conflict between the Bible and science. Twenty years ago radical Darwinism was held up as the great scientific truth that was to settle the origin of species and to set the Bible account of the creation of man aside. Darwin had secured everything except one link, and his chain was never put together. Talk to-day about the ape being the ancestor of man, and you are laughed at by the very scientists who, twenty years ago, were inclined to accept Darwin's theory. The late Prof. Lyell, a man justly noted as the greatest scientist of the world, says: "In the year 1808 the French Institute enunciated no less than eighty geological theories which were hostile to the Scriptures, but not one of those theories is held to-day." And so the great seats of scientific learning are continually promulgating theories hostile to the Bible, but they all go down before the Word of Truth and the Bible comes out of these contests uninjured and unharmed.

Bro. S. S. Mohler, has been in Kansas, attending to committee and church work. We are sorry to say that his health is somewhat impaired and he feels the necessity of remaining at home for a time, at least, in order to recuperate. We hope that he may very soon be fully restored to health.

Under date of Oct. 21, Bro. W. C. Teeter writes as follows: "Please say through the Gospel Messenger that my address is changed from Sidney, Nebr., to Omaha, Nebr., and if any members live in Omaha or vicinity, call on me at No 426 New York Life Building, or write me so I can call on them. The Lord being my helper, I desire to work up a mission in the Gate City."

Friends of the American Civil Sabbath of Rest are warned against a misleading petition, circulated by Seventh-day Adventists, ostensibly intended to prevent a union of "church and state," and other religious legislation by Congress, but presented in Congress as for the single purpose of antagonizing any law for "Sunday Rest." Even officers of Presbyterian and Methodist and other churches, loyal to the American Sabbath have been deceived into signing this manifold petition, which has as many strings to it as a May pole, one against the "Sabbath" to catch the infidel, another against religious teaching in the schools, to catch the Catholic; another against church and state, to catch the Protestant; all of whom are represented in Congress as against even laws for the Civil Rest Day.—W. F. C.

A brother asks us to give the places and dates of our Annual Meetings since 1880. We herewith give them:

Mt. Morris is but a small town but there are one hundred and twenty-six members of our church residing in the village. Of this number sixty-six are connected with the school as teachers, helpers and students. Six of the teachers are members of the church, and of this number three are ministers. Silver Creek church, including Mt. Morris, has a membership of about two hundred and fifty, with three elders, two ministers in the second degree, and three in the first. To this ministerial force are to be added, temporarily, six young ministers who are connected with the school. With such a force of workers much good ought to be done for the Lord. Brethren Price, Royer, Amick and others do a good deal of work away from home, and also assist when they are at home in filling the eighteen monthly home appointments. Four Sunday-schools are supported; a prayer-meeting every Thursday evening and a members' meeting every alternate Tuesday evening are held. The Sunday-schools and meetings are all well attended and the interest in all the work is good. During the last five years over two hundred have been added to the Silver Creek church by baptism and the good work still continues. May the Lord so direct those who have charge of this strong working force that it may continue to be a power for good in the church.

Bro. D. C. Hendrickson, of West Milton, Miami Co., Ohio, sends the following good news on a postal card: "Bro. G. L. Studebaker, of Indiana, is holding a series of meetings for us at this time. He has been preaching a little over one week,—fourteen sermons in all. For his hire souls are coming home. Seven dear ones were baptized to-day. Saints are encouraged and rejoice that the Lord is working with us. Others are counting the cost. May they yet, during these meetings, decide for Christ."

Recently, in conversation with an aged sister whose eyesight has failed so that she can only read very coarse print, she said, "I have a Testament with very large print and that is the only book that I read. Last Sunday I spent in reading in it and how short the day seemed; too short, for I wanted to read more, but when night came I had to lay the book away." How much is the experience of this aged saint like that of the righteous man of whom David speaks: "But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night."

Many of our readers will remember the efforts made a few years ago by our sister, E. M. Sumstine, of Salem, Nebr., to secure a house of worship at that place. Many will recall with gladness that they assisted in the good work by giving as the Lord had blessed them with the means to give. In a letter, bearing date of Oct. 22, sister Sumstine writes us that Bro. J. S. Mohler, of Morrill, Kansas, had been at Salem from Oct. 8 to the 20th, preaching the Word of Truth. The meeting-house was well filled each night and five came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. Sister Sumstine adds, "This makes twenty-five baptized since the Salem church was built, three years ago. The first sermon was preached by Eld. B. F. Flory and since then we have been growing slowly but surely, and we feel that much good will be accomplished at this place. We, of the Salem church, ask an interest in the prayers of God's people that the Father may send his blessing upon us and that we may grow strong as an army of God's children." Here we have a striking example of what may be done by well directed effort and trust in God. The meeting-house at Salem, Nebr., tells the story of what a woman can do. May it not be said of our sister, "She hath done what she could"?

Committee work has become an important factor in our form of church government. When a church has been thrown into disorder from such troubles as arise in our church work, and it is found that it can not be adjusted by ordinary methods, a committee is sent by the District Meeting, and if this fail, the Annual Conference sends out a committee and from their decision, when ratified by Annual Meeting, there is no appeal. The committee sits as judges in the case. They hear and examine the testimony and render a decision as nearly as possible in accordance with the facts in the case. Owing to the importance of the work placed in their hands, committees of this kind should be selected with great care. Men should be selected for such work who have clear, cool heads, with a judicial turn of mind. They should be well acquainted with our form of church government and have some knowledge of the rules governing evidence. Committee men are sometimes placed under very trying circumstances and then a quick perception of the right and an evenly-balanced judicial mind and matured judgment are of the greatest value. All men do not enjoy such advantages, and, as a result, fail under trying circumstances. Too much care can not be observed in selecting brethren to serve on important business.

The Mount Morris Sunday-school, in compliance with the words of Paul to lay by on the first day of the week as the Lord prospered them, set apart Sunday, Oct. 27, as a day upon which to make a special offering to assist in building a meeting-house in the City of Chicago. As a result $55.74 was added to the fund. At the close of the school on that day, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" was sung with the spirit and the understanding. All felt to rejoice that the Lord had put it into the hearts of scholars and teachers to do so much for the work in Chicago. Surely the blessing of the Lord will rest on such disinterested giving.

Many of our Sunday-schools are closing for the winter. Do not the children, the young people, and the older ones need Sunday-school instruction during the winter months? And, if so, why close the schools? Our common schools are kept open during the winter, and the children attend them. Why not do as well for the spiritual wants of the little ones as for their intellectual needs? We are glad that in many places the churches are keeping up the Sunday-schools all the year, earning for them the title of "Evergreen" Sunday-schools. Why may we not have more of them? Why stop any of them? Who will give a good, lawful reason why our Sunday-school work should die out in the winter? Let us have a good reason for such work, or let us have the evergreen Sunday-schools.

PREACHING IN CHICAGO.

The Chicago Evening Journal, which is, by the way, one among the best daily papers published in the great Metropolis of the West, in referring to Chicago preachers, uses the following language from which ministers, generally, may glean some good, sound advice:

"In many of the City churches to-morrow the preachers will take their texts from the Holy Scriptures and will deliver sermons upon religious topics, or topics so closely connected with revealed religion as to be the same thing in substance. A preacher who has an abundance of religion in his heart and of religious thought in his understanding, will find an abundance of religious subjects for pulpit use. Real piety, piety of the affections and piety of the intellect, produces, as a healthy tree produces fruit, argument, description, and every form of instruction suitable to Sabbath Gospel work. A sermon should tend to create in attentive hearers, elevation of thought and purpose, communion with sacred things, a pure and chaste mental habit and contemplation that extends to the future life.

"On the Sabbath, in the church, as a part of the worship that should fill the day, worldliness should be laid aside, politics, in the common meaning of the word, should be banished from the mind; reflections should be of heaven, its works and its ways. The preacher should not devote his sermon to outdoor subjects and the cares, intrigues, enterprises, plans and conspiracies of daily life. He should seek to make Christians of his hearers, or to make those who are already so better Christians—more like Christ in character, in their minds and hearts, in their worldly walks—and in all that they think, or do, or want. Goldsmith has described the model preacher:

> "'And as a bird each fond endearment tries
> To tempt its new-fledged offspring to the skies,
> He tried each art, reproved each dull delay,
> Allured to brighter worlds and led the way.'

"This is far different from the worldly preacher, who gives his congregation a Sunday lecture on the Cronin trial, on jury fixing, on the ward caucus, on methods of business practiced in the markets, or on the sensational or obscene side of city life. Pure Gospel Truth does not need to be spiced and tricked out in gaudy frills and in paint and varnish to make it acceptable to human minds. That sermon which needs the meretricious aid of sensationalism to render it attractive does not come from a mind saturated with religion and knowing nothing but Christ and him crucified.

"A preacher who has little religion of his own can not, of course, put much religion in his sermons. If he is worldly and common, his sermon will be worldly, and if it is not common it is at least made of common things, and becomes uncommon through spasmodic rhetoric or strained effects. The pulpit should be a rostrum where godliness is taught, and so taught that it will lead to godliness in conduct and will train character based on godliness in thought and deed."

Missionary and Tract Work Department.

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor. 16. 2.

"Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give. Not grudgingly or of necessity, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver" 2 Cor 9: 7.

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not" 2 Cor. 8: 12.

THE spirit of a person's life is ever shedding some power, just as a flower is steadily bestowing fragrance upon the air.

THE reason we have so few triumphant deaths, is because we have so few triumphant lives. The religion that does not triumph in life will rarely do so in death.

IF we only preach about him, teach, hear, talk, discuss and dispute about him; take his name into our mouth, but will not let him work or show his power in us, he will no more help us than the ark helped the Israelites.

YOUR maturest thought, your warmest Christian feeling, are demanded when you stand up to lead the thought and devotion of your fellow-believers. The leading of any religious meeting is a Christian task which calls for thorough preparation, and which should be entered upon with a deep sense of its importance.

THE gold mines of Scripture are not in the top soil; you must open the shaft; the precious diamonds of experience are not picked up in the roadway; their secret places are far down. Get down into the vitality, the solidity, the veracity, the divinity of the Word of God, and seek to possess with it all the inward work of the blessed Spirit.

THE Bible is far too much used as a mere book to furnish texts, with which to dignify what are called sermons, that, in reality, when tested by the true idea of preaching the Gospel, are not worthy of this title. Some of these so-called sermons are simply literary performances, without the Gospel in them, and without any apparent attempt to preach it.

"LET them learn first to show piety at home," said Paul. Religion begins in the family. One of the holiest sanctuaries on earth is home. The family altar is more venerable than any altar in the cathedral. The education of the soul for eternity begins at the fireside. The principle of love, which is to be carried through the universe, is first unfolded in the family circle.

WHAT the Bible brings to you will depend in a large measure on what you bring to it. You may have a crumb, or a loaf, or a granary full to bursting, just as you choose.

FIFTY-TWO short sentences of prayer, "O Lord, accept and bless this offering," are better than one petition half an hour long at the end of the year. Fifty-two gentle touches of a man's heart-strings are more efficacious of permanent results than one eloquent appeal at the end of the season.

THERE is but one way in which to learn this life; it is to live it. Reading about it, studying about it, praying over it, all are well, but they all stop short of the glorious, ultimate living it, so that here, as elsewhere, we can learn that the secret of knowing is doing. True knowledge is the legitimate outcome of true character.

TEACH THE CHILDREN.—Let no woman think her duties small or trifling, who has the care of even one child committed to her. It is a solemn trust. Great evils are to be met and overcome in the future of our land; intemperance, dishonesty and indolence are to be grappled with. Teach the little children the principles you wish to influence them as men and women. The masses of the future are the children of to-day. Their uplifting should begin now. When the mothers awake to a fulfillment of all their duty, the question as to how to uplift the masses will have ceased to agitate. It will have been quietly, but effectually answered.—Sel.

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—Bro. David Berkeybile, of Delta, Ohio, writes: "Our love-feast was a pleasant occasion to all. All seemed to enjoy its solemnity. Eld. McKinney, of Michigan, officiated. Bro. Zellers, of Bryan, Ohio, was also with us. He is zealous in the good work. God bless him for his labors of love! Many of God's children from the Poplar Ridge church, Defiance Co., O, were present."

—Bro. Dorsey Hodgden writes: "The Clear Creek church, Ind., commenced a series of meetings Sept. 27, continuing until Oct 3. Bro. Geo L Studebaker did the preaching. Three were added to the church. During the meeting we had our Communion, which was largely attended. Adjoining ministerial help was ample. We felt that the meetings closed too soon, but Bro. Studebaker had other arrangements, and felt it his duty to go."

—Under date of Oct. 16, Bro. David Hildebrand writes: "The members of the Johnstown church met in council Sept. 26 The business of the day passed off pleasantly and in love and peace. The old ship of Zion seems to be sailing along peacefully. Bro. Abraham Fyock was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. The love-feast in this church occurred Oct. 6. We had a very pleasant meeting. Three precious souls united with the church by baptism."

—Sister Rosa Parrett, of Litchfield, Illinois, writes: "While formerly we had our preaching and our Sunday-school in a private house, we now, through the kindness of the Mission Board, have a good church house, and preaching twice a month, Sunday-school every Sunday, and social meeting every Friday night. Bro. J. P. Studebaker is our Sunday-school Superintendent. My sister and I joined the Brethren church only last month. I am but ten years old, and hope that the brethren and sisters will remember me in their prayers, that I, though but a lamb of the fold, may ever be found faithful!"

—Under date of Oct. 14, Bro. Peter Beer writes: "I had the pleasure of attending the Montgomery love-feast, Indiana Co., Pa. We had a very enjoyable meeting. Here I met Bro. Brice Sell for the first time. He has been holding a series of meetings for the Montgomery church, and also officiated at the feast. Brethren Mark Minser and Joseph Holsopple assisted in the work"

—Bro. Oliver J. Lapp, of Moorefield, Frontier Co., Nebr., writes: "There are but few members in this County. So far as I know, none live nearer to me than six miles east of here. We have no organized church, but, with a little effort, the scattered members might be gathered into a band and others induced to enter also. Brethren, come! We have a good country, and there is a large field here for those who wish to labor for the Lord!"

—Under date of Oct. 16, Bro. David Hildebrand, of the Conemaugh church, writes: "According to previous arrangements, Bro. George Rairigh, of Purchase Line, opened a series of meetings Sept 28, and closed Oct. 13, with a love-feast. One applicant for baptism is the immediate result of the meeting. The members were warmed up and sinners made to tremble. Bro. Rairigh held forth the Word of God with power. He is not ashamed to tell the story of the Cross!"

—Under date of Oct. 18, Bro. H. F. Maust, of Waterloo, Iowa, writes: "Our love-feast, in the South Waterloo church, Oct. 12, is now in the past. About two hundred and fifty persons partook of the feast. The house was filled to the utmost by spectators. The behavior of the spectators could not have been better. Quite a number of brethren from adjoining congregations were present; also a number of ministering brethren from abroad. Bro. Daniel Brubaker began meetings Monday evening previous to our feast, and continued during the week. There were no accessions to the church, but we believe good impressions were made by our dear brother."

—Bro J. H Brubaker, of the St. Vrain church, Boulder Co., Colo., writes: "A series of meetings was commenced on Saturday evening, Oct. 5, by Bro. Henry Larick of San Luis Valley church and our home ministers, J. B. Bashor, J. O. Talley, H. Winger and D. H. Weaver,—our elder, Bro. G. W. Fesler, being sick. On Monday one was received into the fold by baptism, and on Saturday one was reclaimed. We believe the brethren and sisters were much strengthened and sinners made to think of their condition. On Saturday evening we surrounded the tables of the Lord. It was surely a feast to the soul. May the good seed sown spring up and bring forth much fruit, is our prayer!"

—Bro. Silas Hoover, of Boynton, Pa., writes: "According to previous arrangements I met with the saints in the Clear church on the evening of Oct. 4, and remained with them until the evening of the 11th. During the time five were added to the church by baptism and two reclaimed. A minister who had formerly belonged to the church, but who had gone with the Progressives, inquired whether he could not be restored, but as he was from the adjoining district, he had to be referred to the district in which he lives. The Brethren of the Clear church had their love-feast Oct. 11. The tables were all filled during these meetings and the best attention was given to the Word preached. It was a feast long to be remembered. The Clear church is in a prosperous condition, with one minister,—Bro. Michael Clear. The Christian deportment of the members, combined with their devotion to the cause, is much to be admired, and my visit among the members of the church will long be remembered."

—Under date of Oct. 16, sister Ella Royer, of Dallas Centre, Iowa, writes: "Our love-feast was held Oct. 5 and 6, and was one that will long be remembered by those who were present. Bro. Frank McCune was ordained as elder, and Bro. Abram Hawbaker was elected to the ministry. May God strengthen these two brethren to fill their office well, and may they be the means of saving many souls! Two more sisters have acknowledged Christ and united with our band since our last report. May they hold out faithful and at last reach their Father's home!"

—Under date of Oct. 20, Bro. A. B. Wallick, of Bloomingdale, Michigan, writes: "The members of the Black River church, Michigan had a very pleasant Communion Oct. 16. About forty communed. Ministers from abroad were John Stafford, from Indiana; Eld. John Stretch and Allen Munson, of Cass County. Elder Stretch officiated. Bro. Stafford came Oct. 4, and held a series of meetings, leaving for home on the 15th. Sixteen members have moved into the Black River church during the last year; among the number are three deacons. We are glad to have members move into this goodly land, to help us build up the cause of Zion. The members feel much built up by the good preaching from Bro. Stafford. May the Lord bless the good work!"

—Under date of Oct. 21, Bro. J. W. Metzger, of Gormley, Canada, writes: "A love-feast was held near this place Oct. 12, with nine members present. Not all the members in Canada could be with us, as they are living too far apart. Arrangements were made to hold a love-feast thirty miles north-east of Gormley, Oct. 20. This feast was the fourth one ever held by our brethren in this Dominion. All seemed to enjoy it. Brother and sister Hossack are the only two members of our church in this part of the country. The doctrine of our Brethren is new to a great extent, in this part of Canada, and it will take time to get the people to understand it fully. The love-feast was held at the house of brother and sister Hossack. May the blessings of God rest on this community, and our work here!"

—Sister Lillie A. Jenkins, of Salt Sulphur Springs, Monroe Co., W. Va., writes: "Husband and I started Aug. 8, for Roanoke County, Va., to visit parents and kind friends, whom we had not seen for several years. While with the Brethren at Copper Hill, Floyd County, five were added to their number by baptism. Their feast, Sept 7 and 8, was an enjoyable occasion to all. After returning home we attended our love-feast at Spruce Run, Sept. 21 and 22. Bro. John Eller did most of the preaching. Bro. Abraham France, of Greenbrier County, and Bro. Daniel Brubaker, of Roanoke, also assisted in making the meeting a pleasant and interesting one. On the Sunday, following the feast, Bro. George Hutchison was ordained elder, and we trust that the blessings of the Lord will be with him in his responsible work!"

Notes and Jottings.

According to promise, I met with the dear members of the Sandy church, Eastern Ohio, on the evening of Sept. 12. This is one of the places where the banner of our endeared cause was planted by some of our devoted Christian fathers over half a century ago. To call up their departure is sad, but the evidence that many of them left, of future rewards, is encouraging. The membership of the Sandy church is large. They have two large houses of worship. Eld. Lewis Glass has been in charge here for many years. While Bro. Lewis is a man of unusual physical vigor, his age is necessitating him to retire from the work. His zeal, however, seems unabating. He is assisted in the ministry by Eld. Byers and brethren Simon Stuckey, J. J. Hoover and Eli Stroup.

We were pleased to find so many faithful members in the Sandy church who seemed endeared to the cause, but we were made sad to find so many who had made such grave departures from the well-known, fixed principles of the government of the church, followed with the usual sad results. I utterly fail to see why evangelists encourage such measures of departure; for, instead of adding to, it destroys our strength. There is an anxious desire upon the part of the main body of the church to fully return to the loyal principles of the church; for this we were glad. To this object we devoted the energies of our short visit. We closed with a council-meeting on the 18th. This meeting proved so pleasant and harmonious that it was decided to have a feast in the near future. May the Lord bless the labors of his faithful in the Sandy church.

On the eve of the 19th I met with the saints near Louisville. Here we found a pleasant, harmoniously working body. The enemy succeeded in drawing a line of division at this place a few years ago, but that seemed to draw the remnant together more closely, and, as a result of their faithful, loyal efforts, the cause has grown in their midst Their number now about equals their number before the division. A large part of their membership consists of young members who seem to enjoy themselves in the church. Bro. Conrad Kahler has the care of the work here. His faithful services have been before the church for years. Bro. Kahler was in attendance at the meetings, though feeble in health. Like David, Zion with him seems to be his "chief joy." Bro. Weirick and John F. Kahler are co-workers in the ministry.

On Thursday, Sept. 26, as we were ready to open our morning meeting, a telegram was handed me. With trembling hands I broke the seal, and read the sad message of the death of J. J. Workman, married to my only full sister. With no little regret we took our leave the same evening, as their special feast was Sept. 28. One was baptized.

Sept. 28 we joined the large, mourning, weeping band. Oh, what grief! What bitter tears as we surrounded that lonely, open grave! What a lonely journey is much of this life! How little real comfort it does afford! We love to believe the teaching that "all things work together for good to them that love the Lord!" But when a kind father of eight children is taken away, a minister whose services are so much needed in the church, it becomes very difficult, with our dim vision, to reconcile the above sad state with what to us looks to be best. The attendance was unusual. Brethren Loomis, Keller and Brubaker administered in the Word.

I. J. Rosenberger.

Our love-feast, Sept. 6th, was a rich feast to all,—one long to be remembered by many. About eighty members communed. Ministers present from abroad were brethren P. G. Winey, J. H. Neher, Andrew Neher, Geo. Garst and —— Lentz. One was baptized on the day of the feast.

Oct. 2, we, in company with Bro. Henry Crist and family, went to the love-feast at Appanoose church, Franklin Co., Kans. We arrived about 4 P. M., when the meeting commenced. After examination services, about one hundred and fifty members surrounded the Lord's table. There were fourteen ministers present at this meeting. Bro. Daniel B. Barnhart has the oversight of this church, and is assisted in the ministry by John Sherfey, John Harshman, —— Heckman and —— Garst. They have a good house of worship, 40 by 60 feet in size. The membership in this congregation is some over one hundred. The District Meeting of North-eastern Kansas is expected to be held in this church next spring. From here we went to the feast at Pleasant Grove, Douglas County. On the evening of Oct. 5, about one hundred and sixty brethren and sisters met for love-feast exercises. Eld. James Hilkey has the care of the church. The other ministers in this church are brethren P. G. Winey, S. B. Kathерman, T. A. Robison and E. Hertzler. About eighty members belong to this church. They have a large house, 48 by 64 feet in size.

A pleasant feature that we noticed at both of the meetings, is worthy of imitation by some older churches,—that is to clear off the tables before the congregation is dismissed. Try it and see!

We never saw better order than at the Pleasant Grove meeting, which speaks well for them.

A sad accident occurred at the home of brother and sister Joseph Beeghly, Sept 16. James, the oldest son, and a neighbor boy arranged to take a hunt. James proceeded to the porch to get his gun, which lay (loaded) in a wood-box. As he was lifting the gun from the box, the hammer caught at the lid of the box, raising the hammer far enough to discharge the load. James must have been in a stooping position, as the load entered the right side of the neck, severing the main artery; also struck the spinal cord, which caused instant death. At the time of this sad accident brother and sister Beeghly were visiting friends at Falls City, Nebraska. The sad occurrence cast a gloom over the whole community. It was sorrowful to see those parents return home to attend a funeral. They had intended to visit friends six or eight weeks in the West, but in six days returned.

The age of the deceased was nineteen years, five months and twenty-four days, and he was a young man full of promise. Could we but realize the importance of being prepared, for we know not what moment we may be called away to a spirit world!

The funeral took place Sept. 20, when James was consigned to the tomb in the Maple Grove church-yard. The services were conducted by Bro. I. D. Parker. A. J. Myers.

From the Oakley Church, Ill.

Bro. John Harshbarger came to us Oct. 2, and remained until Oct. 12. We had a refreshing season and a feast of good things. We had thirteen meetings, including one for the children, on Sunday morning, and Communion, Oct. 11.

Bro. John used the Sword with sharp edges, and was instrumental in helping us to slay the carnal man in some of the many forms in which he appears. The church here is encouraged, confirmed, and knit together.

Sinners, also, were pointed to the necessity of obeying the loving Father who has so richly provided all things for the good of his children. Owing to previous engagements elsewhere, Bro. Harshbarger was obliged to leave us while the interest and congregations were still increasing.

Brethren Bailey, of Urbana, and Blickenstaff, of Indiana, were with us at the feast, and continued the meetings over the following Sunday.

We feel to praise God for the happiness afforded us in these meetings, and hope they may ever be remembered by the Oakley church. Come again, brethren!

Bro. David Frantz, our elder, was thrown from his wagon on Thursday evening, Oct. 10, while arranging to gather a load of passengers to go to meeting. His shoulder was dislocated and his face bruised somewhat. He is getting along as well as can be expected, and we hope he will soon recover again! A. J. NICKEY.

To the Members of the Middle District of Iowa.

WHILE preparing the Minutes of the Conference of the Middle District of Iowa, — for which body I acted in the capacity of Writing Clerk,— one of the decisions was inadvertently omitted, for which I ask the pardon of all concerned. My only excuse for the omission is the hurried manner in which I had to prepare the Minutes for the press,—at a time when others were enjoying Bro. Brubaker's sermon. I will now give the missing item:

"Housekeepers should see that one or more solicitors are appointed in each congregation to procure means for carrying on the home mission work of the Middle District of Iowa."

Southern Mission.

WE left our home in Woodford County, Ill., on the evening of Oct. 15, and started from Panola, on the Illinois Central railroad, at 7 A. M., of the following day, for our Southern work. We arrived at Centralia in the evening and changed cars for Mt. Vernon, Jefferson Co., Ill., where we were met and conveyed to Bro. D. F. Eby's home. Bro. Eby is the elder in charge, with Bro. Hicks as assistant minister, two deacons and about eighteen members. We commenced meetings on the evening of the 17th. On Saturday, Oct. 19th, the church met to hold an election for one deacon. The lot fell upon Bro. Henry Buck. May he ever be faithful to the trust committed to him! In the evening was their Communion season. The weather was pleasant, and about forty members communed. There was a good attendance from adjoining churches. Ministers from other churches were brethren John Harshbarger, of Wayne County, George Gibson, of Macoupin County, and Daniel Ulery and Blickenstaff, of Salem, Marion County. Altogether we had a pleasant meeting and, we trust, also profitable to all present. This evening we leave for Laforge, Mo., where we expect to be present at their council and Communion meetings. JAS. R. GISH.

The Chicago Mission.

PERHAPS some are wondering what we are doing in Chicago and what the church prospects are. They wonder if the little church, organized last March, is yet alive and if prosperity is attending the efforts that have been, and are being, made. As there is a feeling prevailing in our Brotherhood that a church of the Brethren can not survive,—grow and prosper,—in the larger cities, we thought,—as many of our Brethren can not come to see for themselves what is being done for the Lord,—of giving, through the MESSENGER a little account of our work.

As yet the work is under the supervision of the Mission Board. Since organizing, in March, two love-feasts have been held. Two deacons were elected at the time of organization, and a minister in June. We organized with twenty-one members. Our number has since grown to forty members. Two have been baptized during the summer, and a number more are almost persuaded to cast their lot with the children of God. The members, both brethren and sisters, are falling into line, realizing the great individual responsibility resting on them, and all are ready to work in harmony and union.

The Sunday-school, held every Lord's Day at 2:30 P. M., is in a most prosperous condition. Though not as large as we could desire, it is interesting and growing. Our Thursday evening prayer-meeting has grown from an attendance of three on the start, to twenty within the year. All seem very much interested and spiritually built up, growing day by day more in sympathy with the church and her work.

There have been, since the District Meeting at Lanark, in May, between six and seven hundred dollars raised for a house of worship, besides about $75.00 for rent and incidental expenses. There has been preaching every Sunday since our organization.

Now as to the needs of our work. The first and greatest need is a house of worship. The question may very properly be asked, "Why can we not get along with the house we now have rented?" The reasons are these: We can get the house only on Sunday afternoon, and for one evening during the week. For this short time we pay one hundred and twenty dollars per year. Many times we could hold more meetings to a good advantage, especially when some of our ministering brethren are with us. This we can not do, however, unless we have a house of our own.

Dear brethren, we earnestly ask that you remember the work here in this great city. We are surrounded on all sides by pride and folly, sin and sorrow. Bear us up in your prayers to God, that we may all prove faithful and be instruments in God's hand to build up his cause and lead souls to Christ! W. R. MILLER.

From Ladoga, Ind.

OCT. 3 and 4 were our feast days. About two hundred members communed,—some of our tender lambs for the first time. This occasion, we trust, will be remembered with pleasure. Ministers present, besides the home brethren, were, brethren R. H. Miller, D. C. Campbell, N. Bowers, D. Replogle and others. They fed us richly on the good things of God. We hope our hearts were as good ground, well prepared to receive the good seed. Bro. Miller remained with us a few days and preached nine sermons. If all would heed the good admonitions given and put them to practice, a great deal of good would be done.

Oct. 10, husband and I, in company with brother and sister Harmeson, went to the Potato Creek church to enjoy the feast there, which was a pleasant one. Bro. R. H Miller officiated at both of these feasts. May we all have for our motto, "Onward and Upward," ever looking to Jesus! Amidst all the good meetings we enjoy, we should not forget those who can not be with us, on account of affliction. Can we not all pray in their behalf? SOLOME A. WATKINS.

From the Donald's Creek Church, Clarke Co, Ohio.

OUR feast was held Oct. 19. It was a large and pleasant meeting,—the largest we have had for ten years. Our ministerial force was strong. Eld. Tobias Krider officiated, with the help of brethren J. Smith, G. Holler, J. Katherman, J. Stutsman, D. Wine, H. Longanecker, A. Brumbaugh, J. Cristy, J. Bright and others. After the 10 o'clock meeting, two young lambs were baptized. May the Lord bless them, that they may ever be faithful! We had preaching again at 3 o'clock, and in the evening gathered around the Lord's table. We have a large house but we felt the need of a larger one as there was not room enough for all. Sunday morning at nine o'clock we had several addresses by our brethren to the Sunday-school and in regard to its work, and the duty of parents. The house was well filled and I hope that much good was done. At ten o'clock we had preaching; also at night.

Sept. 27, I left home to work in the Lord's vineyard in Defiance and Williams Counties, Ohio. Sept. 28, I attended the feast in the Maumee church. We had a pleasant meeting. Here I met Bro. J. H. Miller, who was one of the guests at our home for three weeks last winter. I also met brethren S. Loose, J. Stafford, and others.

On Sunday evening we were taken to Lick Creek church, near Bryan, where we labored as best we could for one week. During the time they held their feast, which was an enjoyable one. We had very good attendance at the meetings, and I hope that, while there were good "listeners," there may also be good "obeyers." I spent nearly two weeks in this church last winter and it was very pleasant to meet once more. There were no additions during our last visit, but we hope some may soon come. Three were baptized at the Maumee church.

On account of this meeting and other matters, it was impossible for me to go to California Oct. 8th, as I would like to have done, but I hope to be able to go in the near future. HENRY FRANTZ.

From the Wolf River Church, Kans.

AFTER Bro. A. Hutchison was here in July, Bro. C. C. Root, of Missouri came to us and held a few meetings. One made application for baptism and was baptized after he left.

We held our love-feast Oct. 12 and 13. It was an occasion to be remembered by the members. The weather was fine, and the Brethren in adjoining churches took advantage of the good opportunity to encourage us. Brethren Wm. Davis, Peter Eisenbise, Richard Berkeybile and Harvey Broughard were the visiting ministers. Bro. Wm. Davis officiated at the feast. We had preaching by the above-named brethren on Sunday forenoon and also at night.

We held an election on Sunday, when brethren James Smith and Rufus Sawyer were chosen to serve in the church as deacons and were duly installed. W. H. H. SAWYER.

From South Bend, Ind.

OCTOBER 3 I met with the Brethren of the St. Joseph Valley congregation at their love-feast. There was a strong ministerial force present, and we had a very enjoyable meeting. Bro. George Shively, of Etna Green, Ind., officiated. Next morning we had an excellent meeting, at which each minister present gave a short talk on Scriptural subjects, to the building up of the little band of believers at that place. The church has no minister at present, but is under the charge of Bro. Thurston Miller, of La Porte, Ind.

Oct. 4 I met with the brethren and sisters of the St. Joseph church at their love-feast. Here also there was a large ministerial force, Bro. Daniel Snell, of Clay Pool, In., officiating. Next morning the church held an election for two deacons, the lot falling upon brethren Harrison Huston and Christian Wenger. After the installation of these brethren, the ordination of Bro. Hiram Kreighbaum to the eldership took place.

On the evening of Oct. 5 I met with the saints, and a large force of efficient Gospel teachers, at the Communion service in the Elkhart Valley church—an occasion long to be remembered. Bro. Stutsman, of Petoskey, Mich., officiated. Next morning we enjoyed a children's meeting. Following this service, Bro. Snell, of Clay Pool, Ind., gave us a practical sermon from the words of the prophet Daniel—"Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting."

Oct. 8 we met with the brethren and sisters of the Yellow Creek Church at their feast of love, and were made happy by celebrating the Communion service with a large number of God's servants. Bro. J. C Murray, of Nappanee, Ind., officiated to the benefit of the church Next morning, soon after breakfast, several discourses were delivered, but necessity demanded my return home, to make my way to the Pine Creek church for another love-feast. Here I met quite a large attendance. We had a good meeting, with Bro. Daniel Wysong, of Nappanee, Ind., breaking the bread of Communion to the members. In the morning an election was held for two deacons, the choice falling on brethren William Baughman and Judson Beeknith. We hope they may be faithful in the discharge of their duties. At this place 450 saints communed, and four were added to the church by baptism.

Oct. 12 I met with the members of the Walnut church at their pleasant meeting. Here twenty-three ministers were present, and did good service. Bro. John Metzler, of Wakarusa, Ind., officiated On the following morning quite a number of addresses were made by the different ministers, to the satisfaction of all.

Thus closed several good meetings; we hope the Lord will bless the work! DANIEL WHITMER.

From Poplar Ridge Church, Ohio.

OUR love-feast occurred Oct. 5. Judging by my observations and the expression of others, we had a rich feast for the soul.

We have two church-houses in this congregation—one on the north side of the river, and one on the south side. They are nine miles distant from each other by private conveyance, as we have to go by way of Defiance in order to cross the river. The Brethren concluded to hold some meetings in each house previous to the feast. Accordingly, Bro. John Miller, of Milford, Ind., commenced meetings in the south house on the evening of Sept. 29, and Bro. J. Hiestand commenced meetings on the north side Sept. 30. As an immediate result of these meetings, one was baptized on the south side of the river, and two on the north side. These, with three during the summer, make six additions since I moved into this congregation—in the middle of March. One was reclaimed We had good meetings. Brethren Miller and Hiestand are able expounders of the Gospel. The visiting ministers were brethren Miller, Hiestand and J. Kintner. The latter has charge of this church. Bro. Hiestand officiated at the feast.

From Sugar Creek Church, Allen Co., Ohio.

OUR love-feast occurred Oct. 5, and was enjoyable to the many souls present. The church was well represented, all the members, with but few exceptions, being present. All were richly fed from the truths of God's Word by the dear brethren who were with us. Bro. Samuel Neher, of Indiana, officiated.

Bro. L. H. Dickey preached the dedicatory sermon in our new church house on Sunday, a large number of people being present. We now have two houses of worship in this district. The church at this place is under the care of Bro. Samuel Driver, and is in a prosperous condition. Bro. Dickey will conduct a series of meetings for us some time this winter, and we hope and pray that many precious souls may be gathered into the fold of Christ.

Dear brethren and sisters, while we are blessed with houses of worship, let us not forget that at other places many precious souls are perishing for the want of the Bread of Life. Let us do our part to supply them, and God will reward us for it in the end. A. E. RISH.

Notes by the Way.

DISTRICT MEETING OF SOUTHERN ILLINOIS.

THROUGH the mercies and goodness of God I was permitted to attend the District Meeting, Oct. 1; also two Communion meetings afterwards.

The District Conference of the Southern District of Illinois convened in the Panther Creek church, Woodford Co, Ill., Oct. 1, 1889, and organized by electing D. B. Gibson, Moderator; G. W. Gibson, Secretary; and Conrad Fitz, Reading Clerk. All business passed off rapidly, and, apparently, with ease. The Meeting closed at 3:30 P. M. Out of thirty-five churches six failed to be represented.

The following amendment to the rules was adopted: "If no election is had on the first ballot, all except the two highest shall be dropped and choice made between those two."

Only fifteen churches out of the thirty-five are represented as donating to missionary work. This is not half of the entire number. There must be something lacking on the part of some one, or the churches would reach a higher standard. If those that are not represented are weak, but little would be required, but that little should be presented, if it be only the mite.

Wake up, brethren! Elders, do not let the Children's Mission excel you in that line! Arise to your duty; God will help and bless you and his work! Do not fear!

David Vaniman was re-elected District Collector to whom all contributions for General and District Mission Work should be sent. His address is Virden, Ill. Eld. Javan Gibson was elected general missionary for the ensuing year. Brethren and sisters, give him all the comfort you can, as he is mourning the loss of a loved companion.

The District Treasurer reported as follows:

Amount deficit at last report,	5 70
Amount expended,	79 86
Total,	$ 84 86
Amount deficit,	$ 22 86

There is something wrong when we are behind in money for the Lord's treasury. Come, let us reach down into our pocket-books, that the Lord's treasury may be filled.

Elders G. W. Cripe and Solomon Bucklew were elected members of the Standing Committee; brethren D. B. Gibson and T. D. Lyon, alternates. There were calls for District Meeting from West Otter Creek, Astoria, Big Creek and Coal Creek. Next District Meeting will be held in the West Otter Creek church on Tuesday preceding the first full moon in October, 1890. The members of that church are lively, working members, and will make all feel welcome.

I would be glad if some of the brethren and sisters would visit us, as we only live about five miles from the church.

I rejoice that the Lord permitted me to have the pleasure of visiting sister Rebecca Snavely and family on my way to the Communion meeting at Cerro Gordo, Ill. There was quite a number of communicants at that place, and the occasion was a feast to the soul.

A CHILDREN'S MEETING.

At the close of the meeting, Bro. D. B. Gibson announced a children's meeting at the Milmine church, for next Sunday, about four and one-half miles from the Cerro Gordo church. He stated that "Aunt Mary" would be at the meeting. God be praised that I was there, for it was a feast to my soul!

Eld. D. B. Gibson has the oversight of this church, and he selected Bro. George Cripe to talk to the children that day. I think Bro. Cripe would be following a good work, to make it one of his special aims to address the children, for he is a noble worker among them.

Bro. Gibson called the children to the front seats and then had the young members sit back of them. It was one of the most lovely sights I ever saw, and I would be glad if there were more such meetings. It is rich food for the lambs. All that I heard expressed themselves very favorably.

Before the meeting closed, Bro. D. B. Gibson announced that they would take up a collection for our "Children's Mission." How the little ones seemed to enjoy having the pleasure of giving their pennies for the Lord! The donation amounted to $8.17,—a liberal donation indeed!

I am made to wonder why we do not have more meetings for the children in every arm of the church, so as to have a better chance to instruct them in the duties they owe to the Lord. A children's meeting is one of the best places to teach them that it is good to give to the Lord. Most all children will give more freely to the mission cause, if instructed to do so, than spend their money for some frivolous thing that is worse than nothing.

The future welfare of the church depends upon the rising generation, and we should be bringing them to the front, teaching them to take Christ for their example and follow closely in his footsteps! Christ said, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." They were brought and he took them up in his arms and blessed them.

MARY M. GIBSON.

Virden, Ill., Box 421.

Echoes from the Highway.

OUR quarterly council occurred at Covina Oct. 5. We were glad to meet once more with our brethren and sisters in church work. One sister who had been admonished again and again, was disowned for refusing to "hear the church." She preferred the friendship of the world to that of God, but it is hoped that she will, ere it be too late, see the error of her ways and repent, that she may be saved in the great and notable day of the Lord. Excepting this one case, union and harmony seem to prevail, so far as reported by the visiting brethren. The time of our feast has been set for Nov. 2.

On Monday we met with Bro. J. T. Nair at Los Angeles, and accompanied him to his home,—some eighteen miles south-east of the city, and only about ten miles from the sea-coast, which makes it a pleasant locality to live in. Bro. Nair took me over a goodly portion of the tract of land, on which he expects to see, ere long, a settlement of our Brethren. I must say I was surprised to find such a desirable locality unsettled, but it seems the land was not on the market before in small tracts. All around it are very fine homes, by which one can, at a glance, see the wonderful productiveness of the soil. Artesian wells are to be had anywhere on the tract. The price of the land was another surprise. No longer need Brethren stay away from Southern California because of the high price of land. Bro. Nair proposes to sell at low figures in order to induce Brethren to come and settle this tract of land, and in this way build up the cause of the Master here. We predict for Southern California a bright future as a stronghold for the church. The discouragements incident to getting a foothold in new territory are past, and now, with ordinary vigilance and perseverance there is no reason why success should not crown all legitimate efforts in enlarging the borders of Zion in this semi-tropic latitude. For particulars address, T. J. Nair and Co., Buena Park, Cal.

Elim —Ex. 15: 27.

THE Communion seasons at home, at Salem, and at Walnut Valley, were all seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, hence suggested the delightful encampment of Israel. The Exodus of the Children of Israel beautifully illustrates the Christian life, and their history is written for our admonition and learning. The good Lord knew what it would take to sustain spiritual life, hence we have those feasts of charity and the symbols of life, in the Communion emblems, after the washing of our feet, which are so ready to run into mischief. We also have the salutation of the holy kiss. All of these, when properly engaged in, draw the mind to the great Author and Finisher of our faith, and spiritualize our entire being, for they are the very essence of the spirit of God.

But we can not tarry; we are marching! Next comes the wilderness of Sin, located between Elim and Sinai. Then comes the lusting for the flesh-pots in Egypt, and the murmuring, when the Lord sent them quails in abundance until they loathed them. They had quails in the evening and manna in the morning; but they must gather a little every day,—just as much as they needed. The surplus would spoil before morning. By this he proved them. The Lord always proves his people, and the more simple the law or test, the more readily we violate or refuse it. Like Naaman, the leper, many refuse the simple act of washing in Jordan, until they find, like him, that there is no salvation any other way. So, also, Peter refused the simple act of having his feet washed by the Savior, until he learned there was no salvation without it. The Lord's means are, and always have been, very simple. By them he tests our fidelity to him.

Our human weaknesses and errors are small, but many; therefore we should not murmur as the Israelites did, and were destroyed for their sin.

During the last two years our crops failed in Kansas, and, alas, what murmuring! Many went back to the "flesh-pots of their fathers." Now, since the garners are overflowing, the complaint is that the markets are too low! How long-suffering our Lord is! If such murmurers and complainers will be so fortunate as to get into the Holy City (of which I am very doubtful), they will find fault with something. Either the streets will be too narrow, or unnecessarily broad, or the trees on either side of the river are not planted straight, or they wish they could see the moon or something else.

Let us neither lust after evil things as the Israelites did, nor let us sit down to eat, and rise up to play, and forget to thank the Lord. Come, let us march and get away from the wilderness of Sin!

We felt especially encouraged with the thought that while many of us must so n put off this tabernacle, that there are other young brethren who are not ashamed of the Gospel neither afraid to defend it boldly. How it thrills our heart with joy when young, unassuming brethren, who carry the order of the church with them, both in appearance and in spirit, come among us and defend the Truth so earnestly. You can not realize how the fathers in Israel rejoice and pray for you! To all such we would say, "Be not discouraged; though your names appear not in print, and though your eulogy is not spread before the world! Press on, rejoicingly; your names are written in heaven!" ENOCH EBY.

Hutchinson, Kans.

"IT is in the time of trouble, when some to whom we may have looked for consolation and encouragement regard us with coldness, and others, perhaps, treat us with hostility, that the warmth of the friendly heart, and the support of the friendly hand acquire increased value, and demand additional gratitude."

"THE oaks used in building ships are not found in cultivated fields, but in the wild forests, and are developed by virgin soil, rain and wind storms, as well as warmth and sunshine. So the grand spirits that are moving the world do not originate in the halls of luxury, but in lowly tenements and cabins of hardship and want."

Literary Notes.

BIBLE BRILLIANTS; or, MOTHER'S HOME BIBLE STORIES, related by Rev. Geo. A. Hammell, with three hundred illustrations, is the leading young folks' book for the season, and as a holiday present it will be opportune.

It is a history of Bible characters and events written in style and language that will at once attract and instruct. The illustrations are among the best and will greatly assist in impressing the Bible truths presented. The book is 9½x11½ inches in size, well printed on good paper and neatly bound, containing 300 pages. It should be found on the table of every Christian family. Published by Cranston and Stowe, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The death messenger came to her almost without warning. She felt rather better in the morning than usually, but by eight o'clock she had passed to the spirit world. Sister Brocklesby leaves a husband and four children to mourn their loss May this dispensation of Providence move up on the hearts of the unconcerned!

Spokane Falls New Line.

The Union Pacific Railway, having completed its line to Spokane Falls, Washington Territory, is running its trains direct to that point, thus forming the most desirable route from the East on account of its Pullman Palace Sleeping Cars, Pullman Dining Cars, and Free Pullman Colonist Sleepers.

Spokane Falls is situated in the Palouse country and is the distributing center for a section of the North-west, the resources of which are unlimited. As an illustration: 50,000 bushels of wheat have been raised from 1,000 acres of land. Another feature of the country greatly conducive to the raising of crops, is the rainless harvests, no rain falling while crops are being harvested.

Many desirable farms may yet be had in this remarkably productive region on reasonable terms, and a more favorable opportunity for procuring a farm cheap will not soon present itself again.

For pamphlets descriptive of the country, or for rates, time tables or maps pertaining to the Union Pacific Railway apply to your nearest Ticket Agent, any Agent of this Company, or the undersigned.

Colonist Sleepers.

THE Union Pacific Ry., also known as The Overland Route, has lately added to its service a number of new cars (which, by the way, are built by the World-famous Pullman Company) entitled Colonist Sleepers, and which for convenience and comfort are but little behind the handsome Pullman Palace Car. The cars are designed for the use and comfort of the Colonist, who, with his family, intend moving West to grow up with the country.

The only difference between these cars and the regular first-class Pullman is that the Colonist sleeper is not upholstered. There are fourteen sections in each car, and separate toilet rooms for ladies and gentlemen. At night, by means of sliding head boards and heavy damask curtains, as much privacy is secured as if in the regular first class sleeper. Plenty of fresh, clean towels and a good supply of water are also to be found. A uniformed porter accompanies each car to look after the comfort and attend to the wants of the passengers, and no smoking is allowed. It certainly seems that for cheap and commodious sleeping accommodations, while traveling, these cars can not be excelled.

Not "How Cheap" but "How Good!"

IT must not be presumed that HERBICURA is a high-priced medicine just because it is not classed with cheap trash. The first consideration is QUALITY, and next PRICE. The makers guarantee the lowest prices consistent with honesty, and those who order for the first time are entitled to a complimentary discount. This is preferable to giving Bibles and books as premiums.

CAMERER & BRO. are known to the public for nearly seven years, but only recently have they appeared in these columns. It is their avowed intention to make HERBICURA a household name, and will conduct their business by just methods so that reputable physicians will not hesitate to prescribe HERBICURA, and publishers will be proud to advertise it for them.

A common but erroneous theory is that an advertiser to succeed must not instruct the people but rather work upon the credulity of the credulous. The proprietors of HERBICURA have taken a new departure in this respect. Their motto is: "Everything to reveal and nothing to conceal." Underhanded work should be frowned down. If you desire a good family medicine for yourself or neighbors and can appreciate square and honorable dealings, then your patronage is solicited.

If a man who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before, is a benefactor of his age, how much more are those who will be the means of conferring health upon mankind by introducing HERBICURA.

An agent can be sure of having what is called a "run" until all the afflicted people in his community have been restored to perfect health and from that time on there will be a continued demand for HERBICURA as a general household medicine. It is pleasant to take and is also a favorite with children and elderly people. It may be taken by either sex as a laxative and alterative. An opportunity is hereby extended to all persons who may feel inclined to work in this field of benevolence.

If a man has dyspepsia he can take red pepper freely and it will afford temporary relief; but it won't be long till the stomach refuses to be stimulated in this way, and then he is far worse than before, for the remedy has seriously injured him.

A tired, weak man can fill himself with whisky, and, for a short time, he may imagine he is getting strength, but it won't be long till that will fail, and he will be weaker than before.

What, then, is the right way? The only permanent and satisfactory remedy for most of the troubles of mankind is that which will invigorate and strengthen the whole system.

This can only be done by beginning at the origin of life, which is the BLOOD. No one whose blood is strong and healthy can be sick; therefore, if the blood is purified and invigorated, disease can not remain.

How many people of your personal acquaintance are constantly complaining of being "so tired," having "such a headache," of "not feeling just right," and a thousand and one other things, until it almost seems as if the world had become one huge hospital filled with incurables?

What is the cause of all this? Certainly it is not a natural condition, but, on the contrary, is one that should cause much anxiety and alarm.

Nothing will restore failing health, nothing will so quickly and surely bring strength, as HERBICURA.

Everybody knows that the blood is the foundation of life, and that so long as the blood is pure and healthy, disease can not secure a hold.

Are you tired and weary, overworked and overstrained? Do you wish that you could sleep? Are you sick of tossing around all night, ever trying and ever failing to get sleep and rest?

Do you ache all over, wishing the morning was night, and the night morning? Is life a burden and everything around you dark and gloomy? Take HERBICURA and you will wonder how it is you feel so well, and why the world is so bright.

Probably nobody wants to be sick just for the fun of it, and nearly everybody tries one thing and another in the vain hope that it will cure them; but, in most cases, they find themselves no better for the trial.

There is no reason why they can't be cured if they go about it in the right way; but they generally take the wrong way, and then think there is no use trying any more, and so keep getting worse instead of better.

Do you care whether you are well or sick? Instead of feeling tired and worn out, instead of aches and pains, wouldn't you rather feel fresh and strong?

You can continue feeling miserable and good for nothing, and no one but yourself can find fault, but if you are tired of that kind of life, you can change it if you choose.

How? By getting one bottle of HERBICURA, and taking it regularly according to directions.

Some people have been deceived repeatedly in so-called blood medicines, and it is natural that they should hesitate to order anything they have never heard of before, and this is why our friends, who are familiar with the virtues of HERBICURA, personally recommend it to others.

The best and quickest way to get HERBICURA fresh and pure, is to get it direct from headquarters, and thus get the complimentary discount and a FREE copy of "THE HERBICURIAN."

SPECIAL NOTICE.

As the GOSPEL MESSENGER is printed and mailed at the Western Office, Mt. Morris, Ill., to avoid keeping two sets of books, and the unnecessary trouble of resending names, as well as the delay, we have decided that it will be best to have our agents send all subscriptions for the GOSPEL MESSENGER to the Western Office; also all copy, intended for publication, unless intended for the inspection of the Eastern Editor, should be sent to the Western Office. Our agents and contributors will please make a note of this, and hereafter direct their subscriptions and contributions accordingly. If any of our agents who have been dealing with us, fail to get the regular agents' outfits, please write to the Western Office, and they will be sent. We hope this change of business relation will in no way affect the zeal and activity of our agents and friends, as our relation to the paper and work is in no way changed by it. It is simply a matter of business convenience. We are sure that your business relation with the Western Office will be quite as satisfactory as it could be with us. The business connected with Sunday-school supplies, books of all kinds, our own and others, Bibles, etc., will remain as before. Books of any kind, to be sent by express, should be ordered from the nearest office. We take special pleasure in supplying our patrons with good and cheap Family Bibles.

PREACHING.

PREACHING is one of the ways of making known to the world the Gospel of salvation; and that there is much of it done is a fact that can not be controverted. When we consider all the preaching that is done, and the other means of grace, it would seem a wonder that any souls should be lost. But who does this preaching? This is another phase of the subject that is worthy of more than a passing notice, as the result of any work depends largely upon the means used in doing it. This is especially true in this, the most important of all works.

They are those, first, who have been lawfully called. How can a man preach unless he is sent? The call is to come from God, through the church. While God is the acting party, the church becomes the instrument, so that the call is the important factor in the work. As the minister is made the acting factor in the institution of marriage, so the church becomes the acting factor in setting forward or legalizing the functions of the ministers.

A minister may perform the marriage ceremony, but this alone would not constitute a true marriage. There is an important part in both cases that precedes the ceremonial; and a lack in this may result in a failure, either in the marriage relation or in the success of the preaching.

While preaching, to the called, is a duty, if in it there is felt nothing more, the simple performance of that duty, as such, will not make successful preaching. Such preaching is simply filling turns and keeping up the appointments. And may not this kind of preaching account for the ill success of much of the preaching that is done? The object of preaching is to save souls. This object must not be considered in the general sense, but in the individual. The individual, the minister, must have this object ever before him. The salvation of souls must be the burden of his work, and the soul expression must be, "Woe is me if I preach not the Gospel!"

The same interest must be felt in his work that the farmer feels in his. It is his duty to till the soil and sow the seed. But the tilling of the soil and the sowing of the seed are not the objects he has in view. He is looking forward to the harvest, and should that prove a failure, he would be disappointed. So with preaching. The work must be done that the other may come, but it is the result that we should ever keep prominently before us, and not the work, as a duty to be performed. It is when we can thus enter this high and holy calling that duty loses its burden, and becomes a pleasure.

Called by the Lord, and sent by the church, are two subjects that will bear more study than, perhaps, most of us have given them, and, because of this, we have much preaching and little results in too many cases.

BRO. H. A. STAHL, of the Glade, Pa., church, informs us that they expect to commence a series of meetings on the 11th of November, and that Eld. George S. Arnold will do the preaching.

THOSE in need of good Family Bibles should order through us. We can furnish good Bibles at prices to suit everybody. We have Bibles costing from $3 50, or even lower, up to $6.00 and $9 00. When families can afford it, we would advice them to order at from $4.50 upwards. We always send Bibles to correspond with the money sent us.

BRO. J. H. BRUMBAUGH, of Clayton, Ohio, informs us that they closed their Sunday-school for the winter, to be opened again on the first Sunday of April, 1890. Much interest was manifested, with an average attendance of 127 scholars. This included old and young. It is a mistaken idea that Sunday-schools are intended for children only. The Bible is a book about which we can never learn too much. It is a life study, and the more we know about it, the more precious its truths become to us. The course of study pursued is well arranged to give valuable instruction. We are pleased with the report from this school.

"DOING good is laying up treasure in heaven, of which we get the interest on earth."

THE James Creek Brethren expect to commence a series of meetings in the early part of November in their Bethel house.

BRO. ANDREW GILLIAM, of Clayton, Ohio, has been appointed agent for the MESSENGER and all of the Brethren's publications, and we hope he will be quite as successful as his worthy predecessors, who always gathered large lists in the Valley of the Miami.

QUITE a large number of our churches are preparing to hold series of meetings in the near future. These meetings, if overshadowed by the Good Spirit, can not help but result in great good, not only in the conversion of sinners, but also in adding new life and energy to the membership.

ONLY one of our deacons being with us at this time, it fell to our lot to assist somewhat in making the visit. While it adds to our labor, we enjoyed the work, and believe that we received quite as much benefit from it as those who received the visit. These visits should be made pleasant, sociable and religious, always ending with a season of worship with the family. A visit is not intended as a time of settling up old scores, as the questions adopted clearly indicate, but to determine the religious status of the membership, and to admonish to a deeper consecration of heart, as a preparation for the approaching Communion season. These visits should always be made pleasant and profitable.

OUR prayer-meeting on Wednesday evening was one of unusual fervor, and a deep religious feeling was manifested in all the exercises. It was led by sister Emma Holsopple, and the subject was, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." The same may be said of the people to-day; notwithstanding the abundant opportunities afforded for the acquirement of religious knowledge, there is an astonishing amount of ignorance among the people, relative to a saving knowledge of the Truth. The Bible is made a parlor ornament, rather than a book for general use. To too many it is yet a sealed book, and very few care to have the seal broken. The wealth therein contained has not sufficient attractions to demand searching, and, as a result, the people of the world are trying to find their riches in the world—in the fields, the mines, the stores and the shops. These, if obtained, when the time of the great need comes, are unsatisfying, and those who have found them, realize their loss only when it is too late. This sad condition of things is the outgrowth of a general slackness, on the part of our churches, in church-work. Let the prayers of the church be for a deeper work of grace in the hearts of our people. Let this start in the ministry, and it will soon find its way into the lives of the members. We should have more prayer-meetings. If they can not be held in church-houses, we can hold daily prayer-meetings in our own homes, which are the common centers from which religious feelings and works radiate.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

THE CHURCH AND THE WORLD.

The Church and the World walked far apart,
On the changing shore of time;
The World was singing a giddy song,
And the Church a hymn sublime.
"Come, give me your hand," cried the merry World,
"And walk with me this way,"
But the good Church hid her snowy hands,
And solemnly answered, "Nay,
I will not give you my hand at all,
And I will not walk with you;
Your way is the way to endless death;
Your words are all untrue."

"Nay, walk with me but a little space,"
Said the World, with a kindly air;
"The road I walk is a pleasant road,
And the sun shines always there.
Your path is thorny and rough and rude,
And mine is broad and plain;
My road is paved with flowers and dews,
And yours with tears and pain.
The sky above is always blue;
No want, no toil I know;
The sky above you is always dark;
Your lot is a lot of woe.
My path, you see, is a broad, fair one,
And my gate is high and wide;
There is room enough for you and for me
To travel side by side."

Half shyly the Church approached the World,
And gave him her hand of snow;
The old World grasped it and walked along,
Saying, in accents low,
"Your dress is too simple to suit my taste;
I will give you pearls to wear,
Rich velvets and silks for your graceful form,
And diamonds to deck your hair."
The Church looked down at her plain, white robes,
And then at the dazzling World,
And blushed, as she saw his handsome lip
With a smile contemptuous curled.
"I will change my dress for a costlier one,"
Said the Church, with a smile of grace;
Then her pure white garments drifted away,
And the World gave in their place
Beautiful satins and shining silks
And roses and gems and pearls;
And over her forehead her bright hair fell,
Crisped in a thousand curls.

"Your house is too plain," said the proud old World;
"I'll build you one like mine.
Carpets of Brussels and curtains of lace,
And furniture ever so fine."
So he built her a costly and beautiful house;
Splendid it was to behold.
Her sons and her beautiful daughters dwelt there,
Gleaming in purple and gold;
And fairs and shows in the halls were held,
And the World and his children were there,
And laughter and music and feasts were there,
In the place that was meant for prayer.
She had cushioned pews for the rich and great,
To sit in their pomp and pride,
While the poor folks, clad in their shabby suits,
Sat meekly down outside.

The angel of Mercy flew over the Church,
And whispered, "I know thy sin."
Then the Church looked back with a sigh, and longed
To gather her children in.
But some were off at the midnight ball,
And some were off at play,
And some were drinking in gay saloons;
So she quietly went her way.
Then the sly World gallantly said to her,
"Your children mean no harm,
Merely indulging in innocent sports."
So she leaned on his proffered arm,
And smiled, and chatted, and gathered flowers;
And she walked along with the World,
While millions and millions of precious souls
To the horrible gulf were hurled.

"Your preachers are all too old and plain,"
Said the gay World, with a sneer;
"They frighten my children with dreadful tales,
Which I like them not to hear.
They talk of brimstone and fire and pain,
And the horrors of endless night;
They talk of a place that should not be
Mentioned to ears polite.
I will send you some of the better stamp,
Brilliant and gay and fast,
Who will tell them that people may live as they list,
And go to heaven at last.
The Father is merciful, great and good,
Tender and true and kind;
Do you think he would take one child to heaven,
And leave the rest behind?"

So he filled her house with gay divines,
Gifted and great and learned;
And the plain old men that preached the cross,
Were out of her pulpits turned.
"You give too much to the poor," said the World:
"Far more than you ought to do;
If the poor need shelter and food and clothes,
Why need it trouble you?
Go, take your money and buy rich robes,
And horses and carriages fine,
And pearls and jewels and dainty food,
And the rarest and costliest wine;
My children dote on all such things,
And if you their love would win,
You must do as they do, and walk in the ways
That they are walking in."

Then the Church held tightly the strings of her purse,
And gracefully lowered her head,
And simpered, "I've given too much away;
I'll do, sir, as you have said"
So the poor were turned from her door in scorn,
And she heard not the orphan's cry,
And she drew her beautiful robes aside,
As the widows went weeping by.
And the sons of the World and the sons of the Church
Walked closely, hand and heart,
And only the Master who knoweth all,
Could tell the two apart.

Then the Church sat down at her ease and said,
"I am rich and in goods increased;
I have need of nothing, and naught to do
But to laugh and dance and feast."
And the sly World heard her, and laughed in his sleeve
And mockingly said aside,
"The Church has fallen, the beautiful Church,
And her shame is her boast and pride!"

The angel drew near to the mercy-seat,
And whispered in sighs her name,
And the saints their anthems of rapture hushed,
And covered their heads with shame:
And a voice came down through the hush of heaven.
From Him who sat on the throne,
"I know thy work, and how thou hast said,
'I am rich'; and hast not known
That thou art naked, poor and blind,
And wretched before thy face:
Therefore from my presence I cast thee out,
And blot thy name from its place!"

LOYALTY TO GOD MEANS DISLOYALTY TO MEN.

BY J. S. FLORY.

"Blessed are ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake. Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for, behold, your reward is great in heaven: for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets."—Luke 6: 22, 23

We are living in momentous times. There never was, in the history of the church, a time when the disciples of the blessed Savior needed to be more on their guard than at the present time, in order to avoid being pushed aside from the picket-posts of duty. The hosts of Babylon are pressing hard to move even the very elect out from the narrow way into the broad way of popular Christianity. or, rather, popular religion. Christian alliances and denominational unions are being formed. Sect differences are being laid aside, the goat and lion occupy the same lair, the great temple of Diana has one common altar. Church and state are joining hands, secret, oath-bound perjury rests securely under the protection of ecclesiastical robes. The crimson, gory spirit of war is petted in the pulpit; trade unions find encouragement in theological isms. The golden calf—a thorough-bred of mammon extraction is worshiped alike by so-called saint and s ner. The branding iron to put the "mark on forehead" will soon be red hot; then woe u those who will not stand up to receive the ma They will be separated "from their compan and reproach will follow like a flood; their nar will be "cast out as evil." What, call a man brother, o woman sister whom the Christ would not! Th trample his commands under their feet and themselves with the world's pleasures and th come and invite you to take a turn with the dance to the music of the Babylonish feast,—a thing and everything to keep the ball rolling in form of godliness wherein the power is denied.

It is so hard for flesh to suffer reproach, and be cast out of their company, that many will enticed from the path of duty. But, brethren a sisters, we hope better things of you. Oh, t blessedness of being hated for the Son of Ma sake. Let us rejoice and leap for joy when the is evidence that, because of our fidelity to G we are evil spoken of.

THE PEACE CONGRESS.

BY J. H. MOORE.

In his late sermon on the World's Fair, to h held in the United States in 1892, DeWitt Ta mage said some things that do not accord with th facts as set forth in his text, but near the close his remarks he makes a suggestion that ought receive the hearty approval of every citizen of ou Government. He proposes that the President the United States call a Peace Congress, to b composed of representatives of all the nations the earth, and that steps be taken that will entir ly do away with war between nations, and thu bring about the long looked-for era of peace. make the following extract from his sermon, an would that every preacher in the Union were i sympathy with the movement suggested:

"Another opportunity, if our public men see it, and it is the duty of our pulpit and printing press to help them see it, will be the calling at that time and place of a legal peace congress for all nations. The convention of representatives from the Governments of North and South America, now at Washington, is only a type of what we may have on a vast and a world-wide scale at the international exposition of 1892. By one stroke the gorgon of war might be slain and buried so deep that neither trumpet of human dispute nor of arch-angel's blowing could resurrect it. When the last Napoleon called such a congress of nations, many did not respond, and those that did respond gathered wondering what trap that wily destroyer of the French Republic and the builder of the French monarchy might spring on them. But what if the most popular government on earth—I mean the United States Government—should particularly say to all nations: On the American continent, in 1892, we will hold a World's Fair, and all nations will send to it specimens of their products, their manufactures and their arts, and we invite all the Governments of Europe, Asia and Africa to send representatives to a peace convention that shall be held at the same time and place, and that shall establish an international arbitration commission to whom shall be referred all controversies between nation and nation, their decision to be final, and so all nations would be relieved from the expense of standing armies and naval equipment, war having been made an everlasting impossibility.

"All nations of the earth, worth consideration, would come to it; mighty men of England and Germany and France and Russia and all the other great nationalities,—Bismark, who worships the Lord of Hosts, and Gladstone who worships the God of peace, and Boulanger who worships himself. The fact is that the nations are sick of drinking out of chalices made out of human skulls and filled with blood. The United States is the only Government in the whole world that could successfully call such a Congress. Suppose France should call it, Germany would not come; or Germany should call it, France would not come; or Russia should call it, Turkey would not come, or England should call it, nations long jealous of her overshadowing power in Europe would not come. America, in favor with all nationalities, standing out independent and alone, is the spot and 1892 will be the time. May it please the President of the United States, may it please the Secretary of State, may it please the Cabinet, may it please the Senate and House of Representatives, may it please the printing presses and the churches and the people who lift up and put down our American rulers!

"To them I make this timely and solemn and Christian appeal. Do you not think people die fast enough without this wholesale butchery of war? Do you not think that we can trust to pneumonias and consumptions and apoplexies and palsies and yellow fevers and Asiatic choleras the work of killing them fast enough? Do you not think that the greedy, wide open jaws of the grave ought to be satisfied if filled by natural causes with hundreds of thousands of corpses a year? Do you not think we can do something better with men than to dash their life out against casements or blow them into fragments by torpedoes, or send them out into the world, where they need all their faculties, footless, armless, eyeless? Do you not think that women might be appointed to an easier place than the edge of a grave trench to wring their pale hands and weep out their eyesight in widowhood and childlessness? Why, the last glory has gone out of war.

"There was a time when it demanded that quality which we all admire—namely, courage—for a man had to stand at the hilt of his sword when the point pierced the foe, and while he was slaying another the other might slay him; or it was bayonet charge. But now it is cool and deliberate murder, and clear out at sea a bomb shell can be hurled miles away into a city, or while thousands of private soldiers, who have no interest in the contest, for they were conscripted, are losing their lives, their General may sit smoking one of the best Havana cigars after a dinner of quail on toast. It may be well enough for graduating students of colleges on commencement day to orate about the poetry of war, but do not talk about the poetry of war to the men of the Federal or Confederate armies who were at the front, or to some of us who, as members of the Christian commission, saw the ghastly hospitals at Antietam and Hagerstown. Ah! you may worship the Lord of Hosts, I worship the 'God of Peace, who brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus Christ, that great Shepherd of the sheep.'

"War is an accursed monster, and it was born in the lowest cavern of perdition, and I pray that it may speedily descend to the place from which it arose, its last sword and shield and musket rattling on the bottom of the red hot marl of hell. Let there be called a peace convention for 1892, with delegates sent by all decent Governments of Christendom, and while they are in session, if you should some night go out and look into the sky above the exposition building, you may find that the old gallery of crystal, that was taken down after the Bethlehem anthem of eighteen centuries ago was sung out, is rebuilt again in the clouds, and the same angelic singers are returned with the same librettos of light to chant 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will to men.'"

Thus, by degrees, it may be seen that the great men of earth are coming to the front and admitting the very principles that the Brethren have been so long contending for. Lo these many years we have urged that war is not only unchristian and cruel, but that it is absolutely uncalled for, and may be easily dispensed with by establishing a World's Peace Commission, that shall settle all difficulties that may arise between nations. Our Brethren have upheld this doctrine in times of both peace and war, and they may yet have the satisfaction of seeing it, in a very large measure, put into practical operation by the leading nations of the earth.

URGENT QUESTIONS.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

Many earnest, perplexed, Christ-hungering souls write me for the explication of themes fundamental to our salvation. It is a sad, significant fact that there are so many unhappy, doubting, law-fettered, self-saving souls in the church. During the past five years I have gone through a radical self-revision, and no less thorough revision of the Holy Oracles, and the method of salvation by grace, and have a thousand times been prostrate in the dust before God because of my own ignorance, and the ignorance that generally prevails, as to the real meaning of sin and law and redemption by Divine Incarnation and faith and works. I must put a restraint on my thoughts, while writing, lest I repel the reader by the seeming boldness of my settled convictions.

It is no easy matter to eradicate the deeply engraven impressions of early teachings, and shut the door of mind and heart against all importunities of family and church and society, and closet yourself alone with God, and hear only His voice, and receive only His absolute, Eternal Truth. If those who write me so pitifully and pleadingly and despondingly, could sever themselves from their own past, and walk with Jesus by faith, as if they were concerned with no one but Him, they would carry God's sparkling diamond of peace and rapture in heart and brow day by day, moment by moment. 1 Pet. 1: 8; 2 Cor. 3: 18; 1 John 5: 20; John 14: 27; Philpp. 4: 6, 7. Are these truths meant to be accepted in their plain, naked statement? If so, why should the hearts of Christians be "troubled and afraid"?

The object of the law, the distinction between law and grace, as the basis of hope, the real office of faith, the real meaning of justification, and the true place and purpose of works, are verities which are vaguely apprehended; and out of this ignorance come confusion, fear, uncertainty, distraction. We can make the matter no plainer than God has made it, and if we be still, and know that He is God, He will be exalted in us, and our peace will be perfect. Ps. 46: 10, 11.

"This is the message . . . that God is Light, and in Him is no darkness at all." 1 John 1: 5. "God created man in his own image; in the image of God created He him." Gen. 1: 27. "Which was the Son of God." Luke 3: 38. This was the unfallen Adam. Now look at the Eternal Prototype: "Being the brightness of His glory, and the express image of His Person." "Being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God." Heb. 1: 3; Philpp. 2: 6.

Sin means missing the mark. What the mark is we have seen in the foregoing. See also Philpp. 3: 14. The words, "in Christ Jesus," reach over all the Divine Dispensations. John 1: 1, 2, 3, 14. He is Alpha and Omega. The mark once missed, forever missed, unless the Uncreated Original becomes the Sinner, and makes good in His own person the disruption and derangement and degradation and unrighteousness of His duplicate. It is the misapprehension of this perfect work of God in the flesh, that lies at the root of all the false doctrines and false teachings, and warped beliefs and uneasy consciences, and discontented lives, and miserable defeats, and wretched and forever abortive attempts at salvation by works, that characterizes the religion of to-day. It has been so, in varying degrees, through all the centuries. Paul's whole life was spent in elucidating and maintaining the sublime, wonderful, mysterious, fundamental truth of salvation by Grace.

Only one Man can bring a personal record before God clean enough to serve as a ground of justification for Himself or others. Who that Man is every reader knows. Not a sin was ever committed, or ever will be, not even the sin against the Holy Ghost, that does not find a full equivalent in the perfect life and vicarious death of the Son of God. The unpardonable sin is not unpardonable for want of resources and provision in the Divine-human Sin Bearer, Sin-Purger, and Ever-living, Omnipotent Advocate. When God puts His own Eternal Life into human blood, and keeps it pure from all taint of sin in a body derived from "a woman made under the law," and sheds it as "a propitiation for the sins of the whole world," the question is forever settled whether provision has been made for every sinner and every sin.

The death in Eph. 2: 1, is not the same as in 1 John 5: 16. The dissolution in Gen. 2: 17, leaves hope. That alluded to in Rev. 21: 8, leaves none. God's patience and pity go as far as His Atonement. They reach to the utmost stretch of His Infinite capacity. But man has no such reach of capacity in appropriating what is ample enough even for devils. When the soul has reached the easy possibility and the natural actuality of Heb. 10: 29, holiness is no longer an object, repentance and faith no longer possible, and God's idea of salvation no longer even a mental conception.

"God is in Christ," and Christ is as really human as any of us, living out all the perfections of Jehovah, and meeting all the demands of eternal law both as to obedience and penalty, thus making available the very righteousness of God for the greatest sinner that ever abused and disgraced and degraded human nature. There is not the smallest iota left undone that is essential to the reconciliation of the world to God. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is JESUS CHRIST." 1 Cor. 3: 11. If any soul can get to Heaven on the ground of its own fidelity, or obedience, or holiness, or good works of any kind or to any amount, for that soul "Christ died in vain." If all the righteousness and holiness and perfection from Moses to Malachi were concentrated in one person, it would not suffice as a ground of acceptance with God. "It is FINISHED," completely, ETERNALLY FINISHED, and "no man disannulleth or addeth thereto." Gal. 3: 15. This is the very point where the majority of seekers halt, stumble, fall, grope in doubt and darkness and misery all their days. They never know where they stand, or whether they are saved or not, simply because they do not rest confidently, unhesitatingly, and with perfect assurance of faith on a basis of salvation in the finished work of Jesus so perfect that God Himself can find no flaw in it. What more can the vilest, poorest, fettered, Hell-shriveled sinner ask? To believe this stupendous fact, to accept this astounding, liberal, sin-annihilating offer from the sin-hating, sin-avenging, sin-atoning God is the justification of the sinner from all things. Acts 13: 39. The faith that God demands must have no latent cavil as to the reality of the righteousness of God in Christ imputed to the trusting soul. Faith that is real enough to gain the position that such righteousness gives, also appropriates the very life of God, and thus lays not only the foundation of peace, but of loving, loyal obedience, constant development, and that perfect inherence of the Holy Ghost referred to by Paul in 1 Thess. 5: 23 "Sanctify you wholly," is an exceedingly strong and radical expression in the original. And so also is the phrase, "Your whole spirit and soul and body be PRESERVED BLAMELESS unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." What is our guarantee for such an amazing claim? Verse 24 reveals the wonderful secret: "Faithful is HE that calleth you, WHO ALSO WILL DO IT." IN OUR GODMAN REDEEMER dwelleth "all the fulness of the GODHEAD BODILY." Col. 2: 9. And then the great, thrilling solution of the mighty problems of both justification and sanctification in verse 10: "Ye are complete IN HIM, who is the HEAD of all principality and power." Not by resolving and trying and struggling and working, but by faith in Him who is our Life, our Peace, our Power, our all. Of God are we in Christ Jesus, WHO OF GOD is made unto us"—WHAT? Read 1 Cor. 1: 29, 30, 31, with the understanding which He alone can give. Luke 24: 45; 1 John 5: 20. Now the way is open for a life of obedience in all good works, and the symbolic exemplification of all these great facts in the life of Christ and the Christian. By faith we get, by faith we keep; and by all the works ordained for us to walk in, we justify the reality, reasonableness, and power of our faith. Eph. 2: 8, 9, 10.

WHEN you say, "Lead us not into temptation," you must in good earnest mean to avoid in your daily conduct those temptations which you have already suffered from. When you say, "Deliver us from evil," you must mean to struggle against that evil in your heart which you are conscious of, and which you pray to be forgiven. — J. H. Newman.

BEAUTIFUL GARMENTS.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

"Put on thy beautiful garments."—Isa. 52: 1.

THAT a Christian's dress should be clean and neat and even beautiful, no one will question. It denotes respect for God, for his day, and for his house. To put off the soiled garments of our weekly labors and put on our Sunday attire, promulgates happiness. But the garments referred to in the Scriptural words, "Put on thy beautiful garments," are not the external adorning of the body; they are garments of the "inner man"—the soul—these are the "beautiful garments" Christians are to put on.

In a former article entitled, "The Christian's Dress," the writer simply alluded to them, but in this article a more general unfolding of the subject is designed. That the interests of the soul are paramount to those of the body, is readily admitted by all those who believe in its immortality, and that the manifesting of its attributes is required is also quite evident. Gentleness, meekness, goodness, forgiveness, love, mercy, and pity should characterize the Christian. St. Peter declares, in the most emphatic manner, that a meek and quiet spirit is an ornament in the sight of God and of great price. 1 Pet. 3: 3, 4.

Where either men or women spend much time, cost and attention, on decorating their persons, it affords a painful proof that within there is little excellence, and that they are endeavoring to supply the want of mind and moral good by the feeble and silly aids of dress and ornaments. Were religion out of the question, common sense would say in all these things, "Be decent, but be moderate and modest."

"Good words" are enjoined by St. Paul. These are the only ornaments that really adorn women professing Christianity. Pious women should seek to adorn themselves with these. Oh! ye children of Zion, put on your beautiful garments! Adorn yourselves with charity, truth, mercy, pity; with all the ornaments of amiability, meekness, patience, faith, tenderness.

A beautiful life and character is always held in the highest admiration. The Jewish matrons were accustomed to cry to the bride, "There is no need of paint, no need of powder, no need of braided hair; she herself is most beautiful."

The world is full of snares, and the heart ever ready to turn aside from the right object We stand in need of being warned as well as directed. It is a great work, indeed, and must be the business of our whole lives to learn how to be abased, to maintain right views of ourselves, to keep at the foot of the cross, and feel as we ought. It is easy to use Scripture phrases and declaim against pride, to confess that we are vile, to tell others that we are unworthy, "the least of all," "the chief of sinners;" but to enter into these sentiments, actually and constantly to abhor ourselves, to feel indignation at the pride and vanity of our hearts, to mourn under a sense of our imperfections,—this is not the spirit, the feeling, congenial to our proud natures. Should Christian people study the Scriptures as they ought to, what depths in them, what mysteries in the Divine Revelation, what unseen glories in the grand scheme of human redemption would be presented for their spiritual contemplation! Then, also, reflect on the consequences of the spirit of pride in the outward adorning of the body. They would soon turn away from such vanity, and remember that they have not the least excellence in themselves but only in what emanates from God. Without God's grace, man would be in the most abandoned and forlorn condition. Oh! Zion, put on thy beautiful garments! Array thyself in all the excellency and beauty of the glorious Gospel of Jesus Christ. Put on salvation as a garment! Be robed and be ready when the heavenly Bridegroom comes! "Put on therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering; forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any: even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on charity, which is the bond of perfectness. And let the peace of God rule in your hearts, to the which also ye are called in one body; and be ye thankful. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." Col. 3: 12–17.

If you thus "put on Christ," you will "make no provision to fulfill the lusts of the flesh;" the gaudy colors of dress will appear to you mean and contemptible, and your Christian life and character will constitute the most beautiful adornment on earth; and after you have passed the river of death, you "shall be clothed with white raiment." Christ will not blot out your name out of the Book of Life; and your Redeemer says, I will confess "his name before the Father, and before his angels." Rev. 3: 5. Remember, in that solemn hour, when exhausted nature can no longer sustain itself; when the light of the eye is waxing dim; when the pulse of life is beating low and faint; when the breath labors, and the tongue falters; when the shadow of death is falling on all outward things, and darkness is beginning to gather over the faces of the loved ones who are weeping by your bed-side, a ray of immortal hope is shining from your features,—it is a Christian who is expiring; a Christian is dying, not unclothed, but "clothed upon," that mortality might be swallowed up of life. The oaks of the mountains fall; the mountains themselves decay with the years; but the Christian rejoices evermore in the brightness of the heavenly course; in the home over there, and in the beautiful garments of the glorified.

Dear reader, devote the few fleeting days of life to him who died on the cross for you. Then, when your last days on earth come, you shall pass away to that land, all fair and immortal, and rest, sweetly rest, evermore in union with those who already have entered the heavenly world.

"LET ALONE."

BY J. H. MILLER.

THIS small text is found both in the Old and New Testament. In many instances this text carries the idea of slothfulness and carelessness. Job would complain, when his afflictions were great, "Are not my days few? Cease then, and let me alone, that I may take comfort a little." "Ephraim is joined to idols; let him alone." In certain instances men's hearts would turn perverse and could not realize the goodness of God, hence the "let alone" system was strongly urged, because of their depraved state.

The Scribes and Pharisees found fault with Christ, because his disciples did not wash their hands before they ate. They were a class of people that would easily find fault with everybody else, and hold up their self-righteousness. The Savior kindly reproved them with this answer, "Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man, but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man." Too many now, as those Pharisees, when reproved of their wrong, become offended. Jesus tells them, "Every plant which my Heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up." Jesus speaks of this class, "Let them alone; they be blind leaders of the blind, and if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch."

Whenever the heart becomes so desperately wicked, that no change can be made, Jesus would say, "Let them alone." Men with unclean spirits would cry out, "Let us alone, what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth; art thou come to destroy us?" These men with evil spirits would desire that Jesus should let them alone. Whenever sin lurks in the heart, that individual would rather, like Adam, hide from God, and only wish to be let alone.

The "let-alone" system has two sides, — one works too slow, the other too fast. We all have noticed the slothful and careless man. Some men in the world, and also in the church, have no patience. We have the grumblers, fault-finders, etc The Savior met such men. When the woman anointed him, she did a good work, but some men had indignation within themselves, and said, "Why was this waste of the ointment made?" Jesus said, "Let her alone. Why trouble ye her? She hath wrought a good work on me." In this instance men were fast in passing judgment.

Some men and women may be found in error, but no proper effort is taken to restore them. Holding such off at arm's length, instead of kindly admonishing them, we thereby thrust down rather than lift up.

The Pharisees held a council concerning the mighty works of the Son of God. After Jesus had brought Lazarus from his grave, those wicked men said, "If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him, and the Romans shall come, and take away both our place and nation." Wicked men are fearful, and not willing to let Jesus alone while engaged in a good work, neither do some men feel now, to let the Christian alone.

Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, gave wise counsel. While some of the Jews were filled with indignation against the apostles, Gamaliel arose and said, "Refrain from these men, and let them alone." While men are engaged in a good work, they should be let alone.

There are two sides to the let-alone question. I have seen some who are continually asking for more privileges. A brother becomes worldly-minded. He does not find time to attend church council, — too much work! If a brother should admonish him to attend church council, he will only say, "Let me alone." As long as no one interferes, or the church is satisfied with his slothfulness and negligence of duty, he is satisfied.

Lukewarmness is a good preface to the "let alone" system. Too often members are found in places where they can not take Christ with them. Some things are even brought into God's house that do not belong there. Were Christ to come now, as he did into the temple, he would make a scourge of small cords and drive out those money changers.

The nominal Christian will only call for the "let-alone" doctrine, and consider himself to be all right. I heard one brother say he would not take the GOSPEL MESSENGER any longer, because so many are writing against the evil of using tobacco. He said he paid for his own tobacco, and no one should interfere with his own judgment. He has dropped the paper. If our editors would have applied the "let-alone" system, this brother, perhaps, would be a subscriber yet.

Another brother says, "As long as the church will allow me to follow the fashions of the world, and let me alone, I will be a nominal Christian. Now, my dear brother, did not you, with the rest of us, promise, while in the water, before you were immersed, that you would renounce Satan with all of his pernicious ways, and the sinful pleasures of this world? Furthermore, did not we all promise to hear the counsel of the church? That counsel is founded on the Word of God. We get strength in obedience to God's Word, and can daily grow in grace and knowledge of the Truth.

How should men and women appear before God in worship? Paul, in 1 Corinthians 11, instructs us how to approach God in prayer. While I was in Canada last fall, I was invited to attend the funeral of an old lady who had died in Indiana. Her two sons came with the body to lay it away in the old family cemetery. Those two men were the only persons in the house during services that kept their hats on. Other near relations, living in Canada, removed their hats. Inquiry was made of me, "Why this strange custom?" During funerals we sometimes see our brethren keep their heads covered, contrary to Paul's instructions "A woman praying or prophesying with her head uncovered, dishonoreth her head." Then it becomes all our sisters to heed the advice of Paul. Some of our members may contend that this matter should not be enforced, and only beg for the "let-alone" system. Paul says we should be "of one mind and of one faith, and all speak the same thing."

We may compare the Christian race to a railroad. We have first the main line, and on either side a side-track. The main line represents the Gospel line. On the one side, near the main line, we see the fast line. There the let-alone system is strongly advocated. As long as the church will leave them alone, and do as they please, they are good, nominal members. On the other side of the main line we find another side-track. That represents a slow road,—one that is run on slow time. Among that number we find a great many fault-finders. If things do not pass off to suit their own peculiar notions, they are not satisfied. Some of such have prophesied, "The church will soon go down and all will go to destruction. Such, I presume, have forgotten the truthfulness of God's Word, "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" A good remedy is, to swing both lines on the main track and let Jesus be the Great Engineer. Then, by God's help, we can outride all the oppositions and storms of this life.

VANITY.

BY H. J. KOONTZ.

THERE is no vice nor folly that requires so much nicety and skill to manage as vanity, nor any which, by ill management, makes so contemptible a figure. The desire of being thought wise is often a hinderance to being so, for such a one is often more desirous of letting the world see what knowledge he has, than to learn of others that which he wants. Men are more apt to be vain on account of those qualities which they fondly believe they have than of those which they really possess. Some would be thought to do great things who are but tools or instruments, like the man who fancied he played upon the organ when he only blew the bellows.

Be not so greedy of popular applause as to forget that the same breath which blows up a fire may blow it out again. Vanity, like laudanum and other poisonous medicines, while beneficial in small, is injurious in large quantities. Be not vain of your want of vanity. When you hear the phrase, "I may say without vanity," you may be sure some characteristic vanity will follow in the same breath. The most worthless things are sometimes most esteemed. Not all the world can pull an humble man down because God will exalt him,—nor is it all the world that can keep a proud man up, because God will debase him.

Vanity feeds voraciously and abundantly on the richest food that can be served up, or can live on less and meaner diet than any of which we can form a conception. The rich and the poor, learned and ignorant, strong and weak, all have a share in vanity. The humblest Christian is not free from it, and when he is most humble the devil will flatter his vanity by telling him of it. On the other hand, it is with equal relish that it feeds upon vulgarity, coarseness, and fulsome eccentricity,—everything, in short, by which a person can attract attention. It often takes liberality by the hand, prompts advice, administers reproof, and sometimes perches visibly and gaily on the prayers and sermons in the pulpit. It is an ever present principle of human nature—a worm on the heart of man, less painful, but equally loathsome as a cancer. It is, of all others, the most baseless propensity.

O, vanity, how little is thy force acknowledged or thine operations discerned! How wantonly dost thou deceive mankind under different disguises! Sometimes thou dost wear the face of pity; sometimes of generosity; nay, thou hast the assurance to put on the robes of religion and the glorious ornaments that belong only to heroic virtue.

Vanity is the fruit of ignorance. It thrives most in the places never reached by the air of heaven or the light of the sun. It is a deceitful sweetness, a fruitless labor, a perpetual fear, a dangerous honor. Her beginning is without prudence, but her end not without repentance. Vanity is so constantly solicitous of self that even where its own claims are not interested, it indirectly seeks the aliment which it loves, by showing how little is deserved by others.

Charms which, like flowers, lie on the surface—such as preserve figure and dress—conduce to vanity. On the contrary, those excellencies which lie deep, like gold, and are discovered with difficulty—such as profoundness of intellect and morality—leave their possessors modest and humble.

Extinguish vanity in the mind and you naturally retrench the little superfluities of garniture and equipage. The flowers will fall of themselves when the root that nourishes them is destroyed. We have nothing of which we should be vain, but much to induce humility. If we have any good qualities they are the gift of God. Let every one guard against this all-pervading principle and teach his children that it is the shadow of a shade.

Hooversville, Pa.

BE courteous and kind to all—to the poor as well as to the rich — to the humble as well as to the elevated—to the young and to the old. There is nothing lost by pleasant words. Some, who are clothed with a little authority, will show their bad natures at times, to the unhappiness and, perhaps, disgust of their subordinates. It does not indicate good breeding, or a friendly, Christian spirit, to be rough, or indifferent to a modest request, however humble the inquirer may be. Some persons will go a long distance with an inquirer, who is a stranger in the neighborhood, and thus perform an act benevolent and Christian. Others, rather snappishly, may reply to the seeker, "Don't know," and hurriedly pass on. Let us all endeavor to cultivate a spirit of kindness and sympathy, in imitation of the precepts of our Savior, and we shall make mankind happier, and exert a more healthy, Christian influence all around us.—Sel.

WHAT some men say about the Bible loses all its weight when I read what the Bible says about those same men.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

BY JOHN FORNEY.

UNDER the above heading a series of articles were written by Jesse Engle and published in the Evangelical Visitor.

They were intended to show to the reader that the last supper of the Lord Jesus Christ was under the Law, that Christ did eat it for the fulfillment of the Law, and that it had no place under the Gospel. I will give the readers of the GOSPEL MESSENGER the writer's own words in the October number of 1888. He says, in the fifth paragraph, the following:

"Now comes to some the critical question, viz., "'Where does the Law end, and where does the "Gospel begin? Some, in their reasoning, will "lap the ends of both dispensations; others will "join them by the plummet or perpendicular line, "while others stand confounded at the uncertain "sound of the trumpet, lo here! lo there! Wheth- "er so or otherwise, the solution of the problem "rests on the following question, viz., 'Was our "Lord's last Supper with his disciples under the "law or was it under the Gospel?' If under the "Law, it is ended with the Law. Since 'Christ has "become the end of the Law to every one that be- "lieveth,' it is self-evident that he is the end of the "Law to his believing church, of which he him- "self became the Head. If under the Gospel, "then it must be continued by virtue of his say- "ing: 'If ye love me, keep my commandments' "We, therefore, humbly and thoughtfully, make "the following assertion:

"First, that the supper eaten by our Savior and "his disciples on the night of his apprehension "was the paschal supper, eaten in the fulfillment "of the Law. Hence it is not to be continued "under the Gospel.

"Second, that the supper referred to in John "13 is the same as that referred to by Matthew, "Mark and Luke."

In his second article, in the November number Vol. 2, the writer says, "We continue our subject "by taking up the first part of our assertion, viz: "That the supper eaten by our Savior and his "disciples, etc. The question as to the time in "which he celebrated the paschal meal is too "clear to admit of any quotation, since the can- "did readers all agree that it was on the night of "his apprehension. I shall now come to the "second part of my assertion, viz: That the sup- "per referred to in John 13 is the same as the "paschal supper referred to by Matthew, Mark "and Luke. I am well aware that this is the an- "tagonizing point,— a shoal which many a little "craft to-day is toiling to get over. The above "assertion will no doubt be confronted with the "idea that John does not once mention the eating "of the Passover with his disciples, but records "the eating of a special meal apart from the Pass- "over, stating in particular that this meal was be- "fore the feast of the passover."

At this point the writer leaves his subject for a while and tells us as follows:

"Let us, for a moment, consider the peculiarity "of this evangelist. Whether by peculiar en- "dowment of wisdom, or whether by inspiration, "we notice, however, that his (John's) record is "prolific with instances about which the other "evangelists are entirely silent, as, for instance, "the memorable interview with Nicodemus."

In the same connection the writer gives us six other examples like the one of Nicodemus that do not touch his subject. Then, in the last paragraph of his second article, he says:

"We draw to a close with our subject by asking "the following: Where is room for another cere- "monial meal? Since under the New Dispensa- "tion it is neither command, type nor antitype, "it stands isolated from all other Gospel precepts, "and not until an unforetold dispensation would "chance to usher in, will it find place other than "as an agape (or love-feast), so prominent "among the primitive Christians. Let us be "careful and not ceremoniously link this together "with the commemorative service."

In the January number of 1889 he says:

"In the former consideration of our subject, "the reader was referred to the record of three "evangelists, showing, first, that the Savior cele- "brated the Jewish passover on the night of his "apprehension; secondly, that the history of the "four evangelists refers to the same night's oc- "currence as shown by Peter's denial, and the "cock-crowing; and thirdly, that the Savior did "institute one memorial service with bread and "wine."

Then the writer refers to an article in the October number of '88, where the belief of his church about this meal is set forth, as they held it in former days. Of this he writes as follows:

"If the article referred to will be carefully read, "we need not here occupy space to show that they "did not consider this meal as a command, or "ceremonially enjoined it upon the church. By "separating the Jewish passover from the com- "memorative services, it is by no means the ob- "ject to set aside the agape or love-feast, but "rather to encourage the Brotherhood, whenever "it is expedient, to hold such feasts, as they are "a means of bringing the members together from "different localities, and joining their united ef- "forts in the praise, worship and glorifying of "God. It also has the tendency to collect those "who seldom attend worship, and to bring them "under the power and influence of the Word of "God. Many of us have seen this demonstrated, "even to the converting of many souls, and also "to the upbuilding of the brethren and sisters. "But to insist on a special supper which, in no "single instance, is commanded in the Gospel, is "'teaching for doctrine the commandments of "men,' which,—to say the least, — is a gross cor- "ruption of the Truth, if not an absolute forgery. "See Rev. 22: 18. There are, however, difficulties "in the way of some honest Christians, etc. Some "will say that since Christ was crucified on the "fourteenth day, it would have been impossible "for him to have eaten the passover on the same "day. Just here we wish to cite the reader to one "fact, which, in connection with passages already "quoted, prove, that the Savior could have both "eaten the passover and been crucified on the "same day; it is this, that the Jewish day began "at sunset. This is plain to every one who gives "the subject sufficient thought. If, then, the four- "teenth day begins at sunset, at the ending of the "thirteenth, it is, therefore, very comprehensive "that the Savior celebrated the passover in the "evening or commencement of the day, being the "fore part of the night, and during the after part "of the night he was apprehended, and in the "morning was brought before both the Jewish "and Roman tribunal, and was condemned, after "which he was nailed to the cross, where he hung "until the ninth hour, which would be three "o'clock in the afternoon; the day ending at sun- "set."

I have carefully examined the five articles above alluded to and headed "The Lord's Supper," and I find the writer aims to establish two principel points, first that Christ ate the Jewish passover for the fulfillment of the Law; second, to show that the Communion is the Lord's Supper. The artic- les were evidently written with a view of attack- ing our doctrine, therefore duty calls forth a reply, to vindicate the Truth of the Gospel, and expose the error on the two above-mentioned points. There are many assertions and ideas set forth in his articles that are irreconcilable, which I asked the writer to explain either privately or publicly, as he might see fit, but only got his refusal to do either.

First he says, "Christ ate that supper for the fulfillment of the Law." Then he continues, "He ate it at the appointed day of the Law," which was always the first part of the fifteenth. The writer tells us positively that Christ ate it with his dis- ciples 'in the first part of the night of the four- teenth day of the first month,' soon after the thirteenth day was ended. This last is correct; I say amen to it."

But now comes the difficulty. I would like to have the writer of said articles tell us when the Israelites removed the leaven out of their houses, and killed the thousands of lambs and roasted them, and made every preparation to eat them in the first part of the night of the fourteenth of Nisan. I think the writer would have us to be- lieve they used the thirteenth as a preparation day. The Bible says they are to keep the lambs until the fourteenth, and kill them in the evening. See Ex. 12. Historians tell us that as soon as the thirteenth was closed at sunset, the head of every family began to search the rooms of the house and gather up the crumbs of the leavened bread, and for this removing of leavened bread, and the cleans- ing of the vessels, they had time until noon on the fourteenth day. Then the lambs were brought to the priests. "For the victims must be first ex- amined by the priests to see if they were without blemish." Then they were slaughtered and pre- pared for roasting in the four courts of the temple, in indescribable haste, for there was more than work enough for all, to kill, almost at the same time, the 250,000 lambs sometimes required. The exact time for killing the lambs was "between the evenings" of the fourteenth, until the stars ap- peared, though they might be killed during the last three hours of the day. (See Book I, of Dr. C. Geikie, on the passover Supper, pages 200 and 213). He also says the fourteenth day began at sunset of the thirteenth. On page 216 he says "Everything was hurried; for the lambs were re- quired to be killed, roasted and eaten between three in the afternoon and nine or twelve at night."

In book II, page 463, he says, "The feast could begin immediately after the setting of the sun, and the appearing of the stars on the opening of the fifteenth of Nisan, which was proclaimed by new trumpet blasts from the temple."

The above beautifully agrees in time with the Bible account, and we have no account in the Bible that the fourteenth of Nisan was the day on which to eat the passover, but to kill it, as given also in Matthew 26, Mark 14, and Luke 22, "When the Passover must be killed," "when they killed the Passover."

I can not see how it is that my friend tries so hard to show us that Christ ate his supper with the disciples to fulfill the Law, when it is a fact that if the eating of it was a fulfillment of the Law, then the disciples also fulfilled the Law at the same time, as every Israelite that partook of it fulfilled the Law in the eating of it. If so, then the Lord Jesus Christ had fulfilled the Law the first time he ate of it, as much as he did the last time. But I have never so learned from my Bible. Christ did not have to perform all the ceremonies of the Law and the shadow works of the Law, etc., neither do I think that he ever made any offering at any altar as a priest, until he offered himself upon the cross as a sin offering. As Christ be- came the antitype, so he became the great anti- type of all types and shadows of the Law. Christ did not, as J. E. sets forth in his reasoning, have to eat the passover with his disciples to the ful- filling of the Law.

Later on my friend says: "Those who insist upon a special (meal) supper which, in no single instance, is commanded in the Gospel, are 'teaching for doctrine the commandments of men,' which is, to say the best, a gross corruption of the Truth, if not an absolute forgery."

According to that reasoning, Paul is also found guilty of instituting a supper in the church at Corinth and, when they got into a disorder about it, of sending them a letter of correction. He tells them to tarry one for the other, just as the Lord ordained when he sent Peter and John to make it ready. When it was ready, they all sat down to the table, and ate it together. So Paul says that he received from the Lord that which he also delivered unto his followers. Every Bible reader knows just how the Lord Jesus instituted the Supper, and how he observed it. He ordered a special supper; then rose from supper and washed his disciples' feet. Then he ate the supper; and after supper,—so three of the evangelists tell us—he took bread and blessed it. Paul says, "When he had given thanks he brake it, and said, Take eat; this is my body." "In like manner he also took the cup after supper." This is the way Paul got it from the Lord and gave it to the church.

We see in my friend's articles that he confesses the primitive Christians always had a feast or meal connected with the Communion which he chose to call agape,—a feast of love. Mr. J. E. condemns a special supper in his own words. Read them again and you will see. He says, "It is by no means the object to set aside the agapae or love-feasts, as they are of so much value to the church. But to insist on a special supper is a gross corruption of the Truth, and forgery."

If J. E. can reconcile the above language and make it consistent, he can do more than I can. If we, as a church, commit forgery, when we follow the example of Christ in eating the Supper, between feet-washing and the Communion, what does another church do, if she changes God's order and says, feet-washing, the first, belongs to the Gospel, but the second, in Christ's order, the Supper, is under the Law? How can J. E. contend for a supper before feet-washing, or a special meal, in which, as he claims, there is no sacredness and no higher authority than his own church fathers, some of whom, he says, are alive yet, and can testify how they held it when they first started out? How can J. E. "teach for doctrine the commandment of men," "which," he says, "to say the least, is a gross corruption of the Truth, if not an absolute forgery."

I am truly pleased to see in J. E's articles that he is forced to the conclusion, that the early Christians always had a repast or feast of charity, or supper, connected with the Communion of the bread and cup.

He says, in the February number of the Visitor, "Just how these feasts were conducted or celebrated, is not clearly given in the Sacred Writings," etc. But his historians, Arnold and others whom he names, tell us positively "that primitive Christians celebrated the Communion in connection with a meal, in order to imitate the Savior, since he instituted the Communion in connection with a meal"

Those historians prove too much for J. E's theory. Those ancient Christians were not afraid to pattern after their Master in eating the Lord's Supper, in connection with, and just before, the Communion. What was right for Christ and the apostles, and the primitive church to do, is also right for us, until the same Lord who gave the example will come and change it, or will say, as he did to faithful Abraham, "It is enough."

"STRONG reasons make strong actions."

LOOKING UNTO JESUS.

BY GEO. L. STUDEBAKER.

"Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith." —Heb. 12: 2.

WE take Jesus as the Author and Finisher of our faith, and it is right that we should. Paul looked unto him as such. "Be ye followers of me even as I also am of Christ." 1 Cor. 11: 1.

There are things in the Scripture on which the religious world is not so much divided,—such as prayer, giving of alms, etc., because they look to Jesus for direction. If we take Christ as the Author and Finisher of our faith, on baptism, our faith will be alike.

I. Christ is the author of baptism.

(1) He was baptized himself; gave the example. Matt. 3: 13, 17.

(2) He commanded baptism. Matt. 28: 19; Mark 16: 16.

(3) "Except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God." Nicodemus marveled at this. "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." John 3: 3, 4, 5.

The above plainly shows that Christ sanctioned and was the author of baptism.

II. Where shall baptism be performed?

(1) Christ himself went down into the water. We are told that he came "up out of the water." Matt. 3: 16; Mark 1: 10.

(2) Philip and the Ethiopian eunuch went down into the water, and came up out of the water. Acts 8: 38, 39.

(3) Paul was commanded to arise and be baptized and wash away his sins. Acts 22: 16. So baptism is alluded to as a washing.

(4) "John baptized in Enon near to Salim, because there was much water there." John 3: 23.

(5) Peter says baptism is "not for the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God." 1 Pet. 3: 21.

All the above goes to show that baptism is to be performed in the water, and where there is much water.

III. How shall baptism be performed after we are in the water?

(1) Paul says, "What I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord." 1 Cor. 14: 37. Again, "I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you." 1 Cor. 11: 23.

Paul calls baptism,

(1) A burial. We are "buried with him by baptism." Rom. 6: 4; Col. 2: 12.

(2) A planting. "We have been planted together." Rom. 6: 5.

The above clearly shows that in baptism we are to be covered over, "buried or planted." No difference in what shape or position you place persons under the water and cover them over, they are buried or planted.

IV. How shall the burial or planting be performed?

(1) Paul says we are buried with him by baptism unto death,—not into burial. We are to be planted together in the likeness of his death,—not in the likeness of his burial. Rom. 6: 4, 5. As the Savior died on the cross, he bowed his head. Then, if we are to be baptized in the likeness of his death, we must bow in baptism. At no place in the Gospel does it say we are to be baptized like unto Christ's burial. We might say that the Savior's death began in the Garden of Gethsemane, where he prayed and was in great agony, and "his sweat became as it were great drops of blood." Luke 22: 44. He bowed and prayed. When we are baptized and bow, we are baptized in the likeness of Christ's death.

All the above goes to show that persons being baptized are to be buried, planted, covered over, and that, by a forward action, the Gospel does not convey the idea of a backward action in baptism.

V. Does baptism of the Bible teach three actions or one?

(1) There are three beings or persons in the Godhead,—the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit. We are commanded to baptize into each. Matt. 28: 19. "Go ye, therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." If we were commanded to be baptized in the name of the Father only, it would require but one action. If we were required to baptize in the name of the Son only, it would require but one action. If we were required to baptize in the name of the Holy Ghost only, it would require but one action. Now the Savior commands us to baptize into each. How can the language of the commission be filled short of three actions in baptism? If the commission only teaches one action in baptism, word it, so it would teach three.

(2) That there was only one way of baptizing in the days of the apostles is clear from the fact that Paul, at one time, baptized twelve men a second time,—re-baptized them. Acts 19: 5. If any way would do, only so we are baptized, why was Paul dissatisfied with the baptism of these twelve men, and why did he re-baptize them?

(3) "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." Eph. 4: 5. The Greek Diaglott renders it: "One Lord, one faith, one dipping," which is the original language. "One dipping" can only be performed by a repetition of dips. Walking means a repetition of steps; talking, a continued pronouncing of words; and so dipping presupposes a repetition of dips,—three actions or dippings in Christian baptism or dipping.

(4) The Savior did not only command to baptize, but how to baptize, — into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. If we use any other language, and baptize in such a way as to disregard it, we disrespect the command of our Savior in the commission. Christians are represented as being in the Father, in the Son, and in the Spirit. How do they get there? Paul says we get into Christ by baptism, and the Savior does not only command us to be baptized into him, or his name, but into the Father, and into the Holy Spirit. Hence we are baptized or immersed into the Father, and immersed into the Son, and immersed into the Holy Spirit.

All the above clearly shows that the Bible teaches but one baptism, and that a triune.

TRUE FRIENDSHIP.

A TRUSTWORTHY friend has often been the saving of a man, and fortunate we are if we possess and appreciate such a blessing. His readiness to listen to the recital of misfortunes and suggest a means of deliverance, his good-natured tolerance of our eccentricities of temper, and his kind and gratuitous offers of advice and assistance, are things that touch our better nature, and awaken feelings that harshness and neglect would go far to stifle.—Sel.

LET IN THE LIGHT.—To make Jesus precious is both to furnish and to fortify the soul; but to be always treating the Gospel as doubtful is to create doubt and to minister to doubt. If darkness fills the chamber, will beating the air mend matters in any wise? Will dissertations, however eloquent or philosophical, on the origin and perils of darkness, save any man's head from being broken or guide his steps into the day? Open the shutters. Let in the light, and the darkness may be left to itself then.—Sel.

APOLOGIES.

MINISTERS sometimes fall into the habit of making profuse apologies before beginning their sermons, and, in some cases, this habit becomes so fixed that an apology generally precedes the sermon as a substitute for an introduction. The habit is to be deplored for, as a general rule, an apology is neither helpful to the audience, nor to the minister himself. There may be rare cases where an apology, or a few words of explanation, may be necessary, but these are simply the exceptions to the rule.

If the minister makes an apology, giving a good and truthful reason for asking the consideration of the audience, and then, as is often the case, succeeds in preaching a strong sermon, he lays himself open to the charge of insincerity. We once heard a brother apologize to an audience by saying that he was not feeling well, and asked them to bear with him on that account. The excuse was a good one, and, doubtless, a proper one to be made, for the preacher was far from being well, but, after speaking for a few minutes, he warmed up to the work. He gave himself up fully to the Spirit, the body with its ailments was forgotten, and a sermon was preached that we never heard the minister equal, before or since. The apology put him in a wrong position before his audience. Some one was ready to say: "Well, I guess he isn't as sick as he thought he was," or, "If he can preach such a sermon when he is sick, what a wonderful preacher he must be when he is well."

Sometimes apologies are made that are not really sincere; although the preacher may not, at the moment, fully realize that what he is saying is not fully up to the standard of truth. It seems to us to be in exceedingly bad taste, and not only in bad taste but wrong for a minister to get up before an audience and say, "I am called upon unexpectedly to address you to-day and, as a result, I am wholly unprepared to preach, but will try to do the best I can," and then, after making such an apology, deliver a thoughtful, well-prepared sermon. The preacher who does a thing of this kind presumes a good deal on the lack of intelligence of his audience and lays himself justly liable to the charge of insincerity. He may not have expected to preach until he reached the place of meeting, and so far in his apology he adhered strictly to the truth, but while the apology leaves the impression that he is to talk without having given his subject particular thought, the fact that he preaches a sermon, that he has studied and thought upon till he has made it his own, stamps his apology, to some degree, at least, with insincerity.

Again, the minister who studies, as Paul so earnestly directed Timothy, to show himself approved unto God, and who does the very best he can with the ability and the means which God has given him, has very rarely, indeed, any occasion to apologize. He will feel his weakness, he will feel inadequate to the great work that he is called to do; but he has this comfort,—the church, under God's direction, called him to the work. His responsibility is to be measured by the ability that God has given him, and the means placed within his reach. When he has made the best possible use of these, he is clear; when he has done this, the responsibility rests upon the church that called him to the ministry. And here, and only here, should the minister rest his case, and resting it here, trusting in God, and having the guidance of the Holy Spirit, he will not have occasion for many apologies.

An apology may often simply constitute an excuse for a neglect to use all the means at hand to do the work of a minister. In this case an apology is useless, for it will not excuse you in the sight of God, and if you have neglected your work and failed to study, your audience will find it out soon enough without your telling it. Don't apologize, but study God's Word, think and meditate, use every lawful means to make yourself such a workman in the sight of God that you need not be ashamed, "rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

Dr. Broadus sums up the matter of apologizing in the following true language: "Let the preachers beware of apologies. These often create the suspicion of insincerity where it is undeserved, because they are, in fact, sometimes insincere, and because the preacher who feels at the outset oppressed by ill health or unfavorable circumstances, may, quite unexpectedly to himself, rise to the subject and succeed remarkably well. Let a preacher never say he feels unusually embarrassed on the present occasion, etc., etc., as we hear it so often. Apologies are like public rebukes for disorder in the congregation, in that one will very seldom regret having omitted them, however strongly inclined at the moment to speak. When there is any real occasion, whether in beginning or ending the sermon, for what might be called an apology, let it never proceed, or seem to proceed, from anxiety as to the preacher's reputation: let it be brief, quiet, and, as it were, incidental."

EVANGELIZATION OF CITIES.

RECENTLY, while in the city of Chicago, we had the pleasure of hearing the Rev. Dr. Pierson, of Philadelphia, deliver several lectures on the subject of church work in our large cities. We were deeply impressed with the subject at the time, and more especially since our own church is making an effort in a small way to carry on city work. We propose to give our readers some of the speaker's leading thoughts on this interesting topic, from notes taken at the time. Dr. Pierson is widely known in Europe as well as in America as an author, a Christian worker, and an eloquent preacher. He has labored for some years in Philadelphia and his work has been confined to the large cities, so that he speaks from experience. We commend his thoughts to those who are cutting loose from the simple teachings of Christ and from primitive Christianity. The Doctor said in substance:

The evangelization of the large centers of population is one of the most serious and gravest questions of the age; a question full of interest to all who are interested in the perpetuation of our government and the well-being of society.

The tendency of the age is to the gathering of immense bodies of population in our cities, and this tendency is rapidly increasing. The cities and towns contain, to-day, the majority of the population of the country. Fifty years ago Chicago was but a small village; to-day, a million people are living within her corporate limits. It has been truly said that our great cities are the ulcers on the body politic. Here vice finds a congenial soil and sin and wickedness abound, and there is a reason for this state of things. As the village grows into the city, a separation into classes inevitably takes place. Manufactories are introduced and the men who labor in them gradually settle together and build their houses in the same locality. The land is cheap where these houses are built simply because the poorer classes build there. The owners of the factories, having wealth, congregate in another quarter of the city. They build fine houses, and the locality where they build becomes the aristocratic quarter. This produces separation in every sense of the word. The wealthy have but little association with the poor and naturally lose the sympathy that association begets. The poor look upon the rich with distrust. They work in the great factories, sometimes at low wages, and as they walk to their homes, passing by the luxurious homes of the wealthy, they say, with some show of reason, that this wealth is made out of their labor. Strikes and anarchy have their birth in this condition of things.

Again, the poor are closely crowded together in their quarter of the city. The sanitary conditions are bad; disease and discomfort prevail. When the laborer comes to his home after the day's work is done, he finds but little comfort there. The conditions are not enticing. A short distance away is the saloon. Here he may meet his boon companions and he leaves his cold, cheerless home, driven out to seek comfort at a place that can only degrade him and lower him in the scale of humanity.

In the cities the churches are conducted in the interests of the rich and wealthy. It takes money to pay a $5,000 salary to a preacher and about the same amount to a choir. This money can not be had among the poor. They are unable to pay it and the church, like a tree that has taken up all the substance from the ground where it has grown, must be pulled up and planted in richer soil, so the church must be moved away from the poor to where the rich live. Thus the poor are deprived of religious advantage, whilst all is done for the rich because they are able to pay for it.

In New York some of the wealthy congregations worship in houses costing a million of dollars. The pews rent from two hundred to a thousand dollars each. The minister's salary is ten thousand a year; the choir costs five thousand more. The poor man walks by that church. He can't get a seat there. He knows he isn't wanted, and his manhood protests against going into a place where he is not wanted. How can a church of that kind reach the masses of the people? They can not do it and they make no effort to do it. The churches in our large cities are not reaching the masses of the people. What is to be done with the great multitudes who are neglected by the churches, and who, in turn, neglect the churches? How are they to be reached and saved? This question is big with importance. It can not be done by the rich church establishing a mission house in the poor quarter of the city. Every mission thus started has written over its door, "THIS IS A POOR MAN'S CHURCH," and it repels rather than draws the people. No one likes to have his poverty advertised in this way. His self-respect is, to some extent, lost by going to a place of this kind. Such missions have been tried and are found wanting. They do not reach the masses. The churches have lost their hold on the people in the cities. In Philadelphia, with a population of one million, there are only seven hundred places of worship and less than one-seventh of the community attend churches; showing conclusively that the present methods are inadequate, and that the church is losing ground; even seven hundred houses of worship are never filled to their capacity. In many cases the attendance is very small. Churches, with good preachers, capable of holding 500 people, often have less than 100 in attendance. This in the City of Brotherly Love, a city that ranks high as to its morality and religion. The causes which have led to this condition are to be found enumerated above.

In our large cities many of the churches are called, "The Pullman Palace Car Churches." They are built on that principle, finely upholstered, luxuriantly furnished, richly and extravagantly decorated. They are built by the rich for the rich. The poor, the lame, the blind, the halt, can't ride to heaven in that kind of a conveyance. It isn't made for them, and they know and feel it.

Caste is the worst enemy the religion of Jesus Christ has ever had. The separation into classes is unscriptural. The renting of pews is wholly unscriptural; there is no authority for it in the Word of God. No man has any exclusive right to any part of the house of God. If a class sets up its right to buy, for its exclusive use, at the highest bid, any part of the church, and that right is accorded, merchandise is made of it; and were Christ to appear to-day, he would not only make a scourge of small cords to drive the money-changers out, but of heavy rope.

The ungodly choir is a shame and disgrace to the name of Christianity. In one of the rich churches in New York, the tenor singer, who receives a high salary, is a man of such a spotted moral character that respectable people will not invite him to their homes; and his mistress, incredible as it may seem, is the soprano singer in the same choir. Think of such a choir standing up on the Lord's Day, and warbling, "Jesus, lover of my soul," or "Make me, keep me pure within!"

The remedy lies in the direction of a radical change in methods, and this implies a return to apostolic and primitive Christianity. The simplicity of the apostolic days will solve the question—the obliteration of caste. In Christ there are to be no classes, as such. The men of wealth and the poor must occupy the same level in the church. There must be a coming down and a lifting up. Less expensive churches, free to all, must be built in all parts of the city. There must be no salaried ministry, no salaried choir, no renting of pews, no special class—these things must all go if the masses of the people are to be reached. The rich men must go to the poor, with the love of Christ in their hearts, the bond of Christian sympathy and helpfulness must be cemented and made and kept strong between them. They must be led, not driven. They must be entreated as brethren, and not as a lower class of beings. They must be made to feel that love, and not selfishness, is the motive that prompts the efforts to lead them to a higher life. We must have the Gospel preached pure and simple. Fine, eloquent, flowered sermons and lectures, sparkling with gems of thought, will glitter and attract, but they don't wear. They are not food for the soul. There is intellectual but no spiritual nourishment in them. We must have plain, simple Gospel preaching and talking to reach the masses.

In this way the multitudes that throng our cities may be reached and the impending danger of the present unfavorable conditions be averted; and, unless this is done, we may look forward to a terrible day of reckoning.

After all is said the poor make the best church members, the most earnest Christian workers. Christ selected the twelve from among the poor and the same conditions seem to hold to-day. The rich are too much absorbed in business to take a deep or abiding interest in church work. The millionaire must look after his stocks and give his time to the management of his estate. Business must be attended to. His wealth keeps all his energies employed; he has no time for church work. He will place his name on the church book, pay the pew rent for his family, and attend services occasionally, but that is the extent of his interest in the matter. The poor man is less encumbered. He is more easily reached and will more readily give his service to the Lord. "The poor heard him gladly."

The speaker closed by making an earnest appeal in favor of the reform indicated in his talk. He had preached in wealthy churches for a salary, but, God being his helper, he would never again accept a salary or preach in any but a free church. He had settled this matter with himself and with God. He would not lay up money, and, as for his support, the Lord would provide.

OUR SCHOOLS.

THE winter term in our schools will open in a few weeks, and we desire to call the attention of our brethren and sisters to the importance of selecting good schools for their children. People are wonderfully influenced by their surroundings, and young people form no exception to the rule. We should, for this reason, patronize our own schools.

Parents are not only responsible for what they teach their children, but for what they, knowingly, permit others to teach them. If they send their boys and girls to schools where no attention is paid to religious culture, they must not expect them to become religious. If they send them to a school where primitive Christianity is sneered at, they must not expect them to be filled with love for the church of their choice. If they send them to schools where all the fashions of the world are indulged in, they must not expect them to come from such places free from its influence.

One of the most deplorable errors that can be committed, is for parents to send or allow their children to go to the non-religious schools. A young brother who attended a school of this kind said it was a hot-bed of infidelity, and he could not stay there and maintain his Christian integrity. If you would know the influence exerted on young people by the schools they attend, look around you and see how many Brethren's children who have attended the schools of other denominations, are lost to the church. A good brother, who was at one time fearful that the Brethren's schools might not be for the best interests of the church, said to us some fifteen years ago, "I have known a good many Brethren's children who have been sent away to the schools of other denominations, and none of them ever came to the church." And it was the truth.

We now have four schools in the Brotherhood. All of them have had, and are still having, a struggle for existence, but they are doing a good work. Hundreds of our young people have been brought to the church while attending the Brethren's schools, and hundreds more will come. Why not, then, encourage and help our schools by sending our children to them, rather than to institutions that surely lead them away from the church?

Some one says, "Well, we have a good school near us, and it costs something for traveling expenses." Don't put a few dollars in the scale against the soul of your child! Not long ago we had a conversation with a sister whose boys had attended a State Normal School. She spoke of their intelligence, and of the advance they had made in their studies, and how well they were getting on in the world. We asked, "Are they in the church?" A look of pain came over the sister's face as she said, "No, they are all away from the church."

For the winter you are arranging to send your son or daughter to school. Perhaps you are looking to one of the many schools near your home—non-religious, it may be. Can you afford it? Can you, in view of the responsibility resting upon you as a father or mother, take the fearful risk of such a step? It may cost you a few dollars more to pay car-fare to one of the Brethren's schools, but what are a few dollars, as compared with the future spiritual welfare of the children whom God has given you?

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor. 16 2.

"Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give, not grudgingly or of necessity, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor. 9. 7

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." 2 Cor. 8. 12.

THE seeds of faith and love, sown plentifully, will eventually bring to the laborer a bountiful harvest of peace and joy. Bread cast upon the waters will be gathered many days hence. Plant, and trust to the Lord for the increase!—H.

EVERY tract, placed in the hands and home of a sinner, is that much Gospel seed sown where it may grow and become productive of Christian fruit in time to come. The love of Jesus, his cause, and souls, should awaken and prompt every one to all the energies and activities of the Christian faith, and to the redoubling of his diligence in every reasonable effort to save sinners. It is only in proportion to the sacrifices we make and the means and energies we bestow on the cause, that we can at all expect to share of its fruits. Seed time precedes harvest. A man who labors and lives only to himself, can have no share in the happiness and prosperity of others. How much less shall such be permitted to share in the riches and glories of our Heavenly Father's kingdom, not having been instrumental, but in effort and in active to befriend sinners and to help forward the cause and kingdom of our Elder Brother!—H.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DONATIONS.

DURING the months of October and November a large number of our Sunday-schools will be closed for this year.

Doubtless many of them have a surplus left in the treasury from weekly collections during the season. To such permit us to again suggest that the "Book and Tract Work" and the "Missionary Work" are enterprises worthy of the bestowal of such funds.

On Sunday, Oct. 27, we were present at the closing session of the school in the Lower Stillwater church. Having a considerable amount of money on hand it was, upon suggestion of one of the brethren, cheerfully donated to the two church enterprises,—in equal proportions to each.

We hope that love for the cause and its prosperity will prompt many others to follow in the same line of good work. In this way each donor will have a little sum continually at work for the Lord. Train children to give liberally to the Lord, and they will not depart from it when they get old.—H.

EVIDENCES OF THE TRUE CHURCH.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

Chapter Eight.—Conscience.

SOME make a test of conscience as evidence of true church fellowship and right relation to God. We remark that, while it is indispensably necessary to have a good conscience towards God, and to walk with a conscience void of offense towards men, yet conscience alone is not a safe guide to lead us into the light of God's saving truth. If conscience alone were an infallible guide to truth, then ignorance would be no obstacle to salvation; for the ignorant and the heathen are, generally, as conscientious as those more enlightened.

Conscience is a moral faculty we all possess, to a greater or less extent. It is the moral faculty of man that distinguishes him as superior to the beast. Beasts have no moral faculty, no moral sensibilities, and can feel no shame nor remorse. If a beast gore a man to death, there are no compunctions of conscience.

Conscience is, largely, a creature of education. As our religious education has been, so will our conscience manifest itself, and character be formed. The heathen have been educated in idolatry, hence they are as conscientious in their idolatrous worship as Christians are in worshiping the True and Living God.

Paul was conscientious in the Jews' religion, and it required a miracle to convince him of his error.

It is only when our moral sensibilities have been cultured in the truth, as revealed by Christ, that our conscience becomes to us a reliable guide to Christian duty. An approving conscience is a very desirable thing, but we can only allow ourselves to confide in an approving conscience when our understanding teaches us that our lives are in harmony with the will of God. To simply assume that our conscience is an infallible test to true relationship with the church built upon the Rock, regardless of conscience culture, is assuming a dangerous position,—a position that may result in our eternal ruin.

May the Lord help us to cultivate a live, keen, active conscience, molded after the Gospel pattern by additional light from the Standard of Truth, and by a more devoted life! Let us not sit down at ease in Zion and allow our conscience to fall asleep. Let us not dream our life away on a supposed approving conscience.

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—From Mill Creek, Rockingham Co., Va., Bro. A. Flory writes: "Our love-feast occurred Oct 12. Not many were present at the commencement of the exercises. At night the attendance was very large. The brethren and sisters could not all be seated around the tables. The attention was good. Bro. Stoner, from Maryland, and others, did the preaching."

—Under date of Oct. 22, Bro. A. Thomas, of Mt. Etna writes: "We had an enjoyable love-feast. In addition to our home ministers, brethren Michael Myers and Michael Herman were present. Bro. Joseph Thomas called the elders of the church and was anointed in the name of the Lord. He is now somewhat improving. Ministers, passing through this vicinity, are invited to stop."

—Bro H. W. Krieghbaum, of South Bend, Ind., writes: "The brethren and sisters of the St. Joseph congregation closed an interesting Sunday-school Sept. 29. Two weeks prior to the close of the school it was suggested that an opportunity be given to all to give something to the mission work of the church. The amount collected was $5 00. The school sends her prayers with the same and hopes God's blessing will follow."

—Bro. W. H. Hawk, of McGee's Mill, Pa., writes: "Oct. 13, Bro. J. H. Beer, of Rockton, Pa., came into our midst for the purpose of dealing out the Bread of Life unto us. He is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth. Although there were no accessions, the good seed was faithfully sown, and quite a number expressed a desire to unite with the church in the near future. May the blessings of heaven enable us to stand united, so that we may be 'living epistles, read and known of all men.'"

—Under date of Oct. 24, Bro. C. F. Lingenfelter, of the Clear church, Pa., writes: "Our series of meetings which commenced Oct. 4, was conducted by Bro. Silas Hoover, from Somerset County, Pa. He held forth the Word with power. As an immediate result, five came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. Two were reclaimed, and two were added by letter. Our love-feast occurred Oct 11. It was a feast to the soul. The tables were all filled and the rest of the house was occupied by spectators. Good order and good attention were given."

—Bro. S. W. Riner, of Oak Hill, Fayette Co., W. Va., writes: "Sept. 28, in company with my wife, I started to visit the little band of brethren and sisters at Charlestown, W. Va. We arrived there at 11 o'clock and found some of them busily engaged on their new meeting-house, putting in the windows and doors. By evening they had a temporary floor laid, and seats arranged so as to have meeting. I preached four sermons while there, and baptized two. Our prayer is that they may be as 'a tree planted by the riverside,' and an ornament to the profession!"

—Sister Florida Etter, of Cartersville, Va., writes: "I wish to thank the Brethren for the tracts which they so kindly sent me. I have already distributed some, and as they are written so very plainly, I think it a good way to do missionary work by distributing them freely. Let us endeavor to do all the good we can in that way. We only have one life here to live. Let us spend it in the service of our Blessed Master! I am willing to distribute tracts, or do anything else that will be any advantage in building up Zion. Let us all work while it is day, for the night cometh wherein no man can work!"

—Under date of Oct. 20, Bro. N. F. Brubaker, of Clear Lake, Indian Territory, writes: "We have changed our location from the Pan Handle to the Clear Lake Valley, Public Land Strip. There has been a general fire all over the Pan Handle country, burning off all the range, so we were compelled to change to where we could get pasture for our stock. Here we have good land and plenty of good water and range. My claim cost but little. The Oklahoma boom has taken most of the settlers away from here, and Brethren can get good claims here for nothing, with a good sod-house on it and some land in cultivation. There have been fair crops here this summer, though it has been very dry. We have had a rain, lately, that lasted just one week. The ground is thoroughly soaked, which will put it in fine condition for another year. Our opinion is that this is a good place for a man with limited means."

—Sister Sadie Fike, of Neosho, Newton Co., Mo., writes: "I am living isolated from the church, and do not enjoy the many privileges that may be had in a well-established congregation. Sometimes I am almost in the slough of despair, but when I think of my Blessed Savior and what he endured, I take fresh courage and look upward. I realize, more and more, how much we need the assistance of God to make us just what we ought to be. Even though our best resolutions may fail us in the hour of trial, yet we should not be discouraged, but pray God to give us more grace and more of his Holy Spirit. O, that we could all be living epistles!"

—Under date of Oct. 26, Bro. I. A. B. Hershberger, of Bedford County, Va., writes: "Our love-feast occurred Oct. 19, and was much enjoyed by all. Our ministerial aid was, Bro. Shickle, of Roanoke City, and our home ministers. The members are in union and love, as far as could be ascertained, and we trust a bright future is awaiting us! Though our doctrine may be too near to the Bible for the fashionable people of this o'd, aristocratic Piedmont region, yet we are hopeful that God's Spirit is working in the hearts of some. We are made to rejoice when we read of the ingatherings throughout the Brotherhood, and pray that the good spirit may continue to work mightily through the instrumentality of his ministers. May success also attend the MESSENGER! I would be lonely without it."

—Under date of Oct. 29, Bro. C. Harader, of Arkansas City, Kans., writes: "Wife and I met with the Brethren in the Shoal Creek church recently. Bro. Appleman, from Cherokee County, Kans., and the writer commenced meetings Oct. 13th and continued until the 17th,—the day of their feast. We had good meetings, good order throughout, and good attention to the Word preached. Two made the good confession and were received into the fold by baptism. Bro. Jacob was forwarded to the full ministry, and brethren Leander Harader and I. Harris were elected to the ministry. May the Lord enable them to prove faithful to their trust! The feast was most enjoyable,—more so to ourselves, perhaps, because we had our home here, and labored, as we best could, for six years. We found our beloved sister, Mary Alman, suffering severely with dropsy. We anointed her in the name of the Lord; also administered to her the broken bread and cup of the Communion,—much to her comfort. Bro. Geo. Barnhart assisted in the work, together with the home ministers."

—Bro. L. S. Burger, of the Owl Creek church, Ohio, writes: "Bro. Bowman, of Perry County, came here Sept. 30 and preached for us at the old church near Ankenytown, until Oct. 5, the day set of our love-feast. About ninety members were seated at the tables. The large house was full, and many could not gain admittance. Good order prevailed. After the Sunday evening exercises the meeting was changed to North Liberty where Bro. Bowman held forth the truths of the Bible till sinners were constrained to believe. On Monday evening when the invitation was extended, one young man arose and expressed his desire to unite with the people of God. On Tuesday he was received by the ordinance of baptism. On Wednesday Bro. Bowman went to a love-feast in the Danville church, after which he returned again to North Liberty and continued his meetings. Thursday evening at the close of the meeting, a youth of sixteen summers made the good resolve. He was followed by another applicant on Sunday evening. Bro. Bowman left on Monday morning. We hope that his work here is not yet finished, and that many souls may yet acknowledge Christ as a result of his faithful efforts."

—Bro. Jerome B. Franklin, of Oretown, Tillamook Co., Ore., writes: "I am living within two miles of the Pacific Ocean,—near the little Nestachee River, and I am happy to say that the GOSPEL MESSENGER is read with great interest among the few to whom I have lent a copy. I received a letter from Bro. J. S. Bosler, Macleay, Marion Co., Ore., and also from Bro. John B. Lehman, of Salem, Oregon. These brethren invited me to a meeting at Macleay, June 28 to 30. I am sorry that I could not attend and enjoy the meetings. I ask the prayers of God's people every-where."

—Sister Lovina C. Shaner, of Copper Hill, W. Va, writes of pleasant Communion meetings, which she, together with her sister, attended in Monroe and Mercer Counties. At the feast in the latter County, an old brother, eighty-three years of age, made the good choice. Sister Shaner concludes, "While I am glad that God will accept all who are truly repentant, even though they come at the eleventh hour, yet I do think it is a sad mistake to defer the great work of our life until the declining days of old age. We have the promise only of 'to-day;' is it wise, then, to defer? Will God be satisfied with just a few days of service, when we should have given him our whole life? Let all, who are out of Christ, consider this seriously!"

From the Shade Creek Congregation, Pa.

ELD. JOHN H. MEYERS, of Markleysburgh, Fayette Co., Pa, came to us Sept. 27, and on the 28th commenced a three weeks' series of meetings. He preached his first sermon in the Scalp Level church. Then the meetings were moved to the "Big" church and continued there till our love-feast which occurred Oct. 5. Ours was a feast of love indeed. The weather in the afternoon and evening was most delightful, but at night-fall dark clouds began to gather and, when services were concluded, rain was falling. Not quite as many communed as have on some former occasions. Able and instructive sermons were preached by brethren W. J. Swigart, of Huntingdon, J. H. Meyers, E. J. Blough, of Stanton's Mills and Jacob Koontz, of Loysburg, Pa. Eld. Meyers officiated. The order by the spectators was commendable.

Our quarterly council was held Oct. 1. The visiting brethren, with one exception, reported no business. Everything passed off in love and harmony. One man, in the prime of life, was baptized. Four sisters made the good choice shortly before (at different times) and were baptized. Bro. D. Holsopple also baptized a man and his wife during the summer on the Alleghany mountains where we have a church and regular meetings. After the feast the meetings were moved to the Greenland church: from there to Cross Roads, and, finally, to Scalp Level, where they were continued until Oct. 20. Bro. Swigart preached one sermon in Greenland. The meetings, especially in Scalp Level, were largely attended and excellent attention was paid to the preaching of the Word.

At the meetings saints were encouraged as well reproved, and sinners were warned to flee the wrath to come. Bro. Meyers presents his subjects in a plain manner. He does not believe in relating death-bed scenes and grave-yard stories for the purpose of exciting people and thus getting them into the church while unduly influenced. One brother and two sisters were baptized Oct. 13. This makes ten since my last report. Quite a number seemed almost persuaded and we felt sorry that they could not get the full consent of their minds. Brethren and sisters, let us pray that they may not only be almost but altogether persuaded. While only this small number were rescued from the ranks of Satan, we feel that much good was done and we pray that the seed, thus sown, may be as bread cast upon the water and that it may bring forth fruit not many days hence. Bro. Meyers came to us as a stranger, but left many warm friends.

Our Sunday-school closed Oct. 13. About 250 were enrolled during the summer. We are quite sure that our school would be productive of much more good if the older members would bring their children and not send them. It is quite discouraging to know that in many places our members are out visiting, seemingly not caring whether the school lives or dies, while three or four self-sacrificing brethren must carry on the work.

Sickness and death have visited many homes in our congregation and five of our brethren and sisters have been called to eternity. Let us all try to be ready when we are called!

JEROME E. BLOUGH.

Scalp Level, Pa, Oct. 22.

The Mission Field in New York and Canada.

BEING called on by the General Missionary Committee, to fill a call for preaching in the State of New York, I called on Bro. David Smith, of Union Deposit, Dauphin County, to accompany me.

We left Harrisburg, Pa, Oct. 1, and arrived at Looneyville, New York, Oct. 2, a little before sunset. We were met by friend A. M. Zug and taken to his home, about two miles distant.

Meeting was appointed for us on the evening of Oct. 3, and continued every evening during that week until Sunday evening. On Sunday morning, though it was their regular appointment, the Disciples gave us the precedence. The meeting-house is a plain, substantial one, and, so far as we could learn, only used by the Disciples now, though built as a union house. It is located about a mile from our stopping place. The people being mostly English, and Bro. Smith preaching only in the German language, it was our lot to do nearly all the preaching.

After we had arranged as to time of our meetings, we learned that it was a busy time for farmers, and being requested by Eld. J. W. Metzger, to come over to Ontario and help him in the large field there, we consented to go. We left, via Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Lewiston, for Richmond Hill Village, and were met by Bro. Samuel Horner, and taken to his home, where brother and sister Metzger, also, are staying. We found our dear brother, though not sick, yet complaining of almost constant pain, and hardly able for work. There is work enough here to employ several energetic ministers. From what we could learn the members live about one hundred miles apart, and, therefore, the field is too large for one. On the evening of Oct. 8 our work began, and continued every evening until Saturday, when we attended their love-feast. The number of communicants was small, but the solemnity that pervaded the meeting was impressive.

Sunday morning the River Brethren had funeral services for three children who died of diphtheria, and not wishing to interfere with their appointment, we had no meeting, but met with them. Our last meeting was on the evening of Oct. 13, and it was well attended.

The few members in Canada feel their loneliness, and if the brethren wish to make a success of mission work there, they must make up their mind to make sacrifices, and work, work, WORK, as did our dear Bro. Hope in Denmark. We can not sail to heaven in a Vanderbilt's pleasure yacht, or in Pullman palace cars, but more like Christian in Pilgrim's Progress, with bare and bleeding feet, up hill, over stones and thorns. But why should not the sacrifice be made, and the work pushed forward? The reward is souls gained for Christ, and stars in the crown laid up for all who help in the work, by labor and contributions.

On the morning of the 14th we left again for New York, and, arriving at Clarence, were met with a team and taken to our temporary home. On Tuesday Bro. Smith left for home, and that evening we had meeting again, and continued every evening during my stay.

Oct. 17, about 3 P M., by special invitation, a number of neighbors and friends met with us at Bro. Zug's house, and, after a season of devotion, and the usual services, we repaired to the water-side, and there baptized Bro. Zug, — the first addition to the Brethren in the State of New York. While all seemed deeply impressed, yet none seemed to be willing to follow Bro. Zug's example.

Eld. Metzger joins me in recommending to the Brethren, and, especially, to the General Missionary Committee, to so arrange, in coming from or going to Canada, as to go by way of Buffalo. There, from the New York Central depot, take either the Central or West Shore R. R, the former to Looneyville, and the latter to Clarence. Either of those places is only two miles from Bro. A. M. Zug's residence. They can thus give those people some meetings, and build up the cause. The waters of salvation are now moved, and should be kept moving until many souls are convinced of their healing powers, and more perfectly taught the way of life. Brethren, contemplating a visit there, should correspond with Bro. Zug. Address him at Clarence, Erie County, N. Y.

I returned home Oct 19 and found all well. We feel to thank Bro. Zug and wife, and Bro. Horner and others, who did all they could to make our stay with them pleasant. S. R ZUG.

Mastersonville, Pa., Oct. 22.

Here and There.

A good brother propounds the following question: In 1 Sam 18: 10, we read, "And it came to pass on the morrow that the evil spirit from God came upon Saul." "What," asks the brother, "is meant by 'the evil spirit from the Lord?'"

We offer the following as an explanation: The definite article the is not in the Hebrew text. The true rendering is therefore, "An evil spirit," instead of "the evil spirit." This change in the text, as observed, will materially change the meaning of the text in question. The passage plainly points to the sovereignty of God in the world of spirits as well as in the material world, and that no evil spirit can go forth without his permission. God, at times, permits evil spirits to go forth to chastise evil. This was the case respecting Saul, spoken of in the text. It was, no doubt, done for a positive purpose.

Oct. 12th was our love-feast. The occasion was one of enjoyment and spiritual fellowship to all the participants. The remark was frequently made to the writer at the close of the meeting, "It is good to be here," and the warm grasp of the hand indicated the expression to have been an inward reality. Brethren J. P. Hetrick, of the Coventry church; J. M. Gibson, of the Philadelphia church; John B. Brumbaugh of the Huntingdon church, were present and rendered valuable help in making the occasion one of interest and profit. Bro. E. A. Orr, now living within our church district, was also present and took some part in the exercises.

PAUL'S ADVICE TO PREACHERS.

The Sunday following our love-feast, Bro. J. B. Brumbaugh gave us an interesting and heart-touching discourse on "Christian Love," as he termed it.

Bro. Brumbaugh was only put to the ministry early in the spring, but though a mere youth in the ministerial function, he handles the "Sword of the Spirit" with both precision and effect. The secret of Bro. B. getting along so well as a beginner in the ministry, is owing to the fact that he is aiming to faithfully heed the apostle Paul's advice to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." STUDY; yes, study, that is a habit of life Paul would have Timothy to observe, and it is an important and indispensable habit to a truly interesting and successful ministry. First grace, then study, reading and meditation, — these constitute, according to our way of thinking, the four necessary elements in the make-up of Paul's ideal of a preacher, and Paul's ideal of a preacher ought ever to be our ideal, though we may never be able to reach the ideal. Suppose all of us preachers try and heed Paul's advice to Timothy a little more! Brethren, let us try the experiment for a while and see how well it works. Paul must have found the experiment a good thing, or he would not have recommended Timothy to try it. None of us, my brethren, are so perfect in our preaching but what the matter and manner might still be improved upon. We find it so in our own case at least. To unlearn some things in our own preaching is sometimes just as important as to learn things. The writer, for one, means to aim and keep on aiming for the mark of the prize, as indicated by the apostle, — "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

Last Sunday, Oct 27, the writer was to preach the dedication sermon of the new house of worship in the Coventry church district, Chester County, Pa. The house of worship, above alluded to, is situated in the village of Laurenceville, now called Parker's Ford, the eastern part of the Coventry church proper. Bro. J. P. Hetrick is the elder in charge, and does the principal part of the preaching in the Coventry church, preaching mostly in the evening at Parker's Ford,—Sunday evening we mean, and the rest of his time is divided between the Coventry church proper, and Harmonyville, where they built a new meeting-house, six or more years ago. This little village is situated in the northern part of their church district.

The Coventry church has a membership of about three hundred and fifty. A live Sunday-school is being kept up at all three of the different points of worship, and the Coventry church, as a whole, has a bright and prosperous future before it. Its working force is also all that can be desired.

Speaking of the dedication of their new house of worship, we want to say that the building presents a neatness, rarely found in our churches. It is not, of course, imposing in elegance and style, such as is common in most churches of the fashionable and rich denominations. We were, in the main, much pleased with the general appearance of the new church, and it is to be hoped that the Brethren of the Coventry church who have given so freely towards the Lord's house, will never have any occasion to regret the sacrifice made. Owing to the almost incessant and heavy rains, at the time, the dedication services were deferred for some future time, Bro. Hetrick not deeming it best to have them in the absence of so many of the members, who, for the reason above stated, could not be present.

It is here, in this little village, near by where the new house of worship now stands, that the first protracted meeting ever held in our Brotherhood, took place. The meeting was conducted by my father-in-law, Eld. James Quinter, when he was but a youth of twenty-two years, —now more than fifty years ago. The effort resulted in the outbreak of quite a revival spirit, and quite a number were added to the church, of which a few are still living and hold their membership in the Coventry church.

May the Coventry church grow and prosper in years yet to come, until many more may be garnered and brought into the kingdom of our dear Lord! J. T. MEYERS.

Oaks, Pa, Oct. 30, '89.

From the Arkansas Mission.

Two have been baptized since our last report. Bro. Gish stopped with us on his way to Stuttgart, and gave us some meetings; we also had our Communion meeting while he was with us. About thirty members were at the tables. Quite a number of members were not present on account of living some distance away. Our Communion was held in our new meeting-house, which was well filled. The order was all that could be desired, and the meeting was very enjoyable. When we consider that it is only three years since the Brethren first preached here, that the material then was all in its rough, rude state, and then see that the church now numbers fifty members, with a large, commodious meeting-house, we must come to the conclusion that the Brethren have made fair advancement. We had intended, when Bro. Gish came, to go on with him farther into Arkansas, but, after consultation with him, and considering the work at this point, it was thought best to continue here for some time. The Brethren here are now on a fair way for a large, prosperous church, if they will only work together. Much depends on good workers. When the church works, God works; then they become a power for good. Calls come from all sides for preaching. The people are very kind and give good attention to the preaching of God's Word! SIDNEY HODGDEN.

Laforge, Mo.

From the Ten Mile Congregation, Washington County, Pennsylvania.

THE Brethren of Ten Mile congregation commenced a series of meetings at the Brick church on Friday evening, Sept. 27. Eld. John Wise, of Conway Springs, Kans., conducted the services until Sunday, when Bro. G. W. Lowry, of Soulton, Pa., came to his help. They continued until Sunday, which closed the meetings at this place. We had good attendance and marked attention to the Word preached. From thence Bro. G. W. Lowry went to Pigeon Creek meeting-house, of same congregation, and commenced meetings at this place on Sunday evening, October 6. Eld. John Wise went to George's Creek congregation, Fayette Co., Pa., to hold some meetings there. Bro. G. W. Lowry continued meetings with us until Friday evening, when Bro. John Wise again came to our help.

Saturday evening, October 12 was the time appointed for our love-feast. Though the day was none of the fairest, yet, when evening came, a goodly number of God's people came together to celebrate the sufferings and death of Christ. It was indeed a feast of joy. Thirty-nine members communed Many of them are pilgrims of over "four score" years. The order during the exercises of the evening was, on the whole, commendable and worthy of praise.

Sunday, Oct 13, will long be remembered by all present at this place. Bro. John Wise preached on "The Christian's Treasury." Text 1 Cor. 3: 22. Oh, brethren and sisters, let us not be weary in well doing! We shall "reap in due time if we faint not."

We have no addition to report, though some are "almost persuaded." Hope they may not put it off too long! On the whole we had good meetings and felt that "it was good for us to be here." May the Lord bless the labors of his servants every-where, is our prayer! N. B. CHRISTNER.

Odell, Pa.

From the Long Pine Congregation, Nebr.

GOD'S faithful children have recently had a happy season of worship at this place.

Bro. Geo. Stambaugh, our elder, commenced a series of meetings Oct. 18, and continued until the 21st. Though the time was short, he held forth the whole truth.

The love-feast was held Oct. 19th. As the Long Pine Brethren and sisters (eight in number) were preparing to move away, they failed to be present at the feast. On that same account, the council was not held until Sunday, when an election was held for the purpose of electing one minister and two deacons. The lot for minister fell on W. L. Boyd, and for deacons on brethren Byron Boyd and Ben. Clark. We hope that these dear brethren will ever remember the great responsibility resting upon them.

Sunday evening one precious soul,—a maiden of fourteen summers,—came out on the Lord's side, and on Monday morning was led into the cleansing waters. May she ever be faithful and stand before the world as a shining light. This makes seven who have united with the church since April last. All are young in years and need the tender care of the shepherd

On the morning of Oct. 21, the Long Pine brethren departed for Missouri, to make that their future home. Among them were our home minister,—Bro. Rust and wife, and brethren J. R. Cripe and —— Brenizer, deacons.

Oh, how sad to give those dear brethren the parting hand! Perhaps we say each other for the last time on this earth, but, oh, dear brethren, let us so live, that, on that great day of judgment, we may all stand before the great white throne, ready to be received into God's kingdom.

May God bless all his cross bearing children, is my prayer! B. BELLE BOYD.

A Visit to Barron Co., Wis.

WHILE attending the love-feast in the Chippewa Valley church, we received the sad intelligence of the death of sister Perry; also a request to come and conduct her funeral services, and to be with those brethren at their feast. In compliance with that call, we arrived at the place of meeting Sept. 28, at 2 P. M., and found the brethren busily engaged in making arrangements for the feast to be held that evening. We had the usual services in the afternoon. Quite a number of brethren and sisters were present. Ministers from adjoining churches were elders S. Crist and H. C. Baker. We had a very enjoyable feast and one long to be remembered. One precious soul made application to be received into the family of God's dear children. Among the large number of quiet and orderly spectators present, were two ministers of other denominations. Both expressed themselves as being well pleased with the meeting.

Next morning we did a little church work Bro. Eli Bowman was advanced to the second degree of the ministry, and duly installed into his office. May he prove a faithful and worthy laborer in his high calling!

AT 2 P. M. the funeral took place at the Baptist church. The house was filled to its utmost capacity. Assisted by Bro. H. C. Baker, we spoke to the large audience from Rev. 14: 13 We felt more like taking a seat with the mourners, than to try to comfort and console the bereaved family. Bro. Perry has our sympathy and prayers. Sister Perry was one among the first to accept of the Brethren's faith, about six years ago, in Barron County. Since that time she led an exemplary life. During her severe illness never a murmur and hardly a moan came from her lips. Had sister Perry lived until Nov. 24, she would have been thirty-six years old. She leaves an affectionate husband, five children, a mother, one sister and four brothers to mourn their loss.

BRO. D. E. BRUBAKER, of Maxwell, Iowa, began a series of meetings in our congregation Friday evening, Oct. 18 Oct. 26 we were permitted to surround the tables and partake of the broken emblems of our crucified Lord. Being somewhat isolated from the church, and my time being taken up in teaching, I was unable to attend any of the meetings, excepting the Communion Several ministering brethren from adjoining congregations were with us. Bro. Brubaker officiated.

On Sunday we met at 10 A. M for Sunday-school, after which Bro Brubaker preached from 1 John 3: 2. Theme, "The Christian's promotion." Our brother has the cause at heart, and we thank God and take courage for this season of grace. Some said, "We never heard so much in such a short time."

Our brother endeared himself not only to the brethren and sisters, but to others also, and his labors were much appreciated by all.

"A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly." I have often been made to think of the above proverb when I saw how familiar Bro. Brubaker was among the outsiders. He revived our little band of worshipers, and, when the parting hour arrived, we were loth to say farewell.

One dear sister was willing to forsake sin, and obey Jesus. She was baptized the day of the feast. O, may she lead a holy life that her husband may see there is reality in religion, and may he fully realize that the pleasure of doing good is the only pleasure that never wears out!

Bro. George Cripe is expected to hold a series of meetings in our church, beginning Nov. 12, no providential interference We pray that the borders of Zion may be enlarged, and that we may be built up and edified! LIZZIE M. ROGERS.

From the Pleasant Grove Church, Douglas Co., Kans.

OUR Communion is now in the past. It will long be remembered as a pleasant feast. The commendable order and respect shown by the spectators was a notable feature in our feast. Among the members in attendance were four mutes, who had come a distance of sixty-five miles.

After a week's visit with us, the writer, his family, and a brother in the flesh, started to accompany those dear ones home. Upon our arrival at that place, an appointment was at once made by them for preaching. We were with them six days, and had seven meetings, with the best of interest. Our doctrine is new there. If I mistake not, Bro. J. D Trostle had preached there three times. He was there in August, when he baptized brother and sister Darling and their three mute daughters and their husbands, making eight in all, and six of them mutes. May God bless them for their zeal and kindness shown us while there. We hope that those yet out of the ark of safety, but convicted of sin, will not forget their promises, but will soon come into the vineyard of the Lord and redeem their time.

There are some other members living within six to fourteen miles of the little flock referred to. They desire very much to have some minister move among them to preach for them. Brethren passing through from Kansas City to Manhattan on the Union Pacific, will be met at Silver Lake by notifying Bro. Moses Geller or Bro. Ephraim Mummaugh, or at Rossville by notifying Bro. Martin Hass

Brethren, do not forget these hungry, isolated members. One sister told me she did not see a brother for nine years until she met Bro. Trostle

Brethren, when all is well with you, think of the starving souls on the frontier.

Notes by the Way.

I AM now about to leave my children and friends in Dakota, where I have had a very pleasant sojourn during the last few months. I made, in company with friends, over fifty calls and visits to various families. May God bless the kind friends whom I have learned to love in Emmons County.

There is no preaching by our Brethren at Williamsport. The Methodists are the only church at work here. I believe it is God's will that a good minister be sent into this Williamsport district in North Dakota. June and July are probably the best months for preaching, but a minister should come prepared to stay all summer, at least. During the winter people do not go out much.

I intend starting for California soon, to visit my son, W. N. Rohrer, in Fresno, Fresno Co., Cal., and will stop awhile with friends at Los Angeles before leaving California. I may also spend some time in Dakota again, before returning to my home in Honey Grove, Pa.

MARY ROHRER.

From the Middle District Church, Ohio.

BRO. G. L STUDEBAKER, of Shideler, Ind., came to us Oct. 13, and remained with us until Oct. 24, delivering, in all, twenty-one sermons. He labored earnestly and, we have reason to believe, effectually. As an immediate result, thirteen precious souls made the good confession and were baptized into Christ, to rise and walk in that new path, marked out by our Savior. Eight of these were scholars of our Sunday school,—one thirteen years of age. Angels rejoice when sinners turn to God. Oh, how we rejoice, when we see our children leaving Satan's ranks, to strengthen the army of the Lord! May these lambs of the flock go forth in the good cause of our Master and never grow weary in well-doing May their associates and others be constrained, by the overtures of God's mercy, to follow in the good work!

JOHN KARNS.

THERE is a peculiar and appropriate reward for every act, only remember that the reward is not given for the merit of the act, but follows on it inevitably in the spiritual kingdom, as wheat springs from the grain, and barley from its grain in the natural world.—F. W. Robertson.

From Jones' Mills, Pa.

Our series of meetings and our love-feast are in the past. Sept. 28 Eld. Jacob Holsopple, of Geistown, Cambria County, and Eld. Josiah Berkley, from Somerset County, Pa., met with us in council. All business passed off harmoniously. An election was held for two deacons, resulting in the choice of brethren Joseph Christner and Daniel Sheets. Bro. Holsopple preached for us every night till after love-feast, Oct. 5. During the meetings five united with the church. Elders Josiah Berkley, Abraham Summy and others were with us at the feast, and assisted in the labors. Our meetings were largely attended and the order was remarkably good. I hope and pray that much good seed has been sown. May it result in the conversion of many souls! D. D. Horner.

From Wallace, Lincoln Co., Nebr.

Last month I went to Loop County, this State, to a love-feast. Here Bro. J. D. Mast and about nine other members are living. We had a pleasant meeting, and I regret that I could not stay longer.

Oct 8 I left home and went to a love-feast in York County, in the Exeter church. Here I met Bro. M. M. Eshelman. We had a good love-feast. There were three baptized, and there is one applicant. We held three meetings after the love-feast, with good attention. From there we went to the Bethel congregation in Thayer County to a love feast. Here also there were three additions

On Thursday, Oct. 17, I left home again to attend a love-feast in Furnas County, at Bro Jacob Stump's. We had an enjoyable feast, with four additions After meeting, on Sunday, I went home with Bro. J. J. Sandy and wife, who were among those just baptized. They live about twenty miles north. We had meeting at their house on Monday night and then took the train Tuesday morning and returned to Bro. Wm. Sandy's, where I am at present. We had meeting last evening and, the Lord willing, I will remain here until Monday, the 28th, when I intend going to Chase County, then to Frontier County and from there home.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

NETZLY.—At Batavia, Ill, Oct. 24, Edna, little daughter of Bro. Emmanuel and sister Mary Netzly, aged 8 years, 2 months and 24 days.

Her death was caused by membraneous croup from which she suffered terribly for two days, when grim death, who is no "respecter of persons," claimed its victim, and the little spirit was taken home to dwell with God.

Little Edna was a bright and promising child, loved by all who knew her, and an especial favorite among her school and playmates. The blow, so sudden and unexpected, fell heavily upon the grief-stricken parents, but, like David of old, they look hopefully forward to the time when they shall meet their darling in the glory world, where parting shall be no more. Funeral services by Eld. Daniel Dierdorff from Luke 8: 52,—"she is not dead, but sleepeth."

M. Connell.

BRUNK.—In the Greentown church, Howard Co, Ind, July 16th, Bro. Christian Brunk, aged 57 years, 5 months and 17 days.

Deceased was married to Miranda Flemming. Their union was blessed by five children, one of whom preceded them to the "land of pure delight." The rest of the children mourn their irreparable loss. Bro. Brunk has been a member of the Brethren church for sixteen years, and filled the deacon's office for ten years. While we sympathize with the children in their loss, we are glad that we have evidence that their loss is his eternal gain. Caroline Thompson.

SHAFFER.—In the Shade church, Somerset County, Pa, Oct. 17, sister Sarah Jane Shaffer, aged 30 years and 4 months

She leaves a sorrowing young husband and three small children to mourn their loss. Funeral services by John H. Meyers, assisted by the writer. Hiram Musselman.

FLENNER.—Near Mount Hope, Franklin Co., Pa, Mrs. Elizabeth Flenner, aged about 63 years.

The subject of this notice had been to Adams County on a visit, reaching home, apparently well, on the noon train, but in several hours afterwards was a corpse. Funeral services by the writer at the Amsterdam church from Isa 38: 1. T. F. Imler.

LUCUS.—In Bedford County, Pa., Oct. 4, Bro. John Lucus, aged 77 years, 9 months and 5 days. His remains were buried in the Ewett cemetery.

RITCHEY.—At the same place, Sept. 26, of fever, David Ritchey, aged 33 years and 20 days.

He leaves a mother, one sister and one brother to mourn their loss. His remains were buried in the graveyard near Graceville.

REPLOGLE.—At the same place, Oct. 6, of fever, Wm Replogle, aged 22 years and 8 months. He leaves a wife, mother, three brothers and one sister to mourn their loss.

His body was laid to rest in the Stone church graveyard. Services were conducted by the Methodist minister.

SHELLEY.—In the Hopewell District, Oct. 17, sister Hannah, aged 80 years, 10 months and 10 days.

She leaves three daughters and several grandchildren to mourn their loss, which, we hope, is her eternal gain. Funeral services were conducted by John S. Rush and Wm. Ritchey. Her remains were taken to Morrison's Cove for burial. Daniel Ritchey.

STURRETT.—In the bounds of the Indian Creek congregation, Fayette Co., Pa., Miss Harriet Lucinda Sturrett, aged 29 years, 4 months and 18 days.

The subject of our notice was a highly-respected young lady, who had made up her mind to unite with the church, but, like many others, put it off too long, and thus passed away. The funeral discourse was preached in the Buchanan school-house to a large audience. D. D. Horner.

BRUNK.—In the Greentown church, Howard Co., Ind, Nov 6, sister Miranda Brink, aged 55 years, 8 months and 1 day.

Sister Brunk was truly a mother in Israel. At her home and fireside she gave a welcome to all, and with a kind hand she ministered to the wants of the needy. There is nothing more beautiful than the close of a well spent life,—such as that of sister Brunk.

Caroline Thompson.

RITTENHOUSE.—At the home of his son, in Butler, Ind, Aug. 28, Bro. Christian Rittenhouse, aged 86 years, 7 months and 7 days.

Bro. Rittenhouse was a faithful member of the Brethren church. He was the father of ten children, of whom six are living. He leaves twenty-five grandchildren of whom twenty are living, and sixteen great grandchildren, of whom fifteen are living. Funeral services by brethren Jesse Long and John Mark from 1 Pet. 1: 24.

LONG.—At the Insane Asylum, Toledo, Ohio, Sept. 9, David Long, aged 41 years, 2 months and 26 days.

David was deprived of the associations of father, mother, brothers, sisters and friends, for nearly ten years. He was taken to the Asylum where he remained until his departure. Funeral services by Bro. George Zollars and Eld Jacob Brown.

KOCH.—In the bounds of the Lick Creek church, Edith May, daughter of Bro. Samuel and sister Barbara Koch, aged 19 years, 2 months and 4 days.

The deceased was highly respected by all that knew her. She was the youngest in the family and she will be missed in the family circle. Funeral services by Eld. Jeremiah Gump from John 13: 7. Noah Long.

SNIDER.—In the Jonathan Creek congregation, Perry Co., Ohio, Sept. 25, sister Susan Snider, aged 82 years, 1 month and 13 days.

Sister Snider was the mother of eight children,—five sons and three daughters. She has left four children, forty-five grandchildren and twenty-three great-grandchildren to mourn their less. Sister Snider joined the church in early life and lived a faithful Christian. She was loved and respected by all who knew her. Funeral services by the writer. John M. Bowman.

BAUGHER.—In the Tippecanoe church, Kosciusko Co, Ind., Aug. 3, Anna May Baugher, aged 75 years, 9 months and 7 days. Funeral services from Rev. 20: 12, 13

GERBER.—At the same place, Aug. 28, Bro. John Gerber, aged 74 years and 26 days.

He was as well as usual and at work when he fell. Without speaking a word, he passed over the river. Funeral services from Rev. 14: 13.

ROTHENBERGER.—At the same place, Oct. 4, Mary Rothenberger, wife of Eld. G. P. Rothenberger (deceased), aged 89 years and 8 months. Funeral services from Amos 4: 12, by Bro. Jacob H. Kurtz.

D. Rothenberger.

STUTZMAN.—At the family home, three miles west of Johnstown, Pa, Oct. 1, of typhoid fever and hemorrhage of the bowels, Rachel, wife of Stephen Stutzman, aged 59 years, 6 months and 18 days.

The deceased was well and favorably known, and is deeply mourned by a large circle of relatives and friends, and her death was quite unexpected, as she was not considered dangerously ill until a few hours before her death, when she was taken with the hemorrhage which ended her life.

Sister Stutzman united with the Brethren church early in life and has been a faithful and consistent member through many years, and, together with her husband, has attended most of the Annual Meetings for some years back, and made many acquaintances in the church throughout the country. She leaves, to survive her, her husband, now well advanced in years, four sons and four daughters, all grown to manhood and womanhood; also seventy-three grandchildren. Two of her grandchildren have been called home before her.

Sister Stutzman was followed to her grave by a large concourse of friends and relatives. The funeral services were held at Benshoff church by elders Geo. Rairigh and David Hildebrand.

RENNECKAR.—In the Sugar Creek congregation, Oct. 19, sister Lucy Renneckar, wife of Bro. Wesley A. Renneckar, aged 27 years, 11 months and 29 days.

Great is the loss sustained by the bereft family, the dear brother being left with three small children! Funeral text, Philpp. 1: 23, by the writer, assisted by brethren Hochstetler, Holmes and Shutt.

SWINEHEART.—Sept. 19, sister Margaret Swineheart, aged 56 years, 2 months and 21 days.

Her husband preceded her to the spirit world. May the Lord especially bless the bereft son and daughter, and may they have grace to cherish the Christian faith of their dear parents, is the earnest desire of the writer, whose remarks on this sad occasion were based on Ps. 90: 12. Edward Loomis.

ZELLER.—At Mt. Morris, Ill, Sept 4, after a short illness, sister Mary Eve Zeller wife of Bro. Michael Zellers, aged 72 years 10 months and 16 days.

The deceased was the daughter of Joseph Fiery, and born in Washington County, Md. Her parents both died ere she had reached womanhood. In her seventeenth year she united in marriage with Michael Zeller. Had she lived one more month they would have been married fifty-six years Her husband still survives her.

Sister Zeller was the mother of nine children, of whom four died in infancy. One son preceded her eighteen months. Four children still remain,—one son, Wilson Zeller, of Clark, Dakota, and three daughters,—Mrs. Susan E E Long, Mrs Mary A. Binkley, and Miss Louisa K Zellers. Eighteen grandchildren and two great grandchildren are left behind.

Twelve years ago she was partially paralyzed and had been suffering more or less ever since. During the first few years after she was paralyzed, her sufferings were intense, and, at times, she would seem to be in great agony. She was seldom attacked by severe pain during the last few years of her life, until the Master saw fit to call her from earth to eternity. Now she peacefully sleeps beside her dear son in the Silver Creek graveyard.

The deceased was a member of the German Baptist church and was a good Christian woman, a dear, devoted wife and a kind and loving mother. She was loved and respected by all who knew her, and her vacant chair brings sadness to our hearts. No more will she welcome us with her sweet face and pleasant smile. We must now try to meet her where sickness and death can not part.

Mary A. Binkley.

DEBEALT.—At St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 17, Mrs. Nancy L. Debealt, wife of Bro. Narcisse Debealt, aged 68 years.

Gospel Chimes!

BY WM. BEERY.

THIS little book has been selling more rapidly than the publishers anticipated. The first edition was almost exhausted in the first two months. A second edition is now printed.

Following are a few of the good words received from brethren and other competent judges:

"An Excellent Book for Sunday-schools."

After having carefully examined "Gospel Chimes" I can pronounce it an excellent book for Sunday-schools, and hope all the schools of the brethren will adopt the same. Our church is needed to have their congregational singing [illegible] and if it is improved, as it can be, by the use of 'Gospel Chimes,' the power for good will be surprising."—GEO B. HOLSINGER, Teacher of Music, Bridgewater College, Va.

"Fresh and Pleasing Melodies; Thoughtful, Spiritual, and Poetical Words."

"It gives me pleasure to speak in terms of praise of your new book, 'Gospel Chimes.' It contains many fresh and pleasing melodies to which are wedded thoughtful, spiritual and poetical words. I trust it will hold its own in competition with the numerous books now in the market and find a large sale."—J. H. TOWNE, Chicago, Ill. One of America's best writers of Sunday school music.

"Better than Many Similar Publications."

"Copy of your new book received. It contains some very pleasing and useful music, while it is to be commended especially for the selection of hymns. Good Sunday school hymns are in great demand in Sunday-school work, and in this particular 'Gospel Chimes' is better than many similar publications."—A. J. SHOWALTER, the leading writer and publisher of Sunday-school and church music in the South.

"An Excellent Collection"

"I have carefully examined your late Sunday-school singing book, 'Gospel Chimes' and find it to be an excellent collection for the purpose designed, both in words and music."—S. W. STRAUB Chicago, Ill., the popular Western writer and publisher of Sunday-school music.

Bro. Beery has had a large experience in Sunday-school work, and the book which we offer to the brethren, and the public in general, evinces the exercise of talent as well as good judgment. The religious purity of the hymns contributed by sister Beery adds much to the excellence of the book.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH, Editor,
And Business Manager of the Eastern House, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

BRO. SWIGART is now out preaching for the Brethren at the Bethel church-house, near our old home, and on his return we expect to go, and remain over Sunday.

THE Brethren's Almanac, by the time this reaches our readers, will be ready to send out, and the orders will be filled as they are booked. Single copy, 10 cents; per dozen, $1.00.

THERE will be a meeting of the ministers of the Middle District of Pennsylvania held with the Brethren of the James Creek church, ten miles south of Huntingdon, on the Huntingdon & Broad Top Railroad, commencing on Thursday morning, Dec. 12. There will be public preaching each evening, commencing on Wednesday evening and continuing over Sunday. The work of the ministerial meeting will close on Saturday noon. Any of the ministers of the District, not receiving a program of the meeting can be supplied by addressing this office.

AT our late Communion meeting we had with us a number of visitors from the surrounding churches. The following churches were represented: James Creek, Aughwick, Spring Run and Johnstown. We appreciated the visit, and hope all enjoyed their call with us. The attendance, on account of the rain, was not large, but the exercises were edifying to those who enjoy spiritual repasts, and we trust all were made to feel that it is truly no vain thing to wait upon the Lord. We are spiritually blessed in participating in the church ordinances and sacraments in proportion to our preparation for them. The preparation of the heart is an essential prerequisite to the full enjoyment of these meetings. This preparation comes from the Lord, but it comes only when we want it, and freely is it given.

BRO. SILAS HOOVER has been laboring with the Altoona church, Pa., and we are informed that there have been a number of additions to the church. We are glad to hear this, as we feel much interested in the welfare of this congregation. It has been the child of the District of Middle Pennsylvania, and we are all anxious that it shall grow, and become a power for good. The field is an excellent one, and, if carefully cultivated, there is no reason why the best of results should not follow. Our experience, as a church, has not been very large nor flattering in large towns and cities, and it is time that we learn the cause and apply the remedy. The Gospel, as taught by Christ and the apostles, was most successfully introduced in the towns and cities, thus showing that it is adapted to the people of such places. Even if we do not succeed as they did, our failures can not be urged against the suitableness of the Gospel in cities. Christ died to save sinners. The fault must be in the unsuitableness of either our ministers or our methods—perhaps a little in regard to both.

THE subject for our last prayer-meeting was the promise of the Lord to Israel that he would heal their backslidings. Backsliding is represented as a disease, and one, too, that could be healed by the Lord only. Among Israel it seemed to be a very common disease. They were notably a backsliding people, but, we suppose, not more so than people have been during the Christian age, and are at the present time. This soul-destroying disease has taken a deep hold on the churches of to-day. Our encouragement is that the Lord is still ready and willing to heal our backslidings.

SOCIAL LIFE OF THE ANCIENTS.

THE social life in the days of our ancient brethren, in the days of Moses and his successors, has always been a mystery to the most of us; and what seems strange about it is, that, as a rule, we are satisfied that the mystery shall remain, without inquiring whether or not there are any clues by which it may be unfolded to our view.

That there is not much said about it in a direct way in the Bible is very evident to those who have been interested in the subject. Yet in their lives there is so much that seems to be common to all civilized life that we may safely conclude that in all time like begets like, and that in the getting the surrounding circumstances are necessarily somewhat similar.

In the notable family brawl among Miriam, Aaron and Moses we have a glimpse at the social life of the time, and have set before us, rather conspicuously, the character of the different persons. Miriam seems to be the leading factor in the trouble; and what is most strange about it is, this same Miriam was the little sister who so carefully watched the fate of little Moses, as he was launched into the water in the boat of bulrushes.

She was the instrument in saving his life, as well as the notable singer at the exodus, and in the hour of deliverance from bondage. During all this time she had been a witness of the wonderful display of the Lord's miraculous dealings with her people, and the special manner in which her brother had been used as an instrument in the accomplishment of the work.

Here are two brothers and a sister greatly honored of the Lord, and we would naturally suppose that among them would be a mutual enjoying of these honors. But right here we have a very vivid exhibition of human nature as it has been found in all ages. The spirit of jealousy breaks out in the family, and for its ugliness it seeks an excuse. The real cause of the trouble was the honor that the Lord had conferred upon their brother, on account of which they envied him. The pretended cause, on their part, was that their brother had married an Egyptian woman. Whether this was the right thing for Moses to do we don't know; but to his brother and sister it was an occasion for offense, and they made use of it, to their own hurt.

Their brother had a conscience void of offense, and he was willing to have the Lord be the Judge between them. Innocence has no fear from truth and right, and with God guilt is found where it belongs. The origin of it, on this occasion, was found in the heart of the sister, and it was made manifest in her flesh, for she became a leper. Inwardly she had been a leper before; now the ugliness of sin is shown on the body. The home life of thousands is afflicted in the same way, but it is kept behind the skin—but none the less lepers are they.

Miriam sees her folly and the terrible retribution which follows, and repents. Aaron, too, sees his brother's vindication, and intercedes for his sister, and Moses, filled with compassion, implores the Lord in behalf of his erring sister, and, after seven days, the plague is removed. We imagine we see a grand family reunion; Miriam and Hur, her husband, and Aaron and his wife, Elisheba, with their children, make a friendly visit to Moses and his newly-married wife, make pledges to each other, call each other brothers and sisters, and determine that they will profit by the unpleasant experience through which they passed.

While the circumstance shows this unfortunate trait of character in the sister, it also presents to us the different characters of the brothers. Aaron made a good spokesman for his brother, and was strong to help hold up his arms in time of battle, but he was ill-fitted for a leader, as was aptly shown while Moses was upon the Mount, when he cast the people's gold into the fire, and it came out a calf. And it was on this occasion that it was said of Moses, "Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men that were on the face of the earth." This shows that each one was in his proper position—the place where the Lord could use him best. With this they should have been content; and so should we. To do what we can, where we are, is the better way.

Had Miriam and Aaron done thus, there would have been much trouble saved in their social relations, and all, perhaps, have been the better for it.

As to the social life of Moses, we have but little outside of mere inferences. If it was as magnanimous, noble and meek as were his relations and demeanor in other departments of life, it must have been exemplary, indeed. When we think of their manner of life, the forty years' sojourn in the wilderness, and the constant associations of the vast multitude, without any manual labor to perform, we can form but a faint idea as to what were their social relations. Supposing human nature always to be the same, we need not wonder that Israel did sin, and that Moses, as a leader, had much to vex him during his wilderness life.

A careful study of the lives of these three persons, made so prominent in the exodus of Israel, would be of great profit to us all. They are representative and figurative, and from them a large fund of religious knowledge may be obtained.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

MY ANGEL BABY.

I was wondering if my darling,
Who abides in courts of bliss,
Had retained the form and beauty
And the grace she wore in this—
Whether she was still a baby,
Wearing years of infancy;
Or her years, like ours they number,
In that strange eternity.

Musing thus, she stood before me,
Clad in flowing garment white;
On her brow a golden halo
Bearing rays of dazzling light,
Which, amongst her silken ringlets,
Gleamed like pearly drops of dew—
Nestling in her golden tresses,
Shading eyes of heavenly blue.

On her face divinely lingered
Purity for earth too fair;
In her eyes serenely slumbered
Love immortals only wear;
And the waxen lips were parted
Just as if an angel song
Trembled there in joyful anthems,
That her rapture would prolong.

On her snowy bosom glistened
A bright girdle wrought of gold;
Like the stars adorning midnight,
Gold drops sparkled in each fold
Of the robe in which they dressed her,
In that pure abode divine.
And I wondered: Can this jewel
Be the darling I called mine?

Lo! the lily hands uplifted,
As with harp attuned to praise;
And her countenance so holy
Spoke of deep responding lays,
Like sweet twilight glories blending,
Peace, love, joy, bliss, balm and light
Clothed her in majestic glory,
Mortal pen may never write.

Thus she came in angel splendor,
Emblem of that happy throng,
Who before God's throne do render
Praises in melodious song,
Caroled on harmonious harp strings,
By seraphic fingers pressed:
While their hallelujahs echo
Through celestial mansions blest.

I stretched forth my hands, and, yearning,
Filled my heart so long bereft;
But she vanished, rising upward,
Opening wide the bleeding cleft,
Till I pondered o'er the vision
Of her glory with her God;
And the shining street and golden,
Which her sinless feet have trod.

In her righteousness eternal
With the joy I hailed her birth,
Far more beautiful I leave her
Than the fairest child of earth.
Heaven now is fairer, dearer,
For my darling's presence there;
Now my soul with joy awaiteth,
In her blissful state to share.

With what rapture I shall greet her,
Clasp her fondly to my breast!
Then, throughout unending ages,
We shall be forever blest:
Blest as tender child and mother,
Blest as saint and seraph bright,
In the fadeless home of Jesus,
Clouded by no vail of night.

—Gertrude A. Flory.

LET US PUT IT FAR FROM US.

BY J. SNAVELY, SR.

THE MESSENGER No. 43, comes with refreshing showers, and in particular so from the sisters. The article, "I Have Been Wondering," is the cap sheaf to me. I, too, wonder how many of us will now abandon this filthy habit, so we can salute one another with a holy kiss. I often wonder how any one can admonish another when he has his mouth full of the weed,—the poison! Brethren, let us put it far away from us. It is an idol. As temples of the Living God, let us try and make ourselves as clean as we can. "God has not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness." Let us be separate from all evil, and touch not the unclean thing; then God will receive us, and will be a father to us and we shall be his sons and daughters, saith the Lord.

Having these promises, brethren, why not cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit? How can we go on in perfectiog holiness if we do not? All we do, we should do to the glory of God. I often wonder if we can use the filthy weed, or anything else that is wrong, to the glory of God, and, again, I wonder how my brother can admonish me for any violation of Gospel principle when he does the same thing. Tobacco is a spot of the world as well as other evils. The church ought to be "a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle or any such thing, but holy and without blemish." Brethren and sisters, let us watch and pray that we be cleansed from this evil! Let us not wait six or ten years! Let the will say, "Now, to-day, is the time!" "Ye are the light of the world." When are we the light? Now, or never! We will never be a light till we are truly children of the Lord.

When distributing tracts, people often say to me, "Your people are no better than we are." They pay more for tobacco than we do. Why do you tell us to quit this filthy habit? Heal yourselves first; then you will be a better light to us." Who is to give an account for such things? May God help us to speed the day when we can say, "The church is without spot or wrinkle"!

Now, brethren and sisters, let us not say we can not quit a bad habit. We all know we can. Let us obey our promises we made that we may grow up into him, even Christ,—is my prayer.

Sisters, keep on giving us good admonitions through the MESSENGER. Brethren, let us not stop the paper because some one states our case too pointedly.

ARE WE RISEN WITH CHRIST?

BY I. N. CROSSWAIT.

"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God."—Col. 3: 1.

WERE it not that my whole heart is drawn out for the awakening of our Zion, I would cease to try to persuade the lukewarm, or arouse them to a true sense of their duties and privileges. Old brother Paul, in the above verse, clearly infers that those addressed were risen with Christ and that they must seek those things which are above. I am fearful that the affections of many of the brethren are taken by the things of the world, although we read in positive language, "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." 1 John 2: 15.

If we are in Christ, or have risen with him, we are then dead to the world and alive to God. Then, if alive to God, we will evidence the same by a diligent and constant effort to obtain more of his Spirit, that we may become more effective workers in the cause of Christ. If we live in a lukewarm, careless way, our influence will be to please Satan. Cold, careless professors of Christianity are the cause of more skepticism than all the teaching of avowed skeptics. How many do we see that seek those things, which are above, with the same untiring diligence with which they seek after the things of the world? What would our farmers accomplish, if they took no more care to keep out weeds from their fields, than the careless would-be Christians to keep out the weeds of error that are ever coming up in their hearts?

In view of what Christ has done for us, what a responsibility is resting upon us! It would seem that mankind would be so full of gratitude as to feel it impossible to render due thanks and praise to his great name! But alas, on the contrary, we see them so ungrateful that it is no easy matter to discover in them any evidence whatever of thankfulness. They can not realize the grief of our Blessed Intercessor to see such ingratitude.

When a man gives his life for a fellow-man, it is lauded as some great goodness in him; but the sacrifice of the Savior for his enemies, is not looked upon with the same feeling by but a few of those who claim to know him in the pardon of their sins. O God, what a fearful lack of appreciation of the wondrous love manifested in our redemption! Let us ever strive to realize our true condition in his sight, then we shall see our great lack and be led to him in whom is all power. Then, when we come to him in full, entire confidence, attained through the means of true consecration to his service, we are assured that he will hear us, and that whatsoever we ask, consistent with his will, he is more than willing to grant us. Oh, that God would awaken all his children to a full sense of their duty!

Avon, Ill.

OUR HOPE.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Bro. J. O. Culler:—

BELOVED, your letter is brief, but unspeakably solemn. I do not want you to give me credit for what I have not. My eyes see higher than my hands have ever reached, and further than my feet have ever traveled. Our ideal is not our actual, save potentially through faith. To hunger and thirst is also grace and salvation, as well as the filling. Small capacity admits of small appropriation, and an ever-widening soul is conscious of an ever-increasing hunger. The vacuum and the filling are both of God. In our blindness and selfish enthusiasm, we may attempt great things, but accomplish little, or even do harm to ourselves and others. We fail so often and so signally that we no longer look confidently for the falfillment of God's great promises. We say we have hope, and try to persuade ourselves that we really do, but the naked truth is, we do not. Some time ago one brother asked another, "Are you saved?" The reply was, "I hope." Again the interrogation, "Are you not sure?" And the reply, "Hope is all I have." I then asked, "Are we sure we hope?" This word is often fallen back upon as though it meant less than perfect assurance.

"The hope set before us" is also the hope cherished, and it is an anchor both sure and steadfast, entering into that within the vail. "CHRIST IN US is the hope of glory." The Gospel hope is as immutable and secure as Christ Himself. To hope to be saved IS salvation. Hope, Faith, Love, are inseparable. No soul can have one and not all three. To "know God is eternal life," and "he that loveth not knoweth not God, for God is love." "Without faith it is impossible to please God." "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin," "Hope maketh not ashamed." You can hunt up these divine utterances, and many others of a kindred nature, showing that our only warrant to hope is Christ Himself, in all the fulness of His Godhead, all the perfection of His Humanity, all the completeness of His Atonement and Intercession.

If our hope must have its ground in our righteousness or holiness, it will expose us to "everlasting shame and contempt." I have no hope at all, save that Jesus died for me, lives and pleads for me, is my very life in its essence and possibilities. Where such a hope exists, the life will correspond. It is vain to try to do good or be good, as a ground of confidence and peace and rest. Emmanuel has finished our salvation, leaving nothing undone to remove every barrier between God and the sinner. It comes to us a free gift, pure grace; by faith we accept it, and work it out in all the details of life, trusting and resting, step by step, in Him who is our Alpha and Omega. A true faith will always appropriate a full Christ, and thus keeps love warm and hope bright.

If we sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, who ever liveth to make intercession for us. If we sin seventy times seven, what can we do but return again, confess our sin, and find Jesus faithful and just to forgive and cleanse, and "heal our backslidings, and love us freely." Where would be our hope, were it not in God? Abraham and Moses and all the prophets and apostles, would all be lost if they had nothing to hope in but their own goodness and holiness. God became Man, the Sinless became the sinner, the Holy One of Eternity became the Scapegoat of Humanity, the Eternal God Himself exhausted the claims of His own Nature and Law, so that there is salvation for every sinner on earth, no matter how black, how vile, how low, how petrified, how "earthly, sensual, devilish."

The sin against the Holy Ghost does not empty the divine resources of redemption, but it empties human nature of all spiritual receptivity. Is any reader troubled with fear about having sinned the unpardonable sin? Thank God for that fear! To doubt God's willingness and power to forgive is dishonorable to His great Sacrifice in Christ; but at the same time it reveals the presence of the Holy Spirit, and the possibility of our restoration. If God justifies, who is he that condemneth? And God justifies the ungodly through faith in His own perfect provision for the chief of sinners. True faith rectifies all judicial relations with the Divine Person and Government, and brings power to become the very thing we believe. "Ye believe in God, believe also in Me," and this brings peace and holiness and power, which earth and hell can not annul.

This is "the hope of the Gospel," "the blessed Hope," the only hope, and if we have this, "we purify ourselves even as He is pure," by the constant influx of his own life, "fulfilling all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith with power." With amazement and gentle reproof Jesus asked Peter, "Wherefore didst thou doubt?" If the Godman says, "I am thy salvation," why not hope, and that with full assurance? When God has done His best, Isaiah 12: 2, 3 is the experience and confession and glory of life.

COMMITTEE WORK.

BY J. H. MOORE.

THE following editorial item, which appears on page 679 of the MESSENGER, in my estimation, is the most timely production on that subject, that I have yet seen. It is so full of meaning, that I will reproduce it for a more careful reading and consideration:

> Committee work has become an important factor in our form of church government. When a church has been thrown into disorder from such troubles as arise in our church work, and it is found that it can not be adjusted by ordinary methods, a committee is sent by the District Meeting, and, if this fail, the Annual Conference sends out a committee: and from their decision, when ratified by Annual Meeting, there is no appeal. The committee sit as judges in the case. They hear and examine the testimony and render a decision as nearly as possible in accordance with the facts in the case. Owing to the importance of the work placed in their hands, committees of this kind should be selected with great care. Men should be selected for such work who have clear, cool heads, with a judicial turn of mind. They should be well acquainted with our form of church government and have some knowledge of the rules governing evidence. Committee men are sometimes placed under very trying circumstances and then a quick perception of the right and an evenly-balanced judicial mind and matured judgment are of the greatest value. All men do not enjoy such advantages, and, as a result, fail under trying circumstances. Too much care can not be observed in selecting brethren to serve on important business.

It seems to me that the qualifications of committee men is a subject worthy of far more attention than has generally been given to it. In Acts 6: 1-6 we read of a difficulty between the Grecians and Hebrews, at Jerusalem, in regard to the Grecian widows being neglected in the daily ministration. It being a temporal matter, the apostles suggested the appointing of a committee of seven brethren, "of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom," whom they would set over that particular business.

The committee were duly selected, part of them preachers, and others deacons, and set apart to the work. They certainly settled the difficulty, and gave satisfaction to all parties, for we hear nothing more of it. But it should be remembered that the qualifications were first laid down and explained, before a man was selected. In that way they were led to select the right kind of men. We should be equally careful when selecting men to serve on committees now.

But there are points in the editorial item to which I desire to call special attention:

1. "Men should be selected for such work, who have clear, cool heads, with a judicial turn of mind."

2. They "should be well acquainted with our form of church government."

3. They "should have some knowledge of the rules governing evidence."

It would be difficult to name qualifications more important, and more to the point; and I suggest that all of our officials make a careful study of these points, with a view of preparing themselves for church work, especially "our form of church government," and "the rules governing evidence." I think a few well-written articles on these three points would be both edifying and very instructive. Some of our well-informed brethren, with experience on committee work, might greatly aid others, as well as the church in general, by giving the result of their experience. Let us hear from some of them.

WHO IS OUR NEIGHBOR?

BY GERTRUDE FLORY.

Beloved in the Lord:—

YOUR letter containing the inquiry, "Who is my neighbor?" has been here a long time, but, on account of pressing duty, I have failed in complying with your request to reply through the MESSENGER, and had nearly abandoned the idea of doing so, till remembering how, in years that are past, I sat in your home, day after day, repeating to you the joy and sweetness of the new life I had found. Though I was but a child in years and you had reached womanhood's estate, you learned of me, and before another year was added to our lives, we walked together the same bright way of faith divine. "How mysterious are his judgments and his ways past finding out." And now, after a lapse of years, you come again to me for more of "that light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world."

Then, as in those other days, let us take our Bible and together learn "who is our neighbor," that we may be better neighbors ourselves, "For better is a neighbor that is near than a brother far off." Prov. 27: 10. Perhaps, if we know something of our duty to our neighbor it will help us to comprehend who our neighbor is. The Lord commanded Moses to tell the children of Israel: "Thou shalt not defraud thy neighbor, neither rob him." "But in righteousness shalt thou judge thy neighbor." "Neither shalt thou stand against the blood of thy neighbor." "Thou shalt not in any wise rebuke thy neighbor, and not suffer sin upon him." "But thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Lev. 19: 13, 15, 16, 17, 18.

These quotations teach us what we should and should not do to our neighbor. Then it is fair to suppose that those persons who fulfil these commands toward us are our neighbors, and this conclusion reaches out, widening like the ripples of a stream, till it re-echoes from shore to shore, embracing humanity, as a mass, in one great neighborhood as well as brotherhood.

The members of the family living next door to us are our neighbors just as far as they fulfill the Gospel requirements of neighbors to us and no farther, and we are their neighbors in like manner. Should any be enemies to us we should love them, and do good to them, thus proving ourselves neighbors indeed.

When the Savior was asked, "Who is my neighbor?"—his reply was the parable of the good Samaritan, and the lawyer's conclusion was, "He that showed mercy on him," was neighbor to him. Luke 10: 25-37. The man that fell among thieves was from Jerusalem and, no doubt, was a Jew. From John 4: 9 we learn that "the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans," hence the Samaritan could not be called the Jew's neighbor in the same sense that we regard our associates as neighbors. This understanding of the subject makes the act of the Samaritan one of great benevolence. While the priest and the Levite passed by on the other side, the Samaritan stopped to pour oil and wine into the wounds of one that would have no dealings with him. No wonder he has been called "the good Samaritan," and Jesus relates his merciful act as an example of the true neighbor.

Then, whoever assists us financially or spiritually is our neighbor. What aid should be more acceptable to us than to be helped heavenward? What act would be so merciful as showing us our sins and helping us to overcome them? This must be what the Lord meant when he says: "Thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbor, and not suffer sin upon him." Where neighbor is used in the Old Dispensation, in similar expressions in the New we find brother. Hence we conclude that whoever we may regard as our brother, is also our neighbor.

COMMENDATORY.

BY SAMUEL T. HARNES.

I SEE a few lines in MESSENGER No. 43, page 683, written by sister Ellen Bidinger, and I can heartily say "amen" to what is there written. The Brethren teach that prayer is one of the leading principles to believers by which they can have access to the throne of grace. By prayer we understand the offering up of our petitions to Almighty God for such things as are lawful and needful, in faith to obtain through the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. It is said that prayer comes from a word in the Hebrew, which signifies appeal, interpolation, intercession, whereby we refer our own cause and that of others to God. It may also be said that the parts of prayer are invocation, adoration, confession, petition, pleading, dedication, thanksgiving and blessing. A family altar should be erected in every family. Then we will be able to show by our daily conversation that we have been at the feet of Jesus,—near to him who has the power to establish us according to the Gospel. If we are led by the spirit of the Gospel, then we will perform all of the ordinances found therein. The world will not excel us in this important matter, for Christ and his holy apostles have plainly taught us how and in what state we should be, in order to pray acceptably to God.

THE LAST DAYS OF AUTUMN.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

THE seasons of the year follow each other in rapid succession. Spring and summer days are all gone, and we are in the last days of autumn. A few days more, and winter, with its rude blasts and howling storms, will be upon us. Millions of our race will think of those days long after they have passed away. They will leave to us either a precious or a sad memory. With some they will be, or have been, the beginning of great pleasures; with others, the end of earthly prosperity, the close of every joy and hope, the evening of the light of day, the gathering of darkness,—the beginning of the dark and gloomy night of affliction and suffering, distressing fears and heavy woes. But these days of affliction and suffering are like the last days of autumn,—few, and will soon pass away. Surely, we behold the wisdom and goodness of God, our Creator, in thus arranging everything in the world for our happiness and pleasure!

"Cast your eyes upon the earth that supports us; raise them then to this immense canopy of the heavens that surrounds us, these fathomless abysses of air and water, and these countless stars that give us light! Who is it that has suspended this globe of earth? Who has laid its foundations? Its bosom could not be laid open for cultivation by man if it were harder. It could not support the weight of his footsteps if it were less firm." This earth, though mean and unformed, produces the most precious things, which are "transformed into thousands of beautiful objects that delight our eyes." This earth is so infinite in its productions that nothing exhausts it. Its treasures experience no decay. It grows old, but not in the exhaustless riches it pours forth from its bosom from age to age.

Well may we ask, "Who made the earth?" "Who has stretched over our heads this vast and glorious arch? What sublime objects are these!" The regular succession of day and night teaches us wisdom and adoration! For many ages the sun has never failed to come forth from his Eastern chambers to shed his blessings upon us; and, according to the Holy Book, the sun also "knows his going down."

We address the great Creator in the language of the Book: "Thou crownest the year with thy goodness; and thy paths drop fatness. They drop upon the pastures of the wilderness: and the little hills rejoice on every side. The pastures are clothed with flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing." Ps. 65: 11-13 "The Hand that guides this glorious work must be as skillful as it is powerful, to have made it so simple, yet so effectual, so constant, and so beneficent." See what wisdom and mercies in both the day and night!

"Day is the time for society and employment. Night folds the world in darkness, finishes our labors and softens our troubles. It suspends, it calms everything. It sheds around us silence and sleep; it rests our bodies, it revives our spirits. Then day returns and recalls man to labor, and reanimates all nature."

The last days of autumn are like the last days of human life. They are melancholy and sad. The green woodland, the sylvan shore, the vine mantled bowers are faded and dead. Moaning winds and desolating storms sweep over the plain. O how the last days of autumn destroy life and beauty and glory, and bring general desolation and ruin upon vegetable life! So the last days of mortal life are gloomy and sad. With the best of people a great many pleasures are then gone, and for that reason it behooves all to consider what is written,—"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them." Eccl. 12: 1.

I ask, Are not the last days of those sad who have misspent their days, toiled all their lives in sin, abused the goodness of God, despised the gracious offers of pardoning mercy and eternal life? Their days are gone, all gone, hopelessly gone! How vain to wish their return! How unavailing their most bitter regrets! Is not death awful enough without making it more so by a life of sin? Is not the grave dark and gloomy enough without making it more so by disobedience to God's sacred commandments? Is not eternity terrible enough without treasuring up unto yourselves "wrath against the day of wrath, and revelation of the righteous judgment of God"! Rom. 2: 5.

Sad and melancholy days, indeed! Self-convictions and gloomy recollections of the past bring forth guilty anticipations for the future. The last days of such a life end in darkness, fear and perdition. The life being squandered, retribution and doom are just at hand. Ah! who can throw empires away, and be blameless? Who can live and die in such a condition, and not realize the sadness and peril of those days? Can the children of Jesus and of the resurrection see their own friends and kindred thus end their days without emotions of sorrow and pain? No, they can not.

But the last days of autumn may also be calm and fair, radiant with hope for to-morrow, for the ruthless storms will soon end, the chilly air become mild and balmy, the barren fields return to life, the woods be made vernal, and the withered flowers bloom in beauteous youth, and shed their fragrance on the "desert;" and then this world will be more beautiful, more glorious than ever. So the Christian's last days on earth should be the fairest, brightest and best. "His God sustains him in his final hour; his final hour brings glory to his God."

The fairest, brightest, most glorious are the last days of autumn. See what a beautiful combination of light and shade and color the woodland presents, and the various and brilliant hues of the mountains, one range above another, rising higher and higher until their towering summits penetrate the skies! Behold the richness of the skies,—the beautiful canopy of clouds which curtain our globe! Yea, what an unsparing flood of beauty is poured out on all things around us!

So of the Christian. How beautiful are the last days of the Christian mother! Her tender care for her children is manifest to the last; then, commending each one to her Lord and Savior, she falls asleep in Jesus. Her life of devotion and fidelity, as it passes from earth is like the tranquil evening of an autumn day, painting a rainbow of peace and glory over her grave.

Dear reader, devote the few fleeting days of life to Him who died on the cross for you. Then, when your last days on earth come, you will pass away to that land, all fair and immortal, and rest, sweetly rest, evermore in union with those who already have entered the heavenly world.

"HAPPINESS is perfume that one can not shed over another without a few drops falling on one's self."

"YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN."—John 7: 8.

A Synopsis of a Discourse Delivered Nov. 2 in the Pleasant Hill Church, by Michael Flory, Cambria, Indiana.

THE person to whom Christ addressed these words was Nicodemus,—one who, at the time, held a prominent position, being a member of the Sanhedrim. Lest his reputation should suffer he sought an interview with Jesus privately, and that by night.

There is a depth of meaning in the words of the Savior! Once fully comprehended, they point clearly to the baptism of water and of the Spirit, and their relative position among the fundamental or primary principles of the Gospel of Christ. These truths, forcibly impressed upon anxious and convicted characters, produce in them a willingness to carefully consider the ways and means of their salvation.

How sad we feel when our children, who are thus partially enlightened, fail to come into the church, not realizing their danger! They do not seem to interest themselves much about heavenly and divine things. This shows the necessity of instruction on that point. Converts, generally, are just about as good as they are taught to be.

John Wesley, in his preaching, acknowledged the urgent necessity of being taught of God. In his travels he came across a man who was lying in the gutter. The man looked at Wesley and said, "You are the man who converted me," to which Wesley replied, "It just looks like my work; if God had done the work, I would now find you in different circumstances."

We should not be mistaken in this respect. The apostles stood by the Word of God. The Savior laid down a plan which puzzles unconverted persons, but, by acting in full faith, the way becomes clear and plain. Too often we wish to see all before we do anything. This is not according to the directions given to govern us.

The effort or result of being born of water and of the Spirit is plainly visible, and if we continue to be led in the right direction and remain faithful, we preach mightily by our life, even when we are dead and gone.

When we become filled with the spirit, the burden of sin will all be removed through the merits of Christ. This will bring us into the church and make us willing to obey Christ in all things. The record is silent as to whether or not Nicodemus ever embraced the Truth here presented to him, yet this much is certain that it was through his assistance that Joseph was permitted to obtain the body of Jesus, in order to give it a respectable burial.

Paul, at the time of his conversion, was found praying; yet this was not sufficient in the estimation of Ananias, and he told him to "arise" and "wash away his sins." When this was accomplished, he was a changed man and began to build up what before he attempted to destroy. Soon he became attached to those whom before he was intent to persecute.

Through our obedience we may become perfect. How beautiful the thought! But how about those who are out of the church,—who, by staying away, seek to avoid these weighty impressions? Such, by their example, will influence others to delay their coming to Christ.

May God enable us to keep near the cross; for the life we now live has much to do with the life beyond. A consistent, Christian life has a wonderful power for good. The world admires and approves of it when our conduct coincides with the clear evidence, adduced from the Word of the Living God. Let us always act out the convictions that are daily impressed upon us by the Spirit of God!—James Wirt.

SLANDER.

BY SADIE C BRALLIER.

GREAT and many are the evils that infest and degrade our fair and so-called Christian land, but prominent above the rest, stands the heinous and appalling one of slander.

Slander is the base, though royal, monarch, at whose vile shrine all the subjects of the kingdom of darkness kneel and pay homage. Slander is the curse of earth, the tyrant of mankind. Slander is the pestilence of strife, the warrior of shame, the viper of iniquity. Slander is the despoiler of love and peace, virtue and honor, and all things high and holy. To the door of slander can be traced impurity, drunkenness, prostitution, debauchery, crime and a host of defaming evils. Slander is the author of pain and wretchedness as deep and cruel as the grave! O where is there an abundance of words, sufficiently strong to describe the tyranny and oppression which characterize the spirit of this vile and heartless king?

Slander! What horror has he not accomplished? What ungodly work has he not done? I have seen homes whose atmosphere breathed only the blessedness of love, and harmony and joy; but when once tainted by his venomed breath, love gave place to hatred, harmony was turned into discord, and all the sweet joys of domestic bliss were trampled in the dust. I have seen husband and wife, whose rapture in each other's love was unbounded, forever rent asunder by his cruel hand. I have seen children in the innocence and purity of youth, made homeless in consequence of his perjuring tongue. I have seen him put enmity between nations and kindle it to bloody strife. I have seen Religion tremble at his malicious power. I have seen saints fall beneath his mighty curse. I have seen hearts torn to fragments by his relentless spear, and souls go down to death in the pain of a fatal blow from him. I have seen Virtue array herself in the unsightly garb of vice, Honor repose upon the polluting couch of shame, whilst happiness took up her abode within the gloomy haunts of misery and despair. Virtue, honor, and happiness gone,—all lost in the evil, consuming flames of direful calumny!

Is it not high time that the Christian press were taking up the subject and heralding the evils of his tyranny from sea to sea, from pole to pole? Is it not high time that Christian men and Christian women were laboring to remove the curse of his cruel might? O, my brother, my sister, go with me to the battle field! In the name of God put forth your strongest efforts and WORK until the sweat stands on your temples, and the blood bursts from your veins, and never rest until humanity is freed from his destructive power and thralldom! Then, and not till then may we hope for a race of nobler men and purer women.

I know a lady who is a missionary in one of our large cities. One day, when on an errand of mercy, she stepped into a house of disrepute. Her quick, womanly instinct told her she was not amongst the pure of her sex Turning to one of the inmates, whose face was still bright and fair, though stamped with shame and wantonness, she asked: "How came you here, you who are so young and might have been so useful to the world?" With a smile of guilty triumph she replied: "There was a time when my character was above reproach, and my heart without stain. But I was slandered, and, to my astonishment and great horror, my father believed the report and drove me from his door. The accusation was a false one, and the agony I suffered in consequence of it was deep and bitter. I wept until I had no more tears to shed,—grieved until my heart seemed turned to stone. My friends unanimously turned against me. Feeling that I had lost the respect of all the pure and good, I grew reckless and wandered from the path of virtue. No one sympathized with me and I went from bad to worse. Stung by the bitter censure of those who were once my friends, I cared not what my fate should be and at last came here, to the lowest and most degraded of all earth's dark resorts. But I am happy now! There are plenty of friends to praise me, for I am the acknowledged belle of the establishment. What matter though it be the praise of libertines, and the belle of the depraved and vile?"

A ruined woman! and it was slander that made her so. A pure heart, robbed of truth and virtue, a young life steeped in wickedness and shame; and this is but a sample of the thousands and thousands who have met the same, hard, bitter fate. But only the great God in heaven knows how many men and women stand robed in the fair mantle of chastity, and even CHRISTIANITY, who are guilty of the vilest, the most diabolical and DAMNING SINS,—sins which, perhaps, have never even shadowed the souls of those whose characters they so ruthlessly assail. But "there is nothing hidden that shall not be revealed," and on that great day of fire and flame I wonder if those very slanderers will not be delivered with the harlots and adulterers unto the kingdom of Satan and there pay the penalty of their hidden crimes "in the blackness of darkness forever"? O, I fear and tremble lest it will be so!

Certain it is that no pure man or pure woman would lower himself or herself to the degraded position of the slanderer. O, if the veil were torn from the heart of the average slanderer, what impurity and corruption would be exposed to view,—what lewdness, filthiness, vice and crime! Beware of the slanderer! Flee from him as you would from a poisonous reptile. Suffer him not to lay his hand upon you; for when once within his grasp, he is sure to measure his victim to the extent of his own iniquities. Having a depraved character himself, he well knows how to ruin the reputation of his fellow-man. Surely his "steps go down to death," and his "feet take hold on hell." I had rather pluck out both my eyes than to enter the presence of the Righteous Judge with "Slanderer" written on my brow!

O, the cries, and tears, and prayers, and sorrows, and heart-aches, and agonies, worse than death, and wretched days and sleepless nights to which foul Slander has doomed his helpless victims! Who but the God that knoweth all can count the homes he has invaded, or measure the depth of the wrongs which his cruel hand has dealt?

Dear reader, let us climb upon the highest plane of Christian dignity, and bid defiance to the evil, contaminating breath of calumny! Let us value our manhood and womanhood as priceless jewels,—far too precious to be thrown into the filthy mire of slander. Let us be "ministering angels" to the fallen,—shed tears over their weaknesses, lift them from the deadly slums of shame, and be their inspiration to a nobler and a better life. Let us form sweet ties of friendship and association,—mingle with our fellow-men, manifest an interest in their welfare, and seek ardently after their higher qualities of mind and heart; and in "whatsoever things are good, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report," let us encourage them. But as far as the East is from the West, even so let us pray God to keep us ever far from the soul-polluting spirit of the slanderer!

O, Slander, thou vilest and most cruel of hell's messengers, how long till thy dark mission is accomplished? How many characters wilt thou yet malign, how many homes wilt thou yet destroy, how many souls wilt thou yet drag down with thee to that deep pit of everlasting darkness? How long until the wrath of God shall stay thee in thy black device and bind thee with infernal chains to hell's abyss forever?

Slanderer, do you expect to gain an entrance through the pearly courts of heaven? Be not deceived; for nothing defiled, unholy, or impure, can have its abode within that blissful place. "Neither any that loveth or maketh a lie."

THE MEANING OF THE WORD "ETERNAL."

BY E. B. WINSLOW.

I HAVE been talking with some of my brethren as to the meaning of the word eternal. Many brethren claim that it does not mean without end, when speaking of eternal punishment. They say that Greek scholars claim it has an end Do those Greek translators know? In my opinion, if it has an end as to punishment, it also has an end as to "eternal life." Mark 10: 30 The Apostle John tells us a great many times about eternal life. Paul said to the Colossians, "Ye are dead (dead to sin) and your life (eternal life) is hid with Christ in God" Of course Paul meant "eternal life." John 10: 28.

In speaking of "eternal life," no one wants it to have an end. In speaking of "eternal damnation," Mark 3: 29, we all are willing that there might be an end to it.

It seems to me that all those that think the word "eternal" has an end, should consider seriously, and see if they are worshiping a god that has "an end," because the true God is "without beginning of days or end of life," and is eternal. Deut. 33: 27; 1 Cor. 4: 18 and 5: 1.

TIME IS FAST PASSING.

TIME is fast passing, and how we should improve it! How much good might be accomplished if we would but improve our spare moments! They are the gold dust of time — the portion of life most fruitful in good or evil They are a blessing when used for good, a curse when unimproved. Habits, when once firmly fixed, can not be easily thrown off. Then let us not adopt the habits, idleness, listlessness and procrastination.

Time is not valued as it should be How carefully should we gather up the fragments of leisure moments and spend them for the advancement of good!

Then let us not waste the precious moments, for they are indeed precious. So precious that we have but one at a time and that one is taken before another is given. Many live without accomplishing any good. What will be their reward? An hour misspent is an hour wasted, when, if spent rightly, it may bring a reward.—Sel.

OUR WORDS.

By the manner and behavior, the character of every person is formed. The Christian has a character to form — a character for holiness of life and obedience to the divine precepts. The character of every person is open to inspection; and the Christian is especially subject to severe criticism of the world. This is a fact well known. There is nothing watched more closely than the life of a professing Christian. How important, then, that the life of every Christian should be blameless before God and man!—Sel.

PROTRACTED MEETINGS.

BY JOHN FORNEY.

WE are sometimes told it is not right to hold protracted meetings. Some say three meetings at one place at a time are enough, and some think to go to meeting once every Sunday is sufficient.

I, for one, am ready to say we have not only a right to hold protracted meetings, but we have the highest authority that heaven can give for it. Let us learn by the example of Jesus Christ, our Great Teacher and Savior. He had the longest protracted meeting without any exception, that I have ever heard of. See Mark 8: 1–3. Then, after Jesus had finished his mission on earth, he authorized the apostles to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to all the nations.

In regard to the length of meetings we learn of no limit at all being given to them. It is not stated how long or how short a time to remain in one place. It seems that Christ left that to their own good judgment, so we will follow them in the record we have concerning them.

In Luke 24: 49 we see that Christ ordered the longest prayer-meeting of which there is any record. It lasted ten days, as we see in Acts 1: 14; 2: 1.

From this time on commenced their meetings at Pentecost. In verse 46 we learn that they were daily together in the temple. How long this first protracted effort continued, I can not say. In connection with it, they had a daily prayer-meeting at the ninth hour. See Acts 3: 1. This seemed to have continued until persecution interfered, and the opposers imprisoned all the apostles. See Acts 5: 17–21. Then the Lord released them out of prison, and told them to still protract their meetings in the temple, and thus they continued until the martyrdom of Stephen, when the disciples were scattered from Jerusalem and went every-where, preaching the Word. Acts 8: 4. The apostles, however, still continued at Jerusalem in their protracted meetings.

Now, after Paul was converted, and ordained a preacher of the Gospel, he followed in the footsteps of the Master and the other apostles. In some places Paul ceased not to preach for the space of three years, night and day. See Acts 20: 31. In Acts 19: 9–10 we see he continued daily for one year and a half in one place in a protracted effort. My brethren we fall far short in our little efforts. We have to be ashamed of the little we do, in the cause of the Master, when we compare our work with that of the apostles. It will fall short,—very short. Let us all try to make greater efforts to pattern after Christ and the apostles, and let us all go to work as a church, and show to the world that we are guided by the same spirit to seek and to save the lost, as was also Jesus and the apostles. "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." Rom. 8: 9.

How is it, then, my dear brother and sister, if you or I should be found wanting, or, worse yet, be found opposing and fighting against the example of Jesus Christ and the apostles? How, if, instead of pushing the work of salvation, you should hold it back! "The wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men, who hold the truth in unrighteousness." Rom. 1: 18.

I have no doubt some one will be ready to say when he reads this essay, "Oh, yes, that was for the apostles; they were to establish the Gospel of Christ, and it became them to be men that were ready to spend and to be spent, but let me tell you, my dear brother, Paul was not one of the twelve apostles chosen by the Lord, and sent forth in the great commission given by Christ. Matt. 28: 18–20. And yet Paul was none the less zealous in the Master's cause, than any of the other apostles. He could well say to his brethren, "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ." 1 Cor. 11: 1.

The apostles and early Christians could not be stopped from doing the work of God short of death, but they would say to gainsayers, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye. For we can not but speak the things which we have seen and heard." Acts 4: 19–20.

Opposition and persecution only made them more bold and strong, and caused them to rejoice "that they were counted worthy to suffer shame for his name. And daily in the temple and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ." Acts 5: 41, 42.

My brethren, let that mind be in us that was also in Christ Jesus, and in his apostles. Let us not be afraid to do too much work for the Master, but let us do it lawfully.

"WORLDLINESS."

BY S. W. HOOVER.

VIEWED in the light of the New Testament Scriptures, the above caption is of almost universal application, comprising, as it does, about the entire catalogue of habits, causes and sins. It is mainly from this stand-point that we wish to look at it. "For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life is not of the Father, but is of the world." 1 John 2: 16. A worldly man is one addicted to worldly pursuits and enjoyments, and unmindful of the things of the future (Webster). Worldliness is, in its tendencies, subjective, unrestrictive and degenerating.

The capacity and powers of worldliness for evil are very great. These are being constantly increased by the number and variety of its ever-changing and vacillating forms and practices. Worldliness is proud, boastful, arrogant, wicked. It leads to anger, wrath, malice and blasphemy. It causes divisions, destroys character, subverts principles, and pollutes the soul. Both slavish and pitiable is the state and condition of the worldling, whose God is mammon.

In volume of destructiveness, worldliness, in general, is like a river that has overflowed its banks, — its angry and merciless elements reach both far and wide, grasping all manner of floatable material, and, by drawing it into its turbulent, violent current, rapidly floats it downward toward the great ocean. In like manner is worldliness, with all its varied environments and tendencies to evil, both merciless and far-reaching, and altogether overwhelming and unscrupulous in its nature and demands. It robs financial interests of honesty, shuts out peace from the family domain, usurps authority, discards the Bible, and fills every available space in the circles of society, state and church with envy, extravagance and slavish pride. Thus, comparatively, has worldliness become almost as uncontrollable and destructive in its effects as the river, in its downward and ruinous course, to the great ocean of moral and spiritual destruction.

The elements of worldliness, as occasioned by the indulgences of fashion, voluptuousness and pride, are so fascinating to the worldly man and woman that, once in their grasp, rescue is next to impossible. But, notwithstanding all of this, there is yet a sense of hopefulness and security indulged, in the minds of the masses, that the world with all its Babylon and Mammon is nevertheless moving upward and heavenward. Apparently is it unconscious of the fact that God will bring the world into judgment, and punish the guilty for their deeds of evil. Oh, inconsistency, where is thy jewel?

Worldliness is offensive to God, and alluring to man. It presents to him many false charms both of friendship and vice, and, because of its environments, and the habitual forces of sin dwelling in his nature and heart, he becomes the servant of sin, and when sin is finished, it brings forth death. Summed up, worldliness combines all manner of evil and wickedness in the world, and is a most insidious foe to Christianity, and the precepts and principles of the Bible.

The foregoing is made all the more obvious since St. Paul, in 2 Cor. 6, tells us, that there is no agreement or affinity existing between the kingdom of heaven and the kingdom of the world, or between faith and unbelief, righteousness and unrighteousness, or light and darkness. Neither of these are possible in the remotest sense of the word, any more than that the temple of God and the temple of idols is one, or that there is communion between Christ and Belial, or between a believer and an infidel.

Worldliness is sin, and sin is from the devil,— in short, it matters not in what way or form it appears; it is nevertheless an abomination in the sight of God. Sin is so utterly incompatible and at variance with the being and attributes of God, that, in the face of man's better light and knowledge, he can not look upon it with the least degree of allowance.

ROYAL CRUMBS.

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

THE feast in the Exeter church, Nebr., was a royal one. Brethren D. Bechtelheimer and Geo. Stambaugh were also present to do valiant service for Christ. On the morning of the second day, Bro. Caylor, on whose farm the feast was held, was anointed according to the will of the Lord. At the going down of the sun, three persons were baptized. A brother truly remarked, that, with the ordinances the evening before, the anointing and baptism on the second day, a large amount of the practice of the church was gotten before the people. Of this we are glad, and also hope the right spirit was in all the work. We love the brethren and sisters of the Exeter church, and pray God to help them to be strong in the Lord.

On our way southward, we stopped with the North Beatrice church one evening, and met them in worship. They have recently built a new house in which to worship, and were holding a series of meetings at the time we were there.

Oct. 12, the members of the Belleville church, and others, met in holy Communion. Brethren John Hollinger, Lemuel Hillery, Eli Renner and S. L. Meyers, with the home ministry, were present, and preached the Word with much spirit. Most excellent order was observed and a good, lovely feeling prevailed. On the morning of the second day, at 9 A. M., a children's meeting was held, and this meeting was addressed by sister Lizzie Hillery, Kate Gooch and Clara Baldwin, of Story Co., Iowa. The kind, tender and loving words of those sisters did much for both young and old. Bro. Hillery, being quite unwell, was anointed in the presence of a large audience. Sister Renner was also quite sick, but was not anointed. Our souls were very much magnified at this feast, and we realize there is a spiritual growth among the members of the Belleville church. We would greatly enjoy living among them again.

At this writing we are near Ottawa, Kansas, among a few members south-east of the city. Here a minister, full of the spirit of goodness should locate, and build up Christ's cause. There are about a dozen members, and a good community to find more. Bro. Geo. Meyers, of Wade, Kansas, has the oversight, and he who thinks of coming here should write him or Jacob Brunk, of Ottawa, Kans.

We spent nearly one week in the Appanoose church, Kans., and found it a live people. Here the spiritual life is strong. There is energy, good works, order, love, and a yearning for more affection. We admire the church for its love and steadfastness. We did rarely have to inquire who were members, for they showed it outwardly and by warmth of love. It is very embarrassing to have to ask if such and such are members. Love should come out so one can know. Why hide love behind the stuff of disobediance? There is a great deal in love. It has outward marks without doubt. A sound tree always has nice bark, and usually good fruit.

* * *

Our soul was much edified by sister Gertrude Flory's strong article on the sisters' sign of authority. Such logical reasoning should shame Satan a ! make him hide his face from human gaze. But then he has no shame. He will likely come up at some other point and try that citadel of truth as erected by our dear sister. Be encouraged, sisters, the Lord is on your side, and who can harm you?

FAREWELL.

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

FAREWELL! What depth of meaning is couched in that parting word. Even in the sound, sadness lingers! What doubts and fears thrill us, when parting with those whom we love! Shall we meet again?—we ask, while tears unbidden start. O, to say, Farewell! — never to speak again the word of greeting, in time nor eternity.

When thus we separate from one we love, our anguished hearts refuse to be comforted, and we weep and wail, "O Lord, how long till farewells shall be said no more?"

Oct. 25, our oldest brother passed away, leaving us no shadow of hope of meeting him again. Death is sad to us under any conditions, however favorable, but doubly sad when it lays its icy fetters upon us, stained with the elements of sin O, the bitterness of such a parting! We did not say, farewell, but, oh, we FEEL farewell. We find no words to express our silent heart groanings. We seek the throne of mercy for consolation, but come away with the consciousness that even the Upper Courts are clad in mourning, that a soul, erected for their glory, has perished in the frosts of sin,—a soul for whom Christ died in vain. O if we could blot from our memory his dying wail: "O if I had the peace of Christ, I could die! Jesus, Jesus, thou only canst help me!"

How vain seems such a plea from dying lips, that had only scoffed and scorned while in the vigor of health and strength. Those that see their dear ones sweetly breathe their life away on Jesus' bosom, have no cause for tears. But we who mourn as those who have no hope, must weep till God shall wipe our tears away. O, who but God, can interpret the agony of these eternal farewells? Who but God alone? And who could endure them, were it not that by and by our broken, bleeding hearts shall be bound up in immortal bliss? How dark were life, without this blessed hope! And darker still must be the life beyond, where hope is forever flown. What is our existence where Christ is not? Night! Night!! Night!!! Dark, doleful, dismal night! Who can endure it? Not you, oh erring mortal! Just as you shape your life here, so it will continue throughout eternity. Sin and everlasting woe and death! Christ and everlasting joy and life! Then, how can you afford to bid eternal farewell to Christ, for a little season of sin? To-day the warning note is sounded; to-morrow it may be too late!

"Think O Jesus! for what reason,
Thou endurèdst earth's spite and treason!
Nor me lose in that dread season,
Seeking me, thy worn feet hasted,
On the cross thy soul death tasted,
Let not all these toils be wasted!"

CHRIST THE POWER OF GOD AND THE WISDOM OF GOD.

BY NICODEMUS C. BIGLER.

"For Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth."—Rom. 10: 4.

WHEN the Divine Man or the Second Adam came according to God's Revelation, through his inspired prophets, the Savior being invested with the power of God and the wisdom of God, he said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Christ worked for the exaltation, salvation and glorification of the human race, in the image of God. He was invested with the dignity of free-will, of mercy, of help in time of need, of righteousness, of purity, of humility, and of long-suffering and self-denial. He was patient in tribulation, knowing that tribulation worketh patience; and patience, experience; and experience, hope; and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us by our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works! Blessed be the name of God, forever and ever! Wisdom and might are his. He reveals the deep and secret things. He knows what is in the darkness and the light dwelleth with him.

True science, even, rises up as a witness to declare unto us that which was from the beginning. Nature and history bear evidence of the existence of that eternal life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us.

Scientific investigators tell us that they know more of the mind and spirit than of the body. Let us hear the apostle, "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body; it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power." Paul to the Hebrews, in speaking of the providence of God in the work of salvation, says, that God, "who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son whom he hath ordained heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds."

THOUGHTS ON AUTUMN.

BY JACOB RIFE.

ANOTHER season has rolled around, and the melancholy days have come, when wailing winds and naked woods, and flowers and meadows look drear. The autumn leaves lie pale and dead, no dew can bid them grow. Our old acquaintance,—the forerunner of the "Beautiful Snow," has made us several visits already, and the forests look quite bare from his visitation. His name is "Frost." He is preparing for another season which we call "Winter." He has killed many of the beautiful flowers and leaves now, and will sweep the rest in the course of his career. He is a sad visitor, and presents many a sorrowful picture to the human heart. In observing his work, we may learn many a woeful lesson from the events of the past,—occurrences that indicate what must be in the future. As we walk out in the woods and fields, we can read the beauties of nature. Every breeze that fans, every leaf that falls, every flower that is fading, every blade of grass that waves and bends under the autumn sky, tells a story, plaintive and sweet, of days and years that are past and gone, and can never return, excepting through the dim memory of our lives.

My kind reader, would you like to see the thoughts on paper that flash through our minds in one day! What do you suppose they would amount to in a life-time,—the evil thoughts with the good? God knows them, every one, and, perhaps, may write them down for us to see, and to be judged by in the "great unknown." I hope the good thoughts and acts of our lives will far outweigh the evil ones, so that, when, like the autumn leaves, we are stricken down by the "frost of time," whether in the prime of life or aged, we may sink to rest as silently and peacefully as the autumn leaves fall from the trees to the ground.

As it is in nature, so it is in our lives,—spring, summer, autumn and winter follow in succession. Walking through a cemetery, we see the epitaph on the tomb-stone of the infant, in the spring-time of life, to the old grandfather, who has passed through all the seasons of life, until the cold frosts and chilling winds of the winter of life have laid this mortal body silently in the grave, to await the resurrection morn!

CONTENTMENT.

ON this subject Ruskin has pertinently written: It is because of the special connection of meekness with contentment, that it is promised that the meek shall "inherit the earth." Neither covetous men, nor the grave, can inherit anything; they can but consume. Only contentment can possess. The most sacred and helpful work, therefore, which can at present be done for humanity, is to teach people (chiefly by example, as all best teaching must be done), not how "to better themselves," but how to "satisfy themselves." It is the curse of every evil nation and evil creature to eat and not be satisfied. The words of blessing are that they shall eat and be satisfied. and as there is only one kind of water which quenches all thirst, so there is only one kind of bread which satisfies all hunger—the bread of justice or righteousness, which, hungering after, men shall always be filled, that being the bread of heaven; but, hungering after the bread or wages of unrighteousness, shall not be filled, that being the bread of Sodom. And in order to teach men how to be satisfied, it is necessary fully to understand the art and joy of humble life, this, at present, of all arts or sciences, being the one most needing study. Humble life—that is to say proposing to itself no future exaltation, but only a sweet continuance; not excluding the idea of foresight, but wholly of fore-sorrow, and taking no troublous thought for coming days; so, also, not excluding the idea of providence, or provision, but wholly of accumulation;—the life of domestic affection and domestic peace, full of sensitiveness to all elements of costless and kind pleasure; therefore chiefly to the loveliness of the natural world.—Sel.

As the GOSPEL MESSENGER is printed and mailed at Mount Morris, to avoid delay and remailing, all subscriptions for the paper and contributions for its columns, should be addressed to Mount Morris, Ill. Those desiring agents' outfits and all correspondence relative to the business of the MESSENGER, should be addressed as above. Our agents and correspondents will please make a special note of this request.

THE MESSENGER FREE.

SOME of our agents are already sending in their lists for 1890, and others say they expect to begin work very soon. Now is the time to secure new subscribers. We offer the MESSENGER free to the end of the current year to all new subscribers for 1890. The time to make use of this offer is now. If you wait until December, it loses much of its value, as we only send the MESSENGER free from the date the names are received. We hope our agents will make an effort just now to secure new names.

Our brethren and sisters may all help us in extending our circulation by calling the attention of those, who do not now take the paper, to our liberal offer. Don't wait until next week, but speak to them now. Give names, secured in this way, to the agent in your church, or if you are isolated send the name and money directly to us, and the paper will be forwarded at once. You can all help us in this work. We can in this way labor to extend the circulation of the MESSENGER, and widen its influence for good. Our purpose is, as God gives us ability, to make the MESSENGER worthy the support of every good man and woman—of every brother and sister in the church, by making it a true exponent of primitive Christianity. Will you help us in our work? If so, please go to work NOW!

FOUR were recently baptized in the Warrensburg church, Mo., so reports Bro. Levi Mohler.

BRO. JACOB KINTNER, of Sherwood, Ohio, reports one addition to the Maumee church, that State, recently.

ONE was received by baptism in the Philadelphia church, on the 8th inst., at their love-feast which was well attended.

AT the love-feast held in the English Prairie church, Lagrange Co., Ind., on the 7th inst., four were added to the church.

BRO. C. HOPE, of Herington, Kans., has been laboring among the Danish people in Nebraska. Read his report in another column.

BRO. HOWARD MILLER, of Lewisburgh, Pa., called on us last week. He is traveling in the interest of the Union Pacific Railroad.

BRO. H. H. BRALLIER has been holding meetings in the Blue River church, Ind. At last report seven had been received into church fellowship.

BRO. J. H. MOORE has again resumed his pen and we know our readers will be glad to know that we have several articles from him on the hook.

BRO. D. E. PRICE is busy arranging for his mission in the West. He will start next week and will remain in Idaho and Washington until next spring.

BRO. NOAH EARLY, and his wife, sister Early, are traveling with brother and sister Amick in the West. When last heard from they were at Stockton, at the home of Bro. Houser. From there they were to go to San Francisco, then to Portland, Ore., and home via Salt Lake City. All were well and enjoying their trip very much.

BRO. DAVID S. FILBRUN, of Ohio, has had a severe attack of typhoid fever. We are glad to learn that he is better again and hope he will soon be fully restored to health.

BRO. J. W. MOORE, of Tiffin, Ohio, says that Bro. John Wise, of Kansas, is holding meetings in the Sugar Grove meeting-house. We hope to have a report of successful meetings.

WE are receiving a few orders for the Fifth Annual Report of the General Church Erection and Missionary Committee. All who are interested may receive a copy free by sending their address to D. L. Miller, Mt. Morris, Ill.

ELD. JOS. I. COVER, editor of the Vindicator, is dead. We are not in possession of the facts connected with his death, further than that he was visiting in the East, was taken sick and died away from home. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.

BRO. P. R. KELTNER, of Nora, Ill., with sister Keltner, paid us a short visit last week. Among the number who were received into church fellowship during our meetings were Bro. Keltner's sister and two of his brothers. It was a season of rejoicing for them all.

BRO. J. E. YOUNG informs us, under date of the 8th inst., that Bro. J. S. Mohler is holding forth the Word of Truth in the Beatrice church with a growing interest and they are hopeful that the Lord will send many laborers into the vineyard before the meetings close.

UNDER date of Nov. 11, Bro. J. S. Mohler writes as follows: "I am in the city of Beatrice, Nebr., holding meetings. Our attendance is good and interest excellent. The services are attracting the attention of an excellent class of citizens. The leaven is alive and working."

BRO. JOHN EMMERT spent several days with us last week and enjoyed the series of meetings then in progress. Bro. John, we are glad to say, has improved considerably in health and we express the hope that he may soon be fully restored to health and usefulness to the church.

BRO. J. H. BRUBAKER, of Virden, Ill., informs us that, on the 11th inst., they were in the midst of a very interesting series of meetings. Bro. Michael Flory, of Indiana, was with them. Sinners were alarmed and were turning to Christ. We hope to give a full report of the meeting in our next issue.

BRO. HIEL HAMILTON, of Flora, Ind., writes as follows: "Bro. W. R. Deeter has just closed a very interesting series of meetings here. There were no additions, but the church was much revived. We held a love-feast on the 17th, which was a feast indeed. Two who had gone with the Old Order element, returned to us recently."

WE learn from Bro. S. H. Myers, of Timberville, Va., Treasurer for Annual Meeting, that only a few of the Districts have, as yet, paid in their assessments, and that the brethren who have paid out their money in work, ordered by Annual Meeting, would like to have it. This matter should receive the immediate attention of the various State Districts at once. The amount assessed to each District is small and should be sent to Bro. Myers without further delay. We would suggest that the member of the Standing Committee from each District see that the amount due be paid at once, if it has not already been done. This can be done by calling the attention of the proper person to the matter. It has, doubtless, been overlooked by some, hence the delay. Let this matter have immediate attention!

JUST before going to press we received a letter from Bro. D. C. Hendrickson saying that Bro. Geo. L. Studebaker had closed his meetings at West Milton, Miami Co., Ohio, with thirteen additions by baptism, two by letter and one restored. In closing he says, "Can we not fully realize what it is to sing, 'Praise God from whom all blessings flow?'"

UNDER date of Nov. 7, Bro. Thurston Miller, writes from Bunker Hill, Ind., as follows: "I began a series last evening with the Brethren of the Santa Fe church in Miami County, Ind., which is the beginning of my winter campaign. The work laid out for me during the coming winter months is more than usual and looks to be much more than I shall be able to accomplish in the time allotted. But, trusting in the guidance of the Divine Hand, my prayer is that whatever is done may be done well. Many prayers are solicited."

WE had the pleasure of taking Bro. I. J. Rosenberger by the hand last week as he passed through Leaf River, Ill., on his way from Dakota to his Ohio home. He expected to stop a day or two with us but was unable to secure a stop-over check from the conductor. We were sorry, for we wanted to ask him many questions about Dakota. He only had time to say that the meetings he held in the new State were well attended, that the interest was very good and that nine had been added to the church by baptism. He will, doubtless, report fully in a subsequent number of the MESSENGER.

BRO. S. W. HOOVER, foreman of the Book and Tract Work, Dayton, Ohio, surprised us last week by stopping over with us a few days on his way home from Chillicothe, Mo., where he spent a short time, looking after some business. We enjoyed his visit very much indeed, and he rejoiced exceedingly, for his son, William, was one among the number who were buried with Christ in baptism. How the hearts of parents do rejoice when their sons and daughters return to the dear Father's house. Bro. Hoover reports the church at Dayton in a prosperous condition. The new meeting-house is completed and a feast will be held in it on the 16th inst.

THERE are some lives that are perfect poems. We are not apt to particularly notice them until they have gone out from our midst. When we have lost such a friend or neighbor we are, in a measure, lost for a time. Something seems to have gone out of our lives, and we hardly know wherein the loss lies. We know that the child is dead, and we have attended the funeral of the Christian father or the sainted mother, but there is a nameless loss in our missing them that only their personality can fill. That gone, we recognize the relation they sustained to us. We have the ring from which the diamond has dropped into the ocean of death, and we remember its purity and beauty after it is lost to us. These lives, thank God, are not so very uncommon around us. Our difficulty lies in our lack of appreciation of them while they are with us. When the spring runs dry, we remember its cooling, refreshing qualities, and when the shade tree is riven by the bolt of lightning, we recall it as a lost resting-place. Even so with God's own, with whom we are thrown in contact. Too often we put off recognition of their merits, and delay our expression of obligation till they have gone out and the door between us is closed forever. The remedy for much of this is an intelligent appreciation of our surroundings, and a less selfish estimate of others who will soon go from us. It is better to speak the good word when it can be heard than to wait till Death has dulled the ear of those whom we love.—M.

BRO SAMUEL WEIMER changes his address from Harbor Springs, Mich., to Carlisle, Ark., where his correspondents will address him in the future.

OUR MEETINGS.

THE Lord most graciously gives to his people "times of refreshing" to cheer and help them on their earthly pilgrimage, and during such seasons they may receive a foretaste of the joys held in reservation for all those who love the Lord Jesus and who show their love by obeying him in all things whatsoever he has commanded them. During such special seasons of grace, those who are in the church are much encouraged and made stronger in their faith, and sinners are constrained to turn to the Lord so that their sins may be blotted out and they may receive the hope of eternal life.

The church at Mount Morris is now, and has been for the past week, enjoying one of these blessed seasons of refreshing "from the presence of the Lord." We feel that we have gained much in spiritual strength, and then our hearts have been made to rejoice again and again to see so many young people made willing to confess Christ. The angels in heaven rejoice over the conversion of a soul, and why should not God's children below be glad in the God of their salvation when sinners come flocking home to the dear Father's house?

At our prayer-meeting on Thursday evening, a week ago, it was apparent that the spirit of the Lord was at work. The meeting was a solemn one and at its conclusion one came forward and desired to unite with the people of God. Others were deeply impressed and the Brethren felt that a few meetings should be held, and on the following Saturday evening Bro. Royer began preaching in the Chapel. From the first the meetings were largely attended and the interest taken in the Word preached was most commendable. The meetings were continued during the week, and in that time twenty-two came out from the world and gave their hearts to God. There was much rejoicing; for among those who came forward were some for whom many of us had long been praying. Surely the Lord hears and answers the prayers of children when they call upon him in faith!

On Sunday morning, Nov. 10th, we met at the side of a flowing stream where baptism was administered. A large concourse of people had assembled to witness the ceremony. Nineteen young men and women in the bloom of youth and in the vigor and strength of young manhood and womanhood were buried with Christ in baptism. What a class just entering the school of Christ! What possibilities for useful lives are before them! What a band of faithful workers for the Lord may they become if they but walk worthy of the vocation wherewith they have been called! May they be nurtured as lambs of the flock and grow to full stature in Christ Jesus! In the afternoon of the same day another one was received by baptism, so that, in all, twenty-one have been received into the fold as a result of our meetings. We give God the glory.

"HE IS GOOD FOR NOTHING ELSE!"

(Inserted here owing to lack of room on first page.)

IT seems to be a question in the minds of some why every young man sent to our schools does not become a saint or a minister. If this were the professed object of our schools, there might be reasonable grounds for such expectations. Even then it would be requiring more than is expected of the best-governed families or the most carefully regulated churches. We once heard a father, who had an "obstreperous" son (using his own language), say, "I guess I will have to send that boy to school, because he is good for nothing else!" This gives a very apparent clue as to why our schools are sometimes necessitated to send away some failures.

There are two reasons why the expectations of parents and others are not always met. The first one is, They expect too much. After all, the home is the place where the foundation-stone of the character of young men should be laid. Here is the place where the building is commenced. If the commencement is wrong, then there is only one way to construct a good building, and that is, to reconstruct from the bottom up. This may be done, if the material is good. Reconstruction with bad material must be a failure. Success, in such cases, is a re-creation, and this comes within the realm of the miraculous.

For a parent to expect more of a school than he does of his own home training and discipline is to make a very humble admission of his own failure as a parent. A parent who can not govern his own children, is a failure as such. While he may hope for better results by sending his children away from home, to have them trained, he should not complain nor be disappointed if a failure should be the result. At least no reproach should be attached to our schools if they should fail to make a man out of nothing. God made a man out of the dust, but we don't claim this power.

The second reason is, That parents do not always send their best material. Their best sons and daughters are sometimes kept at home because they make themselves useful, and are willing to accept wholesome discipline. When such are sent to school there is no disappointment, because they enter the school as prepared material, which can be at once utilized in the building up of that which is true and noble.

But when the parent sends the son that is "good for nothing else," he doesn't make a very desirable student; neither is he good stuff out of which to make a man. As the twig is bent, the tree is inclined, and some very excellent twigs are so miserably bent that it is impossible to hold them long enough to enable them to grow erect. They refuse to accept discipline, because they have fallen in love with their own crookedness, and will go home rather than be made straight. Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots? They can do this just as easily as a young tree can be straightened of its crooks when it becomes stiff and unbending, or a spoiled boy, who has become fixed in his evil ways.

We are glad that such cases are rare; but there are some, and if such children are sent to our schools, the managers of them should not be held responsible for the failures in making men of them.

Let every parent be impressed with this one fact—there should be no substitute for home training; but when there are such, they should be so regarded, and, if they do not accomplish what the original was expected to do, there should be no complaining. Our schools have done much in this line, and we are anxious that they should do all they can, but there always will be some cases beyond their possibilities. H. B. B.

TRACTS.

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

TO-DAY I received, by mail, a bundle of tracts and am wondering whence they came, as there is no clue to the sender. It is certain that mortal hands folded the wrapper and posted the package; nevertheless, the Divine Hand must have directed the work.

"Plain Dressing," by D. L. Miller, heads the list and is deserving of careful notice. Truly it were well if it found its way into every home in the universe, as it is just what is needed in this age of superfluous dressing. Fashion ranks with the greatest evils of the day, and while men and women bow down to worship at its shrine, they can not be too severely reproved. Truly the goddess of fashion is a hideous monster.

"Can a Christian Smoke or Chew Tobacco to the Glory of God?" by Albert Sims, and "A Parable," selected by Uncle John, come next. Both are worthy of attention. Those habituated to the use of tobacco will find food for thought in either of the above-mentioned tracts O that they may find their way in to the hands of every tobacconist, to save and bless!

Among the number we find "The House We Live In," "Gold and Costly Array," "Faith," "Pause and Think," "Infant Baptism Weighed in the Balance and Found Wanting," "A Brief Sketch of the Plan of Salvation," and others. Each contains MUCH in little, and all are able defenders of the Gospel They are silent ministers that can be scattered broadcast over our land to proclaim the glad tidings of salvation to a lost and sin-stricken world. What a flood of memory they bring!

Some years since, a single tract came to me in the same strange way as these, and it was the direct means of converting me to the faith of Christ. The author has since fallen into disrepute, yet one soul may thus be forever saved by his efforts, and stand for him in the final account, though he shall himself be a castaway. What a lesson for us to learn! How careful we should be, lest, after we have been the means of saving others, we shall be cut off for misdemeanor! We should be careful, also, lest an opportunity of saving a soul pass by us unimproved. Some one has said, "The same opportunity for doing good is never presented but once." How true it is!

God's Word will not return to him void, and a tract in defense of the Gospel, distributed for the good of mankind, is bread cast upon the waters, to be gathered not many days hence. The tracts before me cost less than a penny a piece. Think what a reward will be ours if we send out one of these little missionaries, and then find it again in the treasury of the Lord, freighted with an immortal soul! They shall, in no wise, lose their reward who labor for the upbuilding of the cause of Christ.

Oftentimes we are perplexed as to HOW to distribute tracts to make them count. In this as in all other labor for the Lord, we are only required to do our part. We sow and water, "but God must give the increase." And all we can do in this matter is to leave a tract wherever we think it may possibly do any good; then trust the result with the Lord. Wherever preaching will do good, tracts will also tell for Jesus, A good way to distribute them is to enclose one in each letter sent to those unacquainted with our doctrine. One having a large correspondence could distribute a great many in this way, in a few years, and the cost would only be a trifle. Yet, we fancy it would not be a trifle to the poor soul that learned the way to heaven by our efforts.

Some of the tracts, mentioned above, are just what I needed for my present work, hence I feel an especial gratitude to the donor, though unknown to me. A number of them shall be sent at once on a mission forJesus, freighted with a humble though earnest prayer, that his name be glorified thereby.

EVIDENCES OF THE TRUE CHURCH.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

Chapter Nine.—Sincerity.

THERE is a class of persons, professing religion, who hold that sincerity is the true test of divine building, no matter what our church relations are.

Sincerity is an indispensable element of Christian character, and all Christians are sincere; but to rely wholly upon sincerity as a guide to religious truth, would be likely to lead us astray. To be sincere means to be honest in our purposes. We may, however, be ever so honest in our purposes, and still be mistaken. Sincerity is not a guiding quality, but rather the result of true motives. The sincere physician may make a mistake by giving his patient strychnine instead of calomel. His sincerity does not save his patient. The effect of the strychnine will be as fatal as if it had been intentionally given.

The heathen are, as a class, very sincere, more so than those more enlightened. The Hindoo mother, that casts her child into the Ganges, to be devoured by the crocodiles, expecting thereby to appease the wrath of her Pagan God, is as sincere as any mother can be. "If the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." Luke 6: 39

Thus it becomes evident that sincerity alone is an unreliable guide to the Rock that is higher than we are. True, sincerity is rather a result,—a fruit of the spirit,—than a previous guide to truth.

Sincerity, however, is an essential quality in forming the symmetry of Christian character, without which our building on the Rock would be seriously defective.

Failing to be sincere, we trifle with religion and virtually mock at sacred things. But, to rely upon sincerity wholly, will never lead us to the Rock of Ages upon which God's building,—the church,—will eternally stand.

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—Bro. Levi D. Bosserman writes: "We, the members of the New Haven church, Carson City, Mich., are contemplating an interesting meeting to begin Nov. 9 to last for several weeks. We will, probably, close the meeting with a Communion meeting. Eld. Wysong, of Indiana, will conduct the meeting."

—Sister Clara B. Wise, of Appanoose, Kans., writes: "The Appanoose church closed a very pleasant and interesting term of their Sunday-school, Sept. 29. The school was superintended by Bro. C. W. Shoemaker, and closed with a report as follows: Average number of teachers and officers in attendance, thirteen; pupils, eighty-five. The teachers and pupils alike seemed interested and zealous in the work. We hope and pray that the truths learned may be put to practice, and that our Sunday-schools may still prosper in the future."

—Bro. H. C Butterbaugh, of Dayton, Ohio, writes: "The members of the West Dayton District met in quarterly council on the above date at 1 P. M. Everything that came before the meeting was considered in a Christian spirit, and, consequently, we had a pleasant meeting as is always the case where love and union prevail and the good of Zion is foremost and uppermost in the minds of the members. We received three members by letter, swelling our number to fifty-two. We decided to hold our first love-feast, Nov. 16, at 5 P. M., of which a report will be given in due time."

—Our aged brother, Samuel Murray, of River, Ind., writes: "To the many readers of the MESSENGER, and especially to friends and relatives, I would say, that, after a severe attack of sickness, I am again up and around. How good the Lord is to us poor mortals! How true his promises! I know he has always been with me and will continue to be so. Sometimes wife and I feel a little despondent because we are so isolated from our children, but we bless the Lord that he has placed us where there are kind brethren and sisters and good neighbors. The Lord knows what is best for his children!"

—Bro. Joseph Holsopple writes: "Eld. Brice Sell has now in progress a series of meetings at the Manor church, Indiana Co., Pa. On Saturday evening and Sunday morning the rains caused small congregations, but the weather having improved, we expect a better attendance and a profitable meeting. The Brethren at Purchase Line church, Indiana Co, Pa, have in contemplation a series of meetings to commence on Saturday evening, Dec. 21, to be conducted by the home ministers and such other aid as may be volunteered by neighboring and other ministers who are cordially invited to be present and assist."

—Under date of Nov. 5, Bro. J. H. Wirt, of Lewiston, Minn, writes: "Our meetings, which began Oct 27th, are now in the past. Bro. David Rowland, of Lanark, Ill., did the preaching. We had good meetings. The attendance was not as good as we had hoped it would be, the weather being quite unfavorable most of the time. Bro. Rowland gave us ten sound Gospel sermons. He was the only minister present from abroad. We had a love-feast in connection with the meetings. The feast was held Nov. 2, and our meetings closed the day after. None were baptized. We are made to wonder why men delay this all-important work."

—Under date of Oct. 27, sister Sarah Middaugh, of Bunker Hill church, Ohio, writes: "Our love-feast was very enjoyable. Brethren Wm. Desenberg and Wm. Murray, of Ashland County, came to us Oct. 10 and preached for us previous to our feast which occurred on Saturday, the 12th. Previous to the feast one was baptized. He is the head of a large family. May he so live that his children may see his good works and follow his example. Brethren Desenberg and Murray did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. I never saw better order at a feast than we had. Considering the inclemency of the weather we had a large crowd. Other dear members, from adjoining Counties, were with us. On Sunday, after the feast, there was an election held for a deacon. The lot fell on Bro. Simon Harshman."

—Under date of Nov. 2, Bro. A. Hutchison, of Centre View, Mo., writes: "I arrived home from Nebraska, Oct. 24. Our love-feast in the Centre View church was on the 26th. We had a goodly number of ministers and others from the adjoining congregations, which gave us good reason to feel good and enjoy the meetings. The brethren and sisters in the outposts of the Weeping Water church, Nebr., are very anxious to see ministers and others come to them. They have a good country to show you and will divide it with you for a reasonable compensation. You will find good people to preach to and associate with. There are a few members and some warm friends about eight miles from Ashland, Saunders Co., Nebr., who are very anxious to have members settle among them. Address, Geo. E. Whisler, as above, always enclosing stamp."

Notice of Incorporation of the Trustees of the General Conference of the German Baptist or Brethren Church.

In accordance with the resolutions offered by the Committee on Church Property, at the last Annual Meeting, 1889, and adopted by the Meeting, the following-named persons were elected as given in the first article of said resolutions: "L. W. Teeter, Hagerstown, Ind.; S. R. Zug, Mastersonville, Pa.; H. C. Early, Meyerhœffer's Store, Va.; Henry Frantz, New Carlisle, Ohio; H. C. Baker, Rock Falls, Wis."

According to order, the resolutions above referred to were placed in my hands, with instructions to complete the incorporation, which has since been done. The above-named five trustees are now empowered, by virtue of said incorporation to act in the capacity and for the purpose recited in article fifth, of said resolutions, as printed on page 5 of Minutes of Annual Meeting of 1889, as follows: "The purpose for which it is desired to incorporate said trustees is, that they may in and by their said corporate name, take, receive and hold the title to church property, both real and personal, for the said General Conference of the German Baptist or Brethren church, wherever such property may be situated, whether in the State of Wisconsin or elsewhere in the United States or in foreign countries, to be used, or designated to be used, for missionary or other proper purposes of said church, and not especially used for the purpose of any local church or society; and to use, manage, convey, or otherwise dispose of the same to the extent and under such restrictions and limitations as may be prescribed by the General Conference of said German Baptist or Brethren church."

A certificate, containing the foregoing article, with several other matters, certifying in full the action of Annual Meeting of 1889 has been filed in the office of the Secretary of State, of the State of Wisconsin; also a certified copy of the same, from said Secretary of State, bearing the State seal of the State of Wisconsin, has been filed with the said above trustees.

The assistance of brethren is hereby solicited to procure all such titles of such church property as the above recited fifth article describes.

Care must be taken that all titles to church property be made in the corporate name of said trustees, as follows: "Trustees of the General Conference of the German Baptist or Brethren Church."

The trustees were, as yet, not permitted to meet in a body, hence we are laboring at some disadvantage, but we hereby solicit the co-operation, careful inspection, and wisdom of the associate trustees, and others, until a meeting can be had. Lewis W. Teeter, Foreman.

NUMBER I.

On Monday evening, Oct. 7, we (wife and I) separated, for a season, from home duties and labors, to visit the Golden State, or Land of Flowers. At Chicago we were joined by brother and sister Early, from South Bend, Ind., and sister Light, from Pennsylvania, who all proved to be very agreeable traveling companions indeed.

Tuesday, Oct. 8, at 5: 25 P. M., was the hour of departure from Chicago on the famous vestibule overland train on the Santa Fe route. It being the time of an excursion, and the crowds immense, the question was, "How shall we be able to secure a chair car for the night to Kansas City?" Buy it we could not, as they are free for those who are fortunate enough to get possession of them. We put ourselves in the attitude of beggars, and kindly spoke to one of the employees, who had charge of the train, expressing our desire. He very generously agreed to assist us, by requesting us to be at the gate in good time. We did so, and had his assistance in getting comfortably seated for the night. The accommodations and courtesy of the employees in charge were all that could have been desired. There were two sections of ten coaches each, to accommodate the crowd.

We arrived at Kansas City at 9: 30 A. M., Oct. 9. Imagine the throng, where many train loads arrived at about the same time, since it was a general excursion. You simply had to elbow your way through. There were big people, little people, and all kinds of people, all wishing to go somewhere. Here, as at Chicago, one train was not sufficient. They had to provide an extra section. Our friend, Mr. McDonaugh, had promised to meet us here, and have provisions made for us in the overland tourist sleeper, etc. The question with some of the party was, "How shall we find him?" He soon found us, with his familiar greeting, "I have reserved ample accommodations for you." One of his peculiar characteristics is, when he undertakes to do anything, he does it. He was one of the busiest men in the vast throng, and under the rays of a scorching sun, reminded me very much of the time, when I used to be tired, and wet with perspiration, in the harvest field. He prides himself in his patience on such occasions, if I do not misinterpret him, by an expression he made, viz, "Job was a patient man, but he didn't believe he ever had any experience in loading excursion trains."

At the appointed time, 10: 30 A. M., we left, with a heavily-loaded train, for a continuous journey of four days and four nights, to arrive at Los Angeles at 4: 20 P. M., Saturday. The journey, on the whole, was a very pleasant one. Fortunately, our traveling companions were all sociable, moral and quite agreeable, so much so that our porter, who makes two trips each way monthly, remarked, "It was the most respectful crowd I have had for some time."

By the time we came to separate, we were loath to leave each other. Nothing unusual transpired, but as we were nearing our place of destination on Saturday, going through deserts, canyons, and winding around mountains, and when only in a few hours more we were to be in the Land of Flowers, there was no little anxiety to see the coveted sight. Then, almost instantaneously, burst upon our view the countless millions of flowers of every form, odor and hue, upon our arrival at San Bernadino, one of the chief cities in Southern California. This was originally a Joe Smith Mormon town, and planned after Salt Lake City. It is situated in a fertile basin. The visitor is attracted by its beautiful homes and rich orchards. Here, in the vicinity, are over four hundred artesian wells, and plenty of water means an abundance of fruit. I will say right here, that, while yet in the mountains, at a small station, unexpectedly, Bro. T. J. Nair boarded our train, having come to meet us and welcome us to California. He had a large basket with him, the contents of which he soon put at our disposal. The basket contained grapes, pomegranates, pears, etc. Representing himself as one of the spies, he brought a good report from the goodly land. Suffice it to say his greeting and good things were relished by all. At one time our train was over three hours behind schedule time, and yet we arrived promptly on time at Los Angeles on Saturday, at 4: 20 P. M.

Wife and I concluded to stop off here and rest a few days, and went with brother and sister Early to the Natick Hotel, which, by the way, is a very good place to stop. The accommodations are good, and charges very reasonable. We were directed there by Bro. J. S. Flory, who met us at the depot. We stopped here to rest, clean up, and take our ease for a few days. We soon discovered this was no place to hide. Soon Bro. Royer called on us, and desired us to change our place of lodging. We compromised by promising to visit him the next day, which we did. Early on Sunday morning Bro. Magie, a minister here, in the second degree, came with his wagon to move us, baggage and all, to his house. From this there was no retreat but to accept. Here we felt at home. Our experience seemed to be similar to that of Cornelius, for he had his kin folks there, to the number of twelve, which, with four of us, made sixteen; but in this case all had been taught the way of salvation and were rejoicing in the hope of glory.

We left Los Angeles on Tuesday morning, Oct. 15, for Oceanside, eighty-five miles distant, to meet my brother in the flesh,—Dr. D. B Amick, whom I had not seen for eighteen years. He has been a resident of the State for seventeen years. Our meeting was a happy one,—the good Lord having spared us to meet again. Our brother is pleasantly situated, one and a half miles from the town and Pacific coast, on an elevation, with a full view of the ocean to the west and the ruins of the San Luis Rey mission, about three miles to the east. This wonderful mission was established in June, 1798, and, though not the oldest, it was the most extensive one on the Pacific coast. We spent part of a day visiting its ruins. No visitor to Southern California should fail to stop at Oceanside and visit this mission, which is four miles east of that place.

While here for several days, I had the pleasure of attending church three evenings, at what is known as the "Holiness" church, in company with my brother and his wife. The latter is a member of the same. Here I saw the necessity, more than ever, of having missionaries in the field,—men qualified and endued with the Holy Ghost, to teach the ways of the Lord more perfectly. I found much in the doctrine, rules, regulations and requirements of this people to be commended, viz, No person can be a member of any secret or oath-bound society; only unfermented wine shall be used at Communions; the wearing of gold, pearls and costly or gaudy apparel is forbidden; the use of opium, morphine, tobacco in any form,—to snuff, chew, smoke or by dipping, is strictly prohibited; no member shall use, buy or sell any kind of intoxicating drink as a beverage, nor rent or lease any building, ground or vineyard for the use or manufacture of the same, nor raise, buy or sell any grapes, barley, corn or other crop for the manufacture of the same; the members shall not go to law one with another; no instrumental music shall ever be used in the public worship; no tabernacle or meeting-house can ever be used for fairs, festivals, feasts, or concerts, etc. This they claim is going back to primitive Christianity.

On Saturday morning, Oct. 19, in company with my brother, and brother and sister Early, who came down from Los Angeles, we went to San Diego, arriving at 1 P. M. The first place we visited was the Del Coronado Hotel, situated on Coronado Beach, that juts out in front of San Diego and National City. There are twenty acres of ground to the hotel. The building covers seven and a half acres, and contains 750 rooms, 650 bedrooms, 71 bath-rooms, 30 billiard tables, 17½ acres carpeting, dining room, 150x62 feet; theater, 120 feet in diameter. There are accommodations for 2,000 guests. Ample provisions are made for every want and desire of the carnal mind, but none for his spiritual nature. The total cost of the building was $1,000,000. We did not tarry long, as remaining here would have been expensive. Lunch, 75 cents; dinner from 5: 30 P. M. to 8 P. M., $1.25. We were shown a bridal chamber, in which the rates are: Single person, per day, $16; or two, $20.

How true that the rich may have their good things in this world! As for me, I will rather have Lazarus' portion in this world and dwell in Abraham's bosom in eternity! The Lord enable us all to live for heaven!

NUMBER TWO.

Upon returning to the city we found very comfortable lodgings at the "Commercial House," at $1.00 per day for room and board. On Sunday morning Oct. 20, Bro. Early and self went to the First Baptist church, presided over by a Mr. Harper, from Indiana. I was well entertained and much interested in a very plain, practical sermon, from Luke 14: 27, "Whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, can not be my disciple." After meeting he noticed the strangers, and, with a number of others, made his way to them. By their kindness and cordial reception, we were made to feel at home. I thought, might not some others improve in this direction,—not only show kindness to strangers when they do come to our meetings, but even go out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in by the irresistable force of love and kindness?

On Monday morning, Oct. 21, our first object was to learn somewhat of the great city of San Diego, California, situated on one of the most perfect harbors in the world, where vessels are unloading from all the chief ports of the world. Here the Santa Fe Railway system culminates, which brings it into close relations with Chicago, New York and other eastern cities. It is quite a city, planted on a series of hills that gently slope to the ocean, with fine business blocks and elegant hotels. Any one visiting this city should not fail to visit the Chamber of Commerce, to see the fruits and products of California.

Desiring to tread Mexican soil, we boarded the train at 2 P. M, for Lia Huana (pronounced Le Whana), fifteen miles distant, a station on the borders of Mexico, and a terminus of the road, (Los Angeles and San Diego R R). This country, a few years ago, was all sheep and cattle ranches. Now it is dotted with numerous towns and palatial residences, with fine irrigation facilities, truly making the desert bloom as the rose. Olive culture is quite an industry in this section Here, at National City, a suburb of San Diego, is an olive-oil factory, — said to produce a superior article. It is claimed that consumptives frequently find it more beneficial than cod-liver oil. Why use imported adulterations, when we have a superior article at home?

We returned at 5 P. M. Having called on a Mr. Buser, formerly from Oregon, Illinois, in the forenoon, who, by the way, is a practical printer in the city, and having made arrangements to dine with him at six o'clock P. M, we (wife and self), wended our way to his home, where we were cordially received and spent a very pleasant evening, reminding us much of being at home with familiar friends. Thanks to brother and sister L. L. Kerns, of Mt. Morris, who would have us call on them, for the pleasure it afforded us.

Tuesday morning, Oct. 22, our party separated, Bro. Early and wife returning to Los Angeles, and my brother home. Self and wife remained another day, for a drive, by horse and buggy, through the country. Being provided with a lunch, the first place we visited was old San Diego, — six miles distant to the west. "It was here that Father Francis Junipero Serra founded, July 16, 1769, the first of the series of missions he established in California."

No visitor should fail to have a view of the old ruins of this most ancient of California missions. "Old San Diego," is a romantic spot, with its adobe buildings and palm trees over a hundred years old.

Our next point was six miles up the San Diego river, to where the mission was changed five years after it was founded at old San Diego. The ruins of these later buildings are also well worth a visit. Here is quite an old, extensive olive orchard.

After spending an hour here, we started on our return to visit Point Lomo, twelve miles distant. About midway we stopped at the city of Roseville to take rest, eat our lunch, and get our horse fed. The lunch we had with us, but where to get the horse fed was an unsolved problem, as the city consisted of a school-house, grocery store, a few private residences, and a few Chinese huts, sheltering the fishermen on the beach. We applied to the chief man of the town, who kindly gave us provender for our horse at the reasonable sum of twenty-five cents. After an hour's rest, we started for Point Lomo, a rugged promontory projecting into the ocean some twelve miles, upon which is located the United States light-house, —the highest point in the United States on which a light-house is situated. The light-house is in charge of an old Californian, who has been in the State since 1849, at a salary of $800 per year and house furnished, with an assistant at $600 per year. The lights must be kept burning. Reader, make the application!

We returned to our hotel at 6 P. M, having driven forty miles. We were ready to depart on the morrow, which we did at 8 A. M., Oct. 23. We stopped off at Oceanside to spend another day and night with my brother in the flesh. Here we met a brother by the name of Hedrick, who moved here from Kansas about ten months ago. He is in the employ of the Santa Fe R. R. He has his letter of membership, properly signed, and says he keeps himself strong in the faith by regularly reading the Messenger. We took dinner with him and had a pleasant, social visit. I wondered why not more of like precious faith reside here.

We returned to Los Angeles, Oct. 24, to attend a love-feast in Ventura County, fifty miles distant, Oct 26. By some misunderstanding there was none, of which we were informed upon our return. We have since been visiting at the Palms, Pasadena, and Glendale, at which places we have been kindly received and hospitably entertained by those of like precious faith. At this writing, Nov. 1, we are here at Covina, at the home of Bro. S. A. Overholtzer, where we expect to remain a few days and worship with the saints. There are quite a number of members here and a commodious church house. There is preaching to-night and love-feast to-morrow. May the Lord qualify us for the solemnities of the occasion!

Notes by the Way.

Sept 21, in company with wife and sister Geiser, we started on a little trip to the Broadfording congregation, some twenty miles distant This church is under the oversight of Bro. Nicholas Martin. We arrived at our destination about the middle of the afternoon Next day (being Sunday) we went to the place of meeting, located near Claylick. We found a fair congregation. Brethren N. Martin and D. Wengert, two of their ministers, were present. There was one applicant for baptism. How pleasant it is to see sinners turn to God, and especially the young! At the hour appointed, we united to worship the great "I Am" Good attention was given to the Word preached.

While we, as a people, generally, respect God's house as a place of devotion, yet we do not always reverence his name as we should, or we would be more willing "that whatever he sayeth to us we would do it." John 2: 5. After services, baptism was administered.

We stopped with brother and sister J. Zook. Both are now fairly showing the marks that time has written upon them They are, perhaps, better known to the readers of the MESSENGER by our referring to them as being the father and mother of Bro J. M. Zook, deceased, the first principal of the Normal School at Huntingdon, Pa His grandmother, sister Barbara Martin, is still living, making her home with his parents. She is now nearly eighty-five years old. Considering her age, her present activity is rather remarkable. She is enjoying the use of all her faculties. Her sight, however, is failing to the extent of not being able to read.

After dinner, in company with her and the entire household, we wended our way to the Lafayette Sunday school, to attend its closing session for the season. There was present a goodly number of men, women and children. Bro. Eliab Zook is the Superintendent. After a short time spent upon the lesson, we endeavored to talk to the school,—especially to the little folks, trying to impress them with the importance of studying the Bible, not only while at the Sunday-school, but also during the time when the school would be closed. Our meeting with them was quite a pleasure to us, especially in seeing the delight our aged sister, above referred to, manifested in the exercises. It certainly would be encouraging to the officers of a Sunday-school if our brethren and sisters, generally, would attend our Sunday-schools, if possible, and give them their support.

Our love-feast at the Welty church, Oct. 5 and 6, is now a thing of the past, and while it was a large, if not the largest, ever held at this place, it was also a good meeting. While our minds, at these meetings, are pleasantly carried forward to the evening of this world, when Christ will come forth and serve, we are, at the same time, made to feel sad, that he had to suffer so much for us, that we, through his poverty, might be made rich.

* * *

In company with quite a number of brethren and sisters from our and adjoining congregations, we attended the love-feast, Oct. 9 and 10, with the brethren and sisters in Upper Cumberland at the Huntsdale church, formerly called Milltown, about twelve miles from Shippensburg on the H. & P. R. R. This is the place where Bro. James Quinter held a debate with a Disciple minister some twenty years ago. The church-house is large and well located, and the congregation is presided over by Bro. Daniel Keller, assisted by brethren Stamy and Hollinger. The fine weather and sociable members rendered this a very pleasant feast. We also attended a feast two days later at Manor church, Md., where the Annual Meeting was held in 1857. These members have a very large house, and a larger feast we never attended. The order was excellent. Their elder, Bro. David Long, and his co-laborers, served the people in a very acceptable way. Ministerial help was present from Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia. Traveling by private conveyance, we were shown, along nearly the entire way, where the armies of the late Civil War had passed by, and where the green mounds in the cemetery, near the pike at Hagerstown, Md., mark the resting-place of those who have fallen on the battle-field.

"LET the fires of fervent piety burn in your soul; go through the forge and under the hammer, and come out a polished blade, such as God wants in the field of the world."

In Memoriam.

CAROLINA M. MOORE, a sister, universally esteemed, and by her more intimate friends dearly loved, has passed away.

Another household is bereft of the presence and influence of one who had a large share of God's good gifts.

Pleasing in appearance, with a smile that betokened a warm, generous heart, she was an embodiment of the poet's expression,

> "A lovely woman, nobly planned,
> To warn, to comfort, and command."

Her calm, equable temperament, adorned by the graces of the spirit, gave her an attractive air of serenity and repose, while it seemed as if her heart and mind were always filled with that peace which "passeth understanding."

Quick to give sympathy to the sorrowing, help to the needy, personal care to the suffering, and friendship to all, she will be tenderly remembered by many, bound to her only by the ties of friendly association or church fellowship.

Her character is best described in Prov. 31: 25, 26, "Strength and honor are her clothing: and she shall rejoice in time to come. She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and in her tongue is the law of kindness."

Her life, so full of all that is of real worth or value, was not all sunny or cloudless. Loss of those dear to her had been keenly felt, but was borne with fortitude and true Christian courage.

There were many to greet her entrance into that land "which lieth afar, yet is so near," that land where perfect peace reigns, and all the longings of the soul are fully satisfied. Parents, three sisters and a lovely daughter awaited her coming What a blessed reunion it must have been! A devoted husband and son, with three brothers have in sorrowing yet joyful anticipation another meeting, when she will welcome them home in the "sweet by and by."

To them the writer extends cordial sympathy in this trying hour, expressing the hope that he who sustained the dear one whom we mourn, may be their staff and support as their feet go down into the dark valley of the shadow of death which lies just before us all. EMILY V. KEEVER.

Freeport, Ill., Nov. 8, '89.

From Chippewa Congregation, Ohio

THE love-feast at this place, held Oct. 12, was one long to be remembered. All seemed to be in love and union. The weather was inclement part of the time, but quite a number of brethren and sisters from adjoining congregations came to enjoy another Communion season with us. Ministers present from abroad were brethren I. D. Parker, Tully Moherman, James Murray, and D. Snyder, from Ashland County, and Conrad Kahler and Jacob Kurtz from Stark County. Many good admonitions were given The examination services were impressive and well calculated to better prepare our hearts for the solemn occasion. Our aged and much esteemed elder and wife were absent on account of sickness. Their places are seldom vacant, and they were greatly missed. One precious soul came out on the Lord's side and was baptized after morning services.

On Sunday morning, at 9 o'clock, we met for children's meeting. Our hearts were made to rejoice to hear the many encouraging words and to see the interest taken in the Sunday-school by both old and young. These meetings stimulate us to greater work, and if we do our duty, great will the harvest be."

At 10: 30 we enjoyed another impressive sermon by Bro. Parker, closed by Bro. Kahler with an earnest admonition and invitation. In the evening Bro. B. Kahler preached at the Leisure church. Thus ended one of the most pleasant meetings it has been our lot to enjoy. Our Sunday-school closed Oct. 29 As the quarter closed with a temperance lesson, a programme was arranged, to more fully bring out the evils of intemperance. Our school was re-organized by electing Bro. Norman Weigley, Superintendent. We also elected an able corps of teachers Efficient instructors are indispensable to a successful Sunday-school. A teacher who fails to lead his class to a higher life, and fails to make an application of some parts of the lesson to their good, and who, through timidity fails to show them the beauties of the Christian religion, can not be a successful teacher. Our school was well attended and the interest good. At the close of the school, the treasurer reported an overplus in the treasury, which, by vote of the school, was sent to Bro. Quinlan. Let us continue to labor, and in the end we shall not lose our reward.

M. C. LICHTENWALTER.

Look Here!

AT this season all wide-awake farmers make preparations for the proper care of their stock during the approaching winter. It is right they should do so. It pays them to do so. Have many of us children who should be cared for,—children who are merging into manhood and womanhood? We furnish them homes which afford all needful, bodily comforts. Are their mental and spiritual wants fully provided for? Do they want an education? Do we feel that they should have the right kind of an education? Are they in the church? If so, are their facilities for spiritual growth such as will make them pillars in the church, when we are cold in death? What are we doing for them in these respects?

It requires a sacrifice of both time and money to send them to a Brethren's school this winter. Will it cost less in the long run not to send them? If, by making a sacrifice to send them this winter, they should be awakened to a realization of the true purpose of a Christian life, could they make what money they need after their return from school? The winter term will open in a few weeks, and I suggest that you, dear parent, or one of your children, write at once to one or more of the schools, controlled by Brethren, asking for a catalogue, stating fully your circumstances, and ask such questions as you may desire to have answered. Those having charge of the schools take pleasure in answering questions. J. G. ROYER.

A Brief History of the Spring Creek Church, Kansas.

IN April of 1888 Bro. P. R. Wrightsman came to us and baptized my companion and self; then preached once a month until December, and up to that time baptized eight.

Then we had no more preaching by the Brethren till in May, when Eld. G. W. Studebaker, of Fredonia, Kansas, came and preached a few times through the summer. During the latter part of September, he and Elder Sauder, of Madison, Kans. (who has the care of that church), conducted a series of meetings here and organized a church. Oct. 26 Bro. Studebaker came again. On Sunday night some of his labor began to bear fruit, for next day two were baptized. As Bro. Studebaker grows older, his zeal seems to increase. He is out doing mission work a good part of his time, laboring faithfully for the Lord.

"LIFE is too short to be spent in nursing animosity or registering wrong."

The Danish Element in Nebraska and Bro. Hope's Work.

ONE of our Danish sisters is living eight miles north-west of Red Cloud. She came here last May from Thyland church, Denmark. She lives with her daughter and has no chance to go to meetings of any kind. Most of the Danes there are inclined to infidelity. I had several meetings among them. I visited every house and distributed some tracts, and was treated kindly by all.

Arrangements were made to have our sister visit Herrington this winter in order to attend a Danish love-feast. English preaching can do her but little good, as she does not understand it. Her address is Mrs. Jansen, care of Christian Nelson, Red Cloud Nebr.

Our next point was Bertrand, Phelps County, where my wife's sister lives,—four miles south of town. She formerly belonged to one of our churches in Iowa. Her husband is under strong conviction of his duty to God, and we enjoyed each other's company very much. They, too, intend to visit Herrington before long. Brethren should visit them if possible.

I was taken by friend Ferguson over the Platte River to Overton on the Union Pacific R. R. From there I went by rail to Grand Island, where I failed to find those whom I was to visit, because they had removed to Central City. So I started to Broken Bow, Custer Co., where I hunted up friend C. Overgaard, who was busily engaged on a new brick block. He was delighted to see me and took me to our young brother, Peter Mellersen, who, perhaps, is known by many as the first brother, of tender years, baptized in Denmark. He is working in a brick-yard, but is in bad company. We were sorry that he seemed to have become habituated to the use of tobacco. He did not know me for some time, but finally asked, "Is it possible you are Mr. Hope?" I spoke tenderly to him, telling him how much I desired to see him as in his boyhood days. He excused himself on account of his work, and promised to meet me at Overgaard's house in the evening, but failed. Brethren and sisters, this boy needs your sympathy and prayers more than ever he needed your money. Who will pray for him? Who will write to him? You may do a good work by gaining him back to the tender care of the Shepherd. Address him at Broken Bow, Nebr.

As for friend Overgaard, he took me to his home, two and a half miles north-west of town; then sent for the only Dane living there. We spent our time in singing and praying. The subject of our conversation was Isaiah 53. They understand considerable English and ought to be looked after.

From there I started to Central City, where Jacob Petersen and his wife reside at present. Both are members. I found him clerking in a store. He was greatly astonished as I stepped up to him. Smiles and tears struggled to gain the ascendency, but he restrained himself till we arrived at his home, then his tears flowed freely. His companion was strongly inclined to Seventh Day Adventism and said she could never be anything else, but we had her read her Bible during the night, about the Old and New Covenant. About the Old Covenant we referred her to Deut. 5: 1 5; 4: 13; Ex. 24: 12; 34: 28; Heb. 8: 13; 2 Cor. 3. About the New Covenant we pointed her to Isa. 42: 6; 49: 8; 1 John 3: 23. As she read, she smiled like one set at liberty, and said, "What is the use to trouble myself with the Old Covenant when God so plainly said what the Covenant is, and that it has passed away." Toward morning we feasted on the sacrifice from Calvary and parted next day with joy, and the fond expectation that perhaps we would meet again. I have learned since that several Brethren are living at that place. This closes my mission work in Nebraska.

Sister Early was a consistent member of the church for a number of years. May her bright example, her unswerving faithfulness, and her Christian deportment be followed by those who survive her, that they may meet her on the evergreen shore!

LAMON.—On the same day, near Lacy Springs, friend Joseph Lamon, aged 74 years and 1 day.

Sister Hannah was one of those open-hearted good sisters that are a blessing to any church and neighborhood. Bro Myers and the writer were called to her bedside some six hours before her departure, for the purpose of anointing her. We found her suffering very much. After the anointing the doctor told her that she could live but a few hours. She said, "All right; just as the good Lord makes it." She comforted her poor husband and asked him to bring up the dear children in admonition of the Lord. She admonished all to be faithful and meet her in heaven. GEO. W. CRIPE.

LOGSDON.—Near Macksburg, Iowa, Oct. 20, of heart disease, Bro. B. Logsdon, aged 73 years.

Deceased came from Kentucky and had been living for a number of years on "West Branch," five miles south-west of Macksburg. He seemed to be in common health up to the time of his death. After retiring to bed he spoke to his companion of the near approach of death and soon the spirit took its flight. He had lived a Christian life for forty years, and as he grew older became more devoted.

The funeral occasion was improved from the words, "The dead shall rise again,"—selected by the family. M. MYERS.

BOCK.—In the Howard church, Howard Co., Ind., Oct. 23, Eld. Samuel Bock, aged 74 years, 10 months and 4 days.

Bro. Bock was born in Franklin County, Pa., Dec. 19, 1804. He was married to Elizabeth Gable, March 1, 1832. To this union were born nine children; two of them preceded their father to the spirit world. The seven who remain are walking in the footprints of their father and of their Savior. O that every family in the Brotherhood could say as much! He was a faithful father and a devoted husband. Bro. Bock united with the church in 1837. He was called to the ministry in 1850 and ordained to the full ministry in 1868. Again a light and a shepherd is gone; one by one our aged veterans are falling! Young soldiers, gird on the armor! Funeral services by the writer, assisted by Bro. J. Cripe, from Rev. 14: 13.

L. T. HOLSINGER.

Aunt Ella formerly lived near South Bend, Ind. About five years ago she moved to Kansas. Her health began to fail and, in 1888, she returned to South Bend, making her home with her sister, Elizabeth Whitmer. Sept. 30, 1888, she was received into the Brethren church. She died shortly after returning home, leaving a husband, two daughters and one son to mourn their loss, which is her eternal gain. The occasion was improved by a Presbyterian minister. She was laid to rest in the Anthony cemetery.

COLCLESSER.—In the Clear Creek congregation, Ind., Esty, son of Jacob and Mina Colclesser, aged 8 years, 8 months and 26 days.

Estey was a bright little boy, and was always anxious when Sunday came to be at Sunday-school. He always manifested an interest in his lessons.

Gospel Chimes!

BY WM. BEERY.

THIS little book has been selling more rapidly than the publishers anticipated. The first edition was almost exhausted in the first two months. A second edition is now printed.

Following are a few of the good words received from brethren and other competent judges:

"An Excellent Book for Sunday-schools."

"After having carefully examined "Gospel Chimes" I can pronounce it an excellent book for Sunday-schools, and hope all the schools of the Brethren will adopt the same Our church needed to have the congregational singing of our denomination, and if it is improved, as it can be, by the use of 'Gospel Chimes,' the power for good will be surprising."—GEO B. HOLSINGER, Teacher of Music, Bridgewater College, Va.

"Fresh and Pleasing Melodies; Thoughtful, Spiritual, and Poetical Words."

"It gives me pleasure to speak in terms of praise of your new book, 'Gospel Chimes.' It contains many fresh and pleasing melodies to which are wedded thoughtful, spiritual and poetical words. I trust it will hold its own in competition with the numerous books now in the market and find a large sale."—T. S. TOWNE, Chicago, Ill One of America's best writers of Sunday-school music

"Better than Many Similar Publications."

"Copy of your new book received It contains some very pleasing and useful music, while it is to be recommended especially for the selection of hymns. Good Sunday-school hymns are in great demand in Sunday-school work and in this particular 'Gospel Chimes' is better than many similar publications."—A. J SHOUALTER, the leading writer and publisher of Sunday-school and church music in the South.

"An Excellent Collection"

"I have carefully examined your late Sunday-school singing book, 'Gospel Chimes' and find it to be an excellent collection for the purpose designed, both in words and music."—S. W. STRAUB, Chicago, Ill. the popular Western writer and publisher of Sunday-school music

Bro. Beery has had a large experience in Sunday-school work, and the book which we offer to the brethren, and the public in general, evinces the exercise of talent as well as good judgment. The religious purity of the hymns contributed by sister Beery adds much to the excellence of the book.

HALF-HEARTED service is poor service. "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as to the Lord, and not unto men."—Sel.

THE demand for the "Brethren's Manual," since the edition has been exhausted, is so strong and so continued, that we feel another edition should be issued. If our experienced brethren have changes or improvements to suggest, we will be glad to receive them.

AN old adage says, "The best way to get work done is to do it." While this may, in many cases be true, we are not sure that it always is. One man can not move this great world of ours; neither can he do all that he sees should be done. While we are interested in doing, we also should be interested in having others do, and in this way more can be accomplished than if we were to undertake to do it all ourselves. Some are too ready to do everything themselves, while others are quite as willing to stand idle and see others do the work. As reward is the result of labor, and as we are to love others as we love ourselves, we must be as anxiously concerned that others shall be rewarded as we hope to be. What is necessary to bring reward to ourselves is also necessary to bring reward to others. In the vineyard of the Lord there is work for all. Let us all try to do some of it!

BOOMS, in the West, are common events, but not so in the East; yet, strange to say, our staid and conservative town of Huntingdon is now, seemingly, having a genuine boom, and that, too, without the least effort on the part of the citizens. Perhaps, however, the name does not apply, as ours is a natural, solid growth, brought about by the force of circumstances. During the summer and fall a large number of private residences have been erected, many of them being of the best class. Business houses of large dimensions have also been built. All these, in connection with the new Normal building, and the large addition to the Car Works, are making plenty of labor, and the prospects are that our growth is solid, and that employment, for those who wish to labor, will be permanent. We believe that our members, who are changing locations, and wish to make their homes in town, can not do better than to come to Huntingdon. With good church and school facilities, and plenty of profitable labor for those who desire it, we feel that we have inducements to offer that are worthy of consideration. Good members will find a hearty welcome.

AN ONLY SON.

DEATH, under all circumstances, is sad, and leaves a vacant seat somewhere; but that there are conditions which make some cases more sad than others, is a generally-accepted truth. Christ, while in the world, recognized this fact practically by compassionating the widow's only son and the sisters' only brother.

To parents all children are precious; be there a half-score or more, there is not a single one to spare. This is to be accounted for by the relation that exists between the parents and children. "Can a mother forget the child she bare?" is given as the strongest form of natural affection, and it is the strongest that can be given. But circumstances often enhance the devotedness of this love, though strong it be.

Concentration adds strength, and this is possible in regard to parental love. Parental affection, on the part of parents towards their children, may be the same, be they few or many, but the number may change the feeling when it has reference to what the children may do in return for the affection bestowed upon them.

Parents, in starting out in life, are the guardians and support of their children. They accept these duties gladly and hopefully. They labor and sacrifice for their good in the hope that the blessings with which they bless, will some day revert to their own lives. They look forward to the time when they will wish to receive instead of give—to lean instead of being leaned upon, and who can furnish such support better than children? When there are a number of children, and one is taken away, the others may perform the part of the missing one. But when there is only one, and that one is taken, the hopes of the parents are buried with the only son.

All that the parents look to and hope for in this life, is concentrated in the only son, and when he goes, all this goes with him. Jesus did no ordinary thing when he brought to life the only son; neither is it an ordinary loss to lose such a one.

Last week we attended the funeral services of George Quinter Bechtal, the only son of Bro. Joseph S. and sister Julia Bechtal. He was not an only son to these devoted parents alone, as he stood in almost the same relation to his older brother and wife, Bro. Andrew S. and sister Kate, they having no children of their own; so the bereavement seemed to be a double one.

George was a young man of fine appearance and excellent promise, and we need not wonder that there was much store placed by him. The whole family looked forward with much hope to the time when they could realize the blessedness that a dutiful son can afford when he appreciates a father's care and a mother's love. All these anticipations were blasted as they stood around the bedside, and saw each breath grow shorter and shorter, until the sweet spirit silently took its flight, and the dead body only was left.

This young man, a few years ago, was a student of the Huntingdon Normal, and not one in the whole number, then in attendance, seemingly, gave better promise of a long life than he. Some time after leaving school, he contracted a heavy cold, which settled in his throat and produced bronchial trouble; this finally ran into consumption, and ended in death. He lingered for several years, in the hope that his health would finally be restored. Everything that parental love and affection and medical skill could do was done, but it was all of no avail. Death had sealed his mark, and there was no alternative. His dart was cast at a tender point, and beyond the limit of human skill. During all this time George was a most dutiful son and beloved by all who became in any way associated with him. Everybody who knew him, recognized him as a friend, and there are few young men of his age who hold the friendship of so many.

But, in possession of all these noble qualities, with him there was one thing lacking. He had not yet given his heart and life to the Lord, and this was the great regret, not only of his parents, but also of his friends. The Lord graciously heard the prayers of the many, and as the wooing Spirit came to the tender heart, the door was flung open wide, and the Messenger of pardon, peace and joy entered in, and he became a hopeful child of saving grace. Something over a month before his death, he received baptism and also the holy sacraments, as a love-feast was held in the house, for his special benefit, which he greatly enjoyed.

Though he was young and his Christian experience short, in all his actions and conversation he was remarkably considerate, calm and resigned. This blessed hope and assurance, that he had, of salvation and peace, was the consoling balm that eased the wounded hearts of his parents, and greatly modified their grief in the trying hour. We are glad of this. While we were made to weep with them, we also share in their joy that George is not dead; he fell asleep in Jesus, to awaken in his likeness, and to enjoy his presence forever.

Of this family, George is not the only one who has gone over to the other side. An uncle, an aunt and two brothers passed over before; and only about four months ago, his grandfather, Bro. George Smith, an aged, esteemed and devoted member and deacon of the Clover Creek church, went home to rest. So the family on the other side is now larger than what remains. For them it is a blessed hope that the reunion is to be over there, where there is no death and no parting.

Then let into your bereaved hearts the sunshine of God's love, and patiently, but joyfully, await the message that will call you to the Father's house and the many mansions. After the storm comes the calm, and after the cloud passes away, comes the sunshine that floods the soul and makes the heart rejoice. May the sunshine of God's love shine, in all its fulness, into your souls, in this, the time of your bereavement; and may it be your experience that there is a balm of Gilead that can heal, and that there is One to whom you can go who can be touched with the feeling of your infirmities, and who will help you bear your burdens.

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

APOSTROPHE TO LOVE.

I watch thee, as from soul to soul thou goest,
And happier am, when thou art with me here,
I search thee oft: a starving soul, thou knowest,
Is often fed on thy reviving tear.

I've seen kind eyes grow cold and harsh without thee;
I've heard harsh tones thy absence well relate;
No gentler form has ever been about me,
Tho' he they rich as Crœsus, and as great.

'Tis not the learned that know full well thy beauty;
'Tis not the strong can hold thy spirit mild;
For they who tread the path of honest duty,
May see thy spirit in a laughing child.

Let Cæsar learn the art of war and murder;
Let Abram's faith heave up the mighty sea;
Let Socrates and Plato still go further;
But let me be, O gentle one, with thee!

Whate'er with wrong the harsher spirit marreth,
And draggeth down the heart to lower spheres,
Thou cheerest yet, and for the wounded carest,
And bindest up with pleadings and with tears.

When other spirits would let me sink in ruin,
And Conscience strong my spirit's guilt assails,
While in the path of doubt and guilt pursuing,
Thy potent hand, in lifting, never fails.

Decaying Lazarus may feel thy quickening power,
And Zaccheus haste to humble where thou art;
Bethesda's pool, all hail the healing hour.
Though Jews despise, with Satan, do their part.

Thou hearest the cry of those who bent in sorrow,
And watchest, too, the sparrow as it falls,
And findest joy to hope on each to-morrow,
Though on to-day a crushing sorrow calls.

The widow's cry makes rife the morning breezes,
The noon day sun brings to her no relief.
Thy gentle spirit her of her burden eases,
And changes to joy what were, without thee, grief.

And he who walks within the path of duty,
And heareth Wisdom, as she cries to him,
May yearn the presence of thy blessed beauty,
And yearn thy power, the antidote for sin.

The young may rise, and, with thy power, prosper:
The old retain much beauty of their youth:
And e'en in death I know that thou wilt whisper,
"There's joy beyond, then, hope thou in the truth!"

I HAVE BEEN WONDERING TOO.

BY A. J. WINE.

In reading sister Lizzie Miller's article in the MESSENGER of Oct. 29, headed, "I Have Been Wondering," I was made to feel like penning a few thoughts on the same subject, though I know some members do not like it. But should we quit writing and preaching against sin,—just because some do not like it? If the watchman sees the enemy coming, and does not warn the people, their blood shall be required at his hands.

Sister Miller compares the use of tobacco to the foolish fashions of the world, which, I think, is putting it mild, for I believe if there is any difference, it is worse.

The Word of God is just as severe against the drunkard as anything else. Now why are there any drunkards in the world? Is it because it is fashionable, or looked upon with reverence and delight by the world, or because it promotes health and happiness to themselves and those around them? "No, not by any means." Why then is it? I think the only answer you can give is, "He indulges because he likes strong drink. He has got into the habit of drinking intoxicating liquor whenever he can get it, and his appetite gets control of his will, and the more he drinks, the more he wants, until he loses his senses. The brain is crazed, the nerves weakened, and the judgment impaired or lost. When he gets sober he feels bad, he condemns the practice and himself, and often makes good resolutions, but soon his appetite controls his will, and he is doing the very thing he condemns."

Why does the one addicted to tobacco use it? Is it because it is fashionable? If so, then the Bible is against it. Or is it just because he has learned to like it (for no one likes it the first time he tastes it), and now his appetite controls his will and better judgment? So, then, he would be classed with the drunkard. He knows it does him no good,—perhaps knows very well that it is an injury to him, that it is filthy, yet he allows in himself the very thing he condemns. Then, too, it is very disagreeable to a great many to smell tobacco smoke, or the breath of one that uses it, and then it is spending the Lord's money, over which he has been made steward, for that which is a dishonor to himself and God. If the money that is spent in the Brotherhood for tobacco, were put into the Lord's treasury, it might be the means of doing much good in spreading the Gospel, and I know it would be that much to their credit at the coming of our Lord.

I, too, like sister Miller, have been wondering how the humble servants of the Lord and the church can conscientiously discharge their duty in receiving members into the church and installing them into office, while they use tobacco, since the church has taken such a stand against it, and requires of them what it does.

A great many members claim that they use it for medicine. Well, if you use it for that and that alone, and you know that it does you good, then I have nothing to say. Some say they can not quit it. No doubt it is very hard with a great many. So it is with the drunkard, but that does not make it right. How do you know you can not quit it? Have you ever tried? If so, did you ask God, in faith, to help you, and then, with a will, determined to conquer, or did you, as soon as the appetite got pretty strong, put it to your mouth again, only to be in a worse condition than before? Perhaps you are like the woman that had been praying for a certain mountain to be removed from before her door, but still it remained, and she spoke or complained to her pastor about the matter and he told her just to have faith and pray again, which she did, seemingly, but the next morning when she arose, and it was still in the same place, said, "It is just as I expected."

I know a great many that have quit the use of tobacco, some with a very great struggle, but with a will and the help of God they conquered. I stopped with an old sister last winter that had shortly before read the tract, "Come Let us Reason Together," by Bro D. L. Miller, and it hit her so hard that she said she would quit the use of the filthy stuff, and she did quit it too, just when, "as it were," she was stepping on the edge of the grave.

Dear brother or sister, if you are addicted to tobacco, can you not do the same? Try, by God's help and the prayers of his people, and you will succeed. How long will the church be in getting rid of this great evil? Yes, how long, O, Lord, how long?

COMMUNION SERVICES.

BY J. S. FLORY.

A PROPER understanding of this important sacrament will enable us to more fully realize the blessedness of the institution. Let us get the meaning of the apostle's words in 1 Cor. 10: 16, "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?"

The questions are so put as to carry an affirmative answer with them. Then the next query that arises is, "What is meant by Communion?" Of the many definitions belonging to the word we have these: 'Intercourse between two or more persons; a state of giving and receiving; agreement; concord; fellowship; unity."

Communicate is a similar word, meaning to share in common; to participate in; to confer; to possess, share or enjoy in common with others; as in the case of Paul where he says of his brethren, "Ye have well done, that ye did communicate with my afflictions." Philpp. 1: 14. They were partakers of his afflictions and bonds, through Christian and brotherly sympathy. Philpp. 1: 7.

Then it follows that the cup is the seal of our loving union with Christ and one of the means whereby we partake of Christ as our life giving essence. The Communion of the blood of Christ involves a giving and receiving, a union, agreement, a sharing in his life, and thereby we shall live eternally. So it is with the bread,—the Communion of the body of Christ. By faith we take him as our bread. There is a union with him, and in this we show forth, by a literal act, our faith in his death until he comes. And if our Communion is in union with his character and life, we not only become the more fully allied to him, but, through this divine institution, all believers, who are fit communicants, become as one body in Christ and are denominated as the "body of Christ."

"Whosoever shall eat this bread and drink this cup of the Lord unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord." Instead of having so eaten as to have the Lord impart life and strength, it will be just the reverse. The guilt will bring weakness, sickness and death unless, by faith and repentance, the Heavenly Physician be called in to arrest the disease that has invaded the careless soul.

"But let a man examine himself and so let him eat of that bread and drink of that cup." He is to prove his faith and state of mind as respects his confidence and hope in and through the death of Christ, whether he bases his hope of salvation and ultimate glory with the heavenly hosts on the merits of Christ's blood or not. The examination should have a special reference to the then present state of mind,—whether he is faithful, humble, obedient and willing to consecrate self and all to Christ, whether he is truly penitent of past sins and enjoying the grace of God to that extent as to discern the Lord's body.

Discern means to distinguish, to discriminate, to perceive with the mind, to understand with distinctness, to penetrate. Yes, we must have a proper understanding of the merits of Christ's blood, and that those emblems do typify that grand and glorious fact, that to those who walk in the light, Christ is a Savior, because his blood cleanses from all sin, and his body is that bread that came down from heaven. If we do not partake of it, we shall surely die.

"He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body." The proper translation reads, eateth and drinketh judgment to himself. That is judgment and punishment follows, of such a nature as is spoken of in the next verse. They become weak, sickly, and sleep,—lulled to a rest in careless indifference, from which state nothing but the chastening rod of the Lord can arouse them. A weak and sickly Christian is bad enough, but a sleepy one is worse yet.

Remember, it is not the unworthiness that the apostle alludes to, but the unworthy manner in communing. That is, not partaking of the Communion in a way as to properly discern the Lord's body. Observe that when the Lord's body occurs, it means the personal body of the Lord. When the church is meant, it says body of Christ. See 1 Cor. 12: 27; Eph. 4: 12. No matter how unworthy we are, how often we have gone astray through sins of wickedness,—if we come up to the table of the Lord with true penitence and such a faith in Christ and his atonement, as to enable us to discern the Lord's body in the proper light, we may be worthy communicants and truly shall receive the blessing. Self-examination is not for the purpose of inducing any to stay away, but that we may partake in a worthy manner. The Lord's body must be discerned in a way that our faith sees it mangled and crucified, and our souls must fully appreciate and feel the pardoning power of that flowing fountain. May the Lord help us all to more fully drink in the wonders of redeeming grace!

SOBRIETY.

BY ENOCH EBY.

"In like manner also, that women adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacedness and sobriety; not with braided hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly array. Continue in faith and charity and holiness with sobriety."—1 Tim. 2: 9, 13.

SOBRIETY is profitable to the possessor as well as to the by-stander; the Spirit of God, through the apostles, taught it abundantly. First, in general terms, as in the following:

"Let us watch and be sober," 1 Thess. 5: 6. "Let us, who are of the day, be sober," verse 8. "Gird up the loins of your mind; be sober," 1 Pet. 1: 13. "Be ye sober," 4: 7. "Be sober; be vigilant," 5: 8.

Special to individuals:

Ministers.—"Whether we be sober it is for your cause," 2 Cor. 5: 13. "Speak forth the words of truth and soberness," Acts 26: 25.

Bishops.—"Must be blameless, sober," 1 Tim. 3: 2. "A lover of good men, sober," Titus 1: 18.

Deacon's Wives.—"Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober," 1 Tim. 3: 11.

Aged Men—"That the aged men be sober," Titus 2: 2.

Young Men.—"Young men likewise exhort to be sober minded," verse 6.

Young Women.—"That they may teach the young women to be sober," verse 4.

Soberness, as used above, is defined as follows: "Not intoxicated by spiritous liquors; not drunken. Not mad or insane; not wild, visionary, or heated with passion; regular, calm, sober judgment; serious, solemn, grave."—Webster.

The above definition does not only apply to the intemperate use of strong drink, but a cool, calm, dispassionate thought on all the transactions of life, and especially when applied to the subject of religion; otherwise we are like the animal, guided more by instinct and nature than by reason and judgment. "The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib: but Israel doth not know, my people doth not consider." Is. 1: 3.

Much of the so-called religion of this age is made up and stimulated by a wild, enthusiastic passion which rushes the creature on with shouts of "Glory Hallelujah," without a serious thought. Dear reader, supposing you would employ a man to calculate the cost of a building, and he would enter into the work in such a hap-hazard style, what would you think? No enterprise requires the cool, calm, sober judgment more than the subject of religion. Elijah did not find the Lord in the wind, though it broke the rocks. He did not find him in the earthquake, or in the fire, but after all these powerful and noisy elements had passed by, he heard a still, small voice, saying, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" 1 Kings 19: 11.

Soberness also possesses these characteristics: Solemnity, such as is usually exhibited at funerals; thoughtful and becoming behavior; seriousness, the opposite to light-mindedness, foolish talking, jesting, laughter and mirthfulness.

We are often pained to hear the foolish and witty expressions pass from lip to lip in society, to excite levity and mirth, even by those from whom we expect better things. The youth are in a special manner inclined to mirth, prompted by their youthful emotions and by the society in which they often are compelled to move. Young men and women are to be taught to be sober-minded, because foolish talking and jesting puts the light under the bushel.

Sobriety signifies deep, profound thought, well mixed with a lively, cheerful sociability. If the devotees of fashion would take a sober thought, they would cease to follow the changing fashions; they would not wear rings and ornaments of various kinds, whether gold or brass; they would not wear ruffles or flounces, or anything for mere show, and because it is the style. Such a course betrays mental weakness,—a desire to please the world more than God. The Gospel course the church has marked out for her members to walk in, is the work of sober thought by the best thinkers on earth, and is universally so acknowledged by the boasted free-thinkers of the age. We feel assured that if the professed Christian world would walk as indicated by our texts of Scripture, heading this article, skepticism, or atheism, would be destroyed; but because we say and do not, the skeptic pins his miserable cause and hope in the future, to our filthy, ragged sleeve, and when such hypocrites and filthy dreamers, with the boasted free-thinker, all fall into the ditch together, there will be a terrible time in settling the question, who is to blame. It will not avail, for the doomed infidel, to say to the false professor, "If you would have walked straighter, I might be in glory," for I imagine the so-called believer would reply, "I did as the preacher taught me, and if you saw our mistake, you should have done differently, and we might all be happy."

O what a terrible time to try to settle the great question that must be settled in time, not in eternity! A cry for Abraham to send Lazarus to help will be unavailable; nothing remains but weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth. Foolishness, levity and mirth are all gone; sober thoughts come. "Son, remember," it was said to the rich man in hell; but, alas, it was too late to avail! The thoughts of Jesus' love to sinners, and all the golden Gospel opportunities they enjoyed will only serve as so much fuel to augment the flames of their torment. Therefore let us watch and be sober! Amen.

"FOR EVERY ONE THAT ASKETH, RECEIVETH."—Matt. 7: 8.

BY A. FLORY.

THIS subject is not fully understood by all. Some men are of the opinion that it is right to ask the Lord for as much as we desire to have. This idea is not tenable. The apostle John says, "If we ask according to his will, he heareth us; "therefore we should know what God's will is before we ask him. James says, "Ye ask and receive not because ye ask amiss." Whenever we do not ask according to God's will, we ask amiss.

Some men get very impatient when the Lord withholds the early and latter rains for a few months, or when something else goes wrong. This certainly is a mistake. It is contrary to God's will to do so. It is the evidence of a discontented mind. Paul, in his letter to Timothy, says we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain that we can carry nothing out; and having food and raiment let us be content therewith. We have a right to ask for this much, but if we ask for more, we are unwilling to God's Word.

We should work with our hands, as Paul did. If we do this, the Lord has promised to give us all we need for the comfort and support of the body. Should he give us more, then we must use it as he has directed, and all will be right, but if we fail to get more, then we should be content with our lot, as Paul was. He learned to be content in whatsoever state he was. If we are not, the Lord may be angry with us. Let us learn a lesson by reading the story of the prophet Baalam. From that we learn that it will not do to question God's Word. When the Lord told Baalam not to go and curse the people, he seemed to be satisfied: but when Balak told him that he would promote him to great honor, he considered the matter. He rose up in the morning, and saddled his ass, and went with the princes of Moab. God's anger was kindled because he went. This teaches us that it is extremely dangerous to question God's Word. His granting our request is no evidence that he is pleased with us. The only safe way is to do just what he has told us to do. If we ask the Lord for more liberty than his law grants, we must abide with the consequences.

OUR CONDITION AND OUR PRIVILEGE.

BY I. N. CROSSWAIT.

IN view of our great responsibility, it is a matter of vital concern to us to know our true condition in the sight of God. This we can only see by judging ourselves strictly by the Word that is to judge men in the last day. In the present age many are looking to the church as a hope of salvation; another class (very numerous, too) are in the church and leaning strongly to the world. They indulge in many of its vanities and its amusements, claiming them to be harmless. Satan is ever ready and anxious to have them think so. These are far more pleasing to the enemy than the other class, and their influence is far more injurious, than that of the other, because of their church relation. They are a burning disgrace to the name of Christ, while claiming to be of his household. Terrible and lost condition! It is claimed by such that we, as a people, are too particular about fairs, celebrations, etc. Well, it may be so with those who have to go to the world for their enjoyment, but those whose lives are hid with Christ in God, will find no joy in such things, but will feel much out of their true element and, of course, will not enjoy it at all.

It is the blessed privilege of the children of God, without the aid of participation in any of the allurements of the world, to have far greater enjoyment even here, in the present life, than worldlings can ever know. Mankind are by nature so constituted that they can have no true and abiding peace, here or hereafter, short of a full confidence in the promises of the Gospel of Christ. All else is uncertain and consequently unsatisfying. We will fail completely if we try to take the world with us on our heavenly journey.

It is our highest and greatest privilege in life to have our lives hid with Christ in God. We then can realize that when Christ, our life, shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory. If we have his spirit bearing witness with ours that we are his children, then the things of the world have no real importance to us. We see that all else is vanity in comparison with our high privilege in Christ. We can then look on our former life as being a time of groping in darkness, with only a glimmering ray of light at intervals. Such a life is dishonoring God and his cause and is no benefit for time or eternity, but, instead, it is a sorrow here and eternal banishment from God hereafter. Then let us strive earnestly to improve our great and inestimable privileges to which Jesus invites us in his wondrous love!

CONSCIENCE.

BY J. L. SWITZER.

"And herein do I exercise myself, to have always a conscience void of offence toward God, and toward men."—Acts 24: 16.

THIS was a noble exercise. "Bodily exercise profiteth little," but this is spiritual exercise. It is Paul's defense before Felix. Among the multitude of Pharisees and Sadducees he declared, "Men and brethren, I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day." He charges Timothy, "To war a good warfare, holding faith and a good conscience," and again, "Holding the mystery of faith in a pure conscience." And again, to the Hebrews, "Having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience and our bodies washed with pure water."

Again and again and again we are exhorted in the Scriptures to "have the answer of a good conscience toward God by the resurrection of Jesus Christ." So, then, it must be right. But this course sometimes makes us appear "odd" in the eyes of other men.

What is conscience? "It is our own judgment of the moral rectitude or turpitude of our own actions." This is Locke's definition of conscience, and it is a very correct one. Pope says:

"What reason dictates to be done,
Or conscience warns me not to do;
This teach me more than hell to shun,
That more than heaven pursue."

Conscience is our own best judgment of right or wrong. Paul constantly exercised himself to have always a conscience void of offense toward God, and toward men.

This is the purest, sweetest religion. It is thus that the Gentiles, who, as Paul says, "have not the law, are a law unto themselves; their consciences also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing or excusing one another." For proof of this go to heathen lands and witness their terrible devotions.

Do you remember how Paul persecuted the church, made havoc of the church, and, hailing men and women, committed them to prison? Yes, but that was when Paul "verily thought he ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth." So he could truthfully say that, even then, he was living in all good conscience before God and men. In order to have a conscience void of offense he could not do otherwise than he did. But after a while Saul was converted and then his conscience instantly changed. He could no longer persecute with a good conscience.

We sometimes say, conscience is a creature of education. But this is not strictly correct. Conscience is not a creature. It is sincerity of heart. It is heartfelt consecration to what our best judgment tells us is right. A good conscience acts purely in this direction.

An evil conscience is a conscience corrupted, blunted or seared by repeated violation, until it no longer leads us aright. It is then no longer a conscience void of offense. It is not pure, it is not true.

Let us understand the text. "Void of" means "without." A conscience void of offense is a conscience without offense. Notice, the text does not say that Paul did not offend God, or that he did not offend men, but it says he did not offend his conscience.

A conscience void of offense toward God is a conscience that approves all that he is doing for God, and a conscience void of offense toward men is a conscience that approves all his actions toward men. God was offended when Paul persecuted the church and helped to put Stephen to death. Men were often grievously offended by his breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, but his conscience was not offended. Why? Because his conscience approved these things. He thought they were right, and that he was entirely sincere. So the Savior forewarned his disciples, saying, "The time cometh that whosoever killeth you will think he doeth God service." This was because they had not known Jesus.

But now, in this age, a light has sprung up to lighten every man that cometh into the world, and as the mind and heart and soul are illuminated by divine wisdom and love, so the conscience becomes a divine guide. When we have the correct standard of right and wrong, then we can form a sound judgment of it and be governed by a correct monitor.

I knew a man about fourteen years ago,—a man in the flesh, yet trying to serve God in the spirit. He had early given his heart to the Lord, and had been placed in a responsible position in the church. He had a good mother, and hosts of friends. He emigrated west, and placed himself under the prayerful direction of the Lord. He left home and friends, and, in all good conscience, consecrated himself to the service of spreading the Truth and building up the church. He found a home in the far West, and established his family altar there. Morning by morning, in all good conscience, he kept his devotional nature aflame with the sacrifices of devotion and praise.

The church around him grew. Everybody seemed friendly, and that brother, in all good conscience, went far and near preaching the Word.

It was in the early settlement of Kansas, and I never knew a man that seemed more sincere in his work or more confiding in the help of the Lord. He always said, "The Lord will provide," and went about with energy and confidence, doing with his might what his hands found to do.

During the severe droughts and grasshopper times of those early days in Kansas, he encouraged his neighbors and brethren not to be discouraged but trust in the Lord. He told them that the Lord could make it rain, that the Lord could stay the plague, and make the desert blossom as the rose. He encouraged them and prayed for them in their distress. In all this he had a good conscience toward God.

But that brother fell sick and his family fell sick, and he had to leave the country and go eastward among his friends for protection and medical aid.

With returning health he came back again. A small debt had now begun to accumulate upon him, and he set to work with manful vigor to get out of debt. He worked with his hands to earn a living, and labored on in the ministry, as before. The crops failed and the debt increased and became due. Then, in all good conscience, that brother borrowed money and paid the debt, still trusting to the Lord for better and more prosperous times, "for," he said, "my conscience has been purged from dead works to serve the Living God, and he will bless me."

For years that man carried his increasing load of debt. Crops repeatedly failed. Hail-storms came. Money became scarcer. Prices kept dropping and the burden of debt became heavier and heavier, till he said, "What shall I do?" "Shall I give up and break up?" "No. God has given you boys to help you. Your credit is good. Your brethren have confidence in you and will aid you. Never give up. Never despair. The darkest hour is just before day. Success is sure, unless energy fails. Go ahead! Do your best and leave the rest."

So replied conscience, when, in the fitful hours of the night, that man would toss upon his bed and ask his soul and say, "What shall I do?" He turned to the Good Book and that said "Watch, and work and pray." He asked of the wisdom of men and there learned that "Perseverance insures success." He consulted his faithful wife and family and they said, "Let's do what we can. Don't get out of heart." And his brethren said, "You have lands, and flocks and herds, and if times will only get a little better, we think you will come out all right."

But the debt outgrew the flocks and herds, and the crash came. It was like the "deacon's one horse shay," — when the crash did come, everything went down together,—home, credit, friends, money, property, sympathy, church membership, all—was taken!

Then he thought of Job. "Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither." "O that my grief were thoroughly weighed!" Then the silent monitor spoke, "Be still and wait."

"Be still and wait,
And bear thy fate—
If thou art poor and desolate—
As patiently
As it may be,
Till better fortune comes to thee.

Though black the night,
No star in sight,
There surely comes the morning light;
So o'er thy sky
Of midnight dye
The sun will shine out by and by.

The fret and strain
Of heart and brain
Increase the gloom, augment the pain;
But hours of calm—
Like hallowed psalm—
To aching wounds will furnish balm

Be still and wait,
Nor frown at fate,
Be thy misfortunes small or great;
For thou should'st know
That joy and woe
Have, like the tides, their ebb and flow.

Though many a bliss
Thou'rt doomed to miss
In such a changing world as this,
Thy fears abate;
Be still and wait,
For joy will find thee—soon or late."

That brother had "done what he could." He soon found a home again in the bosom of the fold. He could not be cast off forever!

SINNER, STOP AND THINK!

BY J. F. BRITTON.

GOD said to our first parents, "Thou shalt not eat of it (that is of the tree of knowledge), for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." The devil contradicted him, and said, "Thou shalt not die: and they believed the devil rather than God. In these latter days the Lord says, through his unchangeable Word, "Turn or die," and the devil says, "You shall not die, if you but cry for God's mercy at last." This is the pernicious doctrine that the world believes. O heinous wickedness, to believe the devil before God! Where did God ever say that the unregenerate, unconverted, unsanctified shall be saved? Show me such a word in Scripture. I challenge you to do it! Oh, sinner, as God has never promised to save any man whose life is not hid with Christ in God, will you not stop and think where you are going? The rapid wheels of time are ever moving on and on, carrying with them the lives of all human beings, and before the rising of another sun, your soul may be in eternity!

Then you will reap as you have sown. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," is a declaration from God. So, if you continue to sow the seeds of carnality, you will surely reap a harvest in eternity. Oh, the second death,—the harvest of sowing to the flesh!

Kind friend, your body will shortly lie in the cold, icy grave. What a sight will you see? Will it be heaven or hell? What work will you be employed in—to praise the Lord with saints and angels, or cry out in fire unquenchable, with devils? All this will be endless—defined by an unchangeable decree. Eternity, will be the measure of your joys or sorrows!

Friend, I beseech you, to listen to my voice of warning. If I should come to you from the dead, I could give you no better assurance of the truth of God's Word. It might be possible for one from the dead to deceive you, but Jesus Christ can never deceive you. The Word of God, delivered in Scripture, and sealed by the Holy Spirit, can never disappoint you. Believe this, or believe nothing. Believe and obey Christ in all things whatsoever he commands you in his holy Word, or you are forever and eternally undone!

A BOOK WANTED.

BY J. H. MOORE.

THERE is a book that I both need and desire, and I believe that there are at least five thousand others who would take a copy, and it would, perhaps, accomplish more good than any book yet published by our Brethren. I have been thinking the matter over very carefully, for months, and will now suggest how to get the book.

It should be a book of twenty-five sermons, each sermon to be about one hour in length. The sermons should treat the leading points in our doctrine, such as

1. The Authenticity of the Bible.
2. The Two Covenants.
3. The Three States of Man.
4. The Divine and Human Parts in Salvation.
5. Faith.
6. Repentance.
7. Design of Baptism.
8. Immersion.
9. Trine Immersion.
10. Work of the Holy Spirit.
11. Non-conformity.
12. Feet-washing.
13. Lord's Supper.
14. The Communion.
15. The Covering for Sisters.
16. Holy Kiss.
17. Walking with God.
18. Anointing.
19. Secret Orders.
20. Foreordination.
21. Future Rewards and Punishment.
22 Second Coming of Christ.
23. The Resurrection.
24. Our Heavenly Home.
25. Etc.

This is the line that I suggest, subject to the taste and discretion of the brother delivering the sermons.

Now I further suggest that some well-to-do congregation arrange to have Bro. R. H. Miller prepare himself for the work, and preach one sermon each day for twenty-five days, these sermons to be carefully reported, and corrected by Bro. Miller, and published in book form as "Miller's Sermons." In that way we can get a book that will fill a long-felt want among our people. Bro. Miller is getting old, and we ought to have the fruits of his able mind left for future generations. It would be a great aid to young ministers, and even older ones, and would be the very book for mission fields. It would be just the book that I, and hundreds of others, would like to lend to a neighbor.

Bro. Miller is well qualified to deliver these sermons, and I am confident that the book would sell and do great good. What have the brethren and sisters to say? I know that all of you want the book, and steps to secure it should be taken at once.

DOES MY LIFE TELL FOR CHRIST?

BY FLORIDA ETTER.

FOR many years I have perused the pages of the MESSENGER, and I have not found a subject more suitable for one and all of us than the synopsis of remarks at the prayer-meeting, held at Mt. Morris, Ill., Oct. 10. This subject can be applied anywhere, and at all times, not only at church, but around our firesides, in our every-day life. If our life is for Christ, it can be known without sounding the trumpets, as the hypocrites do. We will keep our vessels filled with oil, and, as long as the oil lasts, our lamps will burn brightly. Our true nature can be found out, generally, on short acquaintance, for if we are not true to our colors, we are apt to make some mistake. By hypocrisy we not only deceive ourselves but others. We can never deceive God. Let us remember this and consider whether our lives tell for CHRIST.

TO THE COMMITTEE ON INSTALLATION OF CHURCH OFFICERS.

Dear Brethren:—

IN the investigation of the question of laying on of hands on deacons and ministers, the grounds that led to the decision of Annual Meeting of 1850, Art. 2, and of 1867, Art. 12, first claim our attention. When a change is contemplated in a former decision of Annual Meeting, it is the rule to see if an error exists in the premises and conclusions, underlying the decision and order as we now have it. Should an error be found and proven to exist, it will be the duty of the Committee to determine in what respect and to what extent it will affect the present order of installation.

Any of our brethren who may have FACTS drawn from the Gospel, primarily as a command, secondarily as precedent in the case, are cordially invited to correspond with the Committee.

Fraternally,

Moore's Store, Va. DANIEL HAYS.

HIS UNFAILING CARE.

OUR years have been richly freighted with blessings. How God has poured sunshine upon our homes, and strewn our pathway with flowers! How he has enriched us with his peace! How his faithful chastenings have ever been the tokens of his love! Let us all exclaim, "Return unto thy rest, O my soul; for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee!" As we gaze upon the brilliant orbs of night, we remember that far away in the deep blue depths are invisible worlds whose glory, by reason of their vast distance from our globe, must be forever concealed from our view. So has it been in our past lives. The broad arch above us has been studded with myriad blessings. Many of these we beheld at the time shining in brightest effulgence; but, besides these, in distant places, were the innumerable mercies which we never saw. How unconsciously to us they have affected our whole existence! God was in them, attracting us toward himself, though we knew it not. We have no reason to conclude that it will be different in the years to come. The devout Christian especially has the certain pledge of God's unfailing care. Whatever the coming days may bring, his "cup runneth over." No sorrow can remove the star of his hope and blessing, though, for a season it may seem to obscure the shining.—Ex.

LIVE FOR SOMETHING.

THOUSANDS of men breathe, move and live, pass off the stage of life and are heard of no more. Why? They did not do a particle of good in the world, and none were blessed by them; none could point to them as the instrument of their redemption; not a line they wrote, not a word they spoke could be recalled, and so they perished — their light went out in the darkness, and they were not remembered more than the insect of yesterday. Will you thus live and die, O man immortal? Live for something. Do good, and leave behind you a monument of virtue that the storms of life can never destroy. Write your name by kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of the thousands you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten. No; your name, your deeds, will be as legible on the hearts you leave behind as the stars on the brow of evening. Good deeds will shine as bright on earth as the stars of heaven.

LITTLE FOXES.

ONE little fox is "By-and-by." If you track him you will come to his hole—never.

Another little fox is "I can't." You had better set on him an active, plucky little thing, "I Can," by name. It does wonders.

A third little fox is "No Use in Trying." He has spoiled more vines, and hindered the growth of more fruit, than many a worse-looking enemy.

A fourth little fox is "I Forgot." He is a great cheat. He slips through your fingers like time. He is seldom caught up with.

Fifth little fox is "Don't Care." Oh, the mischief he has done!

Sixth little fox is "No Matter." It is matter whether your life is spoiled by little faults.

Seventh little fox is "No One Does it." And this last-named fox is gnawing at our vitals, because, under the plea that "no one does it," too many stay away from church and Sunday-school and neglect the training of their children.

LITTLE DEEDS.

EVERY day a little knowledge. One fact a day. How small is one fact! Only one. Ten years pass by. Three thousand six hundred and fifty facts are not a small thing. Every day a little self-denial. The thing that is difficult to do today will be an easy thing to do three hundred and sixty days hence, if each day it shall have been repeated. What power of self-mastery shall he enjoy who, looking to God for grace, seeks every day to practice the grace he prays for! Every day a little helpfulness We live for the good of others, if our living be in any sense a true living. It is not in great deeds of kindness only that the blessing is found. In "little deeds of kindness," repeated every day, we find true happiness. At home, at school, in the street, in the neighbor's house, in the play-ground, we shall find opportunity every day for usefulness.

THE CHURCH.

BY W. H. ROOT.

"And upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—Matt. 16: 18.

As we study the form of the ark, and learn the circumstances that led to its erection, and the design for which it was built, and then study the reasons for the organization of the church, and the mission it was designed to perform, we can not help but see the relation which the ark bore to the church. Sin was the cause of both, and both were designed to save.

We will notice a few characteristics pertaining to both. God gave Noah directions for the construction of the Ark, the character of the inmates, etc. God gave to Christ the doctrines of the church; he gave Christ to the world as the foundation of the Gospel, and he revealed the character of those who were to escape "the perdition of ungodly men."

We find that the execution of God's orders to Noah was faithfully carried out. Had any of them been violated, it would not have been the ark of God. Had any been taken inside the ark who did not answer to the description that God gave Noah, of those who should go therein, it would have failed to meet the purpose for which it was designed.

There are many incredulous people at the present time who disbelieve the narrative of the ark. Their doubt is based upon the fact that when the dimensions of the ark, as recorded in the account of it, could not possibly float the number of animals and other freightage that was stored. Then they deny that it was proportionally built. But it has been found, after the most accurate computations, by those who are thoroughly versed in shipbuilding, that the parts and proportions are in strict and perfect accordance with the known principles of naval architecture.

We will venture the assertion that it can not be justly doubted that the capacity of the ark, as given in the Holy Record, was inadequate to carry the number of animals said to have been in the ark. According to Moses' description of the structure, it must have been five hundred and forty-seven feet long, ninety-one feet broad, and fifty-four feet high, or of more than eighty thousand tons burden. This was of sufficient storage to hold all the animals, with enough food to last them twelve months. Then the primitive age was noted for the colossal size of its buildings; hence it is in harmony with other structures of ancient times, in its strength.

But supposing it had varied a few feet in its proportional parts, would that disprove the Record? It is not at all probable that no improvements could be made in the building of vessels. It is a very easy matter to deny a thing, but it often becomes difficult to disprove it.

There is not a single doubt in my mind that, were the ruins of the regal city, Thebes, still to be seen, the record of its hundred gates would not be considered fabulous nor would it be thought impossible to build such a city. The time will come when the truths of the Bible will be acknowledged as true. "Every knee shall bow" has gone forth, and "will not return void." "Every tongue shall confess" is awaiting the time when it shall accomplish the work assigned to it.

Notwithstanding the deductions of science, falsely so called, to overthrow the idea of the existence of the ark, and to nullify the truths and narratives of Sacred Writ, we shall proceed to put our thoughts on this incident in the world's history to a practical use. Let us dwell for a short time with Noah.

On a pleasant day, when the surroundings were all serene and tranquil, the foundation of this mighty structure was laid by the gray-haired patriarch of six centuries. Though the fields were smiling with prospective abundance, the birds were joyfully singing from their leafy coverts, the gentle breezes were wafting their perfumes, and all the creatures of God were in glee, the faithful man of God felt sad for the sins of those around him. No doubt he prayed that they might forgive their sins and live righteously. As Noah was at work at the structure, the people would pass by and call it "Noah's folly." Though he was counted an upright man, they believed he had lost his reason, while the more aged and sober shook their heads and said, "Noah is mad!" The workmen had no confidence in the design of the building, yet so long as they were paid for their labor, they were content to continue. In the course of time, as the workmen progressed in their work, it ceased to be a wonder, and when it was finished, the curiosity was forgotten.

The work of Noah had not ceased, though the ark was completed. He had yet to mate the beasts and fowls, and collect them in their places in the ark. This done, he reclined on the strength of a single promise, and quietly awaited the issue. Though some time elapsed between the finishing of the ark and the beginning of the flood, Noah's faith was unshaken. At last the pure, azure sky was hidden from his view by the darkening clouds, and the gentle shower began to descend to the parched earth. To the people this was the long-wished-for shower, while to the faithful Noah it was the beginning of the flood. The welcome shower brightened the drooping vegetation, but it gradually grew heavier. It did not cease but was steady, and soon the swollen brooks went surging on to the sea. The people began to discuss the matter, yet to them it was a mystery. They housed their herds and flocks to protect them from the shivering torrents. At length the people were confined to their houses. Now and then some would retreat to some higher place of supposed safety. The beautiful and fertile valleys were hidden by the waters. They dreamed not that the mountains could be submerged. Ever and anon they would hear some distant rumbling, that came nearer and nearer, as if some mighty earthquake was opening beneath, to swallow them in its yawning depths. They forsook business and pleasure and rushed forth in fear,—whispering, "The flood, the flood!"

The rain that was at first looked upon as a part of nature, now had made a mighty sea,—such as no man had ever seen before. It stretched as far as the eye could reach,—from horizon to horizon. Its walls were almost limitless, and city after city, and kingdom after kingdom passed from sight until all, save those who were chosen of God to repeople the earth, were hushed in the stillness of a watery grave. What a mighty struggle there must have been to preserve life! No doubt many incredulous persons began to realize that when God's Word once goes forth, it will not return void. No doubt they cried unto an offended Creator to have compassion on them; but it was too late! God had entreated them, through Noah, to forsake their sins and serve him, but they would not.

We have a similar case in Adam and Eve. When God placed our first parents in the Garden of Eden, pure and blameless, with undisputed possession of all that was in the world, except the forbidden tree, they were not satisfied with their happy lot, but wanted to gain more than was allotted to them.

Satan was not idle after the inmates went forth from the ark. He took advantage of his opportunity to lead astray, and did not stop there, but from that time to this continued his evil work, and probably will as long as he has an existence. While God had promised a remission of sins to some extent, in the ceremonial law, yet that was incomplete, and Christ's advent was required in order that remission of sins should be complete. Christ, like Noah, found a fearful degeneracy from truth, love, justice and mercy. They both warned the people to flee the wrath to come, and both employed the means provided by God to reconcile them to God. God gave Noah a description of the ark, the laws that were to govern his work, and the character of all that should be saved. So it was in the building of the temple, and likewise in the establishing of the church.

We find men to-day who do not hesitate to ridicule the power of the church to save through the instrumentalities of God and the atonement. Christ was ridiculed even more than was Noah. He was pronounced an impostor, though there could not possibly be found a fault with his life and teachings. He is nicknamed and scoffed at by those who can not find a holier man or a more righteous doctrine than that which came to us in the name "Immanuel." His words and his doctrines have no weight in many hearts, even of those in the vineyard.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

WHAT a relationship! God-thought, God-appointed, God-revealing. Nothing that God has wrought and established has been so abused, so dishonored and so misapprehended. God made man in his own image, woman out of man, both for God, before for each other, type of the eternal mystery of the Divine unity, and Christ and the Church. In very truth "the Bond of Perfectness." Such a conjugation, so like the Eternal Three in One, is Divine and potent enough to populate Heaven. The Spirit sexhood is the real one, and is meant to control the organic. God is a Spirit, and yet He has an Only Begotten Son, thus revealing to man and wife their true relationship in all its height and depth, length and breadth. When the sense and fact of this is lost, all is awry; where this is properly conceived and exemplified, the whole life passes under the lubrication of the Divine unction.

The apostle's injunction, "only in the Lord," has a mighty meaning. 1 Cor. 7: 39. All apparent allowance of indulgence for its own sake finds no justification in the Holy Oracles. What an unspeakably blessed life is that of two souls wedded in God and for God! Nothing is more natural for love than to sacrifice itself for its object, and to find its rapture and glory in living, by dying. But it is reciprocal. It takes two to consummate this mystery of joy. Adam's estimate of His God-given Eve is correct: bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh. Not blood of my blood, or spirit of my spirit. The rib will do as an organic basis; but what of the higher nature? Did Adam supply that? I trow not. However people may solve this psychological problem, Eve "was God's last and best." The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head. "No man ever yet hated his own flesh." Eph. 5: 29.

Is this indeed a fundamental and invariable truth? What a deep, sweeping, relentless truth is lodged in that forgotten, trampled, scorned monosyllable So, in Eph. 5: 28! If the whole Brotherhood could see it, feel it, own it, how many faces among husbands would by turns be crimsoned with shame, and paled with fear and remorse. So far as observation goes, the reckless, thoughtless, pitiless, often cruel and monstrous laceration of woman's feelings, beggars description. When a drunken brute comes home and beats and kicks his poor, trembling, pleading wife, we find our vocabulary of denunciation too poor for our supply of terms. And yet thousands of these sober, intelligent, high-souled, society-leading men will daily bring fist and heel mercilessly and boorishly into the finest sensibilities of their wives, because in some trifle their selfishness has not received the homage it sought. A late meal, an improperly done article of food, a missing button, and a score of other things where a faithful wife's time or tact falls short of the jealous, captious husband's expectations, are often the occasion of wounds in honest, loving hearts, as deep and sore and sinful as in those grosser instances we are all so ready to condemn.

When will married people learn to know what marriage signifies? When will self-love, even among Christians, give way to the cross of Christ? Love is regarded as a universal fact; and yet, what a veil of deception lies on it all! "As I have loved you" Here is the security against all the self-assertions and heart-aches which render so many families miserable. In the word "as," Eph 5: 25, lies all the blessedness of Heaven, and all the sweetness of the conjugal life. Where the wife is to blame, which is not seldom, let her remember that the subject-life has in it all the rapture and satisfaction and glory of the Son of God.

Man and wife are a unit as God and His Son. The Son is all the happier because obedience gives occasion to show the fervor, the greatness, the spontaneity, and the ecstasy of His love. To stand well with God, we must stand well in God, and that means that our human relationships naturally and nobly and gladly reflect the very life and joy of the Holy, Ever-blessed, Ever-loving God. All hearts need much, yearn for much, and die without it; God supplies us all out of his fulness if we will have it, and of this fulness we can feed and satisfy each other's souls. God's love is not too pure for generation, but it is the very genesis of Holiness. To live the love of God is right wedlock and eternal salvation.

OUR love-feast is in the past. One was received by baptism. Brethren J. S. Holsinger, James Sell and J. W. Brumbaugh did the principal preaching. We had a pleasant meeting, and hope some good was done. Oct. 18 Bro. Michael Claar began a series of meetings at the Holsinger church, near Baker's Summit, Pa., and continued nearly two weeks. The weather being very inclement part of the time, the interest was not what it could have been; nevertheless good has been done. One was reclaimed, but there were no accessions by baptism. Bro. Claar scattered many crumbs that may be gathered many days hence. From this place Bro. Claar goes to Cross Roads church house in same congregation to open a similar meeting. We hope his labors may be blessed, sinners converted and the church built up in that faith once delivered unto the saints. Oct. 6 our Sunday-school closed at the Holsinger church. The school was organized April 15, with a full corps of officers, forty-seven scholars with nine teachers. We closed Oct. 6, with a total of ninety-six scholars. The average attendance during the term was sixty-eight, including teachers. The school donated $3.29 to the Tract Fund of the Brotherhood. Bro. Thomas Mattocks, of the Clover Creek church, addressed the children at the close of school to the satisfaction of all present. May God bless him in his mission of love!

OCT. 30 I left home to attend the Communion in the Osage church, Crawford County and assist in some church work. We met in worship the same evening, and the evening of the next day we assembled for the Communion services. About one hundred members surrounded the tables of the Lord. The services were led by Bro. Geo. Barnhart, of Missouri, with excellent order. The day following the feast the church made choice of Bro. Ananias Neher, for minister, Bro. Eli Wolf, deacon, and ordained Bro. J. H. Neher to the full ministry. Bro. A. Neher has been in the church only a short time, but we have the evidence that he, together with the others will prove to be efficient in the work. May they humbly discharge their duty!

The surroundings of the Osage church are productive of much good. The influence for good is increased by the plain, Gospel-sanctioned attire of the members. Three were added by baptism. I am glad to say that sister Crist is slowly improving from her accident, as reported in the MESSENGER recently, but it will yet be a long while, before she can help herself. For some time to come I must abandon the mission field and attend to home duties, which, in my absence, are devolving on my companion.

From the Altoona Church, Pa.

OCT. 22 we met with the saints in the Altoona church and continued meetings until the evening of Nov. 1. The interest of the meetings continued to increase, and marked attention was given to the Word preached. As a result, six made application for baptism. Their love-feast occurred Oct. 26.

There is no reason why there should not be a large and flourishing church in the city of Altoona. The opening seems to be favorable. I was informed they numbered about eighty members. Brethren J. W. Wilt and Brallier are the resident ministers. My visit among the kind members of the above-named church will long be remembered and my prayer is that they may be firmly united. When the church and the pew and the pulpit are all of one mind, then Christianity will roll over the earth, and nothing can impede its progress!

Popular Christianity too often wants new things in the church. The true church stands in need of the old apostolic power. That will put new life into the church! Had it not been for the spirit of unity, the blessing would not have come down on Pentecost; so, if God's children are all of one mind, and can show the world in actions that they have been with Jesus and learned of him, God's believing children can make an impression on the world.

LANDING from the early train at the house of J. F. Neher, of the Wichita church, Kans., Nov. 2, — the day of their Communion, — it was saddening to learn that the pale horse and rider had recently visited the home of our dear brother, calling sister Neher to the land of spirits, and leaving the home of Bro. Neher completely broken up. Bro. Neher and son, William, expect to stay here until after the sale, Nov. 14, when William intends to find another place, and the father will travel among the churches to preach the Gospel, for a time at least.

We had preaching at the church at 10 A. M. and at 2 P. M. At a short council, at which some letters of membership were granted, by unanimous request of all the members present, Bro. Theodore Young, of Wichita, Kans., was advanced to the second degree of the ministry, after which came the examination services and Communion. About sixty communicants, comprising nearly all the members of the church, were present. All seemed to enjoy the occasion.

The Wichita church is composed mostly of members from Pennsylvania and Maryland, who maintain their old-time custom of having dinner at the church for all, on the day of Communion, and breakfast and dinner the day following. This makes quite a contrast with the custom of many churches in our Brotherhood who copy more after the original pattern, by meeting in the evening and having at the church only the ordinances as originally instituted by the Master. "And in the evening he cometh with the twelve." Mark 14; 17.

On the following morning, after breakfast, one hour was spent in social meeting, each one speaking as moved by the Spirit. A funeral discourse was delivered at 11 A. M. After dinner we went out into the country to perform a marriage ceremony; then went back to the church for preaching at night. After meeting we boarded the train, to travel all night, and arrived home at 5: 30, next morning.

The Southern Mission.

SINCE there seems to be a determination to evangelize the vast Southern territory, it might be well to consider the most suitable points for organizing churches and spreading the Gospel.

During the last year we have spent more than six months at Eureka Springs, Ark., and though we met and became acquainted with hundreds of people from ocean to ocean, we did not meet with a single member of the Brethren church.

At Eureka are strong congregations of the North and South Methodists, Presbyterians, Disciples, Baptists and Catholics. All these organizations have houses of worship and are thriving greatly.

Inasmuch as a great part of the people are here in search of health, and have no occupation to keep them at home, they are very attentive to church affairs, and regular in church attendance. While the doctrines of these popular churches are thus sown broad-cast over the whole country, we are not represented at all, and those who have not before learned of the doctrine, as we understand it, go away not only in ignorance still, but grounded more firmly in the popular ideas of the day.

Though our judgment is not yet mature, we earnestly believe that Eureka Springs would be a field unsurpassed for the spreading of the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ. We believe that it would be a glorious field.

Would to God the light of true Christianity might shine in all these dark places! God bless the missions that are accomplishing such glorious work. It means more happiness in this world; it means louder hosannas to God on high; fewer groanings in the depths of hell!

Two were added to the church at Forest City, Mo., recently.

BRO. JOHN FORNEY has been holding meetings at Niles, Kansas

BRO. S. A. HONBERGER changes his address to Cabool, Texas County, Mo.

BRO. WYSONG is expected to begin a series of meetings in the Pipe Creek church, Ind., Nov. 24.

BRO. J. T. MYERS has been laboring for the church at Harmonyville, Pa. Four were added to the church by baptism.

BRO JACOB AUNER, of Roanoke, Ind., would like the address of any of our brethren or sisters living in Fort Wayne, Ind.

S. D. BOYD, of Newport, Rock Co., Nebr., wants the address of Charles Boyd who left Marshall Co, Iowa, about two years ago.

BRO. JACOB S LINE AND WIFE, of Polo, Ill, are visiting their old home in Maryland. We wish them a safe and pleasant journey.

BRO. W. H. STRICKLER informs us that Bro. Wm. R. Lierle is still at Bro. Pittman's and that he is slowly recovering his health.

SISTER KEEFER, wife of Bro. Moses Keefer, of Cass County, Nebr, is visiting relatives at this place. Bro. Keefer will be here about the first of next month.

THE Silver Creek church has already subscribed about $200 00 to assist in securing a house for worship in the city of Chicago and the church has not yet been fully canvassed.

BRO R H. MILLER is at the present time laboring for the Brethren at Cerro Gordo, Ill. We are glad that he has so far recovered his health that he can again engage in aggressive work for the Master.

BRO. HANSEN, our missionary in Thyland, Denmark, writes that the spiritual condition of the church there is good. His family is somewhat afflicted and he asks the prayers of God's people in their behalf.

OUR old brother, John Diehl, of West Branch, Ill., who had the misfortune to break his leg several months ago, was improving until last week, when, turning in bed, the bone which had not grown strong was again broken. Bro. Diehl is a patient sufferer and we pray that the Lord may comfort him in his affliction. On last Sunday a meeting was held at his house which he appreciated very much.

How many days do we give to the service of the Lord? Usually one day out of seven and often only a part of that day. If we meet on the Lord's Day to worship and spend two hours in service, we feel that we have spent as much time in this way as is necessary. If the minister preaches an hour we say his sermon is too long Think of it! The minister using one hour out of every one hundred and sixty-eight to impress the Word of Truth on the souls of men, and the enemy of souls using the remainder of the week to destroy the impressions thus made. Should there not be more time given to the service of the Lord? In the apostolic church, meetings were held every day and every night. Much time was given to the service of the Lord, and how above measure God blessed the work! Paul spent no less than three years at Ephesus in one continual series of meetings so that he could say to the elders when he bade them farewell, "Remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears." Let us give more of our time to the service of the Lord.

WE want short reports of all the series of meetings held in the Brotherhood. Don't go into lengthy details; don't laud the preacher too much. Give short reports to the point. If you boil down, you can send a volume of good news even on a postal card.

BRO. G. W. GIBSON, of Girard, Ill., writes us, under date of Nov. 18, as follows: "Bro. Flory, of Indiana, is with us. Great rejoicing among the saints. Ten received by baptism and more to follow. A full report will be given when the meetings close.

BRO. JOHN OLSSEN, elder of the church in Sweden, translated Bro. Vaniman's tract, "The House We Live In," into the Swedish language, and the Missionary Committee has had several thousand copies printed for free distribution. It will be used by Bro. Olssen and his helpers in their work in Sweden.

ONE of the editors of the Christian Evangelist, a paper published in the interest of the Disciple church, is traveling in the East and writing letters for his paper. Writing from Rome he says, "I mentioned in a former letter the baptistery of the Lateran church with its baptismal font for immersion. There was a similar one in the Cathedral of Florence; there is one also in the Cathedral at Pisa. Indeed, every Catholic Cathedral that is 700 years old has its baptistery, thus testifying that immersion was once the universal practice; or, as a Catholic historian states it, "for thirteen centuries it was the practice" Now we are wondering why the editor did not tell his readers that in all these old Cathedral baptisteries all applicants were baptized by trine immersion, and that in the Cathedral of Pisa trine immersion is practiced to-day. If he had told them this, he would have only told the whole truth. Perhaps he thought it would not be helpful to his readers to know all about it, especially since he practices single backward immersion which was introduced by the English Baptists since the Reformation and comes nearly fifteen centuries this side of the apostolic practice. To tell the whole truth does hurt sometimes.

JOHN CRERAR, a wealthy citizen of Chicago, left in his will a million and a half dollars for the establishment of a free library in his adopted City. In giving directions as to the character of the books that are to be placed in the library, he directs that books and periodicals shall be selected "with a view to create and sustain a healthy moral Christian sentiment in the community, and that all nastiness and immorality shall be excluded." He says that he does not mean by this that there should not be anything but hymn-books and sermons, but that French novels and all skeptical trash and works of questionable moral tone should never be found in this library." He wanted "its atmosphere that of Christian refinement and its aim and object the building up of character." There is in this pious wish and in the forcible language used to express it a truth that is too often lost sight of by parents and others having charge of children and young people. A trashy, impure book will do more to poison the mind of a boy or girl than anything that can come in their way. If the truth were known, the fact would stand out so clear that there would be no mistaking it, that millions of ruined souls commenced their downward career by reading trashy novels and impure books. Parents need to look well to what the boys and girls are reading. Intelligent directions must be given them. Give them good, pure books and papers to read, and when the taste for good reading is acquired they will be safe from the danger referred to above. To fail in this duty is to take a terrible risk which may result in the ruin of your boys and girls.

Our meetings at this place closed last week with one more applicant for baptism and one brother reclaimed. Thus twenty-three were added to the fold of Christ. We give God the glory.

Bro. Josiah Eby was called to the ministry a few weeks ago in the Bear Creek church, Montgomery Co., Ohio, and Bro. Emmanuel Shank was elected to the same office recently in the Lower Miami church, Miami Co., O. May the Lord make these brethren faithful ministers of his Word.

Bro. D. C. Moomaw has been holding meetings at Lunenburg, Va. We hope to have a good report of the work at that place. Bro. B. F. Moomaw, who spent some time with him in that field of labor has something to say about it in this issue of the Messenger. Just before going to press we received a letter from Bro. S. H. Love, informing us that the meeting was, at the time of writing, Nov. 15, still in progress and that seven had turned to the Lord.

QUERISTS' DEPARTMENT.

Sunday-school Superintendents.—Least in the Kingdom of Heaven.—John the Baptist.—The Redemption of the Body.—Eating Common Meals in the House of God.

1. Several correspondents inquire as to the duties of the Sunday-school Superintendent.

(1) To open and close the Sunday-school, announcing the hymns, reading the Scripture, leading in prayer or having some one else lead in the opening prayer or closing prayer.

(2) To see that the classes have teachers. Should a teacher be absent, it would be the duty of the Superintendent to appoint some one to fill the vacant place.

(3) To look after the interest of the Sunday-school, to invite those to come who do not attend, to encourage the teachers, and to labor with the ability that God gives him or her to advance, in every way, the spiritual interests of the members of the Sunday-school. Of the faithful Sunday-school Superintendent it may be said that he will find abundant opportunities of working among the young people who attend the school and that he may purchase to himself "a good degree and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ."

2. Will you please explain Matt. 5: 19. What is meant by the least in the kingdom of heaven? Amanda Koontz.

Ans.—The Pharisees had divided the precepts of the law into two classes, the lesser and greater, and taught that he who violated the lesser was not guilty of such a grave offense as he who violated the greater. Reference is, doubtless, made to this in Matt. 23: 23, where the Savior calls their attention to the "tithe of mint, anise, and cummin" as well as to the "weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy and faith." Christ would teach in the language under consideration that in his kingdom or church, the man who would obey all his commandments would be great, but he that should break or loose one of the commandments which he gave "and shall teach men so shall be called least" in his kingdom. Clark says, "The religious teacher who lets down the law of God, either in doctrine or morals, even in so-called little things, shall be among the least in the kingdom of God—the church of the Lord Jesus Christ; but fidelity to God's Word, both in practice and in instruction, is the true title to greatness." He that breaks the least of God's commandments shall not be held in esteem and he shall not be regarded as a proper religious teacher. We want to be engaged in doing all things whatsoever he has commanded us, without making vain distinctions or searching for non-essentials. He that does these things shall be least in the church and endangers his salvation.

3. Please explain Matt. 11: 11, "Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of woman there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he."

J. M. Zigler.

Ans.—In the first part of the verse the Savior very emphatically says that there never had been a greater man than John the Baptist. He was greater than the prophets because his coming had been prophesied by them. He was greater than the greatest of the prophets because he was raised up to introduce the Lamb of God to the world. "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," were the words uttered by John and to have been divinely appointed to thus introduce the Lord of Glory was to be greatest among men.

The latter part of the verse is rendered in the Revised Version as follows, "he that is but little in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." The meaning is that although John was the greatest among men, yet even he that was comparatively less in Christ's kingdom enjoyed privileges that John did not. The children of the kingdom saw things that prophets and priests desired to look into but could not. "Even the least in the kingdom of the New Testament enjoys what John could not have had, viz., peace in the finished work of Christ, and, with it, patience in suffering and death, and quiet expectation of the second coming of Christ when every wrong shall be righted. John was not permitted to see and enjoy the plentitude of Gospel grace or the pouring out of the Holy Ghost. Those who enjoy all these great things are greater than John, not on account of personal merit but because of the glorious privileges vouchsafed to them.

4. Paul to Romans 8: 23, says: "Waiting for the adoption to wit, the redemption of our body." Will you please explain this Scripture, if you think it proper, for the querist's department? S. A. Miller.

Here the Christian is represented as waiting for full adoption. The adoption of the Spirit is already ours so far as the internal relation goes, but the outward condition does not, as yet, fully correspond with the inner, and so we await the fullness of our adoption. This shall come to us in the glorified body made incorruptible in the resurrection from the dead. Paul refers to this in 2 Cor. 5: 4, "For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened; not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up in life," and again, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Rom. 7: 24. It is for this deliverance and redemption that we wait; for our redemption is not complete until the body is redeemed, until that which is planted in corruption shall be brought forth in incorruption. "This is the soul's inheritance of the glorified life which is attained on the perfect deliverance of the body from the bondage of the first state of nature, and from subjection to death and corruption."

5. A brother at Grundy Center, Iowa, feels that there should be less eating in the house of God on love-feast occasions. He says: "To have breakfast and dinner in the meeting-house on Sunday, with the necessary washing of dishes and attending labor and confusion, is not keeping the house of God as sacred as it should be kept." He concludes by asking us to explain to him the necessity for so much eating in the meeting-house.

In No. 15 of Gospel Messenger for 1885, we gave our readers some thoughts on this subject, and we have had since then no occasion to change our mind but have been confirmed in the views then expressed, and we are glad to note that there is a tendency toward less eating in the house of God. In that article we called attention to the custom prevalent among us, which is to begin the meetings at 10 A. M., and after preaching, an intermission is held, a meal is prepared and eaten, usually amid considerable talking and confusion. In the evening it is the custom, in many places, to set a table for those who do not partake of the Lord's Supper and Communion; and then, at the close of the meetings on the second day, another meal is prepared for the assembly. The preparation and eating of these meals is the occasion of considerable confusion, and we have often thought that the sanctity of God's house is sometimes in this way destroyed to, at least, some extent.

In the early days of the church, when the Brethren were far less numerous than they are now, and when they met at private houses to hold their meetings, and traveled long distances to reach the place of meeting, it was, undoubtedly, necessary to have meals prepared. But has not the custom served its purpose, and is it not now becoming, in some cases, at least, burdensome and a hinderance to the progress of the church? Too much eating and too little fasting is, without doubt, a hinderance to spiritual development.

Our meeting-houses are set apart and dedicated to the worship of God, and there is, to the Christian, a sacredness about the house of worship that is felt for no other place, and this we believe to be right, but do we not, in the way above indicated, destroy a part of that sacred feeling?

At many places basement rooms are used, so that the room where services are held is not used in this way. This is, at least, an improvement, but why not put away entirely the labor, the confusion and the trouble of preparing and eating a common meal in our houses of worship? If meeting must begin at 10 o'clock, then let the entire day be given to the Lord, even to fasting, and we shall all be the better prepared to come to the Lord's table in the evening.

In many places the meetings begin at three o'clock, and the noonday meal is entirely dispensed with. This comes nearer the example of the Savior, for, although he sent the disciples to make the preparation during the day, it was not until evening was come that they sat down together. Matt. 26: 20.

At the second day's meeting let us pursue the same course that we do at our regular meetings,—eat in our houses at home. It seems to be quite convenient to have a meal in the meeting-house for those who come a distance on the second day, but should we make a convenience of the house of God? Usually, enough of our Brethren live in the vicinity of the meeting-houses to care for and feed brethren and sisters coming from a distance.

These thoughts and suggestions are given, not to arouse a controversy, but with the hope that our Brethren will give them due thought and consideration, and if, after having done this, it is thought best to dispense with preparing and eating common meals in our houses of worship, we feel persuaded that the cause of Christ will not suffer by discarding a custom that has outlived its usefulness.

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come" 1 Cor 16 2.

"Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give. Not grudgingly or of necessity, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor 9 7.

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." 2 Cor 8 12.

EVIDENCES OF THE TRUE CHURCH

BY J. S. MOHLER.

Chapter Ten.—Feeling.

THERE are those who claim that no better test of building on the rock can be realized, than our inward feelings, — our emotional nature. We readily admit that Christianity, in its power, embraces our emotional nature, but it also embraces our reasoning faculties, our judgment, the will,—indeed all our mental, and moral faculties are embraced in the Christian religion.

Feeling is not a cause, but it is an effect produced by some cause preceding. In proportion as the cause, to us, is favorable, or unfavorable, so will our feelings be elated, or depressed.

If things go well with us, our feelings are pleasant; but if troubles beset our pathway, our feelings are correspondingly sad.

We, ourselves, have much to do in creating feelings within us, whether pleasant or unpleasant. When we do right, we feel right.

There is an inward response to the outward act. No one ever felt badly when he acted honestly, told the truth fairly, gave alms to the poor, and entertained the stranger. No one ever felt happy in the neglect of those duties.

The relation between right doing and right feeling is as inseparable in the spirit world as it is in the physical. If a man thrust a knife into his hand, he will feel pain from the wound thus inflicted, because he has interfered with a law of his organism. So it is spiritually. God has established a law in our spiritual nature whereby we may discern between right and wrong, and when we violate this law, we feel the pain of wrong-doing, until, by repentance and reformation, we are restored again to the favor of God.

But, while our feelings are, in the main, the result of our life, we would not, by any means, discredit those joyful feelings of heart, that are quickened by the Holy Spirit, and that are set aglow by religious service in Christian association. Those feelings, even, arise largely from a consciousness of having done the will of our Heavenly Father.

Mere feeling, however, is an unsafe guide to Truth. It is a necessary accompaniment to the Truth, after the Truth has been received and obeyed. But as a test of building on the Rock it is unreliable.

THE CHILDREN'S MISSION.

BY MARY M. GIBSON

Dear Children:—

As Thanksgiving day will soon be here, I wonder if it would not meet the minds and hearts of many of our dear children to give a free-will Thanksgiving offering at that time, as we did last year. God will bless us now, as he did then. We are made to rejoice that we remembered God at that time. God hath done so much for us poor, weak, unworthy creatures! How good he was to send his dear Son down to this earth, to be nailed to the cross, to save us from our sins that we might live with him in eternity? God be praised!

Some of our superintendents give the children a chance to donate, but not so many as ought to,—as it seems to me. Our Sunday-schools and children's meetings are excellent places to give the children a chance to donate to the Lord. It depends largely upon individual exertions and liberal donations, as to whether the work shall prosper and grow. God blesses the giver,—let it come as it may.

I receive donations now and then from Sunday-schools, but not from near all the Sunday-schools we have in our Brotherhood. We have received the amount of $59.50 since the first of last January. We hope to reach $100 before our next report. We can do this if donations come in as liberally from now till Christmas as they did after this time last year. The Thanksgiving offerings and Christmas donations are very liberal, generally, for which I give God praise. If I only could arouse the feelings of the parents to a higher standard, we would not be so far behind other denominations in this line of children's work. I dearly love to see and hear of children having a missionary spirit, similar to Timothy of old. He was taught the ways of the Lord, when a boy, in his youth, and accepted the teachings with a thankful heart, and, when a man, became a great missionary in preaching to the people the Gospel of the Son of God. He was an honor to his mother and grandmother Lois. I do truly thank Jesus that the work is gaining ground. We must give God all the praise, for he is the Giver of all good. Within ourselves we can do nothing. We brought nothing into the world and can take nothing out, and should call ourselves unprofitable servants, after doing all we possibly can for Jesus' sake.

What gladdens my heart most of all is to hear of the conversion of the souls of our dear children to God. Since our last report, there have been quite a number of conversions. May God truly bless the dear little lambs, is my prayer! Dear children, hold out faithful to the end! Be strong in the Lord, and he will be strong in you.

I was made to rejoice to read the noble lines in GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 44, Page 698, by our young sister, Rosa Parrett, ten years of age, of Litchfield, Ill. Dear Rosa, you have made a start in the right direction; keep on, and next time you write tell us how your prayer-meetings are progressing. Consecrate both soul and body to his service! When you approach him at a throne of grace, in behalf of your work in that line, you must feel the need of the Savior! God will stand by and bless you if you go in sincerity. Many prayers of the children of God are going up in behalf of all the dear little lambs of the fold that they may become useful instruments in the hands of the Lord. May God, through Jesus, give us many more children to be true followers of the meek and lowly Lamb! You will then be remembering your Creator in the days of your youth, as you are commanded. Remember that Jesus is all and in all. When you do this, you will fully realize, that you are working for Jesus in giving your souls and pennies for the good of his cause.

Before closing we wish to extend our thanks for all pennies received, and will still thankfully receive all donations that come in as Thanksgiving offerings. May God bless each donation and donor to his own glory!

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—Bro. J. H. Miller writes: "The Communion services of the Elkhart church, Ind., were held near Goshen, Ind. Our meeting was indeed a pleasant one. Bro. J. C. Murray and wife, of Nappanee, Ind., Bro. W. C. Deeter and wife, of Milford, Bro. H. Krieghbaum, of South Bend, and Bro. Stutsman, of Petoskey, Mich., were with us. The meeting was one of interest. The singing was especially good. This always adds to the interest of a meeting. Bro. Wm. Murray officiated."

—Under date of Nov. 11, Bro. John E. Metzger, of Edna Mills, Ind., writes: "Our Communion in the Middle Fork church, Clinton Co., Ind., was held Nov. 6 and 7. Bro. Snowberger, of Pennsylvania, officiated. Brethren Henry Frantz, Daniel Snell, Wm. Harshberger, T. J. Watkins and a number of other ministers were present. A goodly number of members communed. The order was good. Our brethren preached the Word with power and, I believe, much good was done. We expect Bro. L. T. Holsinger, of Ladoga, Ind., to commence a series of meetings in this congregation Nov. 21. We ask an interest in the prayers of the Brethren every-where."

—Bro. J. A. Root, of Ozawkie, Kans., under date of Nov. 13, writes: "Our new church is about completed. The Lord has greatly blessed us and unto him be the glory! Nov. 30 has been set apart for the dedication. There will be a Communion service in the evening to which the usual invitation is extended. The day following our last social meeting a special meeting was called and a dear sister baptized."

—Under date of Nov. 3, Bro. T. J. Nair, of Buena Park, Cal., writes: "There is an abundance of missionary work here in California for those who will and can work. At Los Angeles over three thousand members of the Catholic church have withdrawn from the body and are now without a preacher. They are French, and one to do them any good, must be able to teach and preach French. Here is a field. Who will improve it?"

—Good meetings are reported by W. S. Price. He writes: "The brethren and sisters of the Mingo church, Iowa, feel very grateful for the showers of blessings which they have lately realized. Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Lewistown, Pa., has been laboring with us, and, during his stay, nine precious souls have put on Christ and two have been reclaimed. Four were baptized before the meetings began, making thirteen young soldiers enlisted in the army of the Lord of Hosts. Surely, we can rejoice! God grant that they may go from victory unto victory!"

—Under date of Oct. 8, Bro. B. F. Britt, of Liberty, Adams Co., Ill, writes: "The Mill Creek church commenced a series of meetings Oct. 26 and continued till Nov. 5. Bro. J. Pool, of Avon, Ill., did the preaching. Four made the good confession; three were baptized, leaving one to be baptized in the future. Two were re-instated into the family of God. May they ever be faithful! During the meeting a love-feast was held, which was not very largely attended on account of inclemency of the weather. Ministerial help was ample. Bro. John Metzger, of Cerro Gordo, officiated."

—Under date of Nov. 12, Bro. Wm. E. Gilbert, of the Solomon Creek church, Ind., writes: "Our Communion of Oct. 9 was a very enjoyable season. Ministers from other branches of the church were with us. Bro. Amos Peters, from Marshall County, preached for us over Sunday. Our Sunday-school work here has become very interesting, and the bright, happy faces of the little ones show how well they appreciate the work in which they are engaged. Bro. Robert Miller, of North Manchester, will preach for us at Syracuse, Dec. 1. His sermons will be on doctrinal subjects."

—Bro. Levi Baker, of the Saginaw church, Mich., writes: "Our church is in a fair working condition. Last December Bro. I. J. Rosenberger was with us, at which time two were added to the church. About that time the building of a new church was taken into consideration and it was decided to commence the house Aug. 1. Since then the messenger of death has been in our midst and taken away four of our number. But while this is the case, four others have accepted Christ as their Leader and united with the church. Owing to the lateness of the season, we did not commence our house until Sept. 1, and now have it ready for the plastering. Our Communion was held Nov. 9 and 10, in our new house. The ministering brethren from neighboring churches were brethren B. Fryfogle, G. Stone, Samuel and John Smith, and M. M. Shirck. Our State Missionary Board was also with us and expressed themselves as being well pleased with the plan and the arrangement of our house. We return sincere thanks to all those who were instrumental in assisting us to build our house of worship."

—Bro. John Brindle, of Martinsburg, W. Va., writes: "Brethren who are thinking of changing their location are invited to inspect Jefferson or Berkeley Counties, W. Va. In those Counties a grand work may be done for Christ. We need several more good ministers here, as our present force is entirely insufficient to meet the many calls. Brethren, do not pass by this call, but come and see us. Good farms can be bought here very cheap, and each one, whether a minister or not, may help to do something for Christ. I am willing to supply any information desired."

—From the Brownsville church, Md., Bro. Geo. W. Kaetzel writes: "The Communion meeting, held Nov. 2 in the Brownsville church, was a rich repast to all present. Though the weather was gloomy, it did not prevent a good attendance and the best of order. We thought of the many churches throughout our beloved Brotherhood that, on the same evening, were engaged in similar exercises. Surely God is pleased with the obedience of his children, if the ordinances are observed in the right spirit! May a purer, holier life be our desire, the increase of Christ's kingdom be our prayer, and heaven at last be our home!"

—Under date of Nov. 10, sister Bernice Ashmore, of Mansfield, Ill., writes: "The Blue Ridge church, Piatt Co., Ill., commenced meetings Oct. 26, and continued till Nov. 6, when we had to close on account of bad weather and roads. Bro. P. S. Myers, of Cerro Gordo, did the preaching. We had a full house every night and a deep interest was manifested. One precious soul was buried with Christ in baptism and the church was much refreshed. We held our love-feast Nov. 2, which, indeed, was a feast of love. Bro. Myers officiated. Bro. Bailey, of Urbana church and Bro. L. Leedy, of Milmine, were also with us. May the Lord bless the good seed that was sown to the ingathering of a bountiful harvest, is my prayer!"

—Bro. J. S. Flory, of Tuhunga, Cal., writes: "Our Communion meeting was held at Covina Nov. 2. There was a good attendance of members; nearly one hundred communed. Bro. Amick officiated. It was a joyful feast. On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Bro. Amick did some excellent preaching. I learned that after Bro. Amick left, the meetings were continued by Bro. C. Wine, of Ventura County, and others. The weather, for some time past, has been pleasant, and, since the rains, Nature every-where is putting on a robe of green. Bro. Noah Early and wife, of Northern Indiana, were visiting at Tuhunga, Nov. 5, and left at night for Stockton, San Francisco and the Big Trees. Thence they will go on north to Oregon. Emigration and tourist travel to Southern California are quite active."

—Bro. I. R. Young, of the Springfield church, Ohio, writes, "On Tuesday, Oct. 29, Bro. John Wise, accompanied by his wife, from Kansas, came into our midst to give us a short season of spiritual refreshing. Brother and sister Wise have nearly reached their three score and ten, but still enjoy good health. Bro. Wise preached ten sermons while among us. We believe he has fully heeded the admonition of Paul to Timothy (2 Tim. 2: 15) The meetings were well attended; everybody seemed anxious to hear what he had to say. On Wednesday a sister arose from a watery grave to walk in newness of life. The meetings closed on Sunday evening. His last sermon, on Moses' choice (Heb. 11: 25), was a warning to all present. We hope the good seed sown may, in due time, bring forth fruit to the honor and glory of God. The visit, made by brother and sister Wise, was one long to be remembered by all who attended the meetings."

—Bro. Noah Reed, of Alum Ridge, Va., writes: "Oct. 19, we held our love-feast at the Pleasant Valley church, Floyd Co., Va. We had a very large attendance; three hundred members communed. Ministers present from adjoining churches were brethren J. H. Slusher, Harvey Weddle, Thomas Reed and C. D. Hylton. We were richly fed from the Word of God. We intend to hold a series of meetings this winter. May God's blessings rest on our efforts!"

—Bro. Valentine Blough, of the Middle Creek congregation, Somerset Co., Pa., writes: "We commenced a series of meetings at our meeting-house at the Summit, Oct. 3. On the 5th Bro. John Flory, of Bridgewater, Va., arrived and labored faithfully for us till the 15th. His labors were highly appreciated. With a few exceptions the attendance was good and the attention given to the preaching was excellent. We had one addition during the meeting, and trust that the church was edified, and seed sown which will spring up and yield fruit in the future!"

—Under date of Nov. 3, Bro. James T. Kinzie, of Appanoose church, Kansas, writes: "Our Communion occurred Oct. 2, at 4 P. M., and was a very enjoyable feast. One hundred and fifty members communed. We had a strong ministerial force, who gave us much good counsel. The Communion was followed by a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Hertzog, of Johnson County, Kans. During our meetings three were added to the fold,—one by baptism, and two reclaimed. We feel sure, from the interest manifested, that others were almost persuaded to become Christians, and that many are counting the cost."

—From Blue River, Ind., sister Clara Swihart writes: "Bro. Henry Brallier commenced a two weeks' meeting Oct. 27. He is very earnest in his preaching. He encouraged the members, and warned those out of the ark of safety to be reconciled to God before it is too late. Seven precious souls came out on the Lord's side, and were buried by baptism into the church of the Living God. This makes ten that have been baptized since June 1. We had an enjoyable love-feast Nov. 2. Brethren D. Caylor, D. Rothenbarger, H. Brallier, J. Crume and H. Elson assisted in the services. Good order and good attendance were given. May we ever be found faithful, is my prayer!"

—Bro. D. W. Stouder, of Madison, Kans., writes: "Nov. 2, Bro. G. W. Studebaker, of Fredonia, Kans., came to us and commenced meetings at Pleasant View school-house, thirteen miles east of Madison. He preached in all ten sermons. On Saturday, Nov. 9, we had a council and decided unanimously to organize a congregation, naming it Antioch. The election for church officers resulted as follows: Minister, Bro. Adam S. Downing; Deacon, Bro. Wm. Wheeler; Secretary, sister Annie D. Downing; Treasurer, Bro. John Miller. Four were baptized upon this occasion. Others are near the kingdom. A little over a year ago we had but one member at that point. Now there are sixteen members,—a man and wife in each family. The Brethren have a good foundation laid for building up a prosperous church."

—From the Sam's Creek church, Md., Bro. Wm. H. Franklin writes: "Bro. Samuel N. McCann, of West Virginia, began a series of meetings in our congregation on Sunday morning, Oct. 27, and continued them until Sunday night, Nov. 10, preaching in all eighteen sermons. Notwithstanding the unfavorable condition of the weather and roads during part of the time, our meetings were well attended and the best of attention was given to the Word preached. While, as yet, there have been no accessions to the church, our brother, by his sound and good labors, has greatly revived our membership. All seem to feel determined and strong to fight the enemy, since we have been so richly fed with the Bread of Heaven. Our brother endeared himself not only to the brethren and sisters, but to others also, and his labors were much appreciated by all. Eld. Daniel F. Stouffer will commence a series of meetings in New Windsor, Md., Nov. 23."

From the Lower Cumberland Church, Pa.

Our love-feast was held Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 at Mobler's meeting-house. Although the weather was inclement, we had a good meeting. The ministerial force was large, and able speakers were present. Elders J. F. Oller, J. Hollinger and S. M. Utz, of Maryland, A. Beelman, of Ohio, J. Trostle, Bro. Bashor and others were present. Bro. Solomon Seiber, who has served us as elder for some time, asked to be relieved. By the voice of the church, Bro. David Neisley was ordained our elder, to take the place of our deceased elder, Moses Miller, whose counsels we miss.

We commenced a series of meetings in Mechanicsburg, Nov. 1st. Bro. S. M. Utz conducted the meetings, assisted by the brethren. The attendance, with the exception of one evening, when it rained, was excellent. Night after night Bro. Utz labored with zeal and power. It seemed as though he never tired telling the story of the cross, and revealing the precious words of eternal life to a dying people. Bro. Oller, while with us, followed with earnest exhortations, as to the importance of obeying the Truth. We felt sure there were good impressions made upon the minds of the people.

For one thing we commend our Brethren,—that they did not labor to excite the minds, but earnestly, upon every occasion, said, "We want you to search your Bible and see what is contained therein and judge whether we preach the whole Word of God or not." How important, if we are born of God that we get men to believe in the Bible! Ministers of other denominations were present at the meeting, and the best of interest prevailed. Two precious souls were added to the church, making four for this season. Though few in number, we are thankful that the good work goes on. Bro. Utz closed his meetings Sunday evening, Nov. 10th. The house was crowded so that many had to be turned away for want of room.

Bro. Utz preached twelve sermons while with us, and we hope that we, as a church, may profit by the Word preached and that many, who are yet outside the fold, may turn unto a loving Savior who is kindly saying, "Come unto me, all ye ends of the earth and be saved."

Brethren Utz and Beelman left for their homes Nov. 11th. God bless them for their labor of love.

We had a pleasant call from Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Lewistown, Nov. 11, who filled an appointment on that day. He gave us a good, practical sermon from 2 Chron. 34: 3. Thus closed our series of meetings. May it be as bread cast upon the waters!

LEAH T. CONDRY.

Not Now at Home.

Perhaps some of those who may chance to read this will be ready to inquire if the writer was not at home when this article was written. If not, where was he? Well, I will tell you. He is in the waiting room in the Union Depot at Sedalia, Mo., awaiting the time for the train to arrive that he may go home.

Affliction is the cause of his being here at this time. He has been in the Master's service among the Lord's people in the Deep Water congregation, Henry Co., Mo., and, according to previous arrangements, was to visit the few members living in Cass County, Mo., and spend several days with them, but affliction turned him toward home.

Some of his thoughts are these. Will affliction increase our anxieties to reach our heavenly home as much as it does to arrive at our earthly home? If so, then no wonder that David said, "It is good for me that I am afflicted." The experience of the writer is, that the "sweet singer of Israel" was correct.

But, while the hand of affliction intercepts our course for the present, the impression is strong that the Lord still has work for us yet to do. While such is our present feeling we feel entirely willing to submit to the will of God, for he knows best and he doeth all things well.

As it is the writer's lot to be a great sufferer, it is a source of real gratification to know that anxious hearts are enlisted in his behalf, and that they are presenting the case before our Father in heaven. Dear fellow-pilgrims, do not be discouraged by time's tardy pace. Thirty-six years of suffering has made me realize more of the preciousness of God's salvation than I could have known for many more years of uninterrupted health. No one knows so well the true value of music as the one who has thereby been raised from the sorrowing scenes of earth and affliction to a state of exultant praise to him who can heal all our diseases.

Oh, the melody there is in the notes of praise! Many times, in my lonely hours of affliction and privation, my soul longeth for the sweet notes of melodious sound,—that I may, for a little while have my thoughts carried away to the hill of frankincense,—that I may forget my suffering! But my sore afflictions forbid me the use of my God-given harp, and so I must depend upon others to cheer up my drooping spirit by the music which they can make. In looking over the route I am often made to say, "Is it far, dear pilgrim-brother?"

The Father's children in the Deep Water church had their love-feast Oct. 31. The weather was inclement, without, but quietness was within. Owing to the constantly-falling rain, the congregation was not large. The meeting, however, was enjoyable to the members who were permitted to participate. Several of the ministers from adjoining churches were present and each one took part in the public services. The meetings were continued several days. Now we close till we reach home.

Later.—We are now at home and have been using the A. Wilford Hall treatment for two days, and the result has been so very satisfactory that we feel hopeful that the cessation from the Master's work will be of short duration. We shall give further particulars later.

Right here we will say that, as Bro. Witmore will be away from home this winter, I will defer my trip south for the present but still hope to visit the Brethren in Tennessee and elsewhere, south and east, but not now. I would say to the many who are solicitous about my health, and also about my visiting the state, that I have, for the present, decided to make no extended trip this winter, hoping that, by some rest and a thorough course of treatment, according to Dr. Hall's system, I may have my weak lungs and shattered constitution so far restored as to again go forth in the Master's work as an evangelist. I can scarcely ever expect to be able to go out as a missionary. If the Lord should spare me longer, my aim is to devote my entire time to the Master's work.

A. HUTCHISON.

From Lunenburg Church, Va.

Dear Brethren:—

RECENTLY I was absent ten days, holding meetings with the church in Lunenburg, which was organized a little over a year ago, with eight members, the result of one week's meeting. It now numbers about fifty members. We commenced our meeting the evening of Nov. 1, and had meeting every evening with crowded houses, good order, and good attention. Considerable interest was manifested. Bro. D. C. Moomaw was with me part of the time.

We introduced, during our stay with them, the practice of the "visit." The question was raised whether it was authorized by a "thus saith the Lord." Those people are thinking people and have the impression that the Scriptures must be the rule of our faith and practice. We succeeded in giving satisfaction on this point. The visit was made by the two deacons,—brethren Oliver and Winn. The church assembled, and the visit reported. All were favorably impressed. This gave an opportunity to ventilate the rules of the church, which, with all other points, brought up the doctrine of non-conformity to the practices and fashions of the world, conflicting with godliness.

It is remarkable to see the progress of these brethren and sisters in doffing the superfluities of their fashionable surroundings, and donning the habiliments of Christian simplicity and plainness. In this they were encouraged in the exhortations, but here, as in other places, we were criticised and reproached for our singularity, and the danger of formality taking the place of spirituality. This, I opine, is one of Satan's ingenious devices, and acts (as he well knows) in giving a pretext to those who have not the virtue, the courage, to cut loose from his environments and are ready to say, "You have formality and I have spirituality, and you are in danger of becoming as proud of your plainness as I am of my stylish apparel. Don't be discouraged, my brethren and sisters, but trust in God. He who has enabled you to make the sacrifice, is able to keep you from being proud of it, and at any and all events I would rather take my chances in conformity with the Lord's children than in conformity with the devil's children.

We are not insensible of the fact that there may be extremes,—that we may observe any of these things in a mechanical way and be none the better for it, and we may go beyond our limit in costly array while we are fastidious on the point of style. We are glad to know that this, with our people, is the exception and not the rule, and brethren, discussing this question, should be careful not to say too much on the different sides of the point at issue, lest we encourage the weak brother and the weak sister to persist in their conformity with the wrong family. It is time enough, my brother, when we see signs of a dangerous departure from the Bible requirements.

I preached my last sermon in this meeting on Sunday night, closing with a farewell address which seemed to affect the congregation considerably. Brethren and sisters, men and women, little boys and little girls, with tears, came forward to take the parting hand, asking an interest in our prayers and importuning us to return again.

Bro. D. C. Moomaw will continue the meetings another week. There will probably be an election for more ministerial help, and a Communion before the close of the meeting. I confidently hope for and expect good results from this meeting. There were several applications before I left and many hearts beating and tears flowing. The fruits will follow if the Lord will.

B. F. MOOMAW.

From the Dry Creek Church, Iowa.

BRO. D. E. BRUBAKER has been holding a series of meetings at the Dry Creek church. We feel revived, built up, and strengthened by the powerful Word of God. Bro. Brubaker's short stay with us did us much good. He taught us many lessons we will never forget. May God bless him in his good and holy work here below, that in heaven he may obtain the brightest crowns. One was added to our number and many more felt the need of Jesus and his love. Too often the evil one lies in the sinner's heart as a sleeping lion, and, when Jesus knocks at the heart, pleading for admission, Satan awakens in all his strength and glory, showing the sinner all the beauty of the world. May the Lord remember those who are near and dear to us, and give them power to overcome the enemy!

At the close of our meetings we held our second love feast. It was a feast indeed, taking our minds and hearts back to the last supper and the cruel cross. Oh, brethren and sisters, we owe our whole life to Jesus, our Elder Brother. He died that we might live, and how can we grow cold, love the world, and not love Jesus? Let us not forget to pray, and ever remember that it is a pleasant thing to serve the Lord!

M. E. TISDALE.

From Broadfording, Md.

OUR series of meetings commenced Oct. 27. Bro. D. F. Stouffer preached two acceptable sermons. Then the home brethren continued the meetings till Nov. 2,—the day of our love-feast.

This feast was one long to be remembered. The weather was somewhat inclement, and the roads very muddy. Notwithstanding all that, the large church was filled to its utmost capacity. About four hundred members surrounded the tables of the Lord. The best of order prevailed during these solemn services, and good attention was given by the spectators.

It seems a pity that, with such powerful preaching and earnest appeals, only four could make up their minds to choose that good part which shall not be taken from them!

Ministering brethren present at our meeting were, brethren D. F. Stouffer, John Brindle, David Bonsacks, Absalom Mallotte and others from adjoining congregations. Bro. Stouffer officiated.

The remarks made during these meetings were well calculated to prepare the minds of the members for the spiritual repast, designed to produce a growth in grace.

The meetings were continued one week later by the home brethren. Though there were no more additions to the church, we believe the members were built up and sinners made to tremble! May God add his blessings to the efforts put forth toward the advancement of his cause!

From the Monocacy Church, Frederick County, Md.

THE brethren of the above-named church commenced a series of meetings at the Double Pipe Creek meeting-house on Monday evening, Oct. 28, and continued the meetings until Nov. 2, the day of our love-feast at the Rocky Ridge house. This meeting was well attended, considering the disadvantages we were laboring under. The day was cloudy, with occasional showers of rain. The river was swollen on account of the previous rains, and as our bridge had been swept away by the June flood, and not yet replaced, it was very inconvenient for many of our brethren and friends to reach the place of meeting. Through the kindness of President Hood of the Western Maryland railroad, we were accommodated with a special train, so that, after the services were over, the majority of our brethren, going east, could return home by rail. Quite a number of brethren and sisters from adjoining congregations were with us. The ministering brethren from a distance were elders John M. Mohler, of Mifflin County, Pa., and S. F. Sanger, of Bridgewater, Va., with a number of ministering brethren from Eastern Maryland district. The order during the afternoon and evening was truly commendable and worthy of praise.

On Sunday evening, Nov. 3, meetings commenced at the Double Pipe house, and continued during the week, closing on Sunday evening, Nov. 10. Our dear brother, John M. Mohler, conducted the services during all the above meetings. Bro. Mohler is one of those ministers that has given heed to the instruction of Paul to Timothy where he says, "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." 2 Tim 2: 15. The Sword of the Spirit was well handled and did some good work. As an immediate result of the meeting, two prominent young men were baptized and there are five applicants for the near future. We think it can truthfully be said, that the brethren and sisters were much strengthened and encouraged by having their pure minds stirred up. We had good meetings and the order and attention was excellent. We felt that it was good for us to be there. May the good Lord bless the labors of his servants everywhere. Bro. Mohler left us on Monday, Nov. 11, for other fields of labor. May the Lord go with him, is our prayer!

D. R. SAYLER

Double Pipe Creek, Md.

From Union Bridge, Carroll Co., Md.

The people of God in Pipe Creek congregation have been much encouraged and strengthened through the labors of Eld. S. F. Sanger, of Bridgewater, Va. Meetings commenced Nov. 3, and are still in progress. So far, we have no additions to report, but patiently wait for God to give the increase. Order, interest and attendance are good, but the inclemency of the weather interfered considerably.

A word to the brethren and sisters: Drift-wood floats only in time of freshets; at other times it may be found lying along the banks. Let us be careful that we do not have that kind of religion. Do not let us "lodge on the shore," as soon as the meetings close, but let us move right along. Our Sunday-school is to close Nov. 24, to be followed by a Bible class, weekly, at the homes of the members.

Notes by the Way.

OCT 8th wife and I left for McPherson, Kansas. We arrived Oct. 9, and were met at the depot by Bro. Wm. Snyder, who escorted us to his father's, Bro. J. M. Snyder, where we were cordially welcomed and entertained.

Next morning we all attended Chapel exercises, which we enjoyed very much. Afterwards Bro. S. Z. Sharp conducted us through the College Dormitory, which we found to be very pleasant and comfortably arranged. We found all the conveniences that could be asked for, and their instructors are the best. Kindness and interest was shown by all the officers, teachers and students. All seem to labor for the promotion of each other's welfare. It made us feel like Peter said, "It is good for us to be here." MICHAEL REBER.

Literary Notes.

"The Treasury for Pastor and People" for November even surpasses its own excellence, which has won for it the most favorable notices both from the press and the foremost preachers of the day. Its aim is to furnish what every preacher and Christian worker needs, and its success has been eminent. Twelve College Presidents, in addition to its noble corps of contributors, will write expressly for it during the coming year. The portrait of Dr. J. R. Day, of the Calvary Methodist church, N. Y., is given this month with a view of the church edifice, a sermon by him and a sketch of his life. Dr. Wm. M. Taylor furnishes an admirable sermon on The Purposes Subserved by the Records of the Sins of Good Men in the Word of God. A Children's Service, on Unpleasant Children, is by Dr. M. Ewen of London, and an Exegetical Comment by Professor Terry on The Apocalypse of Noah. The Leading Thoughts of Sermons are by Drs. Goodwin, Henson and Dray. Leading articles are by Prof. Bisbee, on Defects in the Pulpit and Pew, with Remedy; by Dr. J. Aspinwall Hodge on What is Christianity? by John M. Peacocke, M. D., on the Disposal of the Dead; by Dr. J. M. Phillips on Church Growth and How Secured; by Dr. Winslow on Explorations in the Fayum; by Dr. T. L. Cuyler on The Girdle of Love; by Dr. A. H. Moment on The Sunday Newspaper, with many other contributions of great worth, and Editorials on Creed and Deed, Clerical Common Sense, "Make them Uncomfortable," etc. Yearly, $2 50; Clergymen, $2 00; Single copies, 25 cents. E. B. Treat, Publisher, 5 Cooper Union, New York.

"The Life-Work of the Author of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin.'" By Florine Thayer McCray, author of "Environment," etc. Square 12mo, 440 pp., with 11 illustrations and ornamented cloth covers, beautifully printed on heavy calendered paper. Price, $2 00. New York: Funk & Wagnalls.

Life is too short to allow one to read all the good books that pour from the busy press of the present century. The works written by the most famous literary woman of her day—Harriet Beecher Stowe—would themselves make a library that does not come within the time limits or money-limits of all. Multitudes who have a favorable, if vague, idea of this celebrated author, would be glad to know more of her writings and of herself, but they will never do so if shut up to the necessity of collecting and reading all her books. To all such persons the work here announced comes as a benefactor.

In this busy age, an author who carefully reviews, arranges and condenses into convenient form, the life work of a voluminous writer, renders a practical service—one of special value to the rising generation. This labor has been conscientiously performed by Florine Thayer McCray, a lady who enjoyed the intimate friendship and confidence of her famous friend, until mental paralysis threw a cloud over the scene. Mrs. Stowe gave Mrs. McCray full permission to write this book, and furnished valuable assistance, as did her son, Rev. Charles E. Stowe, and various other members of the Stowe and Beecher families.

The book before us is not strictly a biography, but rather a sketch of Harriet Beecher Stowe's literary career, with an outline of each of her works, including a commentary and criticism on them, and such facts and incidents as led up to their preparation and resulted from their publication. It also contains a digest of opinions by eminent reviewers; an account of Mrs. Stowe's travels, ovations, methods of work, personal appearance, and immense sale of her works; and also the bitter opposition aroused by the publication of her honest convictions—especially by the heavy blow she dealt against slavery in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and her telling denunciation of high-toned corruption in her vindication of Lady Byron.

"The Life-Work" is written in a fluent, popular vein, which will make it fascinating to the young, while its inspiring lessons will be profitable to all. The author's admiration for her celebrated friend does not close her eyes to certain defects and eccentricities, for which great writers are often noted. In a word, this is a most entertaining volume, and most admirably adapted to help those who have not the time to make for themselves so thorough an acquaintance with the literary life of Harriet Beecher Stowe.

The Thing for Your Children.

The time is about here when every parent in the Brotherhood and in the land will be thinking of some presents for their children. I know of nothing better than "Bible Talks with Children." This is a grand, good book.

The author says in his preface: "The community is inundated with reading matter, journals, magazines, romances, histories, philosophies, etc., and the tendency is to neglect the Holy Word of God, as though its mission were ended, and the mighty themes of which it speaks were obsolete. Whatever can be done, should be done to hold childhood to the sublime precepts and teachings that came fresh and living from the pen of inspiration."

The book is a large quarto, eleven and one-half inches long and nine inches wide, and contains over 400 pages and 178 full page engravings. The author's talks are short and pointed and told in such a way as to interest the children, and then accompanied by a large and beautiful picture, such as will rivet upon the mind the lesson taught. Grandparents should have it for their grandchildren, parents for their children and teachers for their classes. Write for descriptive circular. Agents wanted every-where. Good terms given. Address, Jas. M. Neff, Covington, Ohio.

"Death is Birth.—No man who is fit to live need fear to die. Poor faithless souls that we are! How we shall smile at our vain alarm when the worst has happened! To us death is the most terrible word we know. But, when we have tasted its reality, it will mean to us birth, deliverance, a new creation to ourselves. It will be what health is to man. It will be what home is to the exile. It will be what the loved one given back is to the bereaved. As we draw near to it a solemn gladness should fill our hearts. It is God's great morning lighting up the sky, and when we awake it will be into God's sunlight."

Deceased was born in Frederick County, Md., March 8, 1793, and was married to Miss Mary Miller in 1819. He and wife were baptized in Maryland in 1820. They came to Ohio in 1826. His companion, the mother of eleven children, seven of whom are yet living, passed away in April, 1854. Funeral services at the M. E. church in West Dayton, on Wednesday, Oct. 16, at 10 A. M., by the writer from 1 Cor. 15: 42, 44. Minerva was a bright, intelligent child. She was taken from our midst very suddenly. On Friday she went to school and on the afternoon of the following Monday she died. She told her parents not to weep for her, that she was going to a better home than they had. She was rational until almost the last and seemed to have no fear of death.
A. S. Shook.

CLENDENNING.—Near Leetown, Jefferson Co., W. Va., Oct. 9, friend John W. Clendenning, aged 67 years and 3 days.

The deceased had taken a great interest in our meetings. It was through him that I first went to that place to hold meetings. He had made up his mind to come to our love-feast to be baptized Sept. 7, but a few days before the time he took sick and so could not be baptized, which he regretted very much. The funeral services were held in the Methodist church south, by the writer, to a large concourse of sympathizing friends from the words of Heb. 9: 27. John Brindle.

SMITH.—In the Clover Creek congregation, Blair Co., Pa., July 10, George Smith, aged 79 years and 4 months.

The deceased was an active member, and for many years a deacon, which office he filled faithfully as long as his health would permit. He leaves a wife and two daughters to mourn their loss.

RAHAB.

ONE among the interesting characters of the Bible is this woman, made especially so because she forms part of the line through which came the Messiah. As to her genealogy we know but little, except that she was an Egyptian, and a resident of Jericho. It was to her house that the two spies went, whom Joshua had sent into the city to determine its strength, fortifications, etc.

Why they went to this place, and what was the character of the woman at the time, has given rise to much discussion among Bible students of all ages. The Bible narrative says, "And they went and came into a harlot's house, named Rahab, and lodged there." Josh. 2: 1. From the nature of the errand, it is even supposed that they were among the best and most trusted men of the camp—men who were not only willing to run the risks of so perilous an undertaking, but who evidently trusted in God for their safety, and therefore could have had but the one object in view. In going into a city on such an errand, their first thought would be to find a place of personal safety.

For us, at this age, to know, or even surmise, we must know something about the customs and social standing of the place. There may be some reasons why the house of a harlot would be a safe place for them, and there are many reasons why it would not. It is not to be supposed that a woman of this kind would have much respect for religion of any kind that would have any reference to morality or the laws of right. As gain would be the leading object of her life, this would have afforded her an excellent opportunity for driving a good bargain by betraying the trust placed in her, and giving the men into the hands of their pursuers.

It seems, however, that the safety of these men depended not in the place of their lodging, but in the religious faith of the woman. The inference, then, must be that these men must have had some previous knowledge of the character of this woman, or else they were led there by inspiration. If the former is true, it seems strange that such a woman should be found in the house bearing this reputation. If the latter, it seems equally strange that the Lord should so lead them, and use the woman in so important a work. Both views of the case look unreasonable, and not in harmony with the Lord's usual way of accomplishing his purposes.

But without arguing the case any further at this place, we will give the views of some of the leading Biblical scholars, who have discussed the subject at a considerable length. We will give first the opinions of those who accept the translation as we have it in the English versions

William Smith, LL.D., in his "Old Testament History," accepts the idea that she was a harlot as named, and, in speaking of the circumstance, says, "The two spies were received into one of the houses by a harlot named Rahab, in whose mind the terror that had fallen on the Canaanites, when they heard all that God had done for Israel, had produced a belief in Jehovah, as the God of heaven and earth, and in his purpose to give them the land. In this faith she hid the spies."

Cunningham Geikie, D. D., author of "Hours With the Bible," says, "It has been sought to explain Rahab's position as that of a hostess, but there are neither hosts nor hostesses in Eastern khans; nor would it have been possible for men to have lodged at the house of any respectable Eastern woman. Rahab's being asked to bring out the spies to the soldiers sent to them, is in strict keeping with Eastern manners, which would not permit any man to enter a woman's house without her permission." The latter part of Dr. Geikie's argument, it seems to us, is against the position he takes, rather than for it. While it was the custom not to enter the houses of respectable women without permission, it was the privilege, by law, of officers and soldiers, to enter the houses of harlots and prostitutes without permission. And the fact that permission was asked to enter this woman's house, would go to show that she was a respectable woman, and not a harlot.

Wm. G. Blaikie, D. D., LL.D., in his "Manual of Bible History," referring to the spies, gives the following: "The two spies were sent to examine the city. Their presence was detected by the king; but they were hid by Rahab, a remarkable woman, formerly of bad character, who was led to believe that the country was to be given to the Israelites, and from whose faith Joshua drew great encouragement to go forward." Many other Bible critics give a similar rendering. All their views are based on this one word "harlot," as all the attending circumstances, both before and after, seem to argue strongly against such a bad reputation for this woman.

This shows the importance of obtaining the true meaning of words. If to the original word, in this case,—zonah,—a wrong meaning has been attached, a great injustice has been done the woman, and she is placed before the world in a very unfavorable light indeed.

From the "Biblical Encyclopædia," by John Kitto, D. D., we have the following: "In the narrative of these transactions, Rahab is called zonah, which our own, after the ancient versions, renders harlot. The Jewish writers, however, being unwilling to entertain the idea of their ancestors being involved in a disreputable association at the commencement of their great undertaking, chose to interpret the word 'hostess,' one who keeps a public house. But the word signifies harlot in every other text where it occurs, the idea of hostess not being represented by this or any other word in Hebrew, as the function represented by it did not exist. There were no inns, and when they eventually came into use, they were never, in any Eastern country, kept by women. On the other hand, strangers from beyond the river might have repaired to the house of a harlot without suspicion or remark. The house of such a woman was also the only one to which they, as perfect strangers, could have had access, and certainly the only one in which they could calculate on obtaining the information they required, without danger from male inmates."

Why a stranger could enter an Eastern city, and go in to the house of a harlot without causing suspicion or causing remarks, the learned doctor does not explain; and that there were no houses in the city of Jericho, in which to entertain strangers, also seems strange, and contrary to the evidence of other Biblical scholars. Some very good arguments, seemingly, are oftentimes built on mere assertions, wanting in facts. In drawing our conclusions a careful discrimination should always be made between facts and mere assertions. But he concludes his argument in this way: "If we are concerned for the morality of Rahab, the best proof of her reformation is found in the fact of her subsequent marriage to Salmon. This implies her previous conversion to Judaism, for which, indeed, her discourse with the spies evinces that she was prepared."

Thomas Scott, in his comment on this circumstance, says: "Perhaps Rahab kept some kind of a house of entertainment for travelers; especially as she stated that "two men had come to her of whom she knew nothing;" yet from the testimony of the two apostles—Matt 1: 5 and Luke 3: 31—there can be no reasonable doubt but that she had been a harlot, though now, it is probable, she was converted by the faith that was wrought in her; which was so eminent that she was not only admitted into the society of God's people, but married into a noble family of the tribe of Judah, from whom Christ sprang."

This ends the comments we shall give as to Rahab's being a harlot in the sense above given; we shall now give the views of those who object to calling her a harlot, believing that a proper rendering of the word does not justify such a definition.

Dr. Clark, in his comment on this same subject, says: "Harlots and inn-keepers seem to have been called by the same name; as, no doubt, many who followed this mode of life, from their exposed situation, were not the most correct in their morals. Among the ancients, women generally kept houses of entertainment, and among the Egyptians and Greeks this was common." As evidence of this he gives the following from Herodotus: he, speaking of the many differences between Egypt and other

THOUGHTS OF HEAVEN.

Written while at the Infirmary in Baltimore, Md., March 25, 1885, by Mary Hillery.

I love to think of heaven: it seems not far away.
The crystal streams refresh me as I near the closing day.
Its balmy winds are wafted from the heavenly hills above,
And they fold me in an atmosphere of purity and love.

I love to think of heaven; I long to join the choir;
To sing the song of Jesus my soul would never tire.
The loved ones gone before me are joining in the song;
They cast their crowns before the Lamb who sits upon the throne.

I love to think of heaven, where the weary are at rest.
No sorrow there can enter the mansions of the blest:
All tears are wiped away by the Savior's loving hand,
And sin and death are banished from that glorious, happy land.

I love to think of heaven, and the greetings I shall meet
From the loving band of loved ones, who walk the golden street,
And the patriarchs and prophets—I shall know them every one.
It is written in the Word we "shall know as we are known."

Assemble, all ye host, ye thrones, dominions, powers!
There is no king like Jesus; there is no heaven like ours!
All glory, hallelujah! Let heaven and earth unite
To celebrate his praise with infinite delight.

JERUSALEM.

[The following interesting letter, written by Frank G. Carpenter, who recently spent some time in the city of Jerusalem, is given because it shows the great interest being taken in Jerusalem, and the Holy Land generally, by the Jews. Does it not indicate a fulfillment of prophecy concerning Israel? Wealthy Jews in all parts of the world are investing money in Palestine, believing that, according to prophecy, they will again inhabit the Land of Canaan. "When ye see the fig tree putting forth its bud, know that the summer is nigh, even at the door."—ED.]

OUR American Consul, Mr. Gilman, tells me that there are about two hundred American Hebrews in Jerusalem, and he says that the great number of immigrants is the wonder of the people of this part of the East. He says that the removal of the restrictions on immigration has taken place during the past three or four years and that when he came here it was the policy of the foreign governments represented at Jerusalem to aid the Turks in expelling the Hebrews. He was advised, shortly after his arrival, that some Americans were overstaying their three weeks' time in Palestine, and was requested to direct them to leave. He replied that such action was entirely contrary to the spirit of our Government, which is founded on religious and race freedom, and after some negotiations, the American Hebrews were allowed to remain. Shortly after this the British Consul, under instructions from the British minister at Constantinople, took the same grounds, and I am told that the German and French Governments have followed suit.

A curious people they are. They are nearer the type that existed here in the past; they have a prescribed dress, and their appearance is like that of no other people of the Orient. The men and boys wear long, coat-like gowns which reach, without belts, from the neck to the feet, and which show other gowns beneath them at the front. Their heads are covered with cloth or velvet caps, bordered with long, brown fur, which stands straight out, forming a wide fringe about the head. None shave, and all who can, wear long beards. Each face is framed in two long, curly locks of hair, which come out just in front of the ears, and in many cases reach down to the breast, in accordance with an injunction of the Scriptures, stating that "thou must not mar the corners of thy beard."

They never cut the hair in front of the ears, and I have seen boys with the whole of the rest of the head shaved, and these two locks left. They have hair of all colors, from black and white to a fiery red, and there are many among them with beards of silvery whiteness. Jerusalem is to the elderly Israelite of Europe what Benares is to the Hindoo. He hopes to come here to die, and I am told that many of them here believe that if they die in other lands they will be dragged under the earth through the globe from whence they are laid, until they come out upon the Mount of Olives. The side of this mountain is covered with tomb-stones, and soil from it is sent to Hebrews in many parts of the world in order that it may be put into their coffins at burial.

I have visited a great number of their houses; whole families live in one cave, about the size of a hall bed-room, with no windows, and lighted only by the door at the front. Both walls and floor are of stone. There is little furniture to speak of. There is only a bed or two for the grown people, and the rest of the family must bunk on the floor. The kitchen is, in most cases, a little box, just high enough for the woman of the house to stand upright in, and not more than four feet deep and three feet wide. At the back of this there is a rude stove of stone for the burning of charcoal, and somewhere in the catacombs, which make up the tenements of a score of families, there is a well, which is the common property of all. On the door-posts of each dwelling, whether it be of only one room or more, there is tacked a rolled-up strip of white parchment, six inches long, which contains the name of Jehovah and the Ten Commandments, and every one of these Palestine Hebrews wears the Commandments tied on his arm under his coat. In some cases they have phylacteries for the forehead at time of worship, and most of them are very devout.

Our Consul says there are one hundred and fifty synagogues in Jerusalem; but these, as a rule, are small, and they are not so fine as the other churches of the city. The service is different from that which is observed in America, and the women worship in a different room from the men. I was in Jerusalem at the time of the celebration of the Passover, and I was told that the feast is now celebrated much the same as it was in the days of the past, save that a piece of burnt bone now takes the place of the lamb. At this time they turned out in holiday attire, and I was surprised to see rich gowns of velvet and silk, of blue, yellow and green, on some of the men whom I had seen before in little more than rags. I attended the synagogues on the following day, and found them all full. The rabbis were gorgeously clad, and I have seldom seen more devout congregations. The men were all reading Hebrew out loud, and in the rooms adjoining I found women talking over the Scriptures, or listening to the elder women among them, who were reading. The rabbis of Jerusalem are not engaged in business.

One of the greatest sights of Jerusalem is the wailing place, where every Friday certain sects meet on the outside of the walls of the Mosque of Omar, which occupies the site of Solomon's Temple, and, with their heads bent against the stones, sorrow over the loss of Jerusalem, and pray God to give the land back to his chosen people. This custom has been observed since the days of the Middle Ages, and it is one of the saddest of sights. I visited it last week. In a narrow alley, surrounded by miserable houses—on stone flags which have been worn with the bare feet of thousands of devoted Israelites—against a wall of great blocks of marble which reached for fifty or more feet above them, a long line of men in long gowns and of women with shawls over their heads stood with heads bowed, praying and weeping. Many of the men had white beards, and the long, curly locks which fell down in front of their ears were of silver. Others were just in their prime, and I could not but wonder, when I saw the forms of these at times almost convulsed with emotion. Each had a well-thumbed Hebrew Bible in his hand, and from time to time the party broke out into a kind of chant, an old gray-haired man acting as leader, and the rest coming in on the refrain. The chant was in a strange tongue, but, as translated, it was as follows:

Leader.—For the palace that lies desolate
Response.—We sit in solitude and mourn.
Leader.—For the walls that are destroyed
Response.—We sit in solitude and mourn.
Leader.—For our majesty that is departed
Response.—We sit in solitude and mourn.
Leader.—For our great men who lie dead
Response.—We sit in solitude and mourn.
Leader.—For our priests who have stumbled
Response.—We sit in solitude and mourn.
Leader.—For our kings who have despised him
Response.—We sit in solitude and mourn.

The effect of this chant can not be appreciated without hearing it. The old men, the weeping women who kiss the stones of the wall that separates them from what was once the site of Solomon's temple, and which is even now the holiest spot on the earth to the Hebrew, the genuine feeling expressed by all, and the faith that they show in thus coming here week after week, and year after year, is wonderfully impressive. It is, indeed, one of the strange sights of this strangest of cities. A nation is mourned for, and other chants which they utter, contain expressions such as the following: "We pray thee, have mercy on Zion; gather the children of Jerusalem together; may the kingdom soon return to Zion; comfort those who mourn over Jerusalem; may peace and joy abide with Zion, and the branch of Jesse spring up at Jerusalem!"

The charitable institutions at Jerusalem are many. I have visited several, among which are the schools which have been established here by the Rothschilds. These schools are very large, and they teach the young men the industrial arts, as well as give them good educations in other ways. I visited the carpenter shops, and saw Palestine Hebrews working away quite as skillfully as our American carpenters. I saw bright-eyed boys working in the tin-shops and foundries, making models of work which were to go the Exposition at Paris; and I was taken through art schools and draughting rooms where these boys were sketching, and modelling figures out of clay into very fair pieces of sculpture.

There is also a girls' school connected with the Rothschild's fund, and this contains more than one hundred girls. The establishments are known as those of the Israelitish Alliance, and they are supported by Hebrew churches over the world, as well as by the Rothschilds. Among the curious features of this Alliance are a number of agricultural colonies in different parts of Palestine. There is an agricultural school near Jaffa which has more than seven hundred pupils, and there are eight of these agricultural colonies. One of their farms near Jaffa has 28,000 acres. It is situated on the Plains of Sharon, where the Philistines lived, and it has tens of thousands of vines and olive trees. The Turks are very much averse to selling land to the Hebrews, but the latter show themselves to be as good farmers as they are business men, and the terraced condition of the hills about Jerusalem shows that the Holy Land was far better cultivated under them than it has been under their conquerors. A large amount of land outside of the city of Jerusalem is now either in the hands of the Israelites or of their charitable institutions. Mr. Behar, the head of the Rothschild schools, tells me they have just bought the Jerusalem Hotel, and will add it to their school. Sir Moses de Montefiore, who managed the fund left by a rich New Orleans Israelite, built many good houses for them on the road between Bethlehem and Jerusalem, and there are a number of Hebrew hospitals.

Among the people who confidently believe that the Hebrews will soon again own Palestine, is a colony of fifteen persons, who live in a fine house, built on the very walls of Jerusalem, and who are known as "the Americans." These people are not Hebrews at all. They are Christians who have come here from different parts of the United States, and more especially from Chicago, to await the fulfillment of the prophecy that God will regenerate the world, beginning at Jerusalem. They believe this day is close at hand, and they say it has begun in the coming back to Palestine. They see its fulfillment in the improvements that are going on in Jerusalem, and cite the new roads that have been built over the country as one of the evidences of it. They are evidently people of means, as well as refinement and culture. When I visited them the other day, I talked with several of them, and found them intelligent and well educated. I asked one as to their belief, and was answered that they took the Bible as their guide, and that they had come to Jerusalem to endeavor to follow its precepts while living upon its walls. They have no particular creed, and one of them said, when asked as to this, that there is too much preaching and too little good living. They do no missionary work, and say that they have not yet felt called upon to preach. They spend much of their time in Bible study and singing, and are much respected by the foreigners who reside in Jerusalem.

There is no doubt, however, that Jerusalem is improving. The most of its streets are now well paved, and the sanitary condition of the city has been greatly improved. The Jerusalem, outside of the walls, is now almost as large as the city within, and I am told that land has risen to such an extent that the Holy City may be said to have a real-estate boom. In the Mediterranean Hotel, where I am stopping, there is a card advertising a fine farm for sale between Bethlehem and Jerusalem, and I learn that along the Jaffa road, just outside of the gate, property has gone up within a year or so several hundred per cent. One piece which belongs to a charitable institution was bought a short time ago for $500. It is now worth $80,000 and can not be bought for that amount. A telegraph line now runs from here to the sea-coast, and a railroad company has been organized to build a line from Jaffa to Jerusalem.

I drove out to Bethlehem, recently, and I found telegraph poles planted on the plains where King David fought the Philistines, and running up the hills where the shepherds watched their flocks when they saw the wonderful star. On the same ground to-day the turbaned Bethlehem shepherds of the nineteenth century are minding their sheep; and as I looked at their rough forms, clad in sheep-skin coats, I wondered whether the bright star of the electric light might not some time appear in their own little town and on the tower of David which looks down upon them from the Jerusalem of to-day. Bethlehem has many new houses. There is a good road now to Hebron and the day will probably soon be when you can travel over the Holy Land in a carriage. Jerusalem, for the first time in its history, has a police force, and its order is now as good as that of New York. It has fairly good hotels and the town is awakened every morning by the bugle call of the modern Turkish band. The American flag floats from the roof of the Consular building on the top of Mount Zion and you find on its streets travelers from all parts of the world.

WONDERFUL NAME, WONDERFUL PERSON, WONDERFUL ISSUES!

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

Beloved Fellow-Pilgrim to the Celestial City:—

"Now we are sure;" 'by this we believe." John 16: 30. So said, and so honestly thought, the disciples of Jesus. But they were ignorant of Him and themselves, and Jesus plainly told them so. I am not at all suprised at your enthusiasm, in the life of faith and the hope of glory. Who can help being "beside himself," when "visions and revelations of the Lord" flash into the soul, "out of the excellent glory." 2 Cor. 5: 13, 12: 1; 2 Pet. 1: 17, 18. God actually became Man, and dwelt among us, and we beheld His Glory (did we?) full of Grace and Truth. John 1: 14.

Henceforth forever all former voices of God "at sundry times and in divers manners," are gathered and uttered in this God-summing injunction—"BEHOLD THE MAN." What can not God do? All His words and acts are medial. John 1: 1, 2, 3 The Logos is ever the expression of the Eternal Godhead. And now—wonder of wonders—that very co eternal, co-equal Deity, "who is the form of God, and thinks it not robbery to be equal with God," is all embodied in our nature! Philpp. 2: 6. He lacks nothing that constitutes Humanity, and nothing that constitutes the Personality of the Eternal Jehovah. When such a unique Person dies for sin, then sin is put away, indeed. When such a Person rises from the dead, justification is complete, indeed.

The faith that takes hold of Him is very truth, without reserve, or caution, or misgivings, has all the security for Eternal Life that it is possible for Almighty Power and Infinite Wisdom and Love to give. Though we miss our Ideal a thousand times, both the Ideal and the aspiration remain. Our education is never complete. We may graduate at many stages, the spiral of our ascent winds into "all the fulness of God," and will be as endless as God is exhaustless.

Verily, "the world is crucified unto us, and we unto the world," if "we are Christ's, as Christ is God's." 1 Cor. 3: 23. "Let the dead bury their dead." Our pleasures and treasures are at the right hand of God, in the risen, glorified One. Our joy is His joy, and it remains. "no man taketh it from us." It is our rapture and glory to go in His great, dear, Wonderful Name in quest of the very lowest in the cesspool of iniquity. We must love and adore and serve Him who could sink so low as to pity and rescue even such as we, such as I, "the chief of sinners."

With his eyes we see a brother or sister in the vilest of mankind, whom the Crucified has bought with His blood, and taught us to love. Harlots, publicans, sinners, drunkards, gamblers, blasphemers, the veriest dregs of sin-saturated humanity—among such the Christ-flaming soul likes to move, and in a quiet, gentle, loving, God-quickened, God-directing way, tell them of the wondrous, matchless, yearning love of Jesus for them.

It is not often I get from home; my personal sphere is very contracted. But once in a while I am permitted to get into some alms-house or prison, or slum of corruption, or hovel of poverty and ignorance and sin, and then I feel as if I had indeed a mission from the King of Glory. I would sooner sit on a bundle of straw in some cellar or garret of ill-fame, and have some poor, despairing, haggard prostitute kiss my hand with gratitude for the hope-inspiring message of the Cross, than be petted and admired by the great ones of the earth.

Yes, dear sister, my heart is with Bro Quinlan and his glorious work, and I pray that God will give him the full meaning and measure of Genesis 49: 21; Ps 27: 1; Eph. 3: 16 and 6: 10; Col. 1: 11; Heb. 13: 6; 2 Cor. 12: 9, 10. Plant yourself square, my dear brother Quinlan, on the vantage ground of the resurrection, and claim the "all-power" of Emmanuel as your available resource in "every time of need." Let those who in very deed "know Jesus, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings," 'lift up holy hands" for him, and "show their faith" by verifying Heb. 13: 16. True, Christ-inspired prayer and genuine sympathy; forget not that our Redeemer not only claims us, but all we have,—our purses as well as our hearts.

The tithes and mites of God's saints mean not only dollars and cents for God's treasury, but saved souls for God's Heaven. I would rather cast my last penny at the foot of the Cross, to gain the approbation of Jesus, and help place one radiant gem in His Crown, than die a millionaire, or be as mighty and imperious as Alexander, or independent and envied as Rothschild. "I know, and am persuaded;" and this counterbalances all that world and devil can give or inflict. 2 Tim. 1: 12; 2 Cor. 11: 23-27; Acts 20: 23, 24. To sacrifice and suffer with Jesus is glory enough for this life. In the mirror of 2 Cor. 3: 18 we behold and anticipate John 17: 24 and 2 Cor. 4: 17. That is the goal and the spur of the saints.

From this wonderful Jesus we may reasonably expect wonderful things. It is amazing, and the sport of the world and the jubilee of devils, that so many Christians are afraid we might ask too much of our Omnipotent Jehovah-Savior. Not a few are trying to show that in this Nineteenth Century we have a non-miraculous Christianity, seeming apprehensive that if the supernatural be admitted as a constant factor in the world's history, nature will get out of joint, and death will be annihilated, and the church lose one of her chief evidences of Divine support. How did Christ get into the history of this sin-smitten, devil-dominated world? Was He the product of natural forces, the normal outcome of a world of which Satan is Prince? Just as He came in, so He stays in. "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the World." How? On the plane of nature, or through the abiding Presence and Operation of the Holy Ghost? Every breath a Christian draws, as such, is a miracle. Every act of the Spirit of God in and through a member of the Body of Christ, is a miracle—that is, supernatural. Nature is no more competent to make or sustain a Christian, than to give us God in the flesh. Take away the fact of essential, perpetual miracle, and we ignore the Incarnation, and the present imminence of Jesus in His own Body through the power of the Holy Ghost. Every new birth of God is a miracle; and to contend that what nothing less than God can begin, nature can maintain and mature, is to be "so foolish" as to suppose, with the "bewitched Galatians," that what is "begun in the Spirit is made perfect by the flesh." Gal. 3: 1, 2, 3. The world is skeptical enough, and the church is surely unbelieving enough, without special efforts by Christians themselves to strengthen the hands of the enemy without and within the sacred enclosure.

Every effort that is put forth in the Name and in the Spirit of Jesus for the recovery of souls from the bondage of sin, is supernatural. "Not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." John 1: 13. Christ says to His church to-day no less than to His early disciples: "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that is written."

Because we make so little of Him, and so much of nature and ourselves, He can not do many mighty works among us. And then we set our shallow wits at work to prove that none are to be expected, prayed for, or claimed. "When the Son of Man cometh, shall He find faith on the earth?" Behold the key to the failure of Israel, and no less of the Israel of the new dispensation. Ps. 78: 41. "IN MY NAME." John 14: 13, 14 He is surety for the prayer of faith.

MISS DREXEL'S CASE AND A WORD OF WARNING TO THE CHURCH.

BY J. T. MEYERS.

Miss Kate Drexel, who is worth $6 000,000, took the white veil of the Sisters of Mercy at the convent in this city to-day. Hitherto since her arrival at the convent she has been a "postulant." The ceremony of to-day advances her to the rank of a "novice," though she assumes the habit of a Sister, and is admitted to the duties and regulations of the Order. At the expiration of two years she may become a full nun by the ceremony known as a "profession," on which occasion she takes her "final" vows and receives the "black veil."

Miss Drexel's "reception" did not differ from that of any other novice. In the morning she received holy Communion at the mass, in which part of the ceremony she wore a superb bridal robe of white silk. The reception followed the regular mass. The clergy occupied the chancel in sacred vestments Archbishop Ryan and Bishop O'Connor, of Omaha, were in the group. Right Rev. Bishop Phelan, of Pittsburg, conducted the services. The Archbishop recited a short prayer and blessed the candle to be carried by the postulant, which he placed in her hands. After a few short exercises the postulant was conducted to the altar by the Mother Superior, where she knelt. Then the usual questions were asked by the Archbishop, and the responses given by Miss Drexel.

The novice then arose and retired to exchange her rich bridal robes for the plain habit of the Order. On returning she kissed the Archbishop's hand, received the cincture, or cord, which she handed to the Mother Superior, who girdled her with it. She again knelt and received the white veil, which was fastened and blessed, and she was fully habited for the Order. Closing the ceremony came her formal renunciation of the world and her vows to the church, the choir chanting the "Veni Creator" and the Archbishop bestowing his benediction.

The ceremony was strictly private, none but the friends of Miss Drexel's family and few clergymen being admitted. The party from Philadelphia included G. W. Childs and wife, A. J. Drexel, the banker; Edward Morrell and wife, the brother in-law and sister of Miss Drexel: Miss Louise Drexel, another sister; Rev. Fathers Horstman and McGoldrick, and eleven ladies who are related in various ways to the novice. At the conclusion of the religious exercise a banquet was served to the guests at the Convent of Mercy.

Miss Drexel may be said to inherit her pious inclinations as she did her vast wealth. Almost from the date of her birth she has been surrounded by religious influences.

Kate and her elder sister, Elizabeth, are daughters of the late F. A. Drexel by his first wife, who was a Miss Longstreth, and who died two years after Kate's birth. Mr. Drexel, a man of strict religious habits, subsequently married Miss Bouvier, of New York. Miss Louisa Drexel, now Mrs. Edward De V. Morrell, is the offspring of the second marriage.

The combined income of the sisters is over $1,500,000 per annum. A million and a half was given by their late father direct to the church, and in default of issue the immense estate is to be divided ultimately in church charities.

The life of the sisters was always of the most simple character. Their town house is magnificently and tastefully furnished, the table service being superb. Their country seat at Torresdale is even more pretentious.

REMARKS.

I HAVE clipped the above from the Philadelphia Daily Record of Nov. 7th, 1889, and, by permission of the editor of the GOSPEL MESSENGER, will make some remarks on the same as a little matter of history.

With the Miss Drexel, referred to above, and her sister, Louisa, I was intimately acquainted, having been in their company hundreds of times.

They are the daughters of F. A Drexel, now deceased, who was supposed to be the richest man in Philadelphia. The maiden name of the mother of these two girls was Longstreth, who, at the time of her marriage to Mr. Drexel, and for some time thereafter, was a member of our church in Germantown. The grandmother, sister Longstreth, lived in a fine residence in Germantown, and here the writer, for several years, had his home, while preaching for the Germantown church. Every Saturday, with hardly an exception, the two Drexel's, Miss Kate and Louisa, made the grandmother a visit and spent the whole day in pleasant conversation and entertainment of some kind. When talking to me they would invariably call me by the name of "Brother Meyers," just as though they were members of our church, instead of members of the Catholic faith.

The grandmother of the two Drexel daughters, —sister Longstreth, — was a consistent and devoted member of our church. She died about thirteen years ago, and, by special request of the relatives, I preached her funeral, — all the Drexel family being present and manifesting the most profound sorrow and grief over the departed one.

Sister Longstreth, the grandmother of the Drexel daughters, was quite wealthy, and had our church been better organized to handle money, I have no doubt she would have left a considerable amount of her wealth to the church for various uses. Had she even lived a while longer, I think she would have done so at any rate, as about a year or so before she died we talked quite freely on the subject. She "had it in her heart," in the language of David, to make some suitable disposition of her wealth. Death, however, came suddenly for her and removed her from her earthly palace to the home beyond, her wealth all going to the already rich Drexel daughters,—only to enrich the Catholic church and make converts to her faith

It will be noticed, by reading the above, that it is the purpose of the two Drexel daughters, in case of no issue, to give all their vast wealth, of over twelve million dollars to the Catholic church, no small amount coming, so to speak, right from our own church. Reason and religion both would dictate, that, had the preaching in our church been of the character that it ought to have been, much of the wealth of sister Longstreth,—if not all of it,—would have come to our church, instead of having gone into the Catholic church to help make Catholics If I have been sorry once, I have been sorry a thousand times that I did not try harder to get the dear sister to see and feel the responsibility of making the right kind of a disposition of her wealth.

I have long been of the opinion, and I mention now the fact in this connection, that the preaching in our church in the past has not been what it ought to have been in this respect. We have plenty of members in the church, even now, who are ordinarily rich, but how little are they made to feel the pungency of God's Word as to wealth-getting and wealth-leaving? It is, indeed, of late only that our brethren are waking up to the importance of leaving something to the church in some form or other after their death. It ought to have been so years and years ago. To leave this world, when we can afford it, without leaving something for the church in some shape or other, looks too much as though we only cared for the church, while living, and that it might get along the best way it can after we are dead and gone.

Brethren, I honestly confess it, I believe it is the duty of every member, who has but an ordinary share of this world's goods, to give some of it to the church for various uses, by bequest or will. It seems to me such is the only tangible way of showing our love for the church and the welfare of souls after we are dead and gone.

The only possible excuse I can see for not leaving anything for church purposes of some kind or other after death, is extreme poverty, or having given liberally, or as the Lord had prospered, in life. Even in such a case I think the departed one ought to have left something, for reasons I will not attempt to discuss.

The Roman Catholic church is, without a doubt, a very corrupt church in many respects, but she must even be respected and extolled for her unexampled influence and power in holding her youth, the children of Catholic parents, so attached and devoted to her religion. Not only are her members taught to give for church purposes while living, and to give freely, but it is even the exception if nothing is left in some shape or other at death. Need we wonder, therefore, at the power and mighty machinery of the Catholic church? Millions upon millions go into her coffers every year for charities of various kinds, — for schools, seminaries, the enriching of the Pope, the maintenance of the priesthood, cardinals, monks, nuns, building of cathedrals and churches, and a host of other things too numerous to mention.

Brethren, a mighty responsibility rests upon us as a church. We believe and preach that the Catholic church is the enemy of pure and apostolic religion, that the laity are kept in ignorance and priest-ridden, but how much are we doing towards enlightening and saving the world,—the Catholic church all the while, be it remembered, going forward as a mighty army to convert the world to her faith?

My brethren, let us bestir ourselves and wake up to duty, lest it be said of us as a church in the last and great day, "Ye knew your Master's duty, but ye did it not." Our farms, our merchandise, our bonds and mortgages, unless consecrated to the Lord with a view to do good and promote the kingdom of God's dear Son on the earth, will only bring upon us the burning wrath and displeasure of Almighty God.

Let us, my brethren, learn to love the church more, and give more for her various uses, and we will have the satisfaction of knowing that the good work will go on after we are dead and gone, that "though dead" we are speaking through our little mite, it may be, we left to the church for uses proposed or designated by us, before parting with the church below for the church above.

TO MOTHERS.

BY ETTA ROWLAND HARRISON.

Do you sometimes tire of life? Does life, with its many cares, seem a burden? If this be your situation, I want to write a few lines for your encouragement. Mothers must be encouraged that they may be as God has designed they should.

When our Master was here, his life was spent in doing good to and for others. If we would be like him, we also must do some good for mankind. If our condition be such, in consequence of household cares, that we can not go out into the world and relieve the suffering, comfort the broken-hearted, or instruct others more fully in the way they should go, we can look after the precious "olive branches" of our own households. God has intrusted them to our care. The mother who can mold the mind of future generations in the way God would have them, has done a grand life-work. If she can "train up a child in the way he should go," and "in patience possess her soul," she is entitled to the rank of a hero.

No doubt woman's work becomes disheartening when necessity keeps her engaged in baking, cooking, sweeping and sewing; and, amid all this, sees the little minds roving about in search of employment; and knows if they are not filled with good thoughts, bad ones will be imbibed. Then, soon, ah! too soon! her precious darlings will be off in paths of sin!

How to arrange that the mental as well as the physical child is well taken care of, is a perplexing question to many mothers. I fear there are too many mothers who are not thoughtful enough of their children's mental development. Proper clothing and food is not the sum total of a mother's duty. How much better for the child, when it attains manhood or womanhood, if the physical has been deprived of luxuries that the mental might be better developed! How many mothers, if they would but stop and think, might leave some part of their house work undone and devote that time to training their child's mind!

Mothers, if we can so plan our work—or so work with our minds and hands that we can train a child that will rise up and call us blessed, ought we not to thank God for giving us such possibilities? I have often looked at parents who make no profession of religion and wondered how they can endure the inward chastening, which they must surely have, of bringing up children without making any effort, either by word or example, to teach them the way of holiness. Those who do the best they can, in teaching by precept and example, succeed so poorly that we ought to shudder at the thought that our now innocent children may some day be wretched outcasts, and we be thereby bowed down in grief under the burden of sorrow and disgrace. This may seem borrowing harsh and oppressive trouble, but if "to be forewarned is to be forearmed," we will "lock the barn before the horse is stolen."

Then, on the other hand, does it not make your heart leap with gratitude to contemplate your son, a noble, self-sacrificing man, the "express image" of God, going about doing good in the world, a blessing to humanity, an honor to God? If such a man is the result of her life-work, oh, what better could be said of a woman than that she is that man's mother?

Mothers of old brought their children to Christ for blessings, and, surely, those of to-day ought not to expect blessings without bringing them to Christ. We should ask God to bless our children and give us wisdom to guide their thoughts and actions, for we know "as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

Although it may cost us many a heart-ache, many a disappointment, many a sacrifice,—when our children are men and women, honored because of their manliness and womanliness, by all who know them, will we not be amply repaid for all our endeavors?

"Time is winging us away to our eternal home," and how very, very soon our life-work will be done! How good if it may be said that the world is better because we lived!

THE CHRISTIAN GRACES.—2 Pet. 1:5-10.

A Synopsis of a Sermon Delivered by Micheal Flory, Nov. 10, 1889, in the Pleasant Hill Church.

THE words of our text are practical in their application to every member of our great Brotherhood. This simple problem in addition can be solved by all who become acquainted with the component factors which are involved in its solution.

Beginning at the base of the column, we inquire, What is faith? It is the very substratum upon which may be built a Christian character. This factor embraces the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not comprehended by the unenlightened in the truths of the Gospel.

Add virtue to faith and we have the prime factors of faith,—hope and love, — already anticipated, for hope is an element which produces the courage to cope successfully with the obstacles or difficulties encountered in our Christian journey.

Persevering efforts in proper channels will invariably bring successful results, as all labor, wisely put forth, reaps a suitable reward. The message of God is addressed to the intelligence of man, — not to his passions or sympathy, — and if he lacks instruction, he is incompetent to add the next towering factor in the make-up of that mighty column, the apex of which culminates in the very constituent attribute of the Father of our spirits, whose essence is love. Knowledge, rightly applied, is a power for good, and of its full value eternity alone can tell.

Temperance is included in the enumeration of these graces. This virtue implies systematic moderation in the indulgence of our passions and appetites. Those require to be sustained and nourished to a legitimate extent, so as to best subserve the interests of our human nature. Two prominent evils result from intemperance. The first is the liquor traffic, so destructive to humanity; the second the worldly fashions in dress, ever changing, yet never satisfying those who are enslaved by the adversary.

Patience comes in its proper order, and is that quality or disposition of the mind which will permit us to wait quietly for the culmination of our efforts. In a well-disciplined family this trait will shine to the mutual benefit of parents and children, enabling each member to retain and sustain his proper relation. This rule applies with greater force to the church, and, in fact, to every organization.

The term "godliness" includes in its signification piety and all the emotions arising from proper religious instructions,—a resemblance to the attributes of God who created man in his image.

The principles of the Gospel, applied to practical life, constitute godliness. The Word of God contains the plan of salvation. Christ is called the Word that became flesh, and through his spirit he abides with us to the end of our earthly lives. The one who is subject to the Word will continue to walk with God, and in harmony with his counsels, and afterwards be received home to glory.

Brotherly kindness constitutes a lovely principle to govern all our dealings with one another. Regarding each other as heirs of the one common inheritance of the saints, and assuming or attaining to the high calling of God in Christ, we can realize that he is our elder brother, and that we are sons and daughters of God.

The crowning grace is charity, — or love, as the New Translation has it. This will help us carry out in our life all the other graces, and will make us successful in all our undertakings. It will aid us to make our calling and election sure, for it gives us that protection we so much need. This is the reason that Job's latter days terminated so prosperously. Brotherly kindness will make us to be just what God wishes us to become. We will not be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, but act as the children of God.—James Wirt.

HUMAN FLOWERS.

BY GERTRUDE A. FLORY.

IN a conversation about plants a sister was asked: "Have you any house-plants?" She replied, "I have some little flowers, but they are not the kind you set on the window. They walk about the house and play." The flowers referred to were children; and we have been thinking ever since, how happy she must be as the mother of human blossoms, — plucked from eternal gardens, and transplanted on earth by divine hands, to brighten her home. Thrice blessed art thou, O happy mother! Fairer than the lilies of the field, or the rarest house-plants that ever adorned a window casement, are your little human flowers. Tend them carefully. Soon the Gardener will call for them. He has only lent them to you that you might foretaste the bliss and purity of the beautiful Eden from whence they came, and should he find them stained with the dust and blight of earth when he comes to carry them back to those blissful bowers, he should be so grieved that they had not been kept pure and fair. Let the leaves wither and fall, if they will; but nourish the bloom, that it may be ever fresh and unsullied, fit to adorn immortal courts. A great, yet noble, happy work is yours, — to be gardener of immortal flowers! See that the tender buds properly unfold, and the bloom will never fade, but have a care lest, by improper culture, they do not blossom into perfect flowers, and wither and perish in the frosts of sin. Let the atmosphere of your home be holiness and love. They can not thrive beneath a less sunny sky. They are too fragile to endure the chilly winds of impurity and discord, without being affected by those withering elements. Nourish them with care, that the Master Gardener may find them as fair as when he transplanted them into your home to bloom for you!

La Porte, Ind.

THE armor of righteousness can not keep us from being shot at, but it can keep us from being wounded. Job's friends, sincere but mistaken, endeavored to convict him of secret wickedness, but in due time God appeared for his vindication. Men may injure our reputation for a season, but they can not injure our character. What we are depends only upon ourselves and God; what is said about us depends upon the disposition of others. Over the latter we have no control: over the former our control, under God, is absolute. It is ours to be right and to do right; it is God's to take care of the results. Sensitiveness is a symptom both of pride and unbelief. He who is conscious of integrity, and confident of divine protection, has nothing to fear. "Commit thy way unto the Lord: trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass. And he shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noonday." Ps. 37: 5, 6.—Sel.

WE take God's air and breathe it, we take his sunlight and use it, we take the food he provides and eat it; why not take the salvation he has prepared, and trustingly, confidingly, believingly rely upon Christ and his finished work, and so let the soul live in God's way, just as we do the body. Begin now to breathe the breath of eternal life by mentally and heartily receiving Jesus as your Prince and Savior, and so get your soul into the light of the Gospel and nourish it upon the truth of Christ's own words of life and salvation.—Sel.

WHEN we reach heaven and know even as also we are known, one of the things for which we shall be most grateful to God will be that he did not grant some of the petitions we offered in this life. Can we not trust him now and begin our thanks, knowing that he denies in infinite wisdom?

As a penny held close to the eye will shut out the glorious light of the sun, so the habit of petty gossip, mean and poor as it is, will quite obscure all the light which intelligent thought and warm sympathy would shed upon humanity.—Sel.

IF it be true for me, that 'the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin," then by the grace of God, I will henceforth live as one should live who has been washed in the blood of the Lord Jesus Christ.—Sel.

GLEANINGS.

BY ENOCH ERY.

THERE is a dark and a bright side to any enterprise, and church work is no exception. Our encouragements and discouragements depend much on what side we look. Were we to travel over a good part of our great Brotherhood, and view the grave and alarming departures of many of the local churches from the sacred order of worship as established by the Gospel and zealously carried out by the fathers and mothers in Israel, years ago, in our wearing apparel, and especially in the prayer covering for our sisters, we would feel very much discouraged, and would be ready to say of the church, "Her glory is departed," but when our dear sisters come to the front, with their pen dipped in the blood of Christ, in one hand and the two-edged sword of the Spirit in the other, and wielding both so skilfully as to make some cry out for an explanation (See GOSPEL MESSENGER, No. 43, page 674 by sister Flory: read again, sisters), and then refer to the soul-stirring article in No. 50 on page 470, it is not a sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. Many of you, no doubt, have been taught differently, and encouraged in those departures.

Then turn to No. 34, page 530. Sister Lizzie Miller's article has the true ring. If others have written, I do not remember. I wish to give encouragement to those sisters in their meek defense of their duty in the church. Go on, sisters, you greatly encourage and help the poor, weak shepherds. Our arms need holding up.

Dear brethren, I beseech you by the mercies of God, especially officers whose duty it is, often, to admonish others, and who are required to be examples to the flock; if you love and use the Gospel read and then meditate on sister Lizzie Miller's article in GOSPEL MESSENGER, No. 43, page 677, and I know it will do you good, if you have the spirit of Christ. I hope sister Lizzie will wonder more, for there are many things to be wondered at.

MISSIONARY WORK.

When I read the encouraging account of the Mount Morris Brethren in GOSPEL MESSENGER current volume page 697, and then, on the opposite page, read of three missionary brethren all from what might be considered missionary fields, going within a short distance of such a mighty army, to help hold the fort, and then on the same page read that in Northern Michigan there are many Counties without a church of any denomination, and thousands of people who were never inside of a church, and never heard the Gospel preached, I wonder, oh, I wondered, can we call that missionary work? Michigan is no exception to a number of other States as a missionary field.

How will our work weigh in the Gospel scale on the day of judgment? May we not be found wanting, especially, because we, as a body, profess to have the Truth in its original purity, which the masses acknowledge to be true? "I am not mad," most noble brethren, "but speak forth the words of truth and soberness," without the least reflection upon any one. I verily thought myself, when I lived in Northern Illinois that the demand for preaching in the West and South was greatly magnified, hence rested at ease so far as trying to spare one out of seven and sending him out, was concerned; but since I live in Kansas I see the half has not been told me.

Quite recently we have had another lesson by experience on that point.

By the request of Bro. Zaccheus Henricks, of Conductor, Grant County (an elder), and a few other members, living respectively in three Counties, and by the authority of the District Meeting through its Mission Board, the second day of November was set to organize, but, in consequence of the continued rain and snow-fall, and the distance the members had to come, the work so much desired proved a failure. The idea of organizing in their present condition, with so few members and so scattered, seemed, at best, of doubtful propriety, as they could not carry on church work to any profit. Hence we deferred, awaiting further development. They have a beautiful country, and we hope others will soon move in. Members in emigrating should locate nearer each other for their spiritual profit. This feature should be considered as well as temporal. Bro. Henricks needs help very much in the ministry. Many pressing calls must go unheeded, as there are no ministers nearer than sixty miles, and they, too, have more than they can do. Address Bro. Henricks as above for further information. I pen this for the benefit of those who may be contemplating a cheap western home. They have had plenty of rain this fall; hence they are hopeful for a better crop next year.

Bro. S. S. Mohler on page 694, of GOSPEL MESSENGER, current volume, calls the attention, directly of the committee on publications, and indirectly that of the Brotherhood, to an important item in which I acquiesce if I clearly comprehend. Especially do I approve the idea of being prepared at next Annual Meeting to meet the issue; and of the committee meeting a few days prior, for a re-examination of the work. It occurs to my mind that, in the history of our great Brotherhood, we, perhaps, never had questions of so great importance pending at one time. The divorce question, and that of laying on of hands in the election of church officers, in connection with the above, and the best manner of securing missionary brethren, are all questions with great and important issues, and must be handled with care and cool, deliberate minds; and we prayerfully hope that the different District Meetings will use every effort to prevent any other matter, save the missionary cause, from coming to the General Conference in 1890.

We are also pleased with brethren being sent to the Pacific coasts to do church work; but we think their stay is too short to justify the outlay. We confide, however, in the good judgment of the Board, and feel assured they are doing the best they can. I know of no two brethren who can spare the time, and are as well situated to leave home, as brethren D. E. Price and Joseph Lahman, who are there now. They should stay two or three years, if possible. It costs too much money to send so often. Too often, by the time our brethren get things in a shape to do some good, they leave.

I had five months' experience in that field, at my own expense (save that which the good-hearted members donated while I was with them), hence know whereof I speak; and others say, Amen.

We kindly invite our missionary brethren who were sent West, with all others of our pleasure and health-seeking friends, to give us a call on their return, if not too inconvenient and expensive. By giving previous notice, you will be met at Hutchinson, Kans., on the Santa Fe Route. Not knowing your address, we notify you through the GOSPEL MESSENGER.

Let there be a stir all over our dear Brotherhood to preach the Gospel in new fields, and circulate the GOSPEL MESSENGER, and tracts and books of the Brethren's writings. All can work; the time is short, and there is much to do.

Hutchinson, Kans.

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

LITERATURE, consisting of published sermons, has grown quite common. Upon this we offer no criticisms, when they prove to be messages of Gospel Truth.

I presume no sermons have a wider circulation than those of Dr. Talmage. He preached his first sermon in the Academy of Music, Oct. 20, after the destruction of the Brooklyn Tabernacle by fire. His subject was, "Baptism of Fire." In alluding to the contemplated new house, he says, "We will want to build larger and better. We want it a national church, in which people of all nations and all creeds can find a home. I say now to all the Baptists, that we shall have in it a baptistery. I say to all Episcopalians, we shall have in our service, as heretofore at our Communion table, portions of the liturgy. I say to Catholics, we shall have a cross over the pulpit; and, probably, over the tower. I say to the Methodists, we mean to sing there like the voice of many thunderings. I say to all denominations, we mean to preach a religion as wide as heaven, and as good as God."

To our opinion all the above will then lack,—there will be an altar "TO THE UNKNOWN GOD." The author will then have a system of religion, parallel in type with the broad system that Paul found at Athens.

A copy of the Evangelist recently fell under my notice. In it Eld. Mason gives a summary of the growth of the Progressive cause in the Miami Valley of Ohio. He reports ten organizations (one disbanded) with an aggregate membership of 295. Divide the above by ten, and you will have the average membership.

We refer to the above kindly, with a view to show to our readers that lax church government and loose discipline are no advantage in gaining members, even in connection with a system that includes the humble ordinances of feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, etc. Dismiss these and allow unlimited fashion, with open Communion, and, as far as numbers are concerned, your efforts will be a success. Moody, Jones and Small are names as evidences. I add that, in the above Valley, our Brethren, with their strict discipline, have gathered several times that number in the same time. I pray that we may not "remove the ancient landmarks which our fathers have set."

CHURCH LOTTERIES.

[I CLIP from our County paper (the Tribune) the following article, written by Hattie, my daughter. A number of the MESSENGER readers have requested its publication. It has made quite a stir in this vicinity, insomuch that it has prevented a lottery scheme from being carried out in a new church, just recently built, near here, when the society was on the eve of raffling off a lot of carpet and other things. The lady, as yet, has made no reply.—D. E. Brubaker.]

"One of your esteemed lady correspondents of Peoria City, in the last issue of the Tribune, in commenting on the above topic, makes the following statements: 'There are in our neighborhood some conscientious scruples as to the ways and means of obtaining money to build up God's house.'

"It is gratifying to learn that there are some people holding conscientious scruples, as to the ways and means of obtaining money for religious purposes. No doubt such scruples have been formed and are held honestly, after carefully reading the Bible. See Deut. 23: 18 and John 2: 14, 15, 16. That God has an eye on the ways and means of his people in raising money for his glory, and as to what uses his house is converted into, is pretty clearly indicated in the above texts. Your correspondent continues: 'We hold that when every dollar is obtained, either by entertainment suppers, or a chance for a quilt by ticket, and every one knows that his money enters the treasury of God's house, and is used for divine purposes, there is no lottery about it.'

"It must necessarily weaken a cause that seeks to pervert plain English to build up an argument. LOTTERY.—'A distribution of prizes by lot or chance.'—Webster.

"I know of no authority on language that makes any exception to this plain definition when applied to church lotteries. When I buy a ticket in a church raffle and by chance draw a quilt, or any other prize, it is most emphatically a lottery, pure and simple; even if every dollar goes into the treasury of God's house. In further justification of the lottery, your correspondent appeals to the Scriptures thus: 'The disciples parted Christ's raiment among them and for his vesture they did cast lots. Now every one of them knew that only one of them could have the vesture, and only one of them did get it. Was that a lottery? No.' This argument, drawn from the Bible, settles it once for all—that is, for one who would neither notice the argument nor examine the Bible. I must ask your correspondent, 'How readest thou?' The point aimed at seems to be that as the disciples of Christ, in their time were in the lottery business, therefore it must not be wrong now. I almost regret that it becomes my duty to spoil what might to some, appear such a beautiful argument. It lacks one very essential element to make it convincing. It is not the truth. That Christ's vesture was raffled off in a lottery scheme at his crucifixion is true. But that Christ's disciples took any part in the unholy act, I deny. It was a class of men in exact keeping with the act—hard-hearted, vicious Roman soldiers, making no pretensions to being Christ's disciples (see John 19: 23, 24). 'O, consistency, thou art a jewel.' So this breaks down the argument entirely and makes the assertion that 'We thus defend the cause (of church lotteries) by 'Thus saith the Lord,' look sick. I should just here like to quote the opinion of an eminent judge of our State on the subject of lotteries in general and church lotteries in particular, but it would extend this review beyond the limits of your columns, and, for the same reasons, I forbear quoting the warning notes of a number of the most eminent divines in America, as to how in their opinion the lottery schemes and raffles, bazaars, grab-bags, etc, are gradually but surely driving true, vital, Christian religion out of the churches.'

"Yours against lotteries,

"HATTIE."

OUR Sunday-school which was organized April 7, was quite interesting. Bro. Aaron Swihart was our Superintendent, and brethren Edmund Beckner and Henry Haines, Assistants. The average attendance of the school for the season was seventy-one.

We used no Quarterlies nor lesson leaves, but took our lessons from the New Testament direct Nearly all classes of people were represented in our school, and the best attention and order were maintained.

Our second quarterly council was held June 22. A considerable amount of business came before the meeting, but all was adjusted with the best of feeling and, we believe, to the satisfaction of all the members present.

Our third quarterly council was held Sept. 21, and though it was a meeting full of business, all passed off pleasantly. At this meeting it was concluded to have a love-feast Oct. 12. This occasion was indeed a feast to the soul. The weather was all that could be asked for, and the members came flocking in from all directions. The members from the neighboring churches were well represented, especially the ministering brethren, which were represented from sixteen churches. Among the number of ministers present were elders John Sellers, John Metzler, Daniel Wysong, and others. Eld. John Metzler officiated.

The exhortations on examination and the other ordinances were very forcibly laid before the members. Good attention was given and the best of order prevailed.

Oct. 23 Bro. Daniel Snell came to us and held a series of meetings at one of our outposts, Tippecanoe,—or Ilion, as it is more properly called. Brother Daniel preached twelve sermons for us with great power. One dear sister accepted Christ and was led down into the liquid stream and buried with Christ in baptism. May she ever be found faithful, is our prayer. So far, during this year, we have had seven accessions to the church by baptism.

Bro. J. H. Miller, in MESSENGER No. 36, page 573, says of our church, "Her troubles seem to be over." We would say, "Our troubles have been over for the past six years, if Bro. John had reference to the Progressive troubles that once existed." J. S. KRYDER.

From Ashland, Oregon.

OUR series of meetings closed last night. Bro. David Brower bade us farewell this morning, to go to other fields of labor. We hope the Lord will be with him wherever he goes. There are many of such brethren needed in this part of God's moral vineyard, and we hope God will send them.

One brother was received by letter, and since then his wife has made application for baptism. We hope others will follow soon.

Bro. Brower visited sister VanHorn several times and had prayer with her and her companion, which did her much good. As stated in a previous communication, she has been afflicted with catarrh of the face for nearly a year, and her sufferings are very great. She desires the prayers of the Brotherhood. We had a little meeting with our afflicted sister this morning, before Bro. Brower left. SUSAN M. RHODES.

From Washington Creek, Douglas Co., Kans.

OUR love-feast, Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 was an enjoyable occasion. We had made arrangements to have a series of meetings in connection with our feast, and had Bro J. A. Root engaged to do the preaching, but, on the day of the feast, it commenced to rain, and continued all evening and all night, so that our attendance was but small, and only about eighty members communed. We had but very few spectators, and the very best of order prevailed. We had a strong ministerial force,—brethren M. M. Eshelman, G. E. Studebaker, C. Heckman, J. Sherfey, S. Harshman, James Hilky, T. Winey and S. B. Katherman, besides the home ministers. Brethren Eshelman, Studebaker and Root did most of the preaching.

We postponed having our series of meetings until sometime in the future, when we expect Bro. J. A. Root to be back again and preach for us.

We are trying to carry on our Sunday-school this winter and have had good success so far; hope it may continue. S. M. MILLER.

From Cartersville, Va.

OUR love-feast is in the past and an enjoyable one it was. Our number was small, but we have the promise that, where two or three are gathered together in the name of the Lord, he will be in their midst. Eleven members surrounded the Lord's table to partake of the feast, and there was a large assembly of spectators. Bro. G. M. Graybill, of Botetourt Co., Va., and Bro. John Neff, of Roanoke Co., Va., came on the evening of Nov. 8, and preached that night. They remained with us until the 13th. Our meetings were well attended, considering the inclemency of the weather. We had preaching every night, and two sermons on Sunday. Bro. Neff also addressed our Sunday-school. What he said, suited the old as well as the young. We have an interesting Sunday-school. Our attendance is mostly made up of members of other denominations. We have kind, sociable people with us, and they are very favorable toward us. They manifest that spirit by their good attendance, when we have preaching, but the great trouble is with them as it is with us,—we do not have enough.

Any one desiring to locate here, may rest assured that he will be among good, kind people, and that all will be done for him that is possible, to make him comfortable and happy, both spiritually and temporally. Any one that will preach the Gospel here, by his conduct as well as by words, could do much good.

May God bless our dear brethren who so faithfully discharged their duty while among us! Let us take courage and put to practice their brotherly admonition by building up our church and each other, in our most holy faith. Let us be faithful, so that, when we are done with time here, we may reign together in heaven! God be with you till we meet again! FLORIDA J. E. ETTER.

IN 1877 the writer attended Annual Meeting at New Enterprise, Bedford Co., Pa., now over twelve years ago. While attending the above-named meeting, I mislaid or lost a very valuable Greek New Testament. If I mistake not, my name was stamped upon the outside. The binding is morocco, and the book, besides containing the best texts of the Greek manuscript, also contained voluminous references and an abridged lexicon. Any one knowing of the book will confer quite a favor by sending it to the writer through the mail, and I will return stamps for the necessary postage.

I have often tried to replace the book, but have not as yet succeeded, and hence this late request. It is my impression I either left it with a Replogle family in New Enterprise, or with a Snowberger family near by, as I lodged with only two families during the meeting. If no one in the above-named vicinity, has any knowledge of a strange book of the kind described, I take it for granted I must have lost it on my way.

Hoping I may yet recover it by this method of bringing it before the public, I am your brother in Christ. J. T. MEYERS.

ONE was baptized in the Rock River church, Lee Co, Ill., recently.

ONE more was received into the fold at this place on last Lord's Day.

BRO. J. M GIBSON has again changed his address. It is now 854 North Seventh Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

BRO. JACOB WITMORE, of Centre View, is expected to begin meetings at Franklin Grove, Lee Co., Ill, on the 30th inst.

BRO. DAVID PLUM and family, of Maryland, Ill., expect to start for California on Thursday, Nov. 28, to remain several months.

BRO. JAS. M. NEFF, of Covington, Ohio, has been called to the ministry by the church at that place. May God bless our brother in the important work to which he has been called and make him a faithful minister of his Word.

UNDER date of Nov. 19 Bro. J. H. Moore writes: "We had our first heavy frost this morning and everybody is delighted. A good frost means good health in these parts, though we have generally good health all the while. We are in the midst of nursery work. I am now running nine men and will have fifteen inside of a few days. I am trying to push two months' work into one. It keeps me quite busy."

WE receive many letters bringing to us examples of devotion to the cause of Christ and of helping on the good work that are very encouraging to us. Bro L. H. Dickey, of Alvada, Ohio, sends the following: 'I was so well pleased with the example of one sister, whom I met while canvassing, that I must tell you. She is a widow, her husband having died last spring. They each were accustomed to pay quarterly to the church, for general expenses, a handsome sum, which she is still continuing both for herself and her deceased husband. Besides this she gives the tenth of all her income for church work, contributing often to the different lines of missionary work in the church. She is also caring for four small children and their mother who is an invalid and is also caring for her own aged mother, about ninety years of age. In addition to all this she gave me a note of $100 00 for the general mission work. The Lord bless her generous heart!"

DR. A. J. PEARSON says there are seven ways of giving and he enumerates them as follows:

1. The careless way. To give something to every cause that is presented, without inquiring into its merits.

2. The impulsive way. To give from impulse—as much and as often as love and pity and sensibility prompt.

3. The lazy way. To make a special effort to earn money for benevolent objects by fairs, festivals, etc.

4. The self-denying way. To save the cost of luxuries and apply them to purposes of religion and charity. This may lead to asceticism and self complacence.

5. The systematic way. To lay aside as an offering to God a definite portion of our gains—one tenth, one-fifth, one-third, or one-half. This is adapted to all, whether poor or rich, and gifts would be largely increased if it were generally practiced.

6. The equal way. To give to God and the needy just as much as we spend on ourselves, balancing our personal expenditures by our gifts.

7. The heroic way. To limit our own expenditures to a certain sum, and give away all the rest of our income.

If you would sow the Word of God successfully, you must sow yourself. If you would induce others to give to the Lord, you must give yourself. If a brother is appointed to solicit for a fund, he will only succeed as he gives himself to the work and gives not only his time but a portion of the means with which God has blessed him. Nothing helps so much in work of this kind as to give yourself. Then you can ask others to give.

BRO. LEMUEL HILLERY, who has been severely afflicted for some months, we are glad to know, is improving slowly. May he soon again be restored to health!

BRO. N. B. CHRISTNER, of Odell, Washington Co., Pa., says: "Nov. 7th we were made to rejoice once more when, at our regular meetings, two more precious souls,—sisters,—were made willing to follow Christ in all his appointed ways, and were added to the church by baptism. May they 'shine as lights in this crooked and perverse generation.'"

THE New York Tribune publishes the following dispatch from Captain Wissman, dated Oct. 13. We give it to our readers, as it contains news of the safety of Stanley and his company of explorers: "Four of Stanley's men and one of Emin's soldiers have arrived here. They left Stanley at Neukmma on August 10 and came by way of Noembo and Mwerieweri north to Mgogo in thirty-three days, including nine days on which they rested. Emin and Casati had 300 Soudanese soldiers and many other followers with them. They had in their possession a large quantity of ivory. Stanley had a force of 240 Zanzibaris and was accompanied by his six lieutenants—Nelson, Jephson, Stairs, Parke, Bonny and William. The expedition struck camp as soon as the messengers started. Therefore the party should reach Mpwapwa by November 20. Emin and Stanley repeatedly fought and repulsed the Mahdists, capturing the Mahdi's grand banner. A majority of Emin's soldiers refused to follow him southward, asserting that their way home did not lie in that direction. Emin left two Egyptian officers in charge of stations. The messengers have no knowledge of the Senoussi or of events in Khartoum and Abyssinia."

OUR ELDERS.

BRO. DAVID PEEBLER asks us to say something about the relation that should exist between the elder and the church. This question was pretty thoroughly discussed several years ago in the MESSENGER, from various stand-points, but we believe we have had nothing upon it for some time, and as we have now many new readers who did not have an opportunity to read what was then written, we will give the subject some attention again.

The word elder, as accepted by us, refers to the overseer, the bishop, or one called to take charge of a church or congregation. The Scripture illustrates the relation existing between the elder and the church by calling attention to the shepherd and his flock. Christ says, "I am the Good Shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for his sheep." The elder is the assistant or under-shepherd. This thought is set forth by Peter. When exhorting the elders to feed the flock of God, he says, "And when the chief shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

Paul clearly sets forth this view of the relation between the elder and the church in his farewell address to the elders of the churches of Asia. Having called them to him at Miletum, he encouraged and instructed them in their work and said: "Take heed, therefore, unto yourselves and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock." Acts 20: 28, 29. Again, in Hebrews 13: 17 we have the same relation set forth only that in the latter Scripture the exhortation is to the flock: "Obey them that have rule over you, and submit yourselves: for they watch for your souls, as they that must give an account, that they may do it with joy, and not with grief: for that is unprofitable for you. Peter also, most clearly and forcibly shows that the relation between the elder and the church is that of the shepherd to his flock in the following language, "The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed: Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint, but willingly; not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock."

We have been particular in giving the Scriptures bearing on this question, because in them the duties of the elder to the church and of the church to the elder are so clearly set forth that they scarcely need any comment. We may, however, look at the illustration used in these Scriptures, the shepherd and the flock. In Palestine the shepherd leads his flock. So Christ said, "My sheep know my voice and they follow me." The shepherd is a leader and not a driver. The sheep follow the shepherd willingly and are not driven by force. The shepherd tenderly cares for his flock, calling them by name and leading them to the green pastures and beside the still waters. He cares for the weak as well as the strong and the lambs of the flock have his most tender care and solicitude. Are they too weak to walk, he carries them in the folds of his shepherd's cloak, giving them all needed care until they are strong enough to climb over the rough hills to the pastures. Are any of the flock sick or wounded, they receive his immediate and careful attention. Have any wandered away, he leaves the flock safely folded and goes out in anxious search for the lost sheep, and if he find it, he carries it home to the fold, rejoicing, more over that one than over all the rest that went not astray. He is constantly on the lookout for the enemies of the flock, and the grievous wolves receive rough treatment at his hands. This was the shepherd of Palestine whom the Master and his apostles used to illustrate the relation of the elders to the church, and this is the shepherd that may be found in that country to-day.

How beautifully this illustration sets forth the true relation between the shepherds and the flocks of Christ. What a tender care and solicitude on the part of the elder for every member of the church! How anxiously he seeks for those who have gone astray! How tenderly he cares for the weak and helpless! How gently he leads all by the hand of love, and then, too, what a close union in love, in true doctrine, and in faithful work and prayer there should and will exist between the two, if all are governed by the spirit of God. The shepherd himself, continuing to be one of the sheep of the Good Shepherd, knowing the value and power of sound doctrine, taking heed to his own way, living close to God in self-consecration, in devotion and in prayer, will be secure from going astray and accepting false doctrine, and be prepared to lead and feed the flock over which the Holy Ghost has made him shepherd.

As a faithful shepherd tenderly cares for all his flock, so will the faithful elder look after and care for the church. It is his aim to teach, instruct and guide his people into all truth, to protect them from the enemy, to warn them of danger, and in every way to promote their welfare. In his care the rich and poor share alike, and the weak feel that in him they have a helper, one who pities them and is ready to help them even as God the Father pities his children and aids them in their struggles for a higher and better life.

In the elder and shepherd there are none of the characteristics of an earthly ruler, governor, president, or king. He rules by love, the latter by force; he leads the flock, they command their subjects and drive them if necessary. In the faithful elder there is no lording it over God's heritage. He has no desire to assume authority. He feels the responsibility laid upon him and his constant prayer is that he may have divine wisdom to lead the flock in the way of truth and that he may "hold fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able, by sound doctrine both to exhort and convince the gainsayers." He seeks not earthly honor or earthly gain, but looks for his reward to his "Chief Shepherd," who shall, if he is faithful to his trust, give him "a crown of glory that fadeth not away." All this the elder is to the church and the church owes much to the faithful elder, much more than many of them get in this world. If the elder faithfully does his duty in caring for the flock, is it too much to say that the flock should care for him? Could we reasonably expect a shepherd to lead his flock day after day, in and out of the fold, to the pastures and to the water, caring for them, protecting and shielding them from their enemies, and then look elsewhere for his living? We need to think about these things and to give heed to the words of Paul, "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the Word and doctrine. For the Scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn, and the laborer is worthy of his reward."

Now I think I hear some one say, "Our elder does not look after and care for the church as indicated here." Why? Is it because his hands are tired by the necessity of laboring both for the flock and his own support? Has he been sowing to you these many years in spiritual things and reaping only of his own temporal things, or have you considered him worthy of double honor and bestowed upon him an adequate support, so that he might give his attention more fully to caring for the flock? Has the flock neglected its duty in this matter? The relation between elder and church is mutual. He cares for the church and it should care for him.

RAHAB.

countries, and the peculiarities of their laws, says: "Among the Egyptians the women carry on all commercial concerns, and keep taverns; while the men remain at home and weave."

Diodemus Seculus asserts that the men were the slaves of the women in Egypt, and that it is stipulated in the marriage contract that the woman shall be the ruler of the husband, and that he shall obey her in all things.

Nymphodorus, speaking of the customs of the Greeks, says: "Having entered into the first inn I met with, and there seeing a certain old woman, the inn-keeper, I inquired of her," etc.

The same writer says that it is very likely that women kept the places of public entertainment among the Philistines, and that it was with such an one, and not with a harlot, that Samson lodged. Judges 16: 1. Besides, it is more than presumptive evidence that this custom obtained among the Israelites themselves, for it is much more reasonable to suppose that the two women who came to Solomon for judgment, relative to the dead child (1 Kings 3: 16) were inn-keepers, than that they were harlots. Dr. Clark says: "All these circumstances considered, I am fully satisfied that the term zonah, in the text, which we translate harlot, should be rendered tavern, inn-keeper or hostess. The spies who were sent out on this occasion, were, no doubt, the most confidential persons that Joshua had in his host. The risk they ran of losing their lives in this enterprise was extreme. Is it, therefore, likely, that persons who could not escape apprehension and death without the miraculous interference of God, should, in despite of law, go into a place where they might expect, not the blessing, but the curse, of God? Is it not more reasonable that they went to an inn to lodge, than to a brothel? But what completes, in my judgment, the evidence on this point, is, that this very Rahab, whom we call a harlot, was actually married to Salmon, a Jewish prince—Matt. 1: 5. And is it probable that a prince of Judah would have taken to wife such a person as our text represents Rahab to be?"

Much more has been written on both views of the subject, but in what we have given we have the substance of all. While the word itself, as used, seems to be more favorable to the first view given, our manner of reasoning, our sense of propriety, and all the attending circumstances seem to favor the latter, with which our own feelings and judgment most heartily accord. Yet, on accepting the other, loath as we are to do it, some very beautiful and encouraging deductions may be drawn.

Her after-history is a very pleasing one. She married Salmon, who, it is supposed, was one of the spies that she had received into her house. From the genealogy of Christ, as given in Matt. 1: 5, we learn that Salmon begat Boaz, and Boaz begat Obed, and Obed begat Jesse, and Jesse begat David, the king; through David we have Christ, the Redeemer. Thus we have in Christ's natural lineage represented both the Jew and Gentile, the bond and the free, the clean and the unclean; so he died as the representative of all. He came to save sinners, even to the uttermost—the harlots not excepted if they, through faith and repentance, come to the fountain into which all may step and be healed.

Whatever may have been this woman's manner of life—whether a harlot or an inn-keeper—her name is given in Heb. 11: 31 as an example of a trusting faith in God; and in James 2: 25 she is named as an example of meritorious works, thus showing, in a very remarkable way, that what was lost in Adam was restored in Christ, and that the blood of Christ does cleanse from all sin.

In our course of "Bible Study" we came to this subject, and we were greatly impressed by it. How wonderful, indeed, are the providences of God, and his ways past finding out! In the natural fatherhood of Christ we have a Jew and a Gentile, a prince and a hostess. He is the representative of every condition in life, from the highest to the lowest. Surely he is a High Priest that can be touched by the feelings of the infirmities of all! All may come to him and live. H. B. B.

"CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS"—ARE THEY OF GOD?

BY MARY KINDELL DICKEY.

WE are moved by the love of the Truth to write on the above subject, inasmuch as the so-called "Christian Scientists" are in some localities leading astray the Lord's children, — some, too, who have tested the power in the church, — who were anointed in the name of the Lord and healed.

To such we quote the warning of the apostle Paul (Eph. 4: 14), "That we may be no longer children, tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, in craftiness, after the wiles of error."

Their very name is misleading, as they are neither Christians nor Scientists. A Christian is a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus,—one who has been born again, — born of the water and the spirit,—in short, such a one as will not be found among the popular, so called "Christian Scientists."

A scientist is one who teaches the truth, and, before we are through with the subject, we will show that the so-called "Christian Scientists" do not teach or practice the truth. We shall look at this subject mainly from a Scriptural stand-point.

We have before us their tract, entitled "HOW TO BE HEALED" with the text, "Verily, verily I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do, shall he do also." St John 14: 12 In the same paragraph with the above text occurs the language of the Savior, "If ye love me, ye will keep my commandments," which the "Scientists" entirely ignore, both in practice and teaching.

They claim, that all evil comes from erring mortal minds, and, when perceived and universally admitted, the power of true thought will overcome every evil belief, and man need say no more, "I am sick."

As the cause of sickness they claim, that if a man thinks he is sick, it will be the cause of his sickness, and if he can deceive himself when he is sick, by thinking he is well, then he is well, and him thinking so is what caused the healing.

Let us take the case of Job. If Job had thought he was healed of his sores, would that have made him well, or caused his friends to see no sores when he was covered with them? Or did Job by thinking he was sick cause his sickness? If this kind of reasoning is science, then none of us would get sick or die, at least none of us that are righteous.

Lazarus, whom Jesus loved, sickened and died, yet it was not because he thought he was sick, neither was it caused by evil thoughts as the "scientists" would have us believe, for Jesus himself says that it was "for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby" John 11: 4. The apostles had the spirit of God and were spiritually minded, yet they were subject to sickness. Philpp. 2: 26 Paul was sick, 2 Tim. 4: 20. Paul left Trophimus sick at Melitum.

"Do you want to be healed?" "Then seek a well-informed Christian Scientist," "who uses no material means, and claims no power but infinite mind, and put yourself without reserve in his or her care."—"How To Be Healed."

"Is any among you suffering? let him pray. Is any cheerful? let him sing praise. Is any among you sick? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save him that is sick, and the Lord shall raise him up" James 5: 13, 14, 15.

Here we have two authors, — two remedies for the healing of the body and soul. Which is of God? They can not both be of God; for they are opposed to each other. The plan James teaches us is for the healing of God's children, and may be had without money or price. The "Christian Scientists'" plan, as they say themselves, "will not interfere with any person's religious views," and is in perfect harmony with all views, whether they are right or wrong. They may be Catholics, Mormons, Universalists, Methodists, etc. But I want to tell you that it will not harmonize with the religious views of the Brethren: for what does not harmonize with James we can not accept as being from God James has given us sound doctrine from the Lord, therefore "Christian Scientists" can not endure it. Of such Paul has prophesied, "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but having itching ears, will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts; and will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables." 2 Tim. 4: 3, 4, 5.

Christian Scientists teach that all sickness is of the devil, or is the devil himself, while Paul teaches that it is a chastening from God. "My son, regard not lightly the chastening of the Lord, nor faint when thou art reproved of him; for whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. * * * But if ye are without chastening, whereof all have been made partakers, then are ye bastards, and not sons. * * * All chastening seemeth for the present to be not joyous, but grievous: yet afterwards it yieldeth peaceable fruit unto them that have been exercised thereby, even the fruit of righteousness." Heb. 12: 5-12.

"Take, brethren, for an example of suffering and of patience, the prophets who spake in the name of the Lord Behold, we call them blessed which endured: ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord, how that the Lord is full of pity and merciful." James 5: 10, 11. "Beloved believe not every spirit, but prove the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets have gone out into the world." 1 John 4: 1.

EVIDENCES OF THE TRUE CHURCH.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

Chapter Eleven.—The Heart.

A VERY popular idea in the religious world is, "That if the heart is right, all is right." To this we readily assent, but the question arises, "How shall we know when the heart is right?" By what standard shall we judge? To judge our hearts by our hearts would be to make the standard, by which we judge, no higher than the thing judged, i. e., every person would sit in judgment in his own case and would, naturally, decide in his own favor. To ascertain whether our heart is right in the sight of God we have no better nor safer standard than the Word of God.

The Word is truth, life, light, meat, and drink to the soul longing for immortality. If we obey the Word we can not err willfully, neither will we fall into condemnation.

By the Word of God we will finally be judged, and not by our hearts. If we receive the Word fully into our hearts and live it out practically in our life, then it follows that the heart is right,—not from the stand-point of the heart, however, but from the stand-point of obedience to the Gospel, the Word of God.

The heart, of itself, is deceitful and will lead us astray. The prophet Jeremiah says of the heart "that it is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked," 17: 9, hence the heart needs a standard higher than itself to direct its course in the intricate paths of life, that the heart, so directed, may be made pure and become a fit temple for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit of God. The Word of God is that standard.

We must learn to keep our hearts, and not trust our hearts to keep us. "Keep thy heart with all diligence." Prov. 4: 23.

Alvada, Ohio, Nov. 12.

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—Bro. James T. Quinlan, of Baltimore, Md., writes: "Since starting out in business for myself I have also been actively engaged in the tract work. I distributed a number of copies of the German 'House we Live in,' last Sunday on board the North German Lloyd Steamer "Hermann," and have been distributing on board of every steamer of that line since I received those tracts. I should like very much if the Brethren would keep me fully supplied. I can make use of tracts of all kinds, and do hope that some good may come from my efforts. I am sure the Lord will bless the efforts of my hands."

—From the Appanoose church, Franklin Co., Kans., Bro. James T. Kinzie writes: "Our Sunday-school closed a six months' term Sept. 29, with C. W. Shoemaker as our Superintendent, assisted by a full corps of officers and teachers. Our average attendance was eighty-five. We have all learned many good and grand lessons at the school. May these grand truths qualify us all for a more noble work in the future!"

—Bro. C. M. Crill, of Bracken, Ind., writes: "The members of the Huntington church held their quarterly council Nov. 16. A part of the business disposed of was to reclaim a brother that had become careless and unconcerned. God bless the returning wanderers! Two brethren were called to the office of deacon. The lot fell on brethren Simon Bonebrake and Emmanuel Thomas. This church has had her dark days of trouble, but we now feel that a brighter day has dawned."

—Bro. John F. Kahler, of Louisville, Ohio, under date of Nov. 15, writes: "I held meetings at Iron Hill over Sunday. On Sunday evening one precious soul came out on the Lord's side, and was baptized after the services, in the presence of a large concourse of people. A baptismal scene,—always a solemn occurrence,—is rendered much more so after night. There is also Scriptural precedence for night baptisms, since Paul baptized the jailer and his household 'the same hour of the night.'"

—Under date of Nov. 17, Bro. J. L. Snavely, of the Weeping Water church, Cass Co., Nebr., writes: "Sept. 26, according to arrangements, Bro. A. Hutchison, of Missouri, commenced a series of meetings at this place. For three weeks he earnestly proclaimed the 'old, old story of the cross.' During these meetings, Oct. 5, we had a love-feast, which was enjoyed by all; the order was better than usual. There were no additions to the church. Soon after these meetings closed, Bro. Christian Hope came and preached one week. The few that attended these meetings learned many useful lessons which will benefit them if put to practice."

—Under date of Nov. 13, Bro. John Patten, of the Forest church, Richland Co., Wis., writes: "Bro. Jacob Delp came to us Oct. 30, and commenced meetings. He preached ten sermons in all in this part of the church. We had good order and a large congregation. The writer then took him to East Pine, ten miles north-east of here, where he held forth the Word again on Saturday night, Sunday, and Sunday night to an attentive audience. Bro. Delp is an efficient laborer in the vineyard of the Lord, and his labors were greatly appreciated here by all. While none came to the church, may the Lord grant that Bro. Delp's labors may yet result in much good!"

—Under date of Nov. 15, Bro. Isaac W. Abernathy, of Fairview, Md., writes: "We commenced our protracted meeting Nov. 2, and continued until Nov. 4, when Bro. D. B. Arnold, of Burlington, W. Va., came to our assistance and conducted the meeting until its close,—Nov. 11. He preached, while with us, ten sermons in all. As an immediate result, four precious souls were added to the fold by baptism, and, we believe, there were lasting impressions made upon the hearts of many who, we think, were almost persuaded to be Christians. The kind and efficient labors of our dear brother were greatly appreciated by all. Sinners were warned and admonished and saints made to rejoice. The best of order prevailed and the interest seemed to increase until the meeting closed. Such a meeting with the dear brethren and sisters is, to us, as a refreshing shower from the presence of the Lord."

—Under date of Nov. 13, Bro. S. B. Shirky, of Rockingham, Ray Co., Mo., writes: "As the Log Creek congregation, Caldwell Co., Mo., is under our care and without a resident minister, and since the ministers of the adjoining churches can spare but little time to assist them, their condition is such that they need help. If our ministering brethren, when traveling over the Chicago, St. Paul and Milwaukee R. R., will write Bro. J. E. Bosserman, or Bro. Martin Brenneman, Polo, Mo., they will meet you. Brethren, stop and preach for them when traveling over this road!"

—Under date of Nov. 10, sister Bernice Ashmore, of Mansfield, Ill., writes: "We are still meeting every Sunday for Sunday-school, and instead of the interest dying out, as the days get shorter and the weather more inclement, the attendance and interest increase. A school under the supervision of such a leader as Bro. Greenawalt, can not help but grow. If all our members would take an interest in our children's welfare, we would try to help carry the burden, and stand by our Superintendent. May God, in his mercy, help all the parents to take an interest in the Sunday-school, is my prayer!"

—Bro. Orville Eller, of Monticello, Ind., writes: "On Friday, Nov. 15, I left my home to attend the love-feast at Beaver Creek church, in the Winnamac District. The house, lately constructed, was not yet finished, but was fitted up for temporary use. The weather was not the finest and the congregation not the largest, yet there was a sufficient number to have a pleasant feast. Brethren Crumrine, Blickenstaff, and Freeman stayed over Sunday, and there were several sermons delivered by the two former brethren. Although the attendance was small, yet the meetings were interesting. On Monday morning brethren Crumrine, Blickenstaff and I returned to our homes, leaving Bro. Freeman to continue the meeting. May the Lord be with them in their work."

Church Work.

On Saturday, Sept. 28, Bro. John Smith, from near Dayton, in company with Bro. Oldwine, of Arcanum, and myself, went to Circleville, in the Scioto Valley, to attend a feast with the colored members at that point. It was held in the Methodist church. The attendance was not as large as heretofore, because of a misunderstanding as to the date of the feast, but we had a good meeting. A large number of the spectators were white people.

On Sunday afternoon, Sept. 29, a council was held at the home of Bro. James May, and also an election. Bro. Charles May was chosen to the ministry by unanimous consent. This gives us three colored speakers in the Scioto Valley.

On Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 12 and 13, a large meeting and a very pleasant feast were held in our home church,—the Lower Twin, Preble Co., Ohio. At the last meeting, Sunday forenoon, a statement was made that we now had three colored ministers in Southern Ohio, and that all three of them were in need of family Bibles. A collection was taken, and the gift of the meeting was $14 00.

The Bibles were purchased at Dayton, Oct. 16, and taken to the feast at Frankfort, Ross Co., on the 17th, where we met quite a number of the members from Circleville, and two applicants for baptism, who had driven eighteen miles to the meeting. They were baptized, and a very pleasant feast was held, with the best of order and attention, though it was a mixed assembly in every sense,—in age, color, class and condition. A Bible was also purchased and sent to Joseph Bird, the young brother baptized at the Frankfort meeting.

Oh, what a field open, far and wide, we now have for work to save the fallen, and to glorify the Master's name! Who is it that will not lend a helping hand?

LANDON WEST.

From Cerro Gordo, Piatt Co., Ill.

Oct. 4, wife and I started for the West. We stopped a few days in Adams County, Ill., to visit wife's children. Then we started for Maryville, Nodaway Co., Missouri,—the north-western part of the State, to visit one of wife's daughters and family. This daughter is married to I. J. Paley. We were kindly received, and can say this for the citizens of Maryville, that I was never treated by strangers with more love and kindness than by them. Can we not all do likewise?

On Saturday evening, Oct. 26 the Methodist minister asked me if I would preach in his church the next day at 11 A. M. I accepted the invitation. On Sunday morning the Baptist minister sent me word to come to his church and talk to the young people at 3 P. M., and then preach in the evening at 7. I consented. I was told that our Brethren had never yet preached in their town. We had good order and good attention, and the churches were crowded.

Wife and I returned from the West to Adams Co., Ill., Oct. 29, and attended the Communion meeting at Liberty, in the Mill Creek church, Oct. 30 and 31. The meeting was a feast to us, and will long be remembered. Eld. John Pool had been preaching at the same place about four days before the feast, and as there was a good interest, the meeting was still continued after the feast, by Bro. Pool. As a result of the meetings, three were baptized, and two were reclaimed. There is one more applicant, and prospects are good for more. I remained with the members at that place till Nov. 4, when Bro. Riley and I started for Concord, a distance of sixteen miles, where a small number of members are living. They had appointed a feast, to be held Nov. 5, and we assisted in holding it. The meeting was a pleasant one. The interest was good and the best of order prevailed.

Nov. 6 I started for home, where I arrived at 11:50 A. M; and the same evening took the train at Cerro Gordo for North Manchester, Ind., to attend their feast, next day, Nov. 7. The feast was a pleasant one. Seeing so many members, old and young, seated around the tables of the Lord, I felt it was good to be there.

The morning of Nov. 8, at 3 A. M., I took the train at North Manchester for Chicago. Attending to some business till Saturday, Nov. 9 I started for home, and found the children all well, thank the Lord! My wife is still in Adams County Ill., with her children and grandchildren. I expect to go to Adams County next week, where wife and I intend to visit old friends till about Dec. 5.

JOHN METZGER.

From Woodberry, Baltimore City, Md.

Our love-feast occurred Nov. 9. Notwithstanding the inclement weather, we met in a hall (an upper room, the place where we hold our meetings). There, amidst the best of order and the greatest solemnity, we once more celebrated the death and suffering of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Quite a number of brethren and sisters were present from Carroll County, Md., and some from Pennsylvania were also present with us About seventy-five members surrounded the Lord's table. We had a pleasant meeting. Eld. E. W. Stoner officiated. The home ministers were present; and also a number from other congregations.

Our Sunday-school is getting along nicely. We have an attendance of about fifty.

Bro. John Smith, a minister in the first degree, has moved here, and we now have preaching every two weeks and prayer-meeting every Sunday evening.

Through the kindness of the members of the Meadow Branch congregation (of which we are a part), we are to have a house of worship of our own. The lot is now being graded, and the work on the building will be commenced at once. If the weather permits, we will soon have a pleasant place of worship.

Two united with us by baptism this year, and there is one applicant,—a colored man,—who wants to join in with the people of God. By some means he got an opportunity to read the MESSENGER. There he learned of the Brethren having meetings in Baltimore City, and he came twenty miles to be present at our feast. After having witnessed the exercises, he said that it corresponded with what he had read in the Bible, and he was now ready to be baptized, which will be attended to as soon as arrangements can be made.

LEWIS HARMAN.

From the South Beatrice Congregation, Nebr.

"FULL and overflowing," "joy in heaven and upon earth," are the best expressions I can command, to convey to the Brotherhood the experience of the brethren, sisters and friends in the Lord's vineyard here. Yesterday evening we closed a three weeks' series of refreshing meetings. Bro C. Hope, with humble boldness, declared unto us the unsearchable riches. The main thought in all his discourses was the great reconciliation of the world to God in Christ Jesus, whereby only we have salvation through faith. This is the grand theme inscribed upon the banner of King Emmanuel! Watchman, raise it high, all over the Brotherhood, and from shore to shore. We had social meetings every day and visited from house to house. The multiplication of God's grace brought forth twenty-nine prisoners from Satan's strongholds, who sought refuge in the fold of Christ through baptism. One dear sister was restored. One put off baptism until next Sunday, which will make thirty-one to date. Bro. John Hollinger, of Kansas, is with us, and will continue the meetings a few days. Four of those baptized are of the family of the writer. Our dear brother Hope left us to-day, full of joy, and a goodly share, also, of temporal benefits. He received, also, as a gift from the congregation, a fine Baxter's Teacher's Bible. May God's grace be multiplied to all the beloved in Christ Jesus!

ISAAC DELL.

From the Thornapple Church, Mich.

OUR Communion meeting was held Nov. 2, and was a meeting long to be remembered. The weather, previous to the meeting, was rainy, but, on the morning of the meeting, the clouds dispersed and all was pleasant. Quite a number of members from the adjoining churches were with us. The ministering brethren came to our assistance and did not shun to declare the counsel of God. Although there were no accessions to the church, we believe the church was built up, and lasting impressions made. Come again, brethren.

On the morning of Nov. 8, in company with Bro. Bashor, we started to attend the Communion in the Saginaw church,—a distance of sixty-five miles. The brethren of this church have been very busy, of late, at their church-house, to get it ready for the meeting. They have the house inclosed and ready to plaster and, by arranging temporary seats, we had a comfortable place for the meeting, and all seemingly enjoyed the meeting. The church at this place is yet in limited circumstances, but, by their zeal and the aid of the Church Erection Committee, they will soon have a substantial church-house, and, we think, large enough for their present need. One made the good confession during the meetings.

S. M. SMITH.

From the Massissinewa Church, Delaware Co., Ind.

THE church at this place has been on a steady increase, several having been taken into the fold during the summer.

There has been little or no trouble in the church for some time, save the painful duty of expelling an unruly member once in a while.

Our love-feast occurred Nov. 1, at the Union Grove house. At 11 A. M., Bro. Wm. Boggs, of Ohio, spoke to a large audience from the words, "For we can not but speak the things which we have seen and heard." Acts 4: 20. At 4 o'clock we met for love feast exercises. Though the weather was very threatening, and though it rained a part of the time, still the tables were nearly filled. Had the weather been favorable, many of the members could not have been accommodated. Speakers from adjoining congregations were brethren Lewis W. Teeter, David Hoover, Lewis Kinsey, Henry Wike, David Replogle, Hiram Brinson, Moses Cline, Wm Boggs, Isaac Wike, and Joseph Spitler. Brethren Lewis Teeter and David Hoover stayed over Sunday, and Bro. Hoover stayed with us until the following Sunday. During these meetings there were two additions to the church. Bro. Hoover won many friends while here.

One noticeable feature of our feast was the presence of so many brethren and sisters from abroad. We are always glad to see them.

CALVIN W. HOOKE.

New Corner, Ind., Nov 14, '89.

From Virden, Ill.

OUR series of meetings, in the Pleasant Hill church, Ill., began Oct. 26. An admirable feature of the meeting was the excellent singing, which gave life and energy, by insuring the co-operation of the young people of the community. Soon a few young men, having companions already members, were made willing to be enrolled among the number of the faithful in Christ. This was only the beginning of the good work accomplished on this line; for, as the meetings continued, from evening to evening a common occurrence was the administration of the ordinance of baptism at a late hour of the evening. Eighteen souls were thus buried with Christ in baptism.

May God give constantly such an abundance of his Spirit to the beloved Zion, that peace and prosperity may flow on like a mighty river, to the ends of the earth!

JAMES WIRT.

From the Mulberry Grove Church, Ill.

WE, the Mulberry Grove church, held our love-feast Oct. 26. The attendance, attention and order were good.

The feast was followed by a series of meetings, Eld. D. B. Gibson doing the preaching. He greatly built up the members of the church, and warned sinners to flee from the wrath to come. He preached and labored faithfully for over two weeks. Though the congregations were small, yet the Lord abundantly blessed his labors, as five souls came out on the Lord's side. When the meetings closed and the parting time came, we regretted to see so many poor souls still out of Christ. Out in the world, exposed to death, the last opportunity to come to Christ has for them, perhaps, passed away!

HENRY LILLIGH.

From Beatrice, Nebr.

AT the September council-meeting of the North Beatrice church, we agreed to make the city a separate organization and the boundary lines were located. Subsequently it was decided to meet for final organization on Thursday, Nov. 14, at the church in Beatrice, at which time there were present Eld. Hope, of Herington, Kans., Eld. J. S. Mohler, of Morrill, Kans, elders Shick and Peters, of South Beatrice church, Eld. A. Van Dyke, from North Beatrice, and Bro. Dell, a minister from South Beatrice.

The church was well represented. The work was done in harmony with the usages of our Brotherhood.

The officers elected are: Minister, Bro. Joseph Boomer, who is a promising young brother of eighteen years; deacons, brethren Frank Shrove and Melvin Coughman. The ministers from abroad were pleased with the growth and condition of the church in Beatrice. The remark was made, "When we consider the material from which the church is built,—some from the Methodist, some from the Congregational, some from the Christian church, and most from no church at all, and not being acquainted with the doctrine of the church, we must say, You have done remarkably well. There is no doubt as to the future of the church in Beatrice if they have a good shepherd to care for them, which we feel they have, in the selection of Eld. Urias Shick."

Of course we are not without difficulties, but we aim to nip such things in the bud and thus prevent further trouble.

The church in town will be known as "Beatrice church."

Eld. J. S. Mohler preached for us, recently, for two weeks. The meetings were well attended and Bro. Mohler presented the Word with power and demonstration. It seemed to be a seed-time, however, and not a harvest. While there were no immediate accessions to the church, we think the meetings were productive of as much good as last winter, when the Lord gave us a bountiful harvest. If Satan is not allowed to destroy the seed, the harvest time will come.

J. E. YOUNG.

Report of District Meeting.

THE District Meeting of the Second District of West Virginia convened in the Buckhannon congregation, Upshur County, Oct. 18 and 19, and organized by electing Eld. W. A. Gaunt, Moderator; W. R. Murphy, Secretary, and Thomas Wilson, Reading Clerk. There was considerable business before the meeting, but all was pleasantly disposed of.

Out of the ten congregations, composing the Second District of West Virginia, seven were represented by delegates. The District is weak, and scattered over a large territory. One query will be sent to Annual Meeting. Our District will not be represented at the next Annual Meeting by a delegate, as we are not able to pay expenses.

We have, in our last two District Meetings, discussed the propriety of consolidating with the First District of West Virginia, and appointed Eld. Z. Annon to attend their next District Meeting to see what can be done.

When the two Districts were together, the ministering brethren of the First District preached for us frequently, but since the District has been divided, we are left alone, and the territory is too large for our ministerial force. Many fields are to-day uncultivated that would yield a bounteous harvest

The Second District has but few ministers in it, and not more than two or three of them ever go outside of their own church to preach. There are, in the mountains of West Virginia, many precious souls that would accept the Truth, had they the opportunity. We have a Missionary Board and a Treasurer, but no money. Our churches are too poor to do very much, and our brethren that travel over those mountains and hills to preach, do it at their own expense, leaving helpless families to care for themselves, spending weeks and even months, trying to build up the cause of Christ Our brethren here have the cause at heart, and greatly desire to see it built up. Brethren, look this way! Come and help us!

At the close of our council, on Saturday evening, Oct. 19, our brethren and sisters came together to feast, for the first time, in our new church house. It was a feast to all. Bro Z Annon officiated. Bro. Annon remained with us till the 27th, imparting to us the Bread of Life! The Lord was with us to the converting of dear souls. Seven were made willing to join in with the children of God. Five of them were baptized; the other two will be soon. All are heads of families. May God keep them faithful! DAVID J. MILLER.

Overhill, Upshur Co., W. Va.

From Rome, Floyd Co, Ga.

SEEING a reference in the MESSENGER of Oct. 15, page 652, by your brother, J. H. Moore, of Way Cross Ga., and desiring earnestly to see one or many colonies of peace-loving, plain, industrious Brethren settle in our beautiful, healthy and inviting section, I am made hopeful that a persistent effort may secure the desired immigrants. Having been myself in eighteen States east of the Rocky Mountains, and observed, as best I could, the various advantages and disadvantages of those localities, and noticing, further, the effects produced and the impressions made upon the prosperity and good morals of a community by the presence, in organized numbers, of honest, frugal, peaceable citizens,—who war upon worldly vanity, teaching by example as well as by precept, humility and brotherly love,—I feel sure that such will not only find in the warm Southern heart a ready and cordial welcome, but a new, a wide, inviting, open field, ready to improve their own material prospects, and for a higher, holier motive,—doing good by tangible example,—to both the bodies and the souls of their fellow-men!

T. F. JEFFRIES.

A Sad Accident.

ON Saturday, Nov. 9, Bro. Henry Nicewonger and a grandson went to Two Lick Creek, where he had a lot of logs to be floated to the mills below. The recent rains had swollen the stream, and as they undertook to "break the landing" (a term used by floaters), an obstruction made it necessary that one should mount the logs to remove it. Bro. Nicewonger attempted to do so, but not being so young and agile as formerly, he somehow became precipitated into the water, from which the young man could not extricate him. He soon disappeared among the logs and under the water. The young man raised the alarm, and hundreds of people turned out in search for the body, and dredged the stream for miles during the day and night. On Sunday, at 11 o'clock, they found him below the breast of a dam, a mile below.

Bro. Henry has been a faithful member of the church for many years. His seat was seldom vacant in the church. He was noted for his unwavering faithfulness, endurance, honesty and integrity. He was buried in the family grave yard on his farm, on Tuesday, Nov. 12th. Funeral services at the house by the writer, assisted by Eld. Minser and Rev. Campbell of the Wesleyan church.

JOSEPH HOLSOPPLE

Indiana, Pa.

Notes of Travel.

NOV. 13, wife and I left home for a visit to the Mexico church, and the "Old Folks' and Orphan Children's Home of the Middle District of Indiana." At 2: 20 P. M. we left Huntington for Peru, where we were met by Bro. Levi Miller,—who erected the "Home" referred to above. Bro Miller took us to his pleasant home, from where, after an enjoyable sojourn, we started to see his son, John, who had been badly hurt by the kick of a horse, some three nights before, while on his way home from church Going down grade near the river bridge, some part of the buggy suddenly broke. Endeavoring to check the speed of the buggy, John took hold of the wheel, when the horse kicked him on the abdomen, and knocked him out of the buggy For a few days his case was considered very serious, but at our visit we found him a little better. We were sorry to hear that our young friend had not yet made the good choice, but were glad that it was our privilege to have a season of prayer with the family. I hope and pray when I again hear from him, the happy news will be that he and his dear wife have united with the church.

After a short but enjoyable visit, we were again taken to Bro Levi Miller's pleasant home, where we spent the afternoon and one night. There are only four in the family. All are members excepting the son, and we fondly hope he will soon give his heart to God, and his hand to the church.

Nov. 15, brother Levi and sister Rebecca took us to the "Old Folks' and Orphan Children's Home," located on an elevated, beautiful place, where a view may be had over the green valley of Eel River. At the "Home" we met five inmates,—one aged brother, and a younger one, and three sisters. All seemed to enjoy themselves. With brother Frank and sister Lillie Fisher as Superintendents of the Home, there seems to be a favorable outlook. It seems they do all that any one could do to make it pleasant for the inmates, as well as for visitors. The evening we were there, two more old sisters were brought to the Home. This makes seven in all. God surely gave Bro. Miller a very large heart, and filled it full of charity. He surely did not forget that the Lord said, "The poor you always have with you, to do them good when you will." Bro. Miller has shown by his works that his will is to do good to the poor. He has provided a beautiful home for the helpless. The entire property is worth at least six thousand dollars,—perhaps more. Would to God, that many more brethren who are blessed by the Lord with this world's goods, might spend their means to the glory of God! Then the poor would soon all have good homes, where they could be properly cared for. We know God will reward us for all our good works!

We attended a funeral at the Brethren's meeting-house near the "Home," the same day we got there. It was a very sad circumstance. A bright-looking, young man of twenty-one years, was found dead by the side of the railroad track. It was supposed he was walking too close to the track and was struck by a passing train. His neck, collar-bone and arm were broken. The friends were almost inconsolable. His mother said, if he had only been a Christian, she could give him up much better. Oh, dear, unconverted friends, take warning and prepare to meet death! Bro. Isaac Fisher conducted the funeral services.

Having preached here quite often in former years, the Brethren desired me to labor for them, to which I consented. I preached on Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday morning to very attentive congregations.

After preaching we accompanied Aaron and sister Fisher to their pleasant home, where we passed some time very agreeably. Their son and daughter, we hope, will soon give their hearts to God.

We also had enjoyable visits with sister Joe Bramer and daughter, Bro. Jacob and sister Fisher, and others.

On Monday morning Nov. 18, Bro. Aaron Fisher took us to my oldest son's residence, south of Peru, from where, after an enjoyable visit, we were taken to Bro. Isaac Miller's in Peru.

Wednesday morning, at 9 A. M., we boarded the train for Huntington. Here we stayed over night with Eld. Joseph Leedy, who lives in the southern part of the city. He entertained us pleasantly until Thursday afternoon, Nov. 21, when Bro. O. Ellis, with our own conveyance, took us to our home in Lancaster.

We were well pleased with our visit to the Mexico church, and the "Home." We always enjoy a visit among God's children. We always find many warm and loving-hearted brethren and sisters. We thank all for the kindness they manifested towards us. God bless and reward them. May the Lord help us all so to live that we may finally meet on the evergreen shore, where parting will be no more! Brethren and sisters, pray for us! SAMUEL MURRAY.

River, Ind.

From Shepherdstown, Pa.

DURING the year, about to close, we have had joyful seasons and also sorrowful ones. Several times we have been called to preach the funeral of persons who had expressed a desire to be received into fellowship, but did not make their wants known to the Brethren until death had put his seal upon them. Then their relatives made the matter known. Such delays of coming to Christ make us feel sad, and we had to think that, perhaps, we did not warn the people enough, or, perhaps, failed to preach the Word with the power that we might have done. May grace and ability be given to all our ministers, that they may not shun to declare the whole Gospel, so that sinners may be induced to flee to the sheltering arms of a crucified Redeemer.

Some of those who have been lately received into church fellowship rejoice in the love of Jesus. They seem to have great peace of mind in knowing that they are obeying the Truth. May God's blessing be with all the faithful ones, and, especially, the isolated ones. May the MESSENGER become a power for good, both in and out of the church. DANIEL LANDIS.

MEN say that time is money. This is a wretched burlesque. It would be as truthful to say that light is money, that air is money, that sleep is money. Time is thought; time is knowledge; time is character; time is power: time is the threshold of eternity. An earnest man will often reckon time as if he were on a death bed. There are hours in every man's life in which the tick of a watch is more thrilling to an earnest spirit than the roll af thunder. There will come in the lives of us all moments in which the beat of a pulse will be more awful than the roar of Niagara.—Sel.

"GOD needs men and reads men; he knows what you can do, and will call you to do it. Be ready to move, and the way will open before you. Readiness is not impatience."

Here and There.

SINCE my last report I have been traveling among the churches nearly all the time.

Aug. 31, I went to the Mill Creek church, Adams County, now under my care, to attend to some important matters which had been deferred in my absence. After spending a few days with the Brethren there, I returned home to attend our quarterly meeting, Sept. 7.

I then went to the Hadley Creek church, Pike County, to assist the Brethren in their quarterly meeting, Sept. 14. This little band is also in my charge, and has received some assistance from the Missionary Board during the past year. The Brethren appreciate the labors of those who were sent to preach for them, and seem to be much encouraged. While I was with these Brethren, one dear sister was restored. Others at that place are anxiously looking into the church and expressing an inclination to enter in, so that, finally, they might have a right to the tree of life. Sept. 22 I returned home to fill some appointments.

Sept. 28, I went to Colchester to visit some of the Brethren there, and a few days later started for the Panther Creek church, Woodford County, to attend the District Meeting of Southern Illinois Oct. 1. We had a very interesting meeting. Nearly all the churches, thirty-five in number, were represented. Much of the day was taken up in considering the missionary cause.

In response to a call from some of the Brethren, we, in company with B. F. Masterson, went from the District Meeting to the Woodland congregation, Fulton County, to assist the Brethren in their Communion, Thursday, Oct 3. This church, like many others, has had her dark clouds but they were not without their silver lining. Now there is no more darkness and the sunshine of light and love seems to break forth in all its effulgence. There are good prospects of a brighter future, as was clearly manifest in the large attendance at the feast. The enjoyment with the Brethren at this place is as an evergreen spot in my memory.

On Saturday morning, Oct. 5, we went to the Spring Run church to attend their feast of love. Here again we met with many familiar faces; some of our first acquaintances among the Brethren reside here. This is the home of Eld. John Pool who has the oversight of this church. Here, also, we had a pleasant feast. The good order and the manner in which the feast was conducted shows forth the ability of Bro. John to fill his calling. The ministers present from a distance were Bro. Wm. R. Lirely, of Liberty, Ill.; Solomon Bucklew and wife, of Canton; and P. A. Moore and wife, of Panther Creek, with a number of other brethren and sisters from neighboring churches. From here I again went home to attend to some home appointments.

Some meetings had been requested by the Camp Creek church, as, on account of the death of their elder, J. L. Myers, they have been somewhat like sheep without a shepherd. On the morning of Oct. 18 I commenced a series of meetings which was well attended. Oct. 25 Bro Solomon Bucklew came to our relief. On Saturday, Oct. 26, we met in council at the New Hope church. At the closing of our meetings Bro Bucklew preached four very interesting sermons by which all were much edified.

On Monday, Oct. 28, we returned home to accompany our family to Liberty, to be with the Brethren at their love-feast on the 31st. Eld. John Pool had commenced a meeting Oct. 26, and we had agreed to assist him. Here we met our dear brother, John Metzger, and wife. At these meetings two were restored to fellowship, and three were baptized. One is to be baptized in the near future.

In compliance with orders from District Meeting, Eld. Pool and I were to go to the Concord church on Monday, Nov. 4, to assist them in a council and a Communion Nov. 5, but owing to the great interest in the Mill Creek meetings, the Brethren thought that Eld. Pool and I should continue the meetings a few days longer, while Eld. John Metzger and Bro. Wm R. Lirely would go to Concord and do the work there.

Nov. 6 I again returned home to meet our much-esteemed brother, W. R. Lirely, who was to commence a series of meetings in the Loraine church. He was found at his post, but, to our sad disappointment and his discomfort, he was suffering from illness. His zeal, however, encouraged him while he supported himself by leaning on the desk before him. Next morning, after receiving some medical treatment, he took his bed at Bro. L. Pittman's, where he still lies under medical treatment, at this writing, Nov. 12, and where he is likely to remain for several days yet.

Bro. Lirely is frequently spoken of as "our walking Bible," because of his great ability to quote much Scripture while preaching. He seldom fails to tell, when asked, where to find any text in the New Testament. He is now in his seventy-second year, and, seemingly, has not lost his zeal for the cause of his Master.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather, our love-feast was postponed until December 25 (Christmas Day)

On Saturday night we preached to a crowded house. On Sunday, after the morning services, one precious soul was buried with Christ in baptism.

On the evening of Nov. 10 we closed our meetings with a well-filled house, and a warm and good feeling among all. May God be with us till we meet again!

H. W. STRICKLER.

Our dear sister died with that dread disease, consumption, of which she suffered day and night for several weeks. She leaves a kind husband and several children, the youngest only three months old. Funeral services conducted by Eld. N. Merrill, assisted by the brethren.

SWEITZER.—In Mt. Carroll, Ill., Oct. 6, Bro. Jacob B. Sweitzer, aged 50 years, 11 months and 16 days.

Funeral services by W. H. Eisenbise from John 13: 7

JOHNSON.—Also in Mt. Carroll, Ill., sister Matilda S. Johnson, aged 43 years, 4 months and 18 days.

Our dear sister attended Bro. Sweitzer's funeral in the afternoon of Oct 9, and before nightfall she was a corpse. She died of heart spasm. Her lifeless body was taken in the night, two miles into the country, to the now disconsolate home of a weeping husband and six broken-hearted children. The deceased was a very exemplary member of the church, and, we trust, had a glorious hope beyond the grave. Funeral services by Franklin Myers and others, from Prov. 27: 1.

J. J. EMMERT.

Two sons and two daughters are left to mourn their loss. Her husband died Dec. 5, 1866. She was a kind and loving mother and respected by all who knew her. Funeral services by the writer and Bro. Jacob Snell from Num. 23: 10, latter clause.

J. F. KAHLER.

CLAAR.—In the Claar church, Bedford Co., Pa., Nov. 5, Bro. John W. Claar, aged 7 years, 7 months and 10 days.

Bro Claar was a faithful member of the church for nearly forty years. The family loses a kind father and the church here a faithful member. May we all live so as to meet him over yonder in happiness! Funeral services conducted by brethren James A. Sell and John L. Holsinger.

LIEDY.—Also, in the Holsinger church, Woodbury congregation, Bedford Co., Pa., Nov. 11, Bro. David Liedy, aged 56 years and 6 months.

Deceased was born in Scotland, March 15, 1841. He sawed wood all day on Nov. 9, and, during the day, fell over some blocks of wood but did not think that he was much hurt. During the night he began to grow worse and continued to suffer until death relieved him. He leaves a wife and three small children. Bro. Sharp was baptized last June and has lived as a consistent member of the South Waterloo church up to his death. Funeral services by the writer, assisted by S. E. The variety of reading-matter, outside of the lesson department, will, for 1890, include special articles, already definitely arranged for, from many eminent Christian writers, among whom are Rt. Hon. William Ewart Gladstone, M. P., who will write one or more articles on "The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture". Bishop Ellicott, Canon Farrar, Professor A. H. Sayce, and Miss Amelia B. Edwards,—England; Professor Franz Delitzsch of Germany; Professor Godet of Switzerland; and from America the Rev. Dr. R. S. Storrs of Brooklyn, President Patton of Princeton, Professor Fisher of Yale University, Professors Briggs and Schaff of Union Theological Seminary, Bishop Foss of the Methodist Episcopal Church and President Brandus of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary.

The International Sunday-school lessons will be treated in The Sunday School Times of each week during 1890, as follows:—President Dwight, of Yale University, will furnish "The Critical Notes" on the New Testament lessons; and Professor Green, of Princeton, those on the Old Testament. Dr. Cunningham Geikie, of England, will present, in his graphic way "The Lesson Story". The eminent Dr. Alexander McLaren, of England, will continue his practical lesson articles. Bishop Warren will give his vigorous "Teaching Points". Dr. Trumbull, the Editor of the paper, will supply "Illustrative Applications." Dr. A. F. Schauffler will continue the "Teaching Hints," as will Faith Latimer the "Home Hints for the Primary Teacher," while the "Oriental Lesson-Lights" will come from the pen of Canon Tristram, of England the noted Palestinian traveler and writer.

This course has already been taken by a number of the most progressive sunday-schools. Where such a plan is not adopted individual teachers of advanced classes will be inclined to subscribe for class packages.

THE SCHOLAR'S LESSON GUIDE. Issued quarterly. 96 pages. A full help to the study of the International Sunday-school lessons. HUNTINGDON NORMAL COLLEGE.—Winter Term, 1890, Twelve Weeks.

This Term begins Dec. 30, 1889, and closes March 21, 1890, covering the wintery part of the year. While this time is most uncomfortable for work of most kinds, it is well adapted to study, as the course is arranged in our school. It is the shortest, and, consequently, the least expensive term in the year. Yet it is so arranged that an important part of the work can be completed. What more profitable thing can you do than come and spend these twelve weeks at the Normal? While the former standard in the Normal and Scientific Departments will be rigidly maintained, it will be the aim of the school to give due prominence to Bible study, two courses having been already introduced.—"A Critical or Exegetical Study of the New Testament Scriptures," and "Outlines of Bible Study," using the Bible only as the text-book.

The accommodations, in every respect, are ample. Members, and members' children are especially desired,—all will be welcomed. Special inducements to our ministers,—free scholarships, etc. A copy of the "Advance" sent free to all. For Catalogues and any other information desired, address H. B. Brumbaugh, President, or J. THE GOSPEL MESSENGER.

"Set for the Defense of the Gospel."

Vol. 27. Old Series. Mt. Morris, Ill., and Huntingdon, Pa., Dec. 10, 1889. No. 49.

The Gospel Messenger.

H. B. BRUMBAUGH, Editor,
And Business Manager of the Eastern House, Box 50, Huntingdon, Pa.

THE Bible is a wonderful history. Men have given it a life-time of study and in the end found it to be inexhaustible. It is a never-failing treasury filled with boundless stores of grace. Grace, even plenteous grace, to those who call for it!

WE believe it was Sam Jones who said, "The best way to do good is to do it." There is a bundle of truth in the saying, notwithstanding its bluntness. There are a great many who are ready to tell how to do good, but not so many who are willing to do it.

WE are informed that Bro. D. H. Brumbaugh, our agent near Loysburg, Bedford Co, Pa, had the misfortune of having his barn burned, with its contents. We sympathize with Bro. Daniel in his loss, and hope that his neighbors and brethren may exercise toward him that which the apostle James calls "pure and undefiled religion."

MEN who wish to be popular, sometimes forget and put their coats on wrong side out. This is unfortunate for them, as the inside was not intended to be seen. Others have their coats made on purpose to change. One side or the other is turned out as the circumstances seem to demand. This may do well enough if both sides are equally good.

NEXT week the County Institute will convene in our town, and during the week there will be a course of lectures by the following very popular lecturers: Hon. R. G. Horr, John R. Clark, Dr. Robert Nourse and Will Carleton. The Institute will be under the direction of Bro. M. G. Brumbaugh, who has been Superintendent of the schools of the County for the last six years, and knows just how to make the work profitable and interesting.

THE fall, in the Middle States, has been unusually wet and the rainfalls very large. The first half of November gave us five inches, and the present indications are that the second half will be equally large. In the early part of the fall the ground was dry and the fear was that the rainfall would not be sufficient to feed the winter springs, thus showing that our fears are often groundless, and that it is best to trust in the Lord who doeth all things well.

"TRUTH crushed to earth will rise again," and so will it be with the right. There is considerable gloating, on the part of the whisky element, over the seeming defeat of the temperance cause, but right knows no defeat. It only retreats to gather strength. It is the great force of the universe, and, at its proper time, it will come forth in the vigor of its manhood with victory perched on its banners, and the shouting will be, "Peace on the earth and good will to men." Speed on the day, thou Lion of Judah, and let the saints rejoice.

THE continued rains, muddy [illegible] night seemed to [illegible] the [illegible] such cases the school boy's excuse don't [illegible] "If at first you don't succeed [illegible]." Every important work is accompanied with difficulties, the overcoming of these is the price of the victory.

THERE is a verse which reads, "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." and to one question in integrity of the text or the correctness of the rendering. Yet it is astonishing how many Christians there are who act otherwise. Turn [illegible] the Psalm as if it ran thus: "Behold, how sweet it is for the brethren to have a mind of their own, and each one to take care to express it, and to hold on to it!" —Ex.

ONE of the ways of keeping our children at home, is to make it pleasant for them to be there, and unpleasant to be away from it. The one means the other. No child will care to go out for that which he can find home, if the true element of home life be there. There is no reason why home should not be the most pleasant spot on earth, and, indeed, it should be. Then, it is the safe place [illegible] father's care and [illegible] the home circle will [illegible] longing place to be called. [illegible] cause the [illegible] Christian, except the prodigal [illegible] supremely blessed!

WE had a letter from a brother who [illegible] his eyes were opened when it was [illegible] had an only son and he concluded [illegible] school. Not far away was [illegible] he was persuaded [illegible] would cost [illegible] money than [illegible] our own schools. That young man, [illegible] sorrow of his father, [illegible] and wishes to enter [illegible] It [illegible] same thing, which [illegible] with the same results. Would it not be better to open our eyes soon, before [illegible] on these things!

ALL orders for Almanacs [illegible] filled, and we have a good supply on hand, so that all can be accommodated. Besides giving what is found in regular family almanacs, we give the following as contents of reading matter: "Observations on the Closing Year," "The Place Occupied by the Bible," "The Fulfillment of the Scriptures," "The Parsee, Jew and Christian," "History of the Far Western Brethren," "The Brethren on the Stormy Ocean," "Historical Sketch of the Brethren of Tennessee," "How All May Preach," and "The Heathen." The Ministerial List we have labored to make as correct as possible for us to do under the existing circumstances. We believe, on the whole, that we have a good Almanac to offer to our patrons, and well worth the price asked for it.

We call attention to our list of Bibles, as found [illegible] Almanac for 1890. We believe [illegible] Bibles, for the [illegible] cheapness can be had [illegible] made by publishers [illegible] in the business for years, the paper [illegible] and binding are first-class in every [illegible]. We take pleasure in furnishing [illegible] our Brethren, because we believe [illegible] will give good satisfaction. We also [illegible] calling attention to the advertisements in our Almanac. We believe all the advertisers to be responsible parties, who will do what they promise in writing to them, always say [illegible] you saw the advertisement.

IF we belong to God, all our talents belong to God. This is as true of one kind of talent as of another. All should be employed in promoting the kingdom of God. The man who has a talent for making money should make money for God just as the one who has a talent for preaching should preach for God. A farmer or a teacher [illegible] is equally consecrated as a preacher. [illegible] more keep back a part [illegible] belongs to God, than he can for it can [illegible] principle of the Gospel should [illegible] every [illegible] life. Every employment becomes a holy calling when it is carried [illegible] and with holy hands. [illegible] of the Lord's service should [illegible] Let all [illegible] members [illegible] "As the eye can not say unto the [illegible] nor again the head [illegible] have no need of you." —Sel

THE language of the Bible, to be fully understood, must be [illegible] or we must [illegible] with the customs of the [illegible] This may seem a [illegible] nevertheless true. [illegible] the parables given by Christ, and [illegible] the things contained in the [illegible]. The vines, the hidden treasure, the goodly pearl, the drag-net, the laborers in the vineyard, the marriage feast, the talents, leaven, mustard seed, and many others that might be named, are [illegible] mounted by customs [illegible] and unknown to the [illegible] and beauty depend largely upon the customs that were in vogue when they were given. [illegible] the least of their extensive [illegible] the Bible may possibly know but [illegible] Our ability to quote from the Bible [illegible] determines our knowledge of it. We may be able to quote page after page of the Greek text, and yet not be able to define intelligently [illegible] of it. We may do much [illegible] English, yet there are words in the Bible [illegible] in the English text many of us [illegible] their original meaning. Because of [illegible] mistakes are made in our [illegible] Scriptural language. The more of this [illegible] the less we [illegible] know, and [illegible] a need of careful and thorough Bible study. With the helps we now have, an intelligent study of this Book of books is a possibility to us all; and if we remain in darkness to the true light, we are responsible for it.

ESSAYS.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

WHY DON'T YOU TALK FOR JESUS.

Why don't you talk for Jesus Christ
As you mingle day by day?
You talk of pleasures and of fashions,
Not a word for him you say.
What will you do in that world so fair?
You must talk of his goodness there.

'Tis strange, when he's the only way
By which we heaven can gain,
That Christians do not talk of him
In this world of grief and pain;
But journey to that world above
Ashamed to speak of Jesus' love.

Why don't you talk of Jesus' parents
To your merry little band?
They are each a little pilgrim,
Bid them journey hand in hand
To that home prepared on high
By the friend who's ever nigh.

Why don't you talk of Jesus, shepherd,
As you mingle with your flock?
Some fainting heart may thus be strengthened,
Some sliding feet placed on the Rock,
The pulpit's not the only place
To tell them of redeeming grace

Sweet 'twould be to meet with Christians
Who would talk of Jesus' love,
Pastor, people, old and young,
Talking of that home above;
And by their conversation show
They have a little heaven below.

CHILDREN'S ACTIONS REACH THE PARENTS' LIVES.

SERMON BY W. J. SWIGART.

"A wise son maketh a glad father, but a foolish son is the heaviness of his mother."—Prov. 10: 1.

THE wise writer would seem to make a distinction here between the feelings of father and mother, respecting their common offspring. He does not intend, however, that these particular feelings are exclusive of the one or specific to the other. The mother shares in the gladness produced by a wise and virtuous son. The father suffers, too, from the wayward conduct of foolish children. In Prov. 17: 25, the writer expresses it: "A foolish son is a grief to his father; and bitterness to her that bare him." The object is to show that the lives of children are closely related to the lives of parents. Oft-ntimes the parents do not live so much in their own lives as in the lives of their offspring. Children, your success is your parents' success; your failure is theirs; your honor is their honor, and your shame is their shame and is often felt with more keenness by them than by you.

There are two distinct kinds of boys set forth in the text, and they are about as unlike as light and darkness, and the consequences of their actions differ as widely.

A wise son. It is not the handsome child that brings most joy into a family. Some very pretty faces have back of them very ugly ways and dispositions. It is not the smart child either. I have seen children with bright and quick minds who were both selfish and silly. Neither is it the great or even the learned son, nor is it the richest son that always makes the gladdest old father. It is the WISE son. "Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting, get understanding." Prov. 4: 7. A wise son will know and observe the fifth commandment. He will honor his father and his mother. He will be obedient and respectful. He will be industrious. Laziness will not fit into wisdom. He will be sensible in his actions and ways.

After all, good common sense is a most excellent thing to possess. A wise son will hear and heed advice and counsel; he will receive the wise instructions of parents and teachers. A wise child is true to virtue, to integrity, to uprightness, and inclines his heart to serve the Lord, for this true wisdom includes prominently three relationships:

1. To the parent; for the first obligation that a child should recognize is his duty of respect and love to parents, or the filial obligation, and it may be remarked that however long the parents may live, this obligation never ceases.

2. To the general laws of society and the civil law, or the moral obligation.

3. To God, or the religious obligation. Let these, in their full application, characterize the child, and he it is that maketh a glad father.

A wise son maketh the father happy! The parent, looking on the childhood of his offspring, and seeing the qualities of obedience and gentility manifested, is glad in his heart. As he looks on the development of his own child, and, as year after year is added to his age, as stature comes to his body, strength to his muscles, and genius to his brain, he sees with all these the development of a noble character. The parent's heart rejoices in holy joy. Though his own steps grow feeble and the blood courses more slowly through his veins, as he realizes that his own powers are failing and his own work is almost done, he can look upon the manly form of his son,—an upright man, a useful citizen, carrying on his father's work or something better, serving his generation and his God, and he will have a strong staff on which to lean. Peace, gladsome peace, settles on his soul,—the father is glad, even to the end!

A foolish son. Among the highest of God's created works, foolishness might not be expected. Yet, while man's superior powers qualify him to be wise and good, it may be remarked that nothing can make a fool of itself but a man. Foolishness is the opposite of wisdom. This son is foolish in his conduct and in his words,—in contracting evil habits,—in disobedience and disrespect to his parents,—in taking his own stubborn course in opposition to advice and pleadings of those who are older and wiser,—in seeking evil companionship and yielding to the solicitations of sinful people,—in choosing the wrong instead of the right,—in going the downward road to sin,—in disregard of all filial love or duty,—in breaking down the friendly barriers of social, civil, and moral restraints,—in disregard of all God's laws!

He is the heaviness of his mother,—the great, heavy burden pressing joy and life itself from her. While they both share in this heaviness, there is no mistaking the fact that the mother stands in closer relationship than the father, and suffers most. The mother is the earliest friend, the truest friend, the most faithful friend! The mother is the most tender and sensitive to injury and wrong inflicted upon her offspring.

When you were an infant-tyrant, and your mother was your willing, loving subject, when you made your demand the inexorable law of the house, when neither night nor day, heat nor cold, work nor pain, was proof against you; when you cried and broke the slumber and the quiet of all around you, and all voted you a disturber of the common peace, and an unmitigated nuisance,—nay, when even your father thought within himself (if he restrained from saying it), "If this is the way it is to go, his presence can be regarded as little short of a misfortune," your mother, as your true friend, took you into her arms, clasped you closer for your crying, and in loving, soothing tones called you her own dear, little sufferer, and out of a love, born of such love, should a mother's feelings be regarded with sacredness!

The mother has such high ideals of her own child! How hard to be convinced that her child is foolish and wicked! If all boys and girls were just what their mothers believe them to be, what a promise there would be for integrity and virtue, sobriety and purity in the next generation of men and women! And if all the tricks and schemes and follies of children were known by the mothers, I suspect that some hopes that are bright would fade, and some hearts that are strong would break.

This foolishness is of all grades and of different degrees, but it always presses the maternal heart in exact proportions to its degree.

The little naughtiness of childhood manifests itself in the willfulness, disobedience, lack of courteousness and gentility, the more boisterous manifestation of rudeness and curtness and, probably, insolence. By and by the disposition to be on the streets or elsewhere in violation of the parents' wishes shows itself. They disregard the family society and family prayers in favor of loose companionship and ways that lead on to open sin and wicked courses. How the heaviness grows! How the pressure increases! It all culminates at last. The wicked work is completed. The parental heart breaks from sorrow, caused by a foolish child.

With what dull, bruising pain does the first consciousness of a child's sin break on the parent's mind! The first sound of an oath, the first fumes of a wine-freighted breath, the first sight of a reeling step brings deep sorrow to the parent's heart! With what painful contrast comes up the memory of his innocency, when the mother measured his little feet in the palm of her own hand, and kissed them in maternal fondness,—when the childish crowing filled the room with the music of innocency,—when the little one pattered up the stairway and called "Good-night" from the cradle or crib,—when the parent mended a toy, and, with mingled annoyance and amusement listened to the childish prattle.

Oh, foolish, wayward son, why so tragically spoil this happy scene? Why gratify your lust at the expense of such holy things? When Cassius, fired by envy, was winning Brutus into the conspiracy, in alluding to the object of his hatred, exclaimed, "On what meat doth this our Cæsar feed, that he is grown so great?" The fabled vampire fed on blood, the most precious that coursed through channels of circulation, and on this preciousness his ugliness fed. But on what does the hideousness of the sinful life of a child feed? Nothing less precious than the affection, the joy, nay, the life,—the most sacred and most precious of life, even a mother's life!

Sometimes a little liberty is desired in sowing the wild seed. If it could only be prevented from growing and coming to the harvest! But the stony places will not kill the germ. The fowls of the air will not pluck it from the highway, and nothing can prevent the copious harvest. It is still wild oats,—just as was sowed. It were still not so bad if the bitter, wild harvest were all gathered into the bosom of him who sows. But innocency must suffer, purity must be blighted. The mother's heart must be pierced by the cruel bitterness. Her life must be broken down with the awful heaviness of the offspring's foolishness. The father's hope must be put out. His joy must be blasted. The child, in feeding his own carnal foolishness, has heaped burden on burden, until the paternal lives are crushed out. When Absalom was slain, old king David went up over the gate, moaning, "O my son Absalom! My son, my son Absalom! Would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!" He was deeply moved because his boy was dead, but the very heart's core of his grief was the remembrance that his boy had been bad.

Oh, the sorrows that foolish and wayward conduct brings to parents! How many broken-hearted parents, how many sad lives over the prodigality and heedlessness of children! I have seen mothers in mental agony. I have seen strong men bow themselves and weep real bitterness over the sins of their children. I saw a strong, big man, who had borne the ruggedness of the war and faced the belching cannon without quailing, bow his face to his knees, and, through his sobs and his tears, I heard him arraign the righteousness of God for letting him live to be a witness of the fall and disgrace of his son. I know a woman whose years are beyond the three score and ten who has seen her full share of sorrow and loss in this world (and who that has reached that age has not?) She has lost her husband, her daughters and most of her property. All these she could bear. But her only son is a drunkard. She speaks of the sorrows of her life with a submissiveness and resignation that is sweet to behold, but when she refers to the other, the fountains of her soul break forth and she only sobs, "My poor, dear boy." I could multiply instances of this kind of less or greater degree. Mothers endure sorrow and bear grief. They see friends, one and another, die, but they survive it and have peace even in their sorrow, but the course of a wayward child is like a withering blight to their lives. Neglect, lack of kindness and tenderness in old age are a sorrowful thing. Oh, the mother-heart wants the boon of love. It is for this that the heart aches.

A wise son—a foolish son! What a difference! The gladness of a father—the heaviness of a mother. What a difference! Yet, let each son and daughter be reminded that it is possible for you to be either. Do you sometimes see that cloud on your mother's face when you unexpectedly come where she is? She has been thinking of you probably. Do you notice a painful effort to smile through some deep, hidden gloom, which smile looks like the sickly struggle of sunshine through April clouds? Do you sometimes hear that stifled sigh that comes despite the effort to suppress it? Why is this? Does it sometimes sting you to the quick? Do you ever think that you are making that life unhappy, and robbing it of its joys? Your mother is prematurely grey,—prematurely bent. Her face is prematurely wrinkled. Does it not appeal to you in silent, but none the less powerful terms? She has been carrying something too heavy for her, and that heaviness was the conduct of a foolish son or a wayward daughter.

Can this go on forever? A crisis will come,—and it is now here. Come up closer! Gather into the old homestead again. A family reunion once more—but a sad one. What means this peculiar gathering? Why all this solemn marshaling of friends and neighbors? Carriages standing all the way down the lane and extending up the turnpike, and some over in the meadow. What means it? Come on—you must come, unwilling as you may be. Come right up here. Look down there. There is the explanation of it all. Here is "the true death right before your face." Here is the one who made home home. Here is the extinguished light of home. Here is that earliest and truest and most faithful friend of your life, before you,—pale, cold, DEAD. Look,—look you must! See that sweet mother face,—sweeter, perhaps, than ever before, because seen in the light of everlasting silence and repose.

What material sweetness rests in that face! But look again! See those furrows; see those care-worn traces that even the furnace of death could not burn out! How came they there? Whence were they born? You scored those furrows deeper! Your waywardness bleached more white those white, gray hairs. Your actions and words and neglects were the heaviness that pressed more heavily that indelible gloom. Your cruel conduct of all your wayward life will surge back on you with the power and torrent of an earthquake wave, or the withering blight of the sultry simoom. Now weep, now mourn! Now know real grief! Now taste true sorrow! Now feel genuine remorse! But it is too late. And this is the bitterest dreg of the bitter cup. The heaviness of your mother. And the weight killed her, but now rebounds, never again to burden her saintly life, but to fall on you and grind you to powder.

Preparation for death should be in two senses: (1) for our own death; (2) for the death of others. It is a terrible remembrance to have wronged the innocent dead. "When Death, the great Reconciler, has come, it is never our tenderness we repent of, but our severity."

The Christian religion teaches duties and responsibilities to man as well as to God. It teaches, "Thou shalt not kill." And yet there are many young men who have absolutely shortened the lives of their parents, and verily "brought them in sorrow to their graves," by their idle, reckless, sinful course of conduct. They will never be arraigned before the criminal courts for manslaughter, but they will surely be arraigned before the court of their own conscience (if it be not seared beyond sensibility). And before the tribunal of God they can not evade the change of matricide.

Among the momentous possibilities that open before the young as they enter the arena of life, few are fraught with divergencies of wider range than those as to what they will be to those who gave them life and being. The downward course pursued, and they become the weight, the blight, the curse of the parents' lives. The upward course—the way of temperance, of virtue, of wisdom, of godliness in Christ Jesus, and they are the brightness, the sunshine, the gladness of their lives,—the glory of their years of strength, and the strong support on which they may lean in the years of their age and decrepitude.

I wish that to all the children of this land such thoughtfulness and grace would come as to restrain them from evil and lead them into good. No greater glory awaits the life of any one than that which gathers around the faithful regard of all filial love, and the affectionate fulfilling of all tenderness towards the father and mother,—all done in the name of Christ. There is no greater shame than that which follows their disregard and neglect.

May the overshadowing love and restraining power of the merciful God be around the lives of the young, directing them into the ways of wisdom, whose ways are ways of pleasantness and whose paths are peace! May they bring joy to their parents' hearts, and salvation into their own lives!

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

BY A. HUTCHISON.

WHAT do we understand by Christian life,—we mean a life consecrated to the service of Christ? Is such a life a reality, or only an imaginary life? We answer, it is a real life, consisting of not only thoughts and words, but the every-day deeds of our life. It embraces our dealings with our neighbors, our hired hands, our merchants, and every other class with whom we have to deal in our social and business life. It also means a daily consecration of ourselves to God,—a giving up of self-choice and self-gratification. The apostle gives us some idea of its meaning in the following words: "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death." Philpp. 3: 10.

We must be ready to say, "Thy will, O God, be done," and not only done in heaven, but also upon the earth,—not only done in the outside world, but done also in our own hearts.

We notice that every one expects all others to live Christian lives. Now if any person wishes others to live Christian lives, he must himself live up to the standard that he sets up for his neighbor to live by. You will then have a pretty fair idea of what Christian life is. Christian life means Christian character, and a Christian character means salvation. Such a character can not be established, except as the will of God is made active in the individual. Many talk fluently about the love of God in their hearts, and, at the same time, squarely refuse to keep some of the commandments. Some seem to think there exists no necessity for those commands to be kept now, claiming it is enough to have the love of God shed abroad in their hearts. They forget that "this is the love of God that ye keep his commandments." The following expression is directly to the point: "But whoso keepeth his word, in him verily is the love of God perfected: hereby know we that we are in him." 1 John 2: 5.

The Christian must so live as to leave an impression upon the mind of those with whom he or she may have had business transactions. Let me give you a case on a small scale. Supposing you go the store and make some purchases, and upon settling the clerk presents to you the bill. You pay it, and the clerk gives you a receipt in full to date. You go to your home, look over the account and see a mistake of fifty cents in your favor. Now comes the test. You owe that firm fifty cents. Will you return and correct the mistake? If you want to leave a lasting impression for good upon the mind of that clerk, you will do so by correcting the mistake. Having made right what was wrong, you so establish yourself in the mind of that person, that, unless you, in after life, should betray your character, you will carry the confidence of that clerk as long as you live.

This is only one case, and if it be a sample of your whole life, then, so far as your business life has anything to do, it sets up a Christian character, and hence a Christian life. If it were only a matter of policy, it would pay, but we want no policy Christians, as such. Policy measures might be employed to accomplish a good end, and no one be hurt by it, but we should remember, that the life we are now living does not end when these earthly houses shall be dissolved. Eternal consequences are inseparably connected with this life. We hope to, and we have a promise of being like our Divine Head. The apostle John says, "We shall be like him." 1 John 3: 2. We, however, should remember, that we must get ready, by being like him while he was here. The same apostle says, "He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." 1 John 2: 6. When we undertake to live a Christian life, it means that we are going to follow Christ. To this end, and for this purpose, he lived the life that he did while here,—that he might sanctify elements and ordinances as a medium through which we might follow him, and be like him here. In this way, by faith, we obtain the righteousness of Christ, which righteousness will be made applicable to us. "He that doeth righteousness is righteous, even as he is righteous." 1 John 3: 7.

Then, Christian life means that we shall do something, and that, too, as we will, but as the Lord will. We need make a surrender of our will before we can live a Christian life or be like Christ. He said, "Not mine, but thy will be done." In the Christian life, the will of our Heavenly Father, as given to us by his Son, shall be made active in us, and that means life everlasting. Who could not want to live a Christian life?

AN EXPLANATION WANTED.

S. S. Mohler,

Dear Brother:—

Under "Friendly Criticism," in Gospel Messenger for Oct 26, you make, among other things, said in response to Bro. J. S. Flory, the following general and sweeping statement:

"The foundation for every hope of salvation is "in the Father's will. The birth of Christ was no "more a part of the Father's will than his bap-"tism, or his command to those who seek salvation "to be baptized. The shedding of Christ's blood, "and his death, was no more a part of the Father's "will, than it was for him to wash his disciples' "feet, or command them to wash one another's "feet."

The entire paragraph, as above given, I can not accept as the real meaning you intended to convey, as the significance of the atonement of Christ for sin is more or less belittled by the comparison, made as follows:

"The shedding of Christ's blood was no more "the Father's will than it was for Christ to wash "his disciples' feet, or command them to wash "one another's feet."

Now, certainly, my good brother, you do not mean to say, as the above plainly implies, that the "shedding of Christ's blood was no more a part of the Father's will, than it was for Christ to wash the disciples' feet, or to command them to wash one another's feet."

I don't know when I read anything that so completely staggered me as the paragraph in question, and especially does coming from an authoritative pen in our church, and I do not say to myself, when reading it "Surely, Bro Mohler did not mean to say what his language implies." I therefore, in all kindness to Bro Mohler, ask for a further explanation of the statement made in the paragraph in question. Hoping that I either do not fully understand my brother's language, or that he really said what he would not wish to go forth into the world as the exact teaching of God's Word, or even as being the attitude of our church, respecting the merits of the atonement. I say again. I hope I only get the wrong understanding from my dear and honored brother's language.

In my reading and study of the Word of God I am taught from the very Alpha and Omega of the Scriptures that the death of Christ, and his resurrection and ascension on high are the great pivotal facts in our redemption; that, while baptism, the Lord's Supper, or any other rites or ceremonies have their proper and legitimate place and meaning in the economy of redemption, nothing—absolutely nothing, in importance, can take the place of the sacrificial offering on the cross. This factor in our redemption, and this alone, could satisfy the demands of God's divine and broken law, as nothing else could do. No wonder our dear Lord exclaimed, in holy triumph upon the cross, "It is finished!" This view of the importance or merits of the atonement is by no means at variance with Paul's own language to the Galatians, when he says, "But God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." Much, therefore, as Paul labored for the maintenance of pure and sound doctrine in the church, he emphasized the merits of Christ's death above all other truths of the Gospel, save the resurrection of Christ, which stands as the monumental truth to all ages that the ever-blessed Father accepted the sacrificial offering upon the cross as the only merit by which the best and purest of us can ever hope to be saved.

Permit me now to call some attention to various passages of Scripture relevant to the point under consideration, not with a view of a general discussion, but simply to put the fact of a blessed and divine truth properly before us, as emphasized in God's Word.

1. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins." Col. 1: 14.

2. "Feed the church of God which he has purchased with his own blood." Acts 20: 28. Notice, the apostle says that even the church of God is purchased, not by any merit of its own, but with the blood, the precious blood of Christ.

3 "Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, such as silver and gold * * * but with the precious blood of Christ, as a lamb without blemish and without spot." 1 Pet. 1: 18, 19.

4. "In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins." Eph. 1: 7.

5. "Without shedding of blood is no remission." Heb. 9: 22.

6 "Being now justified by his blood, we shall be saved from wrath through him." Rom. 5: 9.

7. "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin" 1 John 1: 7.

Now, the above citations of Scripture are but a few of the many having reference to the vicarious relation which the blood of Christ sustains to the saved or would-be saved soul. The blood or death of Christ, in all the foregoing citations of Scripture, is never redemption as a fundamental and vital truth so all-important that even the Revelator had to exclaim of the finally saved: "And they sang a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation." Rev. 5: 9

In conclusion, permit me yet to say that however much the respective doctrines of our church ought to be emphasized, as means to an end,—and I believe they ought to be emphasized to the full extent of their importance,—no one fact or facts of the Gospel ought to supersede in importance, in our preaching or writing, the one great and absolute truth, "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin;" that the best of us, and the best of all ages, however far advanced in the divine life, have need of the merits of Christ's death as the only absolute, all-important and prearranged sin-offering for our final passport to the good and pure in heaven, for which blessed and heaven gladdening truth the child of God ought ever to feel to exclaim, "Bless the Lord, O my soul!"

I trust that my well-meant intentions and remarks will be received in the same kind spirit in which they were written, and I hope for a similar reply from my dear brother, on the paragraph in question.

J. T. Meyers.

Oaks, Pa.

REPLY.

J. T. Meyers,

Dear Brother:—

I admire the kind spirit, and respectful manner of your review of my "Remarks," in Messenger No. 43. I have honestly tried to discover to which proposition of mine your exceptions would apply, but I fail to see any difference between us, taking the sum total of the subject in question, unless it is that your article might lead to the belief that the sacrifice and the blood of the atonement,—apart from God's appointments of access to that blood,—is the only thing of any importance to man's salvation, and thus encourage the attempt to set aside the commandments of Christ as of but little, if any, importance to that end.

This is largely the position of the religious world on the subject, and your review is calculated to strengthen that idea in the mind of the superficial thinker. The following from your pen may be understood as opposing that idea:

"In conclusion, permit me to say, that however "much the respective doctrines of our church "ought to be emphasized, as means to an end,— "and I believe they ought to be emphasized to the "full extent of their importance,—that no one fact, "or facts of the Gospel, ought to supersede in im-"portance, in our preaching or writing, the one "great and absolute truth, 'Without the shedding "of blood there is no remission.'"

While this paragraph may stand in support of obedience to all the commandments of Christ and of the Scriptures, still those who set them aside may say, "Bro. Meyers' position is our position, for we, too, emphasize the respective doctrines of our church, and also the commands of the Gospel to the full extent of their importance.

But what are the facts? They are, that whatever may be the peculiar doctrines of their church, emphasized, still men's salvation does not depend upon these doctrines, they admit, and they, therefore, hold that those of other churches, whose doctrines differ from theirs and emphasized, too, are as much God's children and heirs of salvation as they are. They emphasize their respective church doctrines to the full extent of their importance, too, I presume, but the importance they attach to them is seen by their admission, that they perform no vital part in the economy of grace, and that men may share in the merits of the atoning blood, without dependence on doctrines at all. I do not say that our dear Bro. Meyers is to be understood after that manner, for his testimony on this point is in opposition to that view, still the paragraph quoted leaves it liable to this construction.

As to belittling the merits of the sacrifice, and of the atoning blood, by my comparison, to which our brother refers, I feel sure that he meant no unkindness by it, but I would ask, Are men's deliberate acts either smaller or larger than is the man himself morally or mentally? Are those deliberate acts not really the man himself as he is? In other words are the commandments of Christ lower and less to be esteemed than Christ is himself? Is Christ any more to us in his agony in the garden, or in his death on the cross, than in the command to wash feet or to baptize? Is not Christ, — the anointed of God, — in all that he said or did? Where, then, is comparison to be admitted between this, or that, said or done? But right here is where the wedge is entered, and the result of the analysis announced by the religious world, setting aside as of no positively practical value to men, to believe or to obey the sayings of Jesus, and locating merit only in the atoning blood. This leaves the soul under the domination of lust and sin, enjoying the friendship of the world in enmity to God.

The distinction set up in my "Remarks" is, that the will of the Father pervades the entire work of redemption, and gives both character and form to it, beginning its development with the birth of Christ, then his life and ministry, death and resurrection, and I make this manifestation of the Father's will an argument against a species of unbelief, dominating the religious world, that would set aside the precepts, principles, and commands of Christ, on the plea that the blood of Christ only has merit to save. I make the further argument on the admission, on my part, of the merits of the atoning blood, that, whatever merit,—far-reaching as it is, there is in the atoning blood, it has that merit solely because it was and is the Father's will, that the sacrifice of the body of Christ, and the shedding of his blood should be accepted as fully meeting the demands of a broken law, and to open the atoning fountain for sin and uncleanness, stating that if the Father's will was not in the shedding of the Savior's blood, then there would be no more merit in it to answer the end designed than would be in common blood,—which will certainly be admitted.

Now, if the Father's will put merit into the blood of Christ for the end designed, my argument is that that same will has merit in it pointing to the same end, wherever that will manifested itself in the life and ministry of Christ; therefore there is merit in the command to baptize,—to wash the saints' feet, or in any and every precept and duty commanded by Christ, whether relating to the doctrines of the church, or to the private life of believers. Upon this I build the additional argument, that to reject any part of that will, rejects merit to save, as certain as to reject any other part of that will, as much so, if I reject the will on this side of the death of Christ as after his death. My "Remarks" do not make me say that there is an equal amount of merit in all that was said or done by Christ, but there is merit,—some merit in all.

The manifestation of the Father's will had for its object man's reconciliation to God, with all its subsequent glory, and in so far as the curse on the world was an obstacle to this reconciliation, man was passive in the work, but in so far as, by voluntary action, men depart from God, reconciliation is made dependent on their voluntary effort, to repent, believe and obey. To effect such reconciliation, it was as necessary in the manifestation of God's will that every phase of a depraved nature, with its pride, prejudice, and ambition, should be met and broken down, as it was to open a fountain for sin, to wash it away. To manifest that will and give it practical form, made up the ministry of Christ among men, — having for its end man's reconciliation to God. That such blessed results are put within the ability of men to secure, constitutes one of the grand promises of the Gospel, and is made the subject of a direct appeal by the apostle, 2 Cor. 20: 3, "We pray you in Christ's stead, Be ye reconciled unto God." This teaches that, to reject these provisionary measures within men's control and use, produces effects as disastrous, as to reject the manifestations of God's will in the offering of Christ vicariously.

That I recognize the merits of the atoning blood most fully, see the last two paragraphs of my "Remarks" in No. 43.

If, then, it is true,—as all who believe the Gospel admit,—that Christ's mission was not to do his own will, but the will of the Father who sent him,—if that will puts merit into one, it puts merit into all he did and said, bearing on the great purpose of man's reconciliation to God. It establishes the fact that the Father's will is the important, underlying, pervading, controlling, essential power and merit, effecting reconciliation to God.

The Lord sanctified and keeps the blood of the Lamb, slain before the foundation of the world, as the blood that speaketh better things than that of Abel. Christ's atonement is the cleansing fountain; and the sanctification of all depends upon obedience to the precepts Jesus taught, and the way he exemplified, as God's highway to everlasting life, to all who would receive him as the sent of God, to believe and obey him. But if there is no merit to be obtained in man's voluntary obedience to the Gospel, from the several acts of obedience,—if the blood of Christ has not, through the will of the Father, sanctified, each and severally, all the acts of obedience required,—if only the merits of the atoning blood may be a source of hope in a prospective sense, and not in the present now, then I confess my utter ignorance of the great economy of grace, and I find myself hampered with a series of arbitrary regulations that are utterly confusing.

My argument, if well based, would put those who limit saving merits to the blood of Christ, to the task of deciding how the will of the Father would make that only meritorious, and not make other manifestations of that same will meritorious. There is no system of logic, no method of analysis by which it can be shown, and therefore it leaves the argument, against setting aside or neglecting to obey all the commandments of Christ in a form so simple that confusion is impossible.

I can not think otherwise than that our dear brother did not follow up the line of my "Remarks" with sufficient care to comprehend them fully. Possibly, too, I was not as clear and explicit as I should have been, for I find it to be one of my peculiarities that while a matter to my mind may be clear, I think that, of course, it also is to others; but I have frequently found myself to be mistaken in this respect. CHARACTERISTICS OF A TRUE CHRISTIAN.

BY SUSAN SIDLE.

"A man's pride shall bring him low, but honor shall uphold the humble in spirit."—Prov. 20: 23.

WHAT is pride? Inordinate, unreasonable self-esteem, insolence, rude treatment of others. "That which is highly esteemed among men is an abomination in the sight of God." Luke 16: 15 Is there anything more highly esteemed among men than a conformity to the fashions, customs, pomp and pride of this world? Do we not see one trying to excel another,—not in humility, not in self-denial, but in conformity to the foolish and sinful fashions and customs of the day, in finery, grandeur and display of arrogance and pride? "Pride goeth before before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall

The apostle James says, "Have no respect for those that wear gay clothing." Well do I remember the words of a dear brother, forty-five years ago, who, since then, has gone to receive the reward of his labor. He said, "Pride and fashion are sending more souls to keep company with the rich man in hell than strong drink. When we behold the accursed sin of pride and fashion now, at this time, we almost come to the conclusion that fifty years ago it was just in its infancy. Since that time it has been spreading over the land and in the church like a mighty torrent and a pestilence, sending many, no doubt, to an early grave.

No doubt the rich man was a proud man, being "clothed in purple and fine linen." He also fared sumptuously every day, which shows he was as selfish and proud as we find some now in our enlightened day. Some, to-day, are like the priest and the Levite. When they passed the man on the highway that fell among thieves, they went on and left him lie in his suffering condition. Soon the good Samaritan came along, who helped him on his way with gladness and with joy We often feel sorry when we see the innocent and sinless bodies of little children adorned in the disgusting fashions of sinners, and pride instilled into their young hearts, in some cases before they can lisp the mother's name.

Now, perhaps, some one will say, "I can dress according to the fashions of the world and sinners, and yet not be proud." In answer to this I say, "If your heart is not proud, you will not want to adorn your body in vanity." Let us be consistent, and learn of the Savior, who was meek and lowly in heart. If you indulge in the vanities of fashion you are not a follower of Jesus. He did not give you such a spirit, but says "Learn of me and be subject one to another and be clothed with humility, for God resisteth the proud and giveth grace to the meek."

If you want to know what the Savior wants you to learn of him, you will find it in the New Testament Scriptures. If you read and study as you ought to, the closer acquaintance you form with the Word, the more precious and interesting will it become, and the more rapidly will you grow in knowledge and holiness. The pious David declared that his love for the Word of God was so ardent, that it was his meditation day and night. It is pleasant and delightful to read and study that Sacred Volume. You know that Jesus is teaching you in church, Sunday-school and social. The earnest inquiry of every soul, inspired with the love of God should be, "Lord, what wouldst thou have me to do?"

Wherever there is piety towards God, there will exist benevolence towards man. In such a heart these springs up a warm and tender affection. Such seem to be brethren, indeed, because they are the brethren of Christ and bear something of his image in the humility, meekness and benevolence of their character. If we are diligently in the school of Christ, then will we be able to give to him a reason of the hope that is in us, with meekness and fear. Then you shall have the peace of God which passeth all understanding. You will be known as his servants, you shall bear the royal sign of, which, when the gates of death shall be unbarred, shall give you free access to the royal presence, and to that temple of God on high

GOOD-BYE

BY MATILDA SCHUBERT.

WHAT a world of meaning the above expression conveys! What memories cluster around it! Who has not, at some time, said it, or some one employed it? There is no light "good-bye" and good wishes to the friend starting in the morning on a day's journey with the expectation of a safe and sure return and a hearty welcome by the happy home circle in the evening.

There is also the long "good-bye" to those who have been our closest friends for many years, but who now seek new scenes of usefulness in distant lands. How we cling to their hands even when we know it is best they should go! They have blessed us with their every-day sympathy at times when the dark clouds of adversity, and the deep waters of affliction threatened to overwhelm us. When the time of rejoicing came they were with us to rejoice. Now, that they are leaving us, our hearts are saddened by this long farewell.

But sadder than all is the last "good-bye," which we give our dead. With what despairing agony we hear over the cold, silent form! How vainly we call for one word from the loved lips, one look from the dear eyes, one ray of the sunlight has forever passed! Oh the bitter, heart-breaking sorrow of that last look and hand "good-bye" when we cover the loved face and beneath the cold clay, and bear to the last resting place!

Sometime we, too, must bow to the dear messenger. Sometime we will hear the cold hand of Death drawing us away from those who love us, and some one will be left to mourn when we are gone; but though the tomb may seem grim, the pathways steep and haggard, may lead to the green pastures — the still waters — where no shadow of farewell falls!

THE HEAVENLY LAND.

BY SOLOMON SCHUBERT.

HEAVEN is more than a state. It is a place, a land, a country, separate and distinct from all other countries. The saints shall possess it as their final and everlasting dwelling-place. Let us observe:

1. Heaven is a land of infinite and eternal day. When St. John, upon the isle of Patmos, received that wonderful revelation of the future, in his description of the heavenly Jerusalem, he declares that "there shall be no night there." Rev. 21: 25. No night; no need of closing the gates of the city. Whether is here meant material or mental night, or both, one thing we do know, that there will be no intellectual darkness there. Every one shall have perfect understanding in all things; the spirit of God shall shine and work in every heart, and Jesus shall fill the land with light and love and joy and peace. Here, under the cover of material darkness, the innocent are murdered, and cruelties are inflicted upon the unprotected with fiendish rage. Superstition and idolatry apprehend their fellow-creatures, confine them in gloomy prisons and dungeons. In that heavenly world there will be no night, no darkness,—material or intellectual,—but day, perpetual and everlasting day.

2. Heaven is a land indescribably fair and beautiful. This we argue from analogy. If the present world, with its green earth, hills and valleys, mountains and plains, woods and meadows, brilliant skies, fleecy clouds, soft and mellow light, is so fair and beautiful and so brief in its duration, what, I ask, must be that land, that world on high, which shall never, never end?

"Certainly, analogy will not allow us to suppose that the favored division of the universe, called heaven, differs in its substantial, material form from the other parts of the unbounded whole. The intellectual universe, as it regards locality and relative position, is always found in union with the material; nor are we authorized to assume their final separation in any instance, not even in heaven itself!"

In whatever way we may conceive "of the beauty and grandeur, the forms and colors, the groves and gardens, the temples and melody, palaces and triumphs, existing as objects of interest and delight to the immortal nations adorning the fields and plains of heaven,—we can tell you naught in addition" but what is written in the Divine Word. Rev. 21: 22.

3. Heaven is a land of abiding and everlasting rest. As the pious Baxter of England has observed so well, it is the "Saints' Everlasting Rest." How wise and merciful is the Divine order,—rest comes after toil! Rest is sweet when the labors of the day are ended. Evening prepares a soft couch for the weary laborer. The calm twilight and the "stilly night" are beneficent messengers, sent from heaven to prepare the workman for his nightly rest. Rest! Rest! How sweet to rest in peace and safety when day closes life's toils; and night's hallowed rest restores tired nature! How soon we forget all the toils and cares of the weary day!

Here, upon this earth, rest is followed by toil and weariness, but in that heavenly land the rest of the redeemed is undisturbed and unbroken forever! The happy people who inhabit that blest land are free from all sorrow and care. "And the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with singing and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Isa. 35: 10. "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." Heb. 4: 9.

4. Heaven is a land of perpetual health and immortal life. The inhabitants of that land "shall not say, I am sick." Is. 33: 24 "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write; for these words are true and faithful." Rev. 21: 4, 5.

In this land there are many sick and suffering ones, bearing heavy loads of care, and, as they walk along, their path, at each step, is marked with pain and heavy woe, but, oh, how blest are all who keep the heavenly land in view! Though weary of the way, yet they are still cheered on by the promise made to all God's weary children: "As thy days, so shall thy strength be." Deut. 33: 25. Yes, dear friends, remember that God's help is equal to your utmost need, sufficient for each hour of destroying pain when, by faith and prayer, you follow where the Savior's sacred teachings lead. Look back upon the way you came and see how your Lord has kept you by his grace, how you have endured the sufferings of the way, and how the long and weary hours ended, giving fresh courage to your fainting heart. There is rest for you in that land of day and beauty, and rest and health and life immortal. Life's darkest day will soon be past, and upon you, as upon other lives, a morning sun will shine, and night end in eternal day! No repining; no looking back, plowman; no retreating! Hark! what song is that I hear? It is a rallying song. I hear many voices, cheering the tired traveler, "climbing with weary feet an up-hill road."

O, that heavenly land! When shall the transporting, rapturous scenes rise to my immortal sight? When shall I see sweet fields, arrayed in living green? Come, dear friends, let us all go to that land above,—all beautiful and bright. Why should we shrink at pain and woe, or be dismayed at death, when we have in view the goodly land, the Canaan that we love, which we shall so soon behold with unclouded eyes! The Savior's voice bids us come! Through endless years our song will be, "O, that beautiful world, that beautiful world!"

THE LORD'S PRAYER.

BY JENNIE E. CALHOUN.

OF all the countless prayers, continually ascending heavenward, none is so full, so complete, so all-absorbing, reaching down to man's lowest need, soaring upward in so triumphant a shout of praise, as "Our Father." The longest prayer ever offered by man does not comprehend it; the shortest petition does not compare with it. In it are whole volumes of divine literature.

Little has been written concerning it, and yet the first two words would furnish subject matter to a thoughtful writer for a large volume. Seldom is any part of it used as a text, and yet any zealous minister could find in it subjects for a year's sermons.

A whole grand, spiritual life is comprised in this prayer. From the first tearful lisping of "Our Father" by the spiritual babe, the newly-born soul continually grows in "stature and knowledge" until the full-grown man ends with the all-absorbing, passionate cry of acknowledgment, "Thine is the kingdom, the power and the glory."

Children of Christ, bend low your ears, shut out all worldly sounds, and listen to the grand, heavenly symphony, composed by the Master, ascending from pure hearts, set to music by unseen angel fingers, and, as it reaches heaven, swelling into one grand chorus as it blends with "the song of Moses and the Lamb."

If that beautiful tale in the Talmud, of Sandalphon, be true, what a beautiful coronal of flowers this must form as it is caught by the deathless one as it swiftly ascends from the heart's altar to heaven's gate. First of all the passion flower, symbol of faith, of which every opening bud reveals in miniature "that which bids the humble hope in him who died for all." Then lilies, hare-bells, violets and roses, each expressive of faith, desire and unbounded love; while all are bound together with laurel and bay, imitative of God's power.

> "Thus climbing on through all the heights of story,
> From worth to worth, and glory unto glory."

May not this wreath of immortelles now encircle the brow of the Divine Author, instead of the crown of thorns that once pierced his blessed brow?

Christ, the eldest Son, wearied and perturbed by the worldliness and the hypocrisy of the Pharisees, withdraws with his disciples to the Mount of Olives. Here he hopes to rest, for our Blessed Lord, while here on earth, became tired even as we do. Rest was denied him, for not only did his disciples follow him, but also a great multitude. Seating himself in the midst of his disciples, he began teaching those few loving followers as a father would teach his children, or a teacher his pupils. What he taught them was in the simplest of words, a fit lesson for little children, and yet his teaching at this time formed the most noted sermon ever preached.

While he sits on the summit of the Mount, his eyes feasting on the glorious handiwork of "Our Father," which lies, like a panorama, spread out before him, his soul still wanders in the cities of Galilee. He sees not only the deeds of the openly wicked, but his all-seeing eye penetrates beneath the thick robes of hypocrisy in which the Pharisees had wrapped their sin-steeped souls. Doubtless he had just witnessed a scene similar to the one which he afterwards describes so aptly in the parable of the two men who went up to the temple to pray. His soul is filled with horror and righteous indignation at the long prayers of the Pharisees, filled with self-gratulation, and intended rather for the gaping, listening crowd than for an all-knowing, beneficent God.

His heart is sorrowful and yearns for those few lambs who have gathered about him. He looks forward to the time when he will no longer, in person, be with his followers. He sees these few followers filled with sorrow and dismay; and well he knows how much they will need prayer to guide and comfort them.

That these tender lambs may not be led astray, but that they may have a call that will ever be recognized by the Good Shepherd, Christ, in his loving-kindness, withdraws his mind for a time from the subject of his great mission, — lost humanity, - and centres it on those few redeemed. The first to enter under his condemnation are the hypocrites,—those who pray to God but "to be heard of men." He then warns them of praying like the heathen, who hope "to be heard for their much speaking."

Already he descries in his disciples' minds the first faint glimmering of the light of eternal wisdom —"Do ye not know?"—not expressing doubt, but loving counsel and reproof,—"your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him?" Then, raising his eyes heavenward, all thoughts of time and space are lost sight of by that Divine Mind. It is soul communing with soul,—the divine souls made one.

He sees our God, as the loving Father only, who knows all our wants, grants to us all of life's blessings that are good for us, and is the fullness of all happiness and peace. Then, as he continues in prayer, before his soul's eyes bursts out the glow of all God's matchless power and glory.

While this prayer dropped from Christ's lips like honeyed dew, his face, no doubt, was transfigured, even as when on the Mount of Transfiguration with Peter, James and John; for not even mortal man can withdraw his mind wholly from earthly thoughts, and fix it upon the eternal without his soul's radiance being reflected upon his face. How much more, then, would the face of that sinless one shine with refulgent glory, coming straight from the throne of the Almighty, into whose presence his pure soul had wandered.

When the prayer was ended, the "amen" sounded, echoed and re-echoed by saints and angels around the throne, it was hard for the Incorruptible One to withdraw again his gaze from his home and fix it on the place of his self-banishment,—our evil world.

His first words show that his thoughts have not yet been wholly recalled from the pleasant places of heaven. There was ineffable peace, no room for hatred or strife; here all was hatred and strife except with these few humble followers, and they were not wholly weaned from Satan's ways "For if ye forgive not men their trespasses neither will your Heavenly Father forgive ye your trespasses." He again becomes the thoughtful teacher, mindful of the evils about his beloved pupils, —pointing out the better way, — warning, commanding.

In reading and carefully comparing the parables directly following with this prayer, many of them seem given to make more plain to Christ's followers any parts of the prayer which might not be understood.

When the "Sermon on the Mount" was ended and evening drew near, and with it the hour for prayer, with what diverse feelings must the chosen disciples, for the first time, have used this prayer! The impetuous Peter, no doubt, spoke the words hurriedly, forgetting altogether, "Lead us not into temptation;" while John, the well-beloved, caught each word as it fell from the lips of our Savior, treasured each in his heart and reverently repeated the whole.

This prayer is adapted in its simplicity and comprehensiveness to all classes, and to all wants. The little child, with a heart full of faith and love, can comprehend and repeat it with fervency at his mother's knee. The full-grown man, whose best, earthly friend has long been hidden from him by the cold, dark earth,—when troubles come thick and fast upon him, and he knows not where to turn,—if he can but cry in all sincerity, "Our Father," will find the clouds breaking away from around him, and through the rifts he will see the Sun of Righteousness shining full upon his path, making the dark places light, and revealing shining manna for body and soul lying about him, only waiting to be gathered. He gathers and eats, and is revived, even as the drooping plants are revived by a warm shower from heaven.

The heart-broken mother, who has just seen the coffin-lid close over the loved face of her first-born, and can submit patiently to the chastening of him "who doeth all things well," stands high in the heavenly classes, and finds no trouble in saying, "Thy will be done," but prays none the less earnestly, "Thy kingdom come," looking forward joyfully to the time when she shall again behold her darling with him who said, "For of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Let each one of us learn from the Great Teacher how to pray aright, so that to-night, when we say, "Our Father," we may willingly and tenderly, yes, lovingly, take to our hearts and accept, as brothers and sisters, not only the noble and good of the earth, but also the depraved and fallen as well, knowing that Christ, our Mediator, came to save sinners, and that "Our Father" is the Father of all, loving the little heathen child in his ignorance as much as the pampered child of Christian parents.

Let us not alone repeat, "Hallowed be thy name," with our lips, but let us show in our lives, by every word and action, our reverence for and love of that name, blessed above all others.

Let us labor with our mite, our influence and our time, that "thy kingdom may come" to all the earth; but first let us open our hearts that the pure winds of heaven may blow through the sin-stained corridors, cleansing them and making them fit dwelling-places for Christ's spirit.

When once God has taken complete possession of our hearts, it will be easy for us to say, "Thy will be done," for our wills will be one with Christ's, and we shall soon learn under his guidance, "how sublime a thing it is to suffer and be strong," and all things shall be to us "as in heaven."

When we ask for "our daily bread," let us not think alone of food for "this vesture of decay," but let us lift our spiritual hands heavenward, craving for spiritual sustenance, so that we may be strengthened in soul as well as body.

When we have gotten so far as this, we can understandingly pray, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." Not from sorrows would we ask to be delivered, for "sorrows are but blessings in disguise," but from wrong-doing that would take from us the smile of our Loving Father, which loss would plunge our soul in deepest night.

THE MESSENGER FOR 1889.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

Soon the year of our Lord, 1889, will have passed into eternity, heavily-laden with the events that have transpired within its limits. Many were the dangers and dire disasters which brought death, destruction, misery and woe to the inhabitants of the earth,—God's footstool. Notwithstanding all this, the infinite love of Almighty God has been richly bestowed upon us,—far above our deservings. As a people and as a church we have been highly favored.

The laborers in the vineyard have not been altogether idle. Our missionaries have been out in the field, sowing the seed of the Gospel, and gathering the precious sheaves into the garner of the church. The watchmen or shepherds have been on the alert for the inroads of the enemy,—"feeding the flocks of God over which the Holy Spirit hath made them overseers." Acts 20: 28.

Last, but not least, the Gospel Messenger has been true to its name,—doing a grand and noble work for the church. In harmony with the Gospel it has been extending and widening its influence for good, and is a source of an untold amount of good, which only eternity will reveal.

Through its columns the members are more firmly united in Gospel love and affection for each other. We become, as it were, intimately acquainted with each other through the "Correspondence Department," and exchange ideas and sentiments through the "Essay Department." The "Querist's Department" enables us to ask, and have answered, questions of more or less import to us all. On the whole I think our Editors have performed their arduous and sometimes, perhaps, perplexing duties, remarkably well. They have richly merited the honor and best efforts and good will of the contributors and readers of our paper.

The weekly visits of the Messenger are doubly dear to those of us who are living isolated from the body of the church. (I speak from past experience.) No 46 of the present volume lies before me as I write, and on its pages I trace the thoughts of several correspondents whose names have become familiar words to me. "Royal Crumbs" (with the author of which I have a very slight personal acquaintance, having met him and family at a love feast near Parsons, Kansas, ten years ago) are rich and, like his past "crumbs," highly flavored with love and devotion to the good cause. The first "Crumb," from the Exeter church, Nebr., cast a feeling of apprehension over my mind, in that it referred my mind to loved ones long parted from,—the anointing of Bro. S. H. Caylor, for whom, with his companion and Bro. D. B. Heiny and family, are cherished feelings of more than ordinary affection by me.

THE MISSION OF POVERTY.

BY HENRY ROYER

"Blessed are ye poor." "God hath chosen the poor of this world." "I was a hungered, thirsty, a stranger, naked, sick." Who believes this as descriptive of the Lord of glory? Who glories in the blessedness of poverty? Who sees Incarnate Deity and the Judge of all the earth in the poor saints? O for the eye-salve of the Divine Oculist to heal our Laodicean ophthalmia!

What an intolerable scurvy poverty is to many of us! How glad we are if the poor suffer on in silence, and keep their fingers out of our pocket-books! How thankless, or with what cold formality, we sit at our epicurean tables, while our fellow-members, with grateful hearts and tearful eyes, subsist on scanty fare! To pamper self and neglect the poor is not the religion of Jesus Christ. To "fare sumptuously every day," while some tattered, scabby, ulcerous Lazarus lies at the door, is the quintessence of selfishness.

The great marvel of the world's history is that God in Christ became poor. A great want was here met, and a glorious example given. The words "ye know," in 2 Cor. 8: 9, contain the pith of practical religion. So long as Christ's poor are an annoyance to us, we do not know Christ. When a saint's face is wan and his eyes hollow for lack of nourishment, while all around him are those who have plenty and to spare, it is enough to make Jesus weep in heaven, and repeat the Olivet wail of Matt. 25: 41, 45, "Inasmuch as ye have not done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have not done it unto me," "Depart ye cursed."

What thunder words for the mammon-worshiper! What a crushing, irreversible anathema for the neglecter of the poor! What an eternally-damning penalty for the despiser of the Incarnation! Whoever is ashamed of poverty is ashamed of Jesus Christ. Sacrifice is the glory of Christianity. Selfishness is the curse of humanity.

O, the blessedness of being poor with Jesus to enrich others! If we truly apprehend the cross, we must become very poor before we feel poor enough to beg. If we have found Jesus, we will live on bread and water, and yet feel rich. If there is anything real under the sun, it is the sense of joint-heirship with the All-inheritor. God's poor must be sought out. They do not flaunt their poverty. The keen eye and quick sympathy of Christian love finds them.

The poor are the divine test of our fealty. Those who spurn the poor inside the walls of Zion, have nothing to spare for missions outside. Remember the poverty of Jesus and your riches in his emptiness, and you will be glad he has hinged your salvation on kindness to the poor!

A. D. S. is informed that anonymous articles go into the waste basket. We must have the name of the writer as a guaranty of good faith.

WITH this issue of the MESSENGER closes the [illegible] volume. How rapidly time flies! It [illegible] only since we wrote the first lines [illegible] and now the end is in sight.

WE have to-day an interesting letter from a friend in Kansas who has been reading the MESSENGER for some time and now desires to [illegible] church. He is fully convinced that [illegible] to true doctrine.

BRO. JOHN WISE and wife, after spending some time visiting among the churches in the East, are expected to reach their home in Kansas in a few days. They will be welcomed home by the church where Bro. John has labored faithfully for many years.

WE propose in a few weeks, to publish a number of [illegible] with the seconds of their [illegible] and the place of their worship. A number of our [illegible] will give their best thoughts [illegible] and we believe the articles will be [illegible] result in much good.

THE Brethren's Almanac for 1890 contains the [illegible] deceased ministers. Owing to [illegible] many of the reports from all the churches [illegible] are, doubtless, a number of deaths which [illegible] not appear in the Almanac. We believe we have [illegible] from two [illegible] ministers.

WE [illegible] that Bro. James M. Neff, of [illegible] Ohio, has been called to the ministry. Bro. George Mahler was also elected at the same time and place to the ministry. May God bless these young brethren and give them an abundance of [illegible] that they may become [illegible] ministers of his Word!

BRO. D. B. GIBSON, of Catskill, Ill., is holding [illegible] meetings. The interest is excellent, with two applications for baptism. During the meetings held by him in the Mohler [illegible] Bond Co., Ill., the [illegible] added to the church by baptism [illegible] reclaimed. The [illegible] spared some time in each [illegible] preaching the word well.

BRO. JACOB STRICKLER and his wife, sister Mary, living in Grundy county, Iowa, are now both in the [illegible] year. They have lived together [illegible] husband and wife sixty-eight years. It is [illegible] that the head and wife are permitted to live [illegible] long, since the allotted time of [illegible] Should their lives be spared two years more, they will have journeyed together three score years and ten.

BRO. AMICK, writing from Nickerson, Kans., under date of Nov. 30, informs us that he expects to reach home the present week. He contracted a severe cold on his way east from Denver and was not well when he wrote. We shall be glad to see Brother and sister Amick at home again. We have felt rather lost, at times, in the office without him.

FOR the last two months, owing to much work, the Office Editor has been compelled to neglect his private correspondence. With Bro. Amick's return we hope to give more attention to it again. Those who feel that they have been neglected, will please remember that there is a limit to every man's ability to work. When that limit is reached, he must stop. This law is inexorable.

BRO. JAMES M. NEFF, of Covington, Ohio, says: "I want a few students in Greek and Latin, especially New Testament Greek, by correspondence this winter. If you will kindly say to your readers that I will give instruction to such as desire to pursue these studies at their homes, I will feel grateful." Bro. Neff is well qualified for work of this kind and we can most heartily recommend him to any who may desire to pursue the studies he names.

IN a recent private letter Bro S. S Mohler, referring to his health, says: "I think my health is slowly improving; some days I feel fairly well and hopeful, other days everything is different again. It will require time to overcome my years of exposure." We are glad to hear of even a slight improvement in our dear brother's health and we know that our brethren will join us in the hope that he may soon be fully restored to health and usefulness to the church.

MANY of our brethren and sisters, East and West, have responded liberally to the missionary and tract call for a Thanksgiving offering, for means to carry on the work of the church. The little band at Kenka, Fla., sent $16 50, and others have done as well. Many more who have not yet done so will, doubtless, send in their offering. We give a partial list of what has been received, and will give the rest next week. Are there not others who desire to help swell the amount?

ON Thanksgiving Day services were held in the Chapel at this place. An offering of twenty-five dollars was sent to the Tract Work. One soul made the good confession of faith and was baptized, thus making Thanksgiving Day a most important date in her life. We rejoice that the good work goes on, and, one by one, sinners are coming into the fold of Christ. In the evening we held a most enjoyable love-feast in the school dining-hall. About one hundred members surrounded the tables of the Lord,—many of them for the first time,—and it was in every way an enjoyable meeting. The day will long be remembered by all who enjoyed the meetings at this place.

WE learn from the Perlie Springs Herald that work is now progressing on the electric railroad from Warrensburg to the Springs. The Herald says that work has now progressed so far that the completion of the road is assured. The grounds will be lighted with electric lights next season. We are glad to note this, as it will be a great convenience to those who attend our Annual Meeting at Perlie Springs next May. The depot at Warrensburg is one and one-fourth miles from the meeting-grounds and an electrical railroad will help to solve the question of transportation between the two points. We trust the hopes of the editor of the Herald will be fully realized and that the electrical railroad will be in good running order by May 25, 1890.

Bro. D. W. Strickler, of Luray, Va, says: "After reading Bro. S. S. Mohler's reply to Bro. J. S. Flory in a recent number of the Messenger, I can say Amen to it. Brethren and sisters, let us all take the Messenger and read it carefully and prayerfully for it is a power for good to those who are seeking after the whole truth, and as we ought to be able to answer every man for the reason of the hope that is within us, the Messenger will enable us to do so. Bro. Mohler's reply is worth the price of the paper for one year."

The growth of the Methodist Book Concern has been remarkable. It is the oldest organized auxiliary agency of Methodism in the United States. The Methodist Episcopal church took an organic form in 1784 at the Christian Conference. Five years later, the Book Concern was established in Philadelphia by the Rev. John Dickens, by order of the church, with a borrowed capital of $600. It celebrated this year, therefore, its centennial. From that insignificant beginning the Book Concern has grown until it has now branches in most of the principal cities of the country, with annual sales from the books and papers amounting to more than $1 500,000. Since 1836 the concern has made a clear profit of $4,000, 000, in addition to which it has paid $2,000,000 to the various departments of the church by order of the General Conference. That is a business record of which any house might be proud, and which is particularly pleasing to the large number of Methodists in the United States.

The following letter will explain itself. Arrangements are being made to have this urgent call for preaching the Word attended to: "I have been taking the Messenger for some months and find it one of the best papers I ever saw. I have been a member of the Baptist church for years but have not been satisfied as such. I will say, however, that I have at last given up the doctrine as taught by that church. I withdrew a short time since, with the expectation of uniting with the Brethren. I have been County Surveyor most of the time, for the last twenty years, and as I did not think it right to be under oath, I resigned said office. I left secret societies years ago, and am persuaded that they constitute a very great national evil. Now, in view of the foregoing facts, I have rendered myself unpopular. Many of those who used torespect me so highly, now turn their backs on me as if I were a rebellious being. This is pretty hard, I assure you; yet I am fully convinced that it is my duty to bear it. From what has been said, you see where I stand. I now request you to send one of the Brethren here to hold a meeting for my benefit (others are anxious also). The Brethren can have the use of the South Fork church, five miles south of Hodgenville. The meetings of that congregation are fixed on the fourth Saturday and Sunday of each month. The house may be had any time so as not to conflict with these appointments. Now, Mr. Editor, you may just direct some one to write to me when he can come, and I will have it published in the Larne County Herald.—M. G. Hill, Hodgenville, Ky."

QUERISTS' DEPARTMENT.

The Young Man.—Lay Members Speaking in Public.—Blasphemy Against the Holy Ghost.—Hating Father or Mother.—Sunday or Sabbath.—Psalms and Hymns.

1. Will you please tell who the young man was that followed Jesus, referred to in Mark 14: 51?

Nannie Harmon.

Who the "certain young man" was we have no means of determining. That he was not one of the apostles seems clear from the language used to describe him. Had he been one of the twelve, Mark would have given the name. He was, doubtless, roused from his sleep by the noise made by the soldiers and the rabble that came with them to take Jesus, and came to render aid to him. Olshausen and Lange say, with some degree of probability, that it was Mark himself. The fact is related by Mark alone. "The youth's picture agrees in every line with the character of Mark. The circumstances of the youth agreed perfectly with those of Mark, the friend of the Lord resting in his country-house for the night. There is an analogical support of this view in the fact that John, also, by a mere hint, weaves himself and his mother into the evangelical narrative (John 1: 40; 19: 25): and, probably, Luke does the same thing, 24: 18." This view seems not unreasonable but it can not be looked upon as authoritative, as no record is given of the name of the young man.

2. Are lay members allowed by the church to teach and admonish in public, provided they are well versed in the Scriptures and the spirit causes them to feel as if it were their duty to do so? Perry Bowser.

If the above query refers to regular meetings for preaching God's Word, the answer is, No. Lay members may teach in the Sunday-school or speak in the social prayer-meeting, but in services held for preaching, only those who are set apart by the church for that work are permitted to teach and admonish. God's house is a house of order.

3. Will you please explain Matthew 12: 32 as to the forgiveness in this world, or the world to come? From the reading it looks as though there is forgiveness in the world to come. Samuel Rodefer.

The meaning is that they who sin against the Holy Ghost never have forgiveness. Mark 3: 29 gives the language this form, "But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation," and Luke 12: 10, "But unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost it shall never be forgiven." These quotations fix the meaning of the phrase. Certainly Christ did not mean to teach that any sin unpardoned here would be pardoned hereafter.

Dear Brother:—

4. Will you please explain through the Gospel Messenger Luke 14: 26? John D. Duggins.

The language upon which an explanation is asked in this query reads as follows: "If any man come unto me and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life also, he can not be my disciple." The word hate in this Scripture means simply to love less. Our devotion to Christ and to God must rise above all else in this world. We must love our own life less than we love him, and, if necessary, be willing to lose it rather than deny the Blessed Master. This meaning of the language is made plainer by Matt. 10: 37, "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me." This use of the word hate, i. e., to love one less than another, is not uncommon in the Scripture. See Gen. 29: 30, 31; Deut. 21: 15: 17; Mal. 1: 2, 3. The supreme object of our devotion is to be Christ. We are to love and obey our parents in the Lord, but if they stand between us and our duty to God, we must, if needs be, forsake them, obeying God rather than man. If duty calls the Christian from his home, from his friends, from father or mother, he must be willing to go, forsaking all for Christ's sake. This spirit should characterize the Christian. It does not show that he loves his own kith and kin less but that he loves Christ more than all else in this world. Such love had Paul. He loved his brethren and friends much but he loved Christ more.

5. Since the term "Sabbath-school" is used in Jewish periodicals and by the Jews generally to designate a school held on the seventh day (our Saturday), is it proper for our Brethren, in their writings, to apply that term to schools held on the Lord's Day, or to call that day the "Sabbath"?

L. A. P.

Several queries covering about the same ground as No. 5 have been received and we answer them all briefly as follows. We should make a proper distinction between the Jewish and the Christian Sabbath. Under the Law the seventh day was the legal Sabbath Day and that day the Jews were commanded to keep holy. Christ became the end of the Law, and we are no more under the Law but under Grace. The apostles met on the first day of the week, and that day, under the Christian dispensation, came to be regarded as the Lord's Day, because on that day he rose from the dead. It was only natural that the day on which this great event occurred, around which cluster the hopes of every Christian, should be held in high esteem by the apostles and disciples, and so it came to take the place of the Jewish Sabbath. We may very appropriately call it the Christian Sabbath, thus making a distinction between it and the Jewish Sabbath, or we may make the distinction more marked by saying "the Lord's Day" and by calling our schools, held on that day, Sunday-schools.

6. Will you please explain Eph. 5: 19; also Col. 3: 16? "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." A Sister.

The apostle here refers to worship and would have us engage in singing psalms, hymns, and spiritual songs, with grace in our hearts, to the Lord. The Psalms of David were much used in worship by the early Christians, and it would be well indeed, if more attention were paid to them in our worship to-day. We are too apt to look upon our meetings as a time set apart for preaching alone. Much more time might be most profitably spent in reading the Psalms, singing hymns and spiritual songs. Singing is to be employed in our devotional exercises and should be engaged in with the same feelings of devotion, and the same thoughts of worship as are experienced in prayer. Our hymns should be of a devotional character and be sound in doctrine. We quote briefly from Dr. Barnes on the last point. "Dr. Johnson once said that if he were allowed to make the ballads for a nation, he cared not who made the laws. It is true in a more important sense that he who is permitted to make the hymns of a church need care little who preaches, or who makes the creed. He will more effectually mould the sentiments of a church than they who preach or make creeds and confessions. Hence, it is indispensable, in order to the preservation of the Truth, that the sacred songs of a church should be imbued with sound, evangelical sentiment."

Doubtless there are times when our own griefs lay cold about us, like snow in patches, and the very sun looks wintry, seen through sad eyes; but our sorrows will surely melt away in the reviving warmth of true faith, and if good seeds have been planted in a proper soil, they will soon put forth green leaves, and after awhile will come buds and blossoms of sweet odor.—Sel.

TRACTS come in as HELPS to the church to distribute the Word, as hired help does on the farm or in the vineyard. The farmer can not do all the work at home, and also all the errands that his business demands. The same is true of the ministers who must look after God's husbandry. They can not do all the work required at home, and the errands too. There are not enough laborers for so great a harvest. By sending out tracts upon errands of mercy and love, sowing Gospel seed — many thousands of precious sheaves may be harvested into the Lord's garner, that otherwise may be lost forever. The labor is light and full of blessing to the willing and diligent, in whose hearts the cause is dear. "The hand of the diligent shall bear rule." The cost is too trifling to take into account, in comparison with the importance of the work and the results to be achieved. May your hearts be warm for Jesus, and your hands ready to minister to the cause!—H.

ANOTHER WAY

BY JAMES M NEFF.

BRETHREN, one of the great needs among us is, that we ever keep our eyes open to our opportunities for doing good, that none may pass unimproved. I can scarcely conceive of a situation which would not give opportunity almost daily for doing some missionary work, but we don't seem to see the opportunities. But that we be able to see these opportunities whenever presented, is not our greatest need, brethren; the great need is that we have such an abundant outpouring of the Spirit, such a heavenly awakening that we will be prompted to improve an opportunity when we do see it.

Let every brother and sister ask himself and herself the question, Why is it that I am not doing more real, active work for Christ? Why? Why? Few of us can answer this question by saying, Because I have no opportunities; but rather, Because I do not improve the opportunities that I have.

Know this, then, that I make the following suggestion, not forgetful of the fact that the best thing to do is to execute the plans we have, rather than to propose new ones But if we can do more work without any additional expense, should we not do so? I believe we can do it in this way: the Book and Tract Work has issued a number of leaflets, printed on a good quality of paper. They are printed on but one side, the other presenting a clean, white surface, just the thing to write letters on.

Now there are not many of us who do not write letters; and why not send to Bro. Samuel Bock, Dayton, Ohio, and get a good supply of these leaflets? Send sixty cents and get two hundred, assorted, such as "Christ and War," "The Lost Opportunity," "The Bond of Peace," "The Evils of Intemperance," "Pause and Think," "Why Am I not a Christian?" and "Are You a Christian?" With a vindication of the truth on one side of the sheet, and your missives (be they of friendship or business or what not) on the other, send the Good News all over the land.

Now every one who neglects this, will do so in the absence of a good excuse; for the cost of the tracts will be less than what is often paid for ordinary writing-paper. Is there any reason why each one should not assist in disseminating the Truth? Is there any danger of scattering it too far?

NOTES AND JOTTINGS

BY I J. ROSENBERGER.

FOR the past two years we have been contemplating a visit to Dakota. This fall we felt our limited time was insufficient to go that distance, but by the earnest pleadings of the Brethren at Bijou Hills, we left our home, Oct 8, for Dakota. We did not arrive at our destination until the evening of the 11th, and commenced our work on the 12th. We found a small congregation of attentive listeners. The little prairie village, above mentioned, contains a G. A R Hall, which our Brethren occupy to good advantage.

We continued our efforts with unabating zeal, appropriating considerable time to visiting the scattered families on the plains, some of them living in sod-houses, others in dug-outs. On the evening of the 31st occurred the feast, and there were evidences that it was a love-feast

On the evening of Nov. 3 we preached our first farewell sermon,—our allotted time having expired. At the close of the meeting, three came forward, after which a fourth reported. There were evidences that the Spirit of the Lord was moving in the congregation We thought it not best to close, hence we remained one week longer. We then closed the meetings, with ten applicants for membership, of whom nine were baptized. All bade fair to be worthy members. We left, with the future prospects of Bijou very fair.

Eld Jacob Murray lives twelve miles east of Bijou. We were sorry he could not be in attendance more frequently at our meetings. Bro. William Cook has charge of the ministry at Bijou Hills. He has been there for six years, and has met with encouragement. We were glad to find these Brethren of good influence in their communities. Bro. Cook declined nomination for their new Legislature. They are assisted in the ministry by brethren John M. Albright and John McLear.

According to the information we received, we estimate our membership in the Dakotas at about one hundred. East of Bijou Hills, about sixty miles, at Mt. Vernon, is a colony with one minister—Bro. Harader, who is not in good health. A number of these faithful ones were at the feast on the 31st. They reported as having had no preaching for one year. It looked as though our Dakota Brethren were not doing enough mission work.

North of Alpena is an organization under the care of Bro. B. F. Miller. At Aberdeen are several members with no minister. At Frederick there is an organization in care of Bro. James Evans and William E Horning. The Dakota Brethren are now applying for admission into the State District of Northern Iowa and Minnesota. We hope they will succeed, and that the future wants of the Brethren in the Dakotas will be better met.

Before we left, a meeting was called, and measures taken to purchase the hall we were occupying for church purposes. They are applying for some help from the General Mission Board. Help they need. They can not buy the building unless they get help. I here say to the Brethren everywhere, Let us keep this treasury replenished. I do not see how brethren,—elders—can feel that they are doing their duty, while turning a deaf ear to these numerous pitiful calls for help!

It was our pleasure to visit the Sioux Indian Agency at Chamberlain. The Government issues each week a certain amount of provision to each family. That morning they killed fourteen head of cattle. There were sixty Indian pupils in the Industrial School. They are kept there ten months in the year, and fed and clothed at the Government's expense. Half of the time they are in school; the other half the boys are at work on the farm, and the girls are at work sewing, washing, baking, etc. The poor Indians may have been greatly misused in time past, but at present they are receiving special favors.

South Dakota is a delightfully-situated and healthful country, but the lack of rain and the scarcity of water are a hinderance to the development of the country. Crops in both States were light. There is scarcity, and in places, perhaps, well nigh destitution.

On our return we were much disappointed at not being allowed to stop off at Leaf River, Ill., for Mt. Morris. Our agent assured us that such privilege would be granted. A number are in attendance at Mount Morris College from our locality. We were indeed rejoiced to learn that they were included in the happy number recently gathered into the fold. The spiritual atmosphere at Mt. Morris seems to be good, and the church influence healthy. How Brethren can be content in sending their children to other schools, imperiling their eternal destiny, and not patronize our Brethren's schools, does not seem clear to me.

The time was when our literature was looked upon as being of little importance as a factor in the church; but we have been led to see that our literature is such an engine, such a power for good that the church has taken its moral influence under her control, and contemplates assuming also the financial interests. It is now becoming apparent that our educational institutions are engines,—powers for good, and hence need the special care of the church. Improper men at the helm of our editorial departments in the past have done us great harm. Improper men at the head of our educational interests will likewise entail ruin on the church Literature is abundant, but not such as teaches the peculiar doctrines of Christ and his church. Schools are likewise abundant, but not such as encourage the meek, self-denying religion of Jesus. We want our literature to promote the interests of the church. Our schools must be shaped and moulded to the same great end, if they are to prove a blessing to the church.

READ, PONDER AND ACT.

BY J. S. FLORY.

SCENE 1. — A Sunday-school on the prairie. Earnest workers, teaching the love of God to children who have immortal souls. God had put it into the heart of one of the teachers to spend a few cents for religious tracts. They were distributed among the visitors and scholars. One leaflet was dropped by the wayside,—purposely or not, God knows,—the wind wafted it far away. A young man, crossing the bleak plain some days later, thinking, in all probability, of worldly pleasure or business pursuits, picked up the white-winged messenger of Truth, and his eye caught these significant words, "Whither bound, — to heaven or hell?" A chord of thought, long silent, began to vibrate, the sweet melody of heaven seemed to float in,—the terrors of hell loomed up around that sinner. A slumbering conscience was aroused. He could find no rest or peace until he sought it, with tears, at the feet of a forgiving Savior.

SCENE 2.—A minister traveling up and down through the world, carrying the glad tidings of salvation to a hungry, starving world. Year after year is spent in the Master's cause. He is a holy, happy man, with hoary head and tottering step, nearing the grave. A voice seems to come out of the gentle breeze that fans his wrinkled, care-worn brow, "Father, whither bound?" Yes, to be sure, —"to a land of rest; to my father's house on high where the wicked cease from troubling, and where the soul shall ever be at peace, in the sweet by and by."

SCENE 3.—Over the river angelic hosts welcoming the redeemed who came up out of great tribulations. The heavens ring with music;—ten thousand times ten thousand angels and arch-angels around the throne are praising God and the Lamb. In the number treading the golden streets of the New Jerusalem is that self-same servant of God, he being that self-same youth that picked up that tract.

Now, reader, a special word to you. The first two scenes are no idle tales, and the last, though imaginary, is in harmony with the teachings of the Bible. Now, a small tract, by the blessing of God, can be an instrument to awaken a careless soul, as above mentioned, and that person becomes a means, in the hands of God, of converting many from sin to righteousness, at last to reach heaven, what may you do if you will put forth some effort to spread the Truth by helping the Tract Work of the church?

Do not let Satan tempt you by putting the thought before you, it is something new. The New Testament Scriptures are but a bundle of tracts, gathered together and put in book form.

Let this thought ever be before you: "It is my duty to work for God and the upbuilding of his kingdom." Then go to work in every way you can. If you have friends whom you would like to have converted, do not do like the rich man, — wait until you get to the other world,—then ask to come back and warn them. Now is the time,—send a small sum, now and then to the Tract Work, with an order to send tracts to certain persons. Get a lot yourself, and use them to the furtherance of the Gospel. Let your prayers go with them, — no matter whether you can see the result or not. God knows all about it. He will keep the book in such a way as to give you all the credit due, or to come due, as interest that continues to accumulate as time rolls on.

Oh, the blessedness of laying up treasures in heaven! Just think a moment! You expect, perhaps, to spend a certain amount for Christmas presents for you friends. You will have, no doubt, a more happy season if you will reconsider the matter and give a part of your contemplated expenditures to the Lord's cause. You have no dearer friend, we hope, than he. Try it and your conscience will not condemn you, but approve, and thus you shall be blessed!

Tuhunga, Cal.

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—Under date of Nov. 22, sister Martha Carter, of Frankfort, Ohio, writes: "Our meeting, Oct. 17, was an enjoyable one. Two dear ones had become tired of sin, and were received into the church by baptism. Bro. Landon West was with us, and encouraged us to hold out faithful. This we desire to do, and hope that the members every-where will remember us in their prayers."

—Under date of Nov. 25, Bro S. W. Hoover, of Dayton, Ohio, writes: "The members of the West Dayton church, Dayton, Ohio, expect to begin a series of meetings within a few weeks from this date, and they ask the especial prayers of the Brotherhood for their success, and the building up of the cause in their midst. The Lord is strong and mighty to save and without me, says Jesus, 'ye can do nothing.' Bro. I. J. Rosenberger is to do the preaching."

—Bro. R. H. Hensley, of Rodelm, Tenn., writes: "Eld. G. C. Bowman, of Washington Co., Tenn., was with us from Nov. 14 to 19. We had good meetings. As we have no resident minister here, we would be glad if some one would come and locate with us here. I have a farm of 112 acres that I will sell cheap. It is within one-fourth of a mile from the church and six miles from Concord. It has all the necessary improvements and a good orchard. I hope some of the Brethren will call and see us."

—Bro. G. E Whisler, of Ashland, Nebr., writes: "Being desirous of increasing our strength in membership, as well as to get a suitable person to have in the family, and especially to have about our children, we would like to secure the services of a young brother,—one that could come well recommended. We live on a farm near Ashland, Saunders Co., Nebr.,—one of the points where Bro. A. Hutchison preached while in Nebraska this fall. We have a good country generally, and would be pleased to answer any question in regard to the above matter."

—Sister Salome Watkins, of the Pleasant Grove church, Ind., under date of Nov. 20, writes: "Bro. I. J. Rosenberger has now in progress a series of meetings at the Mt. Pleasant church. The meetings are good and we pray that souls may be converted to God. I wonder if we appreciate God's great love to us, in permitting us to attend such meetings! Why are we so silent and afraid to speak, when we ought to be joyful to say a word for our Master? Bro. Charles Campbell and T Watkins are with the Brethren at Little Walnut church this week. We pray they may do much good while absent from home. Praise the Lord!"

—Bro. Christian Schrock, of the Pleasant Valley church, Ind., writes: "We held our last quarterly council-meeting Nov. 16. Everything passed off peaceably and in love. We, as a church, are trying to work for the advancement of the cause of our Master. We have our dark days, of course, but when we think of the trials and sufferings of our Blessed Savior, we are made to look beyond this vale of tears, to the time when we shall be delivered from all trials and troubles, and be with him who bled and died for our sakes. Then we feel to press on. Bro. J. B. Shoemaker, one of our elders, who has been very poorly for some time, is improving rapidly. We hope he may again be able to fill his place in the church, for we need his good counsel. Bro. J. V. Felthouse, of Lagrange County, Ind., preached two soul-cheering sermons for us last Sunday. Bro. W. R. Deeter, from Milford, Ind., expects to preach for us in the town of Middleburg, one week or longer, in the near future."

—Under date of Nov. 24, Bro Jonathan Hoover, of Dawson, Ohio, writes: "The members of the Loramie church, Shelby Co., Ohio, held their love-feast Oct. 18 It was an enjoyable one. Brethren Isaac Frantz, of Pleasant Hill, S. W. Hoover, of Dayton, Ohio, and other neighboring brethren were with us to give the Bread of Life to all who would receive it. At the closing of our Sunday-school we had a Children's Meeting. An address was made by Bro. Frantz to the good of old and young. We had our quarterly council Nov. 16, at which time two deacons were elected. The lot fell on brethren Joshua Whitmer and Wilson Love. We hope the Lord will help them to fill the office well!"

—Under date of Nov. 26, Bro. Adam Beaver, of Hartleton, Union Co., Pa, writes: "According to previous arrangements Bro. E. D. Book, of Perry Co, Pa, came to us Oct 26 and commenced a series of meetings at what we call the Hartley meeting-house where he continued until the evening of Nov. 6. The rainy weather hindered us much, but when the weather permitted, we had a full house and the best of attention. The church, as well as the people generally, were highly pleased with the ministrations of Bro. Book. As an immediate result of the meetings three were added to the church by baptism, and the Brethren refreshed and encouraged."

—Under date of Nov. 24, Bro. William Brown, of Churubusco, Ind., writes: "Our Communion occurred Nov. 2. There was a good attendance. The ministers present were brethren D. S Kahler, Daniel Rothenbarger, Daniel Crone, Ellson and Henry Brallier. Bro. Kahler officiated. We had a protracted meeting one week before and one week after the Communion, at which Bro. Henry Brallier did the preaching. As an immediate result of the meetings, seven souls were added to the church. Bro. Brallier is an earnest worker and pressed the Truth close home to many. May the Spirit strive with those that have not yet come out on the Lord's side!"

—Under date of Nov. 25, sister A. Lichtenwalter, of the New Hope church, Kans., writes: "Since the last report from this newly-organized church, two more have been made willing to unite with us,—one in the prime of life, the other an old sister, nearing the end of her ninetieth year. We hope her last days may prove her best and happiest. Our heart rejoices to read of the ingathering of souls, yet, when we see our dear relatives and friends perish just outside the fold, we are made to feel sad. We hope the time may speedily come when there will be sufficient ministerial help all along the line to fight the enemy and gain the victory. Brethren and sisters, let us all become more concerned about the salvation of precious souls. Let us work with more energy for the cause of our Blessed Master, and God will bless our efforts!"

—Bro. Solomon Bucklew, of the Coal Creek church, Ill., writes: "We commenced meetings at the Coal Creek church Nov. 4. Bro. Holsinger, from Marshall County, Ill., came to our assistance, and stayed with us ten days. Bro. Holsinger preached the Word with great zeal and power. Sinners were made to tremble, and the dear Brethren were built up in the faith. Three precious souls came out on the Lord's side, and were buried with Christ in baptism. I expect to commence a series of meetings at the Macedonia school-house in the near future, the Lord willing. I am glad to see the strong effort that is being put forth every-where to advance the Lord's cause. Dear Brethren, let us work while it is day, for the night cometh, when no man can work! Let us be workmen that need not be ashamed, always abounding in the work of the Lord!"

A Season of Refreshing.

THANKSGIVING Day, to the Brethren at Mount Morris, was of more than usual interest and importance. Looking back upon the last few weeks, all could realize that the Lord had been especially gracious, for he had blessed the efforts of his servants to the conversion of many souls. Nearly all of those who gave their hearts to the Lord were students of the school at this place,—young people who had been the subjects of prayerful thought and anxious care on the part of the school management and other brethren. And while there was rejoicing among the believers at Mount Morris,—and, we hope, in the glory-world beyond,—there was great joy, also, in the homes of the parents of those who had so nobly decided for Christ. What greater consolation than to know that with your child, "it is well" for time and eternity! Such results need only be expected, however, at a school where the time-honored principles of primitive Christianity are taught by precept and example. A brother, in the hearing of the writer, recently said, "Mt. Morris is one of the best mission-posts we have; for not only are many added to the church, but a large majority take with them upon leaving, a portion of the zeal and energy in mission work, exercised here, and spread it wherever they go." Those words are true, as experience has shown.

Realizing that our young members,—especially those who had just recently united with us,—would be greatly benefited and built up in the faith, by enjoying a love-feast and Communion, arrangements were made for such a service to take place on the evening of Thanksgiving Day.

"When the even was come," a little band of perhaps, a hundred brethren and sisters assembled at the appointed place. A deep solemnity seemed to pervade every heart, when Bro. D. L. Miller, in an earnest, impressive manner, portrayed the importance of a thorough self-examination,—of going to the heart, the birth-chamber of thoughts and actions, and there sitting in judgment on the hidden things, known only to ourselves and our God. A hush had fallen over the assembly, indicative of a deep feeling, and this was a characteristic of the exercises throughout the evening. Amid the stillness, unbroken by any noise and confusion, the minds of the participants were carried back to the last Supper of our Blessed Redeemer, to the agonizing scenes of the cross,—then forward again to that Supper, when time shall be no more, and when Christ himself shall serve us.

I am glad that the first Communion of these young members was one so well calculated to leave a lasting impression for good. They can go away from here, with the consciousness of having observed the feast in Gospel order, and that, too, in the absence of that confusion, so often and lamentably connected with our feasts. God's house is a house of order, and a little system in the setting and serving of the tables, and during feet-washing, would go far to preserve that solemnity which is so desirable in any religious exercise.

May we not hope that our young members will always fondly cherish their first Communion, and, after feasting at the sacred board, with renewed vigor press forward to gain the crown which is promised the faithful? L. A. PLATE.

Mt. Morris, Ill.

From the Lunenburgh Meeting, Va.

IN response to an arrangement made by the Lunenburgh Brethren, father and I went there Nov. 1, and commenced a series of meetings. The meetings opened under very favorable circumstances. The evenings were bright and pleasant, and the people were desirous to hear concerning things pertaining to their future interests. The brethren were at peace, and fully awake to the responsibilities of the occasion. Through the agency of a weekly prayer-meeting, which has been regularly kept up during the past year, the members were full of religious fervor, so that, when we called on our Lord for help, he was very near, to come quickly, as it was when the great prophet Daniel prayed.

The meetings were crowded every evening, and continued with unabated interest and fervor until the evening of the 16th, when they closed with a feast of charity. The apparent results were ten accessions to the church and two reclaimed, who had gotten outside of the fold.

And such a feast of charity! In the first place every member of the church, fifty altogether, save one, who is an invalid, were at the feast. There was no cooking nor bustle of preparation about the church, such as characterizes meetings of that kind generally. The members prepared the supper at their houses and brought it in baskets and buckets to the place of meeting, and it was placed on the tables before the evening services commenced, and then all neatly covered with brown, domestic linen till the time of eating. After the supper was eaten, the tables were again covered in like manner. The members there are disposed to understand the Scriptures in a literal sense, so when the feet washing service was performed the sisters laid aside their aprons (each wore a white apron made for that special service), as the brethren do their garments.

The evening service was one of great pleasure to the participants, and the attention and interest of the spectators was marked and praiseworthy. The church of Lunenburgh has a powerful hold on the confidence and affections of the people around them, and with watchfulness and diligence it promises, in the near future, to be among the most powerful congregations of our Brotherhood.

Of course, they have the usual allotment of troubles, and the universal enemy is putting in his usual, malicious work. For instance he inspired certain persons to report that our church rules forbid our people to associate with those not of our faith. I took occasion to say publicly, that who ever repeated such a slander merited the malediction that St. Paul denounced on Elymas, the sorcerer.

Since the organization of the church on the eighth day of the eighth month of the year 1888, they have lost but two members by desertion, and hopes are entertained of their restoration. It will be remembered by the readers of the MESSENGER, that during our great meeting there last December, a certain very estimable, though sinful, young man, said openly to his friends that he intended to serve the devil awhile longer. I will now relate the sequel of such a terrible covenant.

During last summer he was attacked with a singular disease of the bowels, pronounced by the doctors cancer. For several weeks he suffered increasing pain, until, alarmed by the threatening character of the strange malady, he was taken to the City of Richmond, to obtain the aid of the renowned Dr. McGuire. It was soon apparent that no human aid could save him, and he sought the soothing consolations of religion to prepare him for the lone, mysterious journey to the hidden country. He sent for an eminent minister of the Baptist church and, in reply to the request for prayer, the minister asked for what blessing he should implore the Lord. "For just time enough to be baptized," replied the dying man. The "man of God" told him baptism was not necessary if he was repentant and would put his trust in his Savior. This did not satisfy the longing of the poor man's soul, and he died without the full assurance of faith which obedience to the Word of God would have brought him in the last terrible ordeal.

It occurs to me, that, in full view of the words of Christ and his inspired apostle, which teach that we can (only) "put on Christ by baptism," and we are "saved (only) by the washing of the Word," and "he (only) that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," I repeat, it is taking a fearful responsibility, on the part of a preacher, to say baptism is not essential to salvation. But in all ages there have been men who have gain-said the words of our Lord under the guise of prophets and teachers, and, with these testimonies before us, we need not be deceived unless we wish to be.

The discipline and rules of the congregation there appear to be somewhat rigid to easy-going folks. Without waiting a year for an Annual Meeting decision, as to what to do with members who do not walk circumspectly in their dealings, they call a special meeting and cite the offender before it, and, having before them all the facts, they promptly sever the bond of fellowship, unless he yields absolute compliance with their rules. Right, Brethren. Christians must be honest if they are not pious. It would be a good thing were there more rigor in our discipline concerning business methods. Let the axe of excision be applied till every brother's word is as good as his bond, and both as good as gold.

Of course I do not wish to cater to the vanity of the dear saints of Lunenburgh, when I say I never met more loyal devotion to the Word of the Lord, and more genuine, effusive Christian love than among them. We were much refreshed in our souls, and carried from them that spirit of more perfect consecration to the service of our loving Savior.

They will commence soon to build a new house of worship, and I am authorized to request that those who, moved by the love of the Lord and his cause, feel like contributing to a very worthy cause, remit by check, money-order, postage stamps or currency, to Bro. Jos. Oliver, Pleasant Grove, Lunenburgh County, Va.* Now, brethren, who among us can not send as much as a dime, a nickel, a penny, a postage stamp, a blank postal card? Fifty thousand postal cards would be $500,—one-half enough to build the house. Just think of it!

On account of the very inclement character of the day following the love-feast, the day set apart for the special closing services, we did not have the pleasure (and sorrow) of the word of farewell and the kiss of peace to those loving Christians, but, in the presence of a few, who reside near the church, on Sunday morning we commended them to the loving watch-care of the Great Shepherd, and sent our adieus by faithful messengers to all the members of the lowly band,

"Praying that he, who holds life's sands,
Will keep the loved ones in his hands."

Thus ended a blessed season of God's gracious love, and to him be all the praise!

Notes of Travel.

NUMBER I.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements, wife, daughter and I started on our western trip on Wednesday, Nov. 20. We arrived at Beatrice about 2 P. M., next day. We found our eldest son, Frank, and son-in-law, J. E. Young, awaiting us. We spent some time with each of them, and our son Charles. We also met with the brethren and and sisters of Beatrice in public worship on Thursday and Saturday evenings, on Sunday forenoon out in the country, and again in the evening at Beatrice. We had rather small congregations on the first two evenings, but on Sunday forenoon and evening we had a fair attendance. They have two new, substantial meeting-houses, one in town and one in the country. Both are comparatively plain. I mean, they would not have been considered plain thirty or forty years ago, but when compared to the gorgeous edifices erected by the popular churches, they are quite plain. I am afraid we are patterning too much after the worldly fashions; if not so much in our meeting-houses, probably too much in our own private houses.

After giving farewell to loved ones on Sunday evening and Monday morning, I took the train for Omaha, where I arrived about 3 P. M. When I presented my papers, received from Bro. D. L Miller, at the ticket office, the agent gave me a ticket, good until Dec. 31., claiming that he was not authorized to give it for a longer time. Applying at the General Office, the General Agent kindly ordered my ticket extended to March 15,—about twenty days more time than they generally give on such tickets. Having some spare time, I went to the Mechanics' and Traders' Bank, to see our former townsman,—Mr. O. H. Swingley, but he had left the Bank just ten minutes previous.

I got back to the depot in time for the 7: 35 P. M. train Nov. 25. After a good night's rest, break of day found us at North Platte. A little snow had fallen during the night, but a few hours of sunshine took it all away. There was nothing of much interest that day besides the playing of the little prairie-dogs. They live in towns, or colonies. For a mile or more one may not see any of them, and then we may see dozens of them at a time They are of a brownish color, reminding one very much of the ferret,—excepting that they are three or four times as large. They throw up mounds somewhat larger than the pocket gopher, about eight or ten inches high, and about three or four feet in diameter. They skip around or sit on their mounds upright, like the spotted gopher. At the least alarm they jump into the hole which is in the center of their mound. It is said that the rattle-snake, the owls and the prairie-dogs all live in the same house.

At Sidney, Nebr., I looked around while the train stopped, thinking I might see some one I knew. It looks rather desolate around Sidney. Occasionally there is a little farm-house, or dug-out, and a few small fields of corn. I heard a man say on the train that before the cattle-men were driven out, there was plenty of money, but since they have gone, times are very hard.

Cheyenne, 516 miles west of Omaha, is a thriving city of about 10,000 inhabitants. When near Cheyenne we, for the first time in our life, got a glimpse of the Rocky Mountains, but were very much disappointed in crossing them. Though it is the highest point on the Union Pacific, it did not appear as high as it is in reality, the ascent being so gradual all the way from Omaha. We reached the summit of the mountain just about dark and saw but little beyond until next morning.

We got to Green River at day-light of the second day. Here the trains divide, one for California; the other for Portland, Oregon.

From Green River to Pocatello the scenery was more grand than in the Rockies. The abrupt bluffs and the snow-clad cliffs looked grand. No apparent vegetation is visible, excepting the wild sage, or Rocky Mountain salvia, as some call it, and scrubby evergreens on the summits of the bluffs. Between the railroad and the bluffs, there are rocky cliffs for miles, that look, in places, as if they were quarried by human hands and promiscuously thrown together. At other places they looked as if built by human skill. "Praise the Lord for his wonderful works toward the children of men!"

The Bible Term.

LETTERS have been received from different parts of the Brotherhood, asking for information with reference to the "Special Bible Term" announced in our catalogue of May last. For the benefit of all who may be interested we wish to say that, the Lord willing, Eld. R. H. Miller, of North Manchester, Ind., will begin a meeting in the College Chapel, on Wednesday evening, Jan. 1, '90, and continue, probably, four weeks. The original design of these meetings was to give instruction to our students, especially the young brethren and sisters, in "The Evidences of Christianity," "Church Doctrine," and "Church Government," affording them an opportunity to become thoroughly informed in the teachings of the Bible, as taught and practiced by the Brethren. Bro. Miller was selected to preach those sermons because of the experience which age and a critical investigation of the subjects named have afforded him. When the above arrangement became known, brethren who are not in the school expressed a strong desire to share the benefits of these meetings, and it was finally decided to let all who will, come.

It was further agreed, and announced in the catalogue that Bro. D. L. Miller should deliver a number of those "Bible Talks" which have proved so interesting to all who have heard them.

In order that those who attend the meetings may employ all their time advantageously, daily lessons will also be given in "Bible Study," "Sunday-school Work," and "Church and Mission Work." It is the purpose of those who have the management of the meetings to make them profitable, directly, to those who attend them, and indirectly to the churches represented in them. While all are cordially invited to attend, ministers and Sunday-school workers, both brethren and sisters, are especially invited. Much may be learned in a few weeks, and we feel confident that no one who comes with a view of learning will ever regret either the time or the money spent in attending this Bible Term. Those unable to attend during the entire term should, if possible, come at the beginning of it.

As to the expenses we wish to say that we should gladly board all free of charge, but we can not well do so; hence the following: Tuition, free to all; board, per day (lodging included), 60 cts; board, per week (lodging included), $3 00.

We have arranged with several railroads for one and one-third fare the round-trip, and hope to secure similar favors from other lines.

Are there churches who have ministers and Sunday-school workers who have served them faithfully, lo, these many years, and whose circumstances forbid their attending these meetings? Such churches, or even individual members of such churches, find here an opportunity to forward the Master's work, by furnishing the means necessary to enable one or more from their church to attend at least several weeks. Since we have made the necessary arrangements for a Bible Term, we trust many will avail themselves of its advantages. We earnestly crave the prayers of the Brotherhood in behalf of the work

Persons, desiring further information, should write us soon (enclosing stamp), that we may send them circulars containing full particulars of the work to be done during those meetings.

D. L MILLER, Treasurer.

From the Dry Creek Church, Iowa.

BRO. GEORGE CRIPE has been holding a series of meetings in our congregation, commencing Nov. 12. On Friday, Nov. 22, two dear Sunday-school scholars were baptized. Angels rejoice when sinners turn to God, pleading for love and mercy. May our kind Father in heaven keep those two dear young sisters in his care, that they may have strength to resist every temptation! Many more seem almost persuaded, and we hope they will come soon.

To-day, Nov. 25, we held our quarterly meeting. Next Sunday, Dec. 1, we will close our Sunday-school for the winter. Many of us regret to lose those golden lessons we may learn there. I have asked my class of dear young people to read a lesson out of the Holy Bible every Sunday at their homes, that we may not lose our interest in this good work.

Our social prayer-meetings are enjoyed much by God's children. They revive us and build us up in that most holy faith.

We expect to commence a series of meetings at the lower church soon We ask an interest in your prayers every-where, brethren and sisters, that God might bless us in this glorious work, and that his choicest blessing might rest upon our dear brother who labored so earnestly for us.

M. E. TISDALE.

From Copper Hill, Va.

THERE has been a little body of members here for a long time,—somewhat isolated, but under the care of the Brethren in Roanoke County who preached for us once a month. Amid all the hindering causes the church has moved on steadily. Under the guidance and blessing of God the good work is still going on. We have had fourteen additions since last winter, up to Oct. 1.

Feeling encouraged to labor still more for the Master we decided to have a series of meetings. We sent for Bro. John B Naff, of Roanoke, who came to us Oct. 11, and continued with us till the 20th, preaching eleven sermons. He was assisted by I. W. Eller during the latter part of the meetings. The brethren labored earnestly, and, we believe, effectually. As an immediate result nine made the good confession. One was reclaimed. May the Lord help them to live faithfully till death! Others, who were deeply impressed, will, we hope, yield to the influence of the good spirit, and accept the offers of mercy before it is too late!

N. P. WIMMER.

HUNTINGDON NORMAL COLLEGE.—Winter Term, 1889. Twelve Weeks.

This Term begins Dec. 30, 1889, and closes March 21, 1890, covering the wintery part of the year. While this time is most uncomfortable for work of most kinds, it is well adapted to study, as the course is arranged in our school. It is the shortest, and, consequently the least expensive term in the year. Yet it is so arranged that an important part of the work can be completed. What more profitable thing can you do than come and spend these twelve weeks at the Normal? While the former standard in the Normal and Scientific Departments will be rigidly maintained, it will be the aim of the school to give due prominence to Bible study, two courses having been already introduced — "A Critical or Exegetical Study of the New Testament Scriptures," and "Outlines of Bible Study," using the Bible only as the text-book.

The accommodations, in every respect, are ample. Members, and members' children are especially desired,—all will be welcomed. Special inducements to our ministers, free scholarships, etc. A copy of the "Advance" sent free to all. For Catalogues and any other information desired address H. B. Brumbaugh, President, or J. H. ELD. JAS. A. SELL gave us a short call the other day, as he was on his way to Fannettsburg, Pa., where he expects to do several weeks' preaching. This is a mission post and is filled by the Middle Pennsylvania Mission Board. Bro. Burkholder and family are there now and are anxious to see the good cause pushed forward. There are a few other members living there.

BRO. W. J. SWIGART having had some business to attend to in the eastern part of the State, and being near Hagerstown, Md., at the time that the "Brethren's Ministerial Meeting" was held there, made it a point to attend. He expresses himself much pleased with the meeting and the very harmonious deliberations throughout. Eld. David Long was chosen Moderator and Bro. Ausherman, Secretary. He says the attendance was good and that all, seemingly, went home filled with renewed inspiration in the high and holy calling.

BRO. MOORE'S suggestions in regard to the needed work seems to be striking the minds of a number of our readers quite favorably, and already we are having inquiries as to whether the book will soon be ready. No, not quite so fast. We don't get out books after this style. And unless there is something more tangible than suggestions there will be a long vacation before such a book will be for sale. We heartily approve of the suggestion. But, knowing how slowly such things move, we would like to see something done that will mean business and accomplish the end desired.

"It is no uncommon thing to hear Christian people indulging, if not in bitter complaint, yet in expressions of anxious and painful wonder, why it is that wicked, worldly-minded men so succeed in business, and have abundance of this world's goods, while many a child of God walks in the deepest vale of poverty and want. The Psalmist declares that at one time his own feet had well nigh slipped—that his confidence in the reality of the Providence of God was in danger of giving way—when he saw the prosperity of the wicked. The answer usually given to these anxious and painful surmises is that this is one of those mysteries that can be fully unfolded only in the great hereafter. At present we are told it simply remains for us to walk by faith."

OUR GIVING.

THERE are some things that we are slow to learn, and one of those things is what to do with the money the Lord gives to us. We were impressed with this thought on reading Bro. J. T. Myers' article a few weeks ago. In thinking on this subject we were made to wonder what has become of the money or estates owned by our church or her members. Almost centuries have passed since the organization of the church in its present form, men have lived, accumulated wealth, and died—and where is it to-day? How much has the church, as an organization, been benefited by it? How many charitable institutions have been endowed? Not a single one that is worthy of the name, and yet it is said: All ye do, do it to the glory of God. All the means that have been possessed by the church, as represented by the members, were given as a loan. What kind of stewards have our members been? Much of the money possessed by our church has been used to the destruction and alienation of our children, who have wasted it and directed it into other channels where it has been lost to the church.

Bro. Myers makes a good point when he says that every church member should make some kind of a bequest to the church before he dies. To make such bequest is certainly a very good thing to do. But why not still do better by donating some of it, at least, while living? It is not at all necessary that we should wait to do good until the day of our death. Do it now, while you are living and while you may see some of the fruits of it. It is true, in many cases it would not be the best thing to distribute all that which we have, prior to our decease, as we don't know just how much will be needful during our life. But when the Lord blesses us abundantly, part of that abundance should be used for the Lord's purposes by the way. Giving, according to Dr. Wayland's theory, is an element in conscience, and one, too, that develops by using. As we give, our desire for giving increases and from it we receive a corresponding increase of pleasure in the act. And thus we learn to give from the pleasure we receive in the giving and the good it does. Such is the true philosophy of giving, or in the carrying out of every behest of the conscience. We do it on the same principle that we eat, wear clothes, build houses and perform labor. It is the developing of the normal elements of our natures.

The true object of life is to do that which will afford us the most real and lasting enjoyment. And as we develop our moral natures, we open up before us a truth that can not be otherwise known, that there is no giving that brings so rich a reward as giving to the Lord, through the channels opened in his church.

There is another advantage in developing the desire to give, and that is, the Lord increases our possibilities to give with the desire. The steward that hid the talent was relieved of the charge, while those who had the increase to give, had the more given to them. They came forward with their increase joyfully, in the assurance that they had been faithful. This, to them, was joy, but their joy was still enhanced when more was entrusted to them. He that soweth bountifully shall also reap bountifully. We are poor, often because the Lord can not trust us. Indeed, we don't need to wonder that he is slow in giving, because if we would act towards each other as we do towards the Lord, we would not trust each other half as much as the Lord trusts us. When we give or entrust money to each other we want a judgment exemption note or a mortgage, and if we can show no equivalent value behind these, we can not get the money. We refuse to go on trust or faith. But the Lord advances to us when we are poor, without note or mortgage. He simply says, "Occupy till I come or call for it." Though we have little at first, it will increase in proportion to our faithfulness.

We hear some one say, "Now such has not been my experience. Well, perhaps not. You say that you have been giving and the more you gave, the poorer you got. Yes, this may be true; we may give, in one way, a great deal, and the giving may be impoverishing all the time. There may be no heart in the giving, or it may be wasting the Lord's money, and, therefore, be as bad, and even worse than to tie it up in a napkin. The Lord wants intelligent and conscientious stewards who give only at the right time and for right purposes. Do it all to the glory of God. Do it in this way and the miracle of the meal barrel will be repeated.

But while our desire for giving may be developed by giving, our desire for hoarding and retaining may also be developed, so that the less we give, the less grows our desire to give, and the greater grows our desire to hoard. We imagine there is pleasure in it and yet it is, even to ourselves, undefinable. Very often our professed theory is, that the longer we keep it together the greater become our possibilities of accumulating, so that in the unknown and very uncertain future they may be able to give more largely. This would be doing well if the desire to give largely would grow with the growing wealth. But this is seldom the case. The rule is the other way. The desire to retain it grows more rapidly than the accumulation, so that by the time the giving largely is possible, the desire is lost and the giving omitted. In this way the Lord has been robbed of thousands and millions, and, as a result, the cause has been suffering and been crippled.

The question is asked: Will a man rob God? Yes, he will and is doing so all over the world. May the good Lord open our eyes that we may fully realize that while here we are only stewards and that we are responsible for the manner in which we use that which he entrusts to our care. Let us try to learn this great truth soon, and as we learn it, let us act out that which our moral relation to God and each other dictates, and we are sure that God will fulfill his promise where he has said: "He that watereth shall be watered, and he that soweth bountifully will also reap bountifully."

ESSAYS

"Study to show thyself approved unto God; a workman that needeth not be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

PURITY DEFILED.

Down came the snowflakes, so fleecy,
From the beautiful kingdom of light,
Arraying the earth in apparel
Of ermine, untainted and bright.
The earth sang for joy, and looked gorgeous
In her heavenly garment, so sweet.
But soon was its purity blackened
By the trample of hurrying feet.

Down came the souls, like the snowflakes,
Spotless without and within.
But soon is their chastity sullied
By the mire and rubbish of sin.
Their garments are stained; and their virtue
Is lost in earth's tumult and rout;
But woe to the vile and the wicked
Who trample their purity out!

—Sadie Brallier Neffsinger.

"CHRISTIAN SCIENTISTS"—ARE THEY OF GOD?

BY MARY KINDELL DICKEY.

Christian Science Treatment

JUST what it is, it is hard to say, for they contradict each other. One says it is mind cure; another says it is not. We will quote from their pamphlet of instructions to patients:

"All manner of sickness and diseases may be "successfully treated at a distance. Absent pa- "tients should write two or three times a week. "No daily treatment continued over a week, with- "out hearing from patients, unless by special "agreement."

There is not much information about the above as regards their method of treatment, but from what we can gather from their talk and literature it is "mind cure," or, in other words, the Scientist's treatment consists in persuading his patients that they are well or getting well. They also select Scriptural passages for their daily reading, consisting of Scriptures relating to miracles wrought by Christ and the apostles, they claiming to have the same power. They seem to forget, however, that Christ and the apostles restored life to the dead,—at least we have never heard of them undertaking a work of this kind They know better; they know that when the body is dead, they have no power to call it back to life with their arts of "mesmerism," or to make it appear that it is not really dead, but "just thinks it is."

If they have the same power that Christ and the apostles had, they could also raise the dead or prevent death, which they can not do, therefore they are impostors, and not of God.

"Observe mind instead of body; for when you "understand the power of mind over matter, you "will not fear sin, sickness or death, but will have "complete dominion over all the earth."

Thus they teach that when their patients once understand the doctrine they teach, they will have no sickness or death. All seems to hinge on whether they understand it or not; for if they do not understand it, they will surely sicken and die, as we all have, since the world began, and will continue to do till the end of time.

It is surprising that they can have the audacity to teach that man can have dominion over death of the body, when the Scriptures and all nature proclaim and prove it to be false. "It is appointed unto men once to die." Heb. 9: 27, and a host of other Scriptures teach the certainty of death.

Christian Scientists also quote that "all things are possible with God," and that, therefore, "all things are possible with the Christian Scientists." It is shocking and sounds strangely blasphemous. Hear them again:

"Owing to the selfishness of the race, it be- "comes necessary to fix a price, not on God's "Truth, but for the protection of the workers in "the field. So if able, you are expected to pay "cheerfully, in advance always, thus trusting, "which is the opposite of anxiety. Never haggle "with a true Scientist about a reasonable compen- "sation, as the healer is worthy of his hire. Do "not try to bargain with him that there shall be no "pay without a cure, as such a contract includes "a doubt on your part that would surely retard, "if not prevent a cure. There are Scientists who "only charge a dollar for each office treatment; or "fifty cents a day when giving absent treatment, "and, when not able to pay this small fee, will "discount it, or, if very poor, treat you free; so "come and be healed, and then tell others, who "need healing about it."—C. S. T.

Here we have Christian Science in a "nut- shell." Brethren, how much of it harmonizes with God's Truth? How much of it harmonizes with the love of the "Almighty Dollar?" Who ever read of Christ and the apostles fixing a price on their ministrations and miracles, to protect themselves "from the selfishness of the race?" They never did it. The Savior said unto his disciples, "Heal the sick, raise the dead, cleanse the lepers, cast out devils; freely ye receive, freely give."

They admit, they "do not fix a price on God's Truth." No, thank the Lord, not on his Truth, for they do not possess it; so can not. They do their best, however, to deceive, if it were possible, the "very elect," and teach that it is the "Truth." Just to protect themselves they set a price! Oh! what would they do if they could not protect themselves with the "price!" I'll venture to prophesy that the world would soon know no "Christian Scientists," and it would suffer nothing in the loss. They must have their price "in advance always." They can not trust their patients; but their patients must not doubt the Christian Scientist, for if he did, how would he get his "price?" They must be absolutely free enough from doubt to pay his "price" "always in advance" Christian Scientists are surely as wise as serpents, if not as harmless as doves. They will compare with the serpents at least, for they will not bargain to cure or make no charge, "for such a contract includes doubt;" therefore they could hardly make such a patient believe himself to be well, when he did not need to pay the price until he felt he was well. On the other hand, if he pays the "price" "in advance," he might, possibly, rather believe he was CURED, than own that he was DUPED. Is it not a worldly-wise scheme? Is it not a libel on the Savior and the apostles to accuse them of such methods of working miracles? Yet some very good people are deceived by them and accept such teaching as God's Truth.

"If you are very poor" they will treat you free. This is only calculated to mislead, for it is a fact that they seldom have a case of this kind, — perhaps because the very poor are very scarce, or they have not time to hunt them up. Observe, however, that there is a "price" set for the very poor, — they must tell "others about it." What they can not get from the "very poor," of course, they can not take as the "price" of their hire; but what they can give they must have, and that is advertisement If they can get the "very poor" to advertise that they were treated free, they will bring him richer patients. All this is in line with the wisdom of the children of this world. We have a history in the Scriptures of just such characters as the "Christian Scientists." "But Peter said unto him, Thy silver perish with thee, because thou hast thought to obtain the gift of God with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for they heart is not right before God." Acts 8: 20, 21.

Finally, brethren, hear the Savior himself! Read Matt. 7: 15-24 and be convinced that "Christian Scientists" are not of God.

WHITER THAN SNOW.

BY M P. LICHTY.

THIS morning we have our first snow of the season in this locality, in sufficient quantity to cover the ground. Everything is enrobed with a mantle of white. The roofs of the houses, the walks, the fences, and the trees, all are holding up the emblem of purity. Yesterday as I was watching the beautiful flakes so silently descending, I could not help but think them to be crystallized tears, perhaps shed, as it were, by an innumerable company of angels, weeping over their sinful charge,—poor sinful humanity.

As I gathered a handful of the beautiful crystals, I am made to wonder, and, naturally, the question at first thought arises, What is whiter than snow? But then come to mind the words of the Psalmist, "Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow."

The remembrance of these words causes me to read again the contrite prayer of King David, recorded in the fifty-first psalm. What a befitting prayer this is! Who can refrain from responding with a hearty amen? Not one, I dare say, who may chance to read it. Who does not desire God's mercy upon himself? Who does not feel the need of having his transgression blotted out? Who does not desire to be thoroughly washed from his iniquities and cleansed from sin? Who has not his sins ever before him? But, alas, how many are so slow and so loth to acknowledge their transgressions honestly before God and man, as did this man David!

"Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me! Cast me not away from thy presence; and take not thy Holy Spirit from me. Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit." May we all desire and act out in our lives the sentiments of this earnest prayer! For by yielding strict obedience to the commands of the Bible, we may indeed have our souls washed in the blood of the Lamb, and thus made whiter than snow!

SHOULD THE CHURCH SUPPORT HER POOR?

BY J. J. EMMERT.

WE answer, "Yes, after they are taken into the number to be supported by the church, but there is a time (at least in most cases), when, although they may be considered very poor, the church is not under obligations to support them. Even then, however, they should be honored equally as much as the wealthiest member, providing they are equally worthy.

We call attention to the following Scripture: "But if any widow have children or nephews, let them learn to shew piety at home, and to requite their parents: for that is good and acceptable with God." 1 Tim. 5: 4.

Now our understanding of the above text, in its reference to children and nephews, would properly mean her descendants, and would imply, evidently, that, if a poor, destitute widow, or other dependent person have children, nephews or grandchildren, who could support her, they are in duty bound to do so, and not let any one be a charge on the church.

This, therefore, is the duty of relatives. If they are able and do not care for their own, the apostle says, "They have denied the faith and are worse than an infidel." 1 Tim. 5: 8.

1. They deny the faith by disobeying the apostle's instruction.

2. They are worse than an infidel, from the fact that unbelievers accept it as a duty to care for their own, and often practice it.

There may be instances in which distant relatives, or even children, may be careless or indifferent about taking care of their poor, and expect the church to attend to their wants. Where such is the case, they should remember that they, too, as individuals, have a duty to perform, before that duty can fall upon the church, and God will require that duty of them so far as they are able. Of course, when relatives are not able, or when the poor members have no one to take care of them, it becomes the duty of the church to take charge of those who are poor indeed. 1 Tim. 5 16.

Because of her desire to do right in this particular, the church may gather into its fold even more than it can support, as an individual church. Still that does not release her from doing her duty. When she has more than her proportion, it is certainly the duty of the adjoining churches to assist.

The writer is acquainted with a church that has been overburdened in this respect for many years. That church would take pleasure in sending more frequent donations to the Missionary and Tract Work, but finds its resources fully taxed by furnishing funds, necessary for home use.

THE DISCIPLINE OF THE HEART.

BY JENNIE V. STOVER.

ONE of the first steps to be taken, if you would have a character, that will stand by you in prosperity and adversity, in life and death, is to fortify your mind with fixed principles. He who has his religious principles early fixed, has nothing to do but to act upon them, to carry them out in practice.

If every one would make it his daily practice to read some part of the Holy Scripture, and to reflect upon death and eternity, many more precious souls would try to turn their face to the Lord.

No one can serve God and man at once. A virtuous and holy character is not built up in a day: — it is the work of a long life. Begin the work at once; do not put it off. The sooner you begin to serve your Master, the easier it will be! The youth first hears the oath; he blushes as he falters out the first profane expression. Thus it goes on, step by step, till he rolls "sin as a sweet morsel under his tongue." In this way the heart becomes hardened and cold.

There are, in this life, many trials, difficulties, and temptations to endure. Opportunities may occur, in which, perhaps, you say a word which may wound the feelings of some of your friends. I earnestly entreat all to cultivate a kind disposition of the heart. It is the only thing which will sweeten your temper. We are ignorant and need instructions. We are dark and need illuminations,—we need the Bread of Life. We need elevating, and we need prayer! We should have regular hours of prayer before going to the duties of the day.

Let us read the Bible more frequently in our retirement. It will soon become a delightful habit. Sometime ago I began to read a portion of God's Holy Word every evening before retiring, and I became so fond of it that I could not think of closing my eyes without doing so. Ask the assistance of your Heavenly Father. He will aid and strengthen you in your feelings, make you pure in your aims, peaceful in death and glorious in immortality beyond the grave!

"When wounded sore, the stricken soul
Lies bleeding and unbound.
Only one Hand, a pierced Hand
Can heal the sinner's wound.

When penitence has wept in vain
O'er some foul, darkened spot,
Only one stream, a stream of blood
Can wash away the blot!"

ROYAL CRUMBS.

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

WHILE riding on the cars Californiaward, I had the pleasure of reading MESSENGER, No. 46, and one rarely finds a single issue so replete with genuine crumbs of comfort. "Our Hope," by C. H. Balsbaugh is a crown jewel worth the heart of a Christ-ed soul. Bro. Snavely, in his usual, plain manner, cuts a gash into filthiness, and thereby raises the banner of HOLINESS a little higher for us to look at. Bro. Moore adds his commendatory to the Editor's fair and just observations as to men whose calling is like that of the true Middleman—the Peacemaker. The elements of peacemakers must be derived from the King of Peace. Then there is sister Brallier's double-edged sword-cut at slander, which ought to be twice read by every one who loves his brother; those who don't love their brother whom they have seen, never would benefit by anything against slander in heaven or in earth. Their life, their joy, their meat and drink is in the slime pit of abuse and destruction of others. Bro. John Forney vindicates, in certain tones, the right to preach the Gospel to saint and sinner at any given place so long as good judgment may determine. Bro. S. W. Hoover stirs up our better feelings by a bold Gospel thrust at worldliness. Bro. Amick regales us with fruits and flowers, and seasons his honeyed morsels with the spice of religious observations, as seen by his observant eye. Others, with the Editor, fill up the measure of heavenly receptivity until "nothing is lacking."

The tendency to depress the souls of others instead of elevating and strengthening them, is one of the sure signs of the nearness of the end, when Jesus shall appear to bring to naught all who would BE SOMETHING when they are nothing. This much talk about love is all very good if the talk itself is love; but to talk ABOUT love is one thing, and to POSSESS love or to be possessed BY LOVE is quite another thing. All the pious ejaculations, the honeyed phrases, the studied perorations on love are not love; but if there be love indeed, then it can be expressed even in stammering speech and do its excellent work. God uses base things of this world to confound those who in themselves think they are mighty.

Nero, the cruel Roman Emperor, was a great hunter after honor. He hunted honor as sportsmen hunt jack-rabbits and quails—with death to the thing hunted. Nero would have honor — would compel honor to come to him—even if somebody had to die by it. Saul, the first king of Israel, was exceeding jealous and "eyed" David. Unless every one, without the least abatement, would love him most, and do him all the honor he was miserable; and poor little David often had to jump aside from Saul's carnal and mental javelin. I think I can see him sneaking around in the dark shades of the night among David's friends and scolding them, berating David, casting up some imaginary sins which never existed in any way except in Saul's bad heart. Possibly this Saul said he loved David, but his ugly secret attacks prove he was far from the truth. Saul is a subject of pity, and so are all who are cursed with the same affliction.

* * *

Our missionary efforts need reforming in some manner. That there is a lack of men, who are willing to be offered upon the altar of love for humanity, is apparent. Men, full of vigor, faith and fidelity are not as numerous as the sands of the seashore; and out of the number who are thus coated and mailed, few there be who are in a happy state to be used or to go out and wax valiant in the spiritual warfare. Either the church must train men for the work, as Jesus trained the apostles, or we must go on giving heed to SOME of the calls, and filling only a PART of the demands, as we have heretofore done. It is evident that we need men who can not only persuade people to turn to the Lord, but to keep them alive by exhortations, watchfulness, perseverance and association. A man, having money, may buy a large flock of sheep. He may have the ability to get, and lack the ability to keep. If he is devoid of the latter, his flock will soon waste. That a man can get many to become church members is no proof that he has the ability to keep them. The mere act of getting is not even proof that they are rightly gotten. The men who robbed the express car at Pryor, in the Indian Territory, got a great deal of money, but they got it not according to law. So a preacher may get a large following, but they may be ill-gotten. This is for the Lord to determine. Will not some one who can see into the inner sanctuary, give us something on the Scriptural qualifications of evangelists, and how to get them? This is yet a problem for the church to solve.

FRAGMENTS.

BY B. C. MOOMAW.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."—Matt. 25: 40.

Do we give due weight to the lessons contained in this remarkable scene? Are we quite sure that we have the true spirit of practical Christianity which, at all times, and under all circumstances, will prompt us to relieve the necessities of God's poor with a cheerful and generous hand? To do this because we feel that we must, is entirely contrary to the spirit of acceptable service, for that which proceeds not from the heart, can not please God.

We see by the words of the Savior that what these blessed saints did in the way of Christian charity was done so naturally, and without constraint, that it was regarded as a matter of course, and quickly forgotten.

If, therefore, by feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, entertaining strangers, visiting the sick, etc., especially of the household of faith, it shall be regarded by our Savior as done directly and personally to him, and so greatly rewarded at last, should we not watch for opportunities to perform what will, in the end, be so much to our honor and advantage, not that by doing these acts of charity we shall merit or deserve anything at the hands of our Heavenly Father, but they show, if done in the proper spirit, that the grace of God and the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts, making us bring forth these fruits of love?

All truly converted men and women will do these works as they have opportunity, because, being converted, they have the disposition to do them.

Is it not already an everlasting honor to those who, during our Lord's sojourn in the world "ministered unto him of their substance," and relieved his wants?

Should we not, then, be glad to learn by this Scripture that we may do so, as really as they, and win for ourselves the unfading laurels of this honor, and the unspeakable bliss of the Father's blessing?

Of what benefit shall all zeal, or self-denial, or knowledge be to us, if we neglect these things,—if we have not charity? Paul says, None. Jesus says, "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto one of the least of these, ye did it not to me."

To be a cheerful giver, and to do it for Christ's sake; to lend to the Lord; to do it as a privilege and without grudging; to put the hand down into the pocket with a smile instead of a frown; to watch for opportunities instead of avoiding them; to be on the lookout for a chance to help the needy,—these are the unmistakable signs of a very high degree of grace and spiritual life.

This same spirit may also find abundant scope and exercise in all matters where the interests of the church or the progress of the Gospel can be advanced by the liberality of the members; for should we not make great sacrifices to give the Bread and Water of Life to those who are hungering and thirsting for it?

"Lay up your treasures in heaven where moth doth not corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal. If this we believe, this we will do, for true faith is always accompanied by appropriate works, according to the Word of God.

STANLEY'S EXPEDITION TO MID-AFRICA.

Stanley's latest expedition into Africa was undertaken as the necessary result of Gordon's death and the fall of Khartoum. The conquest of the Soudan, and the building up of a genuine civilization in Equatorial Africa, was undertaken by Gordon in 1874. He wrested the country from the Arab slave-hunters and sent Emin Pacha to Lado as Governor, under himself, of the southern province. This was in 1876, and Emin has lived and ruled ever since, until brought away by Stanley.

The fall of Khartoum and the death of Gordon left Emin and his province, south of the Soudan, in the greatest danger; in fact, quite at the mercy of the Arabs. Their extermination was merely a question of when the Mahdi should feel disposed to attack them. Internal disorders in the prophet's forces delayed the intended blow, and, while allaying them and preparing for new conquests, the Mahdi died — probably by violence. His place was not long vacant. Another Mahdi, claiming divine inspiration, promptly assumed command of the Arab forces, and Emin's situation was rendered as desperate as before.

At this time Stanley was in America, delivering a course of lectures. His career has been a strange one indeed. He was born in Wales in 1840. His parents were named Rowlands, and they christened him John. Being wretchedly poor, the boy, when three years old, was given to the parish, and this associate of kings was reared in the almshouse at St. Asaph. He came out a healthy and fairly educated lad, and taught school for a year or two. But possessing the genius of the rover, and the physique of Hercules, pedagogy had no attractions for him, and presently he found himself the cabin-boy of a ship bound for New Orleans. He concluded to stop there awhile, and happened to meet a wealthy American merchant, named Stanley, who was pleased with and adopted him. He exchanged the name of John Rowlands for that of Henry M. Stanley. His adopted father died intestate, and Stanley found himself poor again. Even as the well-endowed and expectant heir of a wealthy man, he had been wandering afoot in the Indian country of the south-west, and had obtained much experience of savage ideas and habits, which proved of great value later.

When the war of the rebellion broke out he found employment in the army of the Union, and became a reporter for the New York Herald. In 1869 he was sent by Mr. Bennett, the owner of the Herald, to find Livingstone, the African traveler and missionary.

The story of that wonderful achievement is told in his book, one of the most fascinating records of exploration. Mr. Bennett sent him back to Africa almost immediately after his return from the Livingstone expedition, and four years more were spent in travels and battles "through the dark continent." Then his great Congo undertaking occupied him from 1879 until 1884, the result of which was the establishment of an independent Nation from the western coast of Africa, at the mouth of the Congo, to the 30th degree in the interior. When this was accomplished, loaded with honors, he returned to America, hoping to spend the balance of his life in less arduous labors.

But he had hardly reached American shores before the King of the Belgians and Sir William Mackinnon besought him over the cable to go and rescue Emin. Messages had reached Zanzibar and Europe from the Pacha's capital at Wadelai, through Dr. Junker, indicating that he would be unable to hold his position against the Mahdi's threatened attack, and was practically awaiting annihilation. Had he been willing to abandon his people, those of whom he had created a nation, he could easily have cut his way by some southern route to the coast, before the Mahdi's forces could come down the Nile and get at him. But Emin is a noble hero, and he preferred death to desertion. Indeed, when Stanley reached him, this sentiment, carried to almost Quixotic extremes, threatened to render the relief expedition unavailing. Directly upon receiving the messages from King Leopold and Sir William, Stanley hurried off to London. There the character of the errand he was desired to perform was fully made known to him. The expedition was not to be military. It was not known just what Emin's situation might be. His last letters had been quite hopeless in tone, telling of the submission to the Mahdi of all the territory north of his, and also of his fears that his own time would inevitably come. Stanley was asked, therefore, to conduct a caravan to Emin, laden with ammunition and supplies. If Emin wanted to come home, Stanley was to act as escort. If he wanted to stay and take his chances with the Mahdi, Stanley was to supply his necessities and come away. The scheme was thoroughly peaceful and merely in the performance of the duty owed by civilization in general, and Great Britain in particular to the intrepid man, who was so bravely upholding worthy interests in such an unequal contest.

Stanley then proceeded to Zanzibar where he organized his expedition. His agents had already recruited a force of 600 men, mostly Zanzibari and Stanley found it necessary only to enter into a treaty with Tippu-Tib, the Zobehr of the Upper Congo, a personage of vast influence in the African interior, a greedy slave-dealer and a man of whose character much that is bad can be said. But Stanley had trusted him, and did so again. Emin was reported by Dr. Tucker to have seventy-five tons of ivory at Wadelai, and Stanley supposed, of course, that the Pacha would want to get it out to the coast. Tippu-Tib agreed to furnish the carriers, for whose services he was handsomely paid.

The route in question was a serious one, and was left entirely to Stanley's judgment. He decided to sail from Zanzibar around the Cape of Good Hope to the mouth of the Congo, thence up the river he knew so much about to Yambuyu, and thence, having stationed Tippu-Tib below on the Congo at Stanley Falls, to proceed as best he could up the Aruwimi to Kavallio. The route from Yambuyu was through an entirely new and unknown country, and many were the doleful predictions that he would come to grief in the dense forests, said to cover that wilderness. It is difficult to resist the suspicion that Stanley took this route as much for the very reason that it lay through an unexplored country, as for any other. If he could add to the map of Africa while carrying relief to the beleaguered Pacha, why not do it? The reason he gave, however, and one that has undoubted force, is that travelling, as he was, with a heavy burden of supplies for Emin, he could get along much better with a river at hand, up which he could go in canoes, than if he travelled overland. Whether in the light of all that is now known this was a wise decision, depends largely from the point of view whence the expedition is regarded. It took him from February 25, 1887, to Arpil 29, 1888 — 429 days — to go from Zanzibar to Lake Albert by the route he chose. It has taken him 202 days to come from Lake Albert to Zanzibar by the route he might otherwise have taken, but how much is proved by this comparison is yet an open question.

Having embarked his men, Stanley made all haste to reach the mouth of the Congo. Congo steamers took him as far as Yambuyu, but before he got there he had to stop at Leopoldville and at Stanley Falls. Tippu-Tib was duly installed as Governor at the latter station, where he was to keep re-inforcements and supplies ready at call. Late in June Stanley reached Yambuyu, and there his serious work began. His force of Zanzibari was officered, besides himself, by Major Barttelot, Surgeon Parke and Messrs. Jephson, Nelson, Ward, Bonney, Troup and Jamieson. He left Major Barttelot with Jamieson, Troup and Ward and 257 men, at Yambuyu, as a rear-guard, in charge of supplies, which they were to bring forward by hurried marches as soon as Tippu-Tib should supply a sufficient force of carriers.

Then, on June 28, 1887, with 389 officers and men, Stanley plunged into the forest. Opposition at once confronted him. Within twenty-four hours the natives gave him battle, but he lost no men, and made a steady progress. He used the river to advantage, and had reached Airsibba by August 13. Here he had five days of hard fighting, and his perils and difficulties thereafter increased every day. The Manyuma Arabs fluttered around him, enticing his men away, and laying waste the country before him, so as to render food scarce. When, on November 12, he found himself in the land of the Ibwiri, and amid peace and plenty, his force was reduced to 174 men. Death and desertion had robbed him of the rest. It was December 5, however, before he emerged from the dead, black forest upon the high, grassy plains above the Albert Nyanza. Before he reached the lake, he had to do much fierce fighting, but he was invariably successful in beating the natives without serious loss to himself, and, on December 14, the silver waters of the Nyanza lay before him. His destination was Wadelai. But the hostile natives would give him no boats to get up the lake, and his own had been left at Kilongolonga, 190 miles behind him. He thought it wiser to go back for them than to march northward overland. So he turned about, and, having secured his boats, he reached the lake again on April 26, 1888. His courier meanwhile had penetrated into Emin's province, carrying the news of his arrival, and when he returned to the lake he found that Emin was coming up to meet him. They came together at Kavallis on April 29.

The meeting was cordial, as may be supposed, and yet it left Stanley disappointed. The Mahdi's expected attack on Emin had been so long delayed that the Pacha had quite recovered from his fears. Moreover, he was profoundly interested in his province, and unwilling to quit the great work he was so successfully performing. His army consisted of 1,390 men, and, with the supplies Stanley delivered, he felt strong. Stanley stayed with him a month, Emin all the while engaged in a fruitless struggle to come to a decision whether to go or to stay.

Nothing as yet had been heard from Major Barttelot and the rear-guard, and Stanley was painfully anxious for their safety. He concluded to utilize the time while the Pacha was making up his mind, by going back to meet them. Leaving Mr. Jephson with the Pachs, he hurried off toward Yambuyu, following the trail already made. He went on and on and on, until he had practically gone the whole distance originally travelled, for only at Bonalya was the mystery solved. There he met Bonney and seventy-one men, the remnant of his rear-guard of 257, who, singularly enough, while he had been travelling 1,000 miles, fighting all the while, were able to come only fifty! Barttelot had been murdered, Ward and Troup had gone home, and Jamieson was hunting up Tippu-Tib and re-inforcements. The mismanagement of the rear-guard is impossible to understand.

BRINGING HIS REAR-GUARD TO THE LAKE.

Stanley's arrival gave the survivors courage, health and strength, and they soon started back to the lake. At Ugarrowa the explorer left the river and deflected into the wilderness, where he encountered many trials. Swarms of Arabs and Wambutti dwarfs harassed him, and so denuded the country of game that he came near starving. But his bravery and skill overcame everything, and on January 9, 1889, he was again beyond the forest and almost within sight of the Nyanza. Up to this time not a word had been heard from Emin and Jephson, and he was now as anxious on their account as he had been in April on account of Barttelot. Emin's confidence in the devotion of his Egyptians, and his reluctance to leave the province, had been incomprehensible to Stanley, and he feared that the Mahdi had arrived, and that Emin and Jephson had shared Gordon's fate, after all. He was half right. On January 16 a courier reached him with a package of letters from Jephson, telling him that in August (1888) Selim Bey, Emin's chief officer, had rebelled against the Pacha, had taken both Emin and Jephson prisoners, and had assumed control of the province himself. Meanwhile a Mahdist army, led by Omar Sali, had come up the Nile, had captured Lado, Regaf, Kirri and Muggi, and had advanced on Dufile. There Selim Bey had made a plucky stand against them, and had driven them back, and they were now somewhere about Lado, waiting for re-inforcements from Khartoum. Stanley replied, urging Jephson and the Pacha to escape if possible, and to meet him at Kavallis. Meanwhile, he made arrangements with a number of Arab and native chiefs, who were friendly to him, to give him an army of 2,000 warriors, with whom, if need be, to whip Selim and his rebels.

He pushed on to Kavallis and there found Emin and Jephson. They had got away from Wadelai. But to Stanley's consternation Emin was still unwilling to go away. He said he thought Selim and the Egyptians would return to his standard, and it looked like desertion to leave his people at the Mahdi's mercy. Stanley called a council of war, and submitted the situation to his officers. They unanimously recommended that the expedition move on for Zanzibar on April 10, with such persons as chose to accompany it. This was the answer returned to Emin, and when April 10 arrived, the expedition moved. Emin and about 400 followers decided to go with it. The very next day Stanley was taken severely ill, and his death was seriously feared, but Dr. Parke pulled him through, and a month later the journey was resumed. They marched up the Valley of the Semliki River, crossing it at Awamba, through Usonora and Kative to the Victoria Nyanza. Melala was reached on September 1, and Mpwampwa on November 11. Dec. 5, 1889, they came out at Bagamoyo, all the world crying plaudits to the hero who has thus completed the most wonderful journey recorded in history. Since leaving Zanzibar, three years ago, Stanley travelled about 5,000 miles.—Compiled from N. Y. Tribune.

ATTRACTION.

BY IDA M. WAGNER.

"And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."—John 12: 32.

As the sun is the center of attraction in the natural world, so the Son of God is the center in the spiritual world. And as the sun draws all men sun-ward, so Christ draws all men Christ-ward; for he says, "If I be lifted up," etc. He did not say a few men, good men, or women and children, but all men.

Some persons claim that religion does very well for women and children but it is not so much intended for men. Alas! they forget that Christ is drawing all men.

This attractive force, exerted by Christ, is very strong and, like the most powerful forces in nature, it is a silent force. No one can see it or hear it, neither can he tell what it is. We simply feel its effects. But its effects are felt in a large sphere, being directed to the ends of the earth. All persons feel it or have felt it. Some one may ask, Is the moral man drawn? Is the thief drawn? Is the robber drawn? Is the atheist drawn? Yes, that little word all includes all kinds of men.

The question naturally arises, If all men are drawn, why are not all Christians? It is simply because some do not yield to the drawing. Christ's part is to do the drawing, and man's is to obey it.

As to the time of drawing, when should persons yield to it? Christ has promised to draw all men and he does draw them, but we are not told how long he will continue the drawing. One may so weaken this drawing by refusing to submit to it that it will finally cease, for we read that the Spirit of God will not always strive with man. It is very sad to think that there may be a time when it will be too late to accept Christ; the drawing will have ceased and these sad words will come, "Depart from me, I never knew you." Christ's drawing is much more efficient among the young than the old. It is a blessed thought that so many yielded to the drawing while in the prime of life. But there are a few only, when compared with the many that are needed in the army of the Lord. The question should be answered by each youth, "Shall I engage in that service where I am most needed and can do the most good or shall I continue to work for the enemy of souls?" This choice must be made and it is the duty you owe yourself and your God to choose wisely and to choose now. "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth."

After one has been adopted into the Lord's family, there takes place or should take place a mutual drawing. James 4: 8. In this exhortation we find that our part of the drawing comes first. We must draw near with a true heart (Heb. 10: 22), then God will draw nigh to us. We are so prone to call to God in times of adversity. The wicked man does the same, but let us remember him regularly, in times of prosperity. I do not mean simply by prayer, for, as a minister once said, "In prayer God hears from us but in the study of his Word we hear from him." Which is the more important? We should first hear from God; then our thanksgiving and wants would naturally follow.

There is an opposite force at work which draws all men away from Christ. So, while the Christian has one drawing to yield to and take part in, he is exposed to another of an opposite character. Satan's attractions are exhibited in various forms and the worst form of evil often assumes the garb of Truth. Satan not only does his work in the ball room or in the saloon, but he attempts it at the divine service. When Job came to present himself before the Lord, Satan came also, and he comes to-day. He says, You need not study God's Word. You need not talk to the unsaved about their souls, for it will do no good, and you need not be separate from the world.

There is alloy in every heart, and more or less will remain while we are in this life, but let us be drawn so near the Christ in our daily walk that we be prepared to resist the opposite drawing. My dear brethren and sisters, to which drawing do we yield? Is our attachment to Christ so strong that we live as becometh his followers? Are we always found walking in the straight and narrow path or do we take a few steps aside when isolated from the church! Dear young sisters, especially, are we arrayed in modest apparel? It is true that this is not all that belongs to religion, but let us earnestly strive to adorn our souls; then each of us can say that we live—

"For the cause that needs assistance,
For the wrongs that need resistance,
For the future in the distance,
And the good that we can do."

BROTHERLY LOVE.

BY SARAH M. SAUNDERS.

Love, as it is presented to us in the Bible, is the grandest characteristic of God and of our Savior. In fact, it is positively written that "God is love."

Love is defined as a reaching forth of the mind after some object, with a desire to possess and enjoy it—a desire for the happiness of others, and a delight in what is excellent in character or pleasing to the eye.

"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16.

In all the writings of the holy prophets, apostles and early Christians, love seems to be the inspiring cause and theme of their writings.

The beloved disciple,—the "one whom Jesus loved," seems to have received a large share of this grace, and his epistles are principally effusions of love, exhortations to the churches to continue steadfast in love, as the pivot upon which all their faith and works received their strength, weight and impetus in the great work of salvation to the human family. "Little children love one another," is the very essence of the love of God as manifested unto us by the Son of God through the inspired apostles.

What, then, is brotherly love? It is an earnest, sincere desire on our part to promote the best interests, and the present and future welfare of our brethren and sisters, or those of our fellow-creatures, who are allied to us by the ties of discipleship and fraternal love, which so far exceeds the ties of nature. Brotherly love is no over-familiarity, but a strong, confiding, unchanging devotion to each other, and manifests itself in various ways It is that charity which "thinketh no evil" of its equals, is not jealous of its superiors, and does not look down with contempt upon its inferiors.

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches."

☞Church News solicited for this Department. If you have had a good meeting, send a report of it, so that others may rejoice with you. In writing give name of church, county and State. Be brief! From Frederick, South Dakota.

It is probably well known that Dakota, north and south, has now been formed into two States, and we hope that they will be prosperous, inasmuch as Prohibition has been sustained by a large majority.

Crops have been, in many places, almost a total failure, and there will be much suffering among the poor. We had the severest drouth ever known here. The writer of this is now in Aberdeen, on his way to Nebraska and Kansas. We are now at the home of Bro. Falker, formerly of Missouri, and expect to leave here on Monday, Dec. 2, and stop at Beatrice, Nebr. Our course after that will be guided by circumstances. We want to explore Kansas, and, if the climate, etc, suits us, we will buy a little home where some brethren are, whom we could help in preaching the Word. We would like to hear from Brethren, who need help, and where a small piece of land could be bought at a reasonable price. We like Dakota very well, but the climate is too severe for our time of life; hence we seek a home farther south.

Our health is remarkably good, and is much improved by the use of Dr. Wilford Hall's treatment. We had an infirmity of thirty years' standing, of which the treatment has cured us, and we feel much more elastic, and enjoy better health than any time since we came to Dakota. We are thankful for this to our Heavenly Father, and desire to live for his glory, and to do as much as we can for his cause.

Brethren, either in Nebraska or Kansas, who would like to correspond with us, may address us at Beatrice until further notice.

We were made glad to hear from Lunenburgh, Va. We lived there some years and preached much of the Brethren's doctrine, in connection with that of Wm. Thurman. We held three public discussions on trine immersion, and much good seed was sown. My wife and self were the first baptized in Lunenburgh, by Bro. B. F. Moomaw, and we rejoice that so many have obeyed the Gospel there. May the Good Shepherd watch over them and keep them in the green pastures of Truth, and finally gather them into his everlasting kingdom!

Although we may leave Dakota, we would not discourage Brethren from coming here,—especially to Aberdeen. There is a rich soil here, and crops seldom fail. Land is yet reasonable, and no one would regret buying land near Aberdeen.

As we hope to spend the winter in Kansas, we will preach the Word as opportunities present themselves. James Evans.

From the Southern Mission Field.

Our last communication was written from Jefferson County, Ill. From there, via Cairo, Ill., we went to Laforge, Mo, where we arrived Oct. 23rd. Here we had several meetings,—council and Communion. One was baptized. Here we met with Bro. Sidney Hodgden, who had been doing some good work among the little band of God's children at that place. They now number about fifty, though living somewhat scattered. There is a growing and wide-spread demand for preaching, where, a little over three years ago, the first sermon was preached by Bro. S. S. Mohler, to a people of whom very few ever knew anything of the doctrine of the Brethren.

While we would rejoice to see much more done, yet we thank the Lord, that we do see some little good fruit of the Christ-ordained, soul-saving missionary work! Oh, brethren and sisters, who is it that is alive unto God and righteousness, and does not want some part in the glorious work, "when the Master comes?" Will you spend your God-loaned means, for parlor-adornings, tobacco, cigars, etc? Millions are spent in this way. How many claim that they can not give anything for the Lord's work! They say they are too poor. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked." For all these things God will bring us to judgment.

We left Laforge, Tuesday, Oct. 29, for Stuttgart, Ark., where we arrived the same day. We have only had a few meetings since our arrival. Most of our time has been taken up in making some preparation for the winter. We hope, by the blessings of the Lord, soon to get to work, as openings may appear. On the morrow, if we live and the Lord will, we expect to go over to St. Francis County, to attend the council and Communion, appointed for Saturday evening, Nov. 30. Since being here, my wife accidentally sprained her foot, but I am glad to say that she is improving. I hope she may soon be able to be out again! Jas. R. Gish.

From the Old Folks' and Orphans' Home of the Middle District of Indiana.

We deem it necessary to give the members of the Middle District of Indiana some information in regard to our Home. Our last article was an appeal for $600, bed-clothing and carpets. Some churches have responded liberally, but some have not responded, which makes us still needy. We urge churches that have not responded, to do so immediately. Send on your money and goods. In order to avoid so much private correspondence, in answer to questions concerning applications, we give to the members some rules, to be complied with, before sending any person to the Home.

(a) All applications are first considered by the church, from which the application came.

(b) No church shall grant an application to any member, who is not a deserving subject of charity, and supported by the church.

(c) All persons must be cleansed of all contagious diseases before they can be admitted to the Home.

(d) No idiotic persons will be admitted who are not able to wait upon themselves.

(e) All children sent to the Home will only remain until the Trustees can get suitable homes for them; for the Home will not rear and educate children, but provides for the helpless orphans.

(f) No church should send an applicant to the Home before consulting with the Superintendent, giving full explanation of the case, and then receiving permission from him; he first to receive permission from the Trustees.

(g) The church must bear the expenses of sending the person to the Home, and in case the inmates want to visit their friends, the Home will grant them the privilege but will be to no expense regarding their going from or returning to the Home.

(h) All members must be represented by letter to the Mexico church.

(i) The Home will bear the expense of a respectable burial, unless the friends should desire to remove the remains from the Home. In such cases the friends bear the expense of burial.

If further information is desired, correspond with James Himelick, Secy., or the undersigned.

From the Monticello Church, Ind.

Our Communion meeting occurred Nov. 8. It was one of the most enjoyable meetings we ever attended in our church, and such was the expression of all who were present. The audience was not as large as sometimes, and this gave all good accommodations. The brethren from a distance were Bro. Joseph Snowberger, of Pennsylvania; Bro. Lewis W. Teeter, of Hagerstown, Ind., and Bro. Henry Frantz, of Ohio, who officiated. A large number of brethren and sisters from adjoining churches were present.

Our farewell meeting on Saturday forenoon was a feast for hungry souls. Brethren Frantz, Teeter, Snowberger, and others, gave us a full meal of Gospel truths. Bro. Daniel Shively, of Pipe Creek church, gave us a full statement of the condition of the Old Folks' and Orphans' Home at Mexico, Ind. He is one of the solicitors to secure endowment funds for the Home. He canvassed our congregation with good success. Bro. Teeter remained with us and held a series of meetings for us at the church house. He is an able expounder of Gospel Truth. The weather was very unpleasant all the time he was with us, therefore the attendance was small at times, but the attention was excellent throughout. All seemed to drink in the truths as he presented them, from time to time, and were deeply impressed with the same. He commenced his discourses Nov. 9th, and continued until Nov. 24. The meetings resulted in three additions to the church. May the good seed sown bring forth fruit in time to come! May God, through his Holy Spirit, revive all to a greater degree of activity, is our earnest desire and prayer! J. A. Weaver.

On the Wing.

I left home Nov. 1, to attend the feast at Mexico, Ind., Nov. 2. We had a very pleasant and profitable meeting. The attendance was large and the ministerial help ample. Next day (Sunday) we had preaching in the morning, afternoon and evening; also on Monday evening.

On Tuesday morning we started to attend the feast at Middle Fork, Ind. This, also, was a large meeting, and we enjoyed it much.

Next day we attended the feast at North Manchester. We had not been at a love-feast in this church for twenty-seven years. It was a feast of joy to us and, we hope, to all. Three precious souls were baptized at this meeting. Here again we left early the next morning, to attend the feast with the Monticello church, which we reached just in time for the services. On account of the rain, this meeting was not as large as the other three, yet it was a pleasant meeting, and one we enjoyed much, as this was the first time we ever met with this church.

We left on Saturday as soon as the meeting closed, as we had promised to return to the Mexico church and remain over Sunday, which we were permitted to do.

We also visited the Old Folks' Home at Mexico, Ind. We found it to be a very pleasant place.

We left the Mexico church on Monday, Nov. 14, and arrived home at midnight. I found all well; thank the Lord for his care over us all!

While my late visit to Indiana was one of haste from place to place, and one of labor, yet it was one I shall never forget, and I hope that some good was done. I met many of our old veterans of the Cross,—brethren John Metzger, R. H. Miller, Jeremiah Gump, David Neff, —— Snowberger, of Clover Creek, Pa., —— Culp, of Monticello, Ind., L. W. Teeter, and many others.

After being at home six days, we left on Monday, Nov. 18, en route for Kansas, Texas and California. We made a short stop at Lawrence, Kansas, and visited the homes of S. B. Katherman and Thomas Winey. We did not get to see either of the brethren, as Bro. Katherman was teaching school, and Bro. Winey was preaching at Pleasant Grove, Kansas.

Our next stop was at Newton, Kansas. We arrived at the home of Bro. Levi Andes, on Friday evening. The next day we met with the brethren and sisters of the Newton church, in council, in their new church. We also had preaching at the same place on Saturday night and Sunday. At these meetings we had the pleasure of meeting and being with Bro. Enoch Eby and wife. Circumstances compelled us to leave Newton on Sunday evening for Hartley, in the Pan Handle of Texas. Bro. Eby expected to remain during the week and also to attend their feast Nov. 30. We arrived at Hartley, Texas, on Tuesday morning at 3 A. M., and left on Wednesday morning for this place, where I am penning these lines. I expect to leave to-night for Las Vegas, and to-morrow expect to meet Bro. M. M. Eshelman, G. L. McDonaugh and wife, and others, en route for California. We expect to arrive at Los Angeles Nov. 30, at 4: 20 P. M. May the Lord protect us! HENRY FRANTZ.

Trinidad, Colo., Nov. 27.

From the Powell's Valley Church.

THE members of this church enjoyed a short series of meetings, conducted by our evangelist, Bro. David Brower, of Myrtle Point, Coos Co., Oregon. He held forth the Word with power. As an immediate result one dear young sister came out on the Lord's side, and was baptized Nov. 23. May the blessings of God rest upon her, and may she be a light in the world and an ornament in the sight of God. May the blessings of heaven enable us all to stand united, so that we may be living epistles, read and known of all men. We were sorry to give our dear aged brother the parting hand. Perhaps we saw each other for the last time on earth. We pray that the Lord may strengthen and encourage him to continue his labors in the vineyard of our blessed Lord and Master. May we all so live that in the great day of judgment we may be worthy to be received into God's kingdom. MARGARET METZGER.

Gresham, Ore.

Here and There.

By request the writer attended the love-feast in the Philadelphia church on Thursday night of November 7. Just before the regular exercises commenced, Bro. I. M. Gibson baptized a young man, whose parents live in Ohio, and who hold to the Mennonite persuasion of faith. The young man seemed especially comforted and happy after his baptism and the love-feast occasion. Heaven bless the young man wherever his lot may be cast!

The feast was a good one and unusually solemn and well attended. Bro. Gibson is giving good satisfaction and is generally liked by the members. No less than eight have already been received into the church by baptism since he came to the city, and the prospects are that Bro. Gibson will do a good work in the City of Brotherly Love. Let us all pray that God may keep him and his noble and estimable wife ever faithful. They both seem to have their hearts in the work, and we hope and pray that continued prosperity of a substantial character may ever attend them in their work for the Master.

Sunday, Nov. 10, we attended the dedication of the new house of worship at Laurenceville, Chester County, Pa. As we had mentioned some things in a former communication about the new house of worship, the new name of the church, and the elder in charge, etc, we shall not burden the reader with a repetition of the same thing. The dedication meeting was well attended, though the weather was far from being the most desirable. Our text for the occasion was Ps. 122: 1: "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." After we were through with our part of the services, which consisted of preaching only, Bro. J. P. Hetrick,—the elder in charge, made some remarks of an appropriate character, and also read an interesting paper on the dedication of the former house of worship. The paper was prepared by sister Susan Sidle, who was present on the occasion of the first dedication, and also on this last one She is now nearly eighty-eight years old, and occasionally writes yet for our church paper. She is blessed with a retentive memory, and is remarkably active, considering her age.

It was ascertained that about two hundred dollars of indebtedness on the new church still existed, which was about paid by raising a collection, while an appropriate hymn was being sung. This being done we all knelt in prayer, when one of the ministering brethren led in earnest prayer and thanksgiving. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow" was then sung, filling the house with the sweet echoes of music, — so sweet and cheering to the soul, and the audience was dismissed, one going here and the other there, never again to all meet on a similar occasion.

Reader, if the worship of God in the sanctuary, and the hymning of praise to his holy name can be made so inspiring and soul-uplifting, what must be the soul's happy experience when once the songs of the angelic hosts, and the finally saved in heaven shall greet our ears? Rapture! RAPTURE!! Yes, RAPTURE!!!

May heaven so guide and keep us that we may at last all meet in the great dedication meeting on high, and so ever be with the Lord!

Notes of Travel.

Nov. 11, in company with Bro. Babylon, and twelve other members of the Meadow Branch church, we took the boat at Baltimore for West Point, King William County, Va., to visit a few members who moved there from an adjoining church a few years ago.

We had preached for them one week, two years ago with good interest and attention. That was the first preaching by the Brethren in the County, as far as we know.

The members desired more meetings and felt to have a Communion meeting, as they are nearly two hundred miles from the nearest, organized church. We arrived Nov. 12th and commenced our meetings in the Baptist meeting-house. Nov. 13th we baptized three young sisters. The evening of Nov. 14th was arranged for the feast, but the spirit of God was at work, and four more dear young souls declared themselves willing to obey God, that they might partake of the broken emblems of the body and blood of Christ with us that night. In the evening we gathered for the exercises of the feast, which was the most enjoyable of my life. About twenty-five members surrounded the Lord's table,—seven for the first time. Others have been denied the pleasure for years. Those who looked on had never seen the like. One man told me, "This is the most solemn meeting I ever attended. I could hardly keep my seat."

Next morning Bro. Babylon preached for us, and after meeting, in company with most of the members, he started for home. I, by request, remained over Sunday, holding our meetings in the court-house. Sunday night, Nov. 17, was to close our meetings, but after meeting, when we began to bid farewell to those who would not be with us in the morning, I said to a father (for whom many prayers had been offered), "Can you not give up?" He said, "Yes, I am ready." On Monday, the father and one daughter accepted Christ by baptism. We came up out of the water and went on our way rejoicing. Thus nine were added to the church during our stay with them. May God be praised and keep us all in the ways of right!

Brethren who feel to visit these members will find loving hearts, not blessed with much of this world's goods but rich in the spirit of God,—members who will appreciate your visits and labors. Address Bro. Christian Royer, Sweet Hall (at whose house our love-feast was held), or Bro. Michael Brown, King William court-house, King William County, Va. This place can be reached by railroad, from Richmond over the Richmond & Danville railroad, or from Baltimore by boat to West Point; then by rail to Sweet Hall over the above railroad. D. D. BONSACK.

Westminster, Md., Nov. 24.

From the Dry Creek Church, Iowa.

OUR series of meetings is still in progress. Our dear Bro. Cripe, sustained by the power of God, is preaching for us. We all feel blessed and built up in that most holy faith. All glory to God for the four dear ones that have been redeemed by the blood of the Lamb and added to our number. Others, we think, are under conviction, and we find ourselves asking the question, "Why do they wait?" There are many whom we love—for whom we have long prayed and labored. As we value their souls, we must not give up. We must keep on praying, and pray as never before! Christ taught us, by word and deed, to pray without ceasing. Some of the most powerful conversions have taken place after years of prayers. And yet, do we ever think that we may be the very ones that are holding them back? Are we, in some way, standing in their light? I pray God we are not; and yet we may not be right with God ourselves. There may be something in our lives which they are watching,—something which they may use as an excuse for staying with the world.

Let us prayerfully examine ourselves by the light of God's Word, and see if we are in condition to exercise that simple, child-like and unwavering faith with which God has endowed us. If we are not, let us, with God's help, get ourselves right at once. Let us get our minds and hearts in the proper condition. Then we will see an outpouring of God's spirit, such as we had hardly dared to think of.

Brethren and sisters, the success of the church depends largely on ourselves. God is a mighty worker, but he will not work alone,—he will have us do our part, and until we get in working order, and get right down to earnest, hard, telling work, we may look in vain for the blessings God has promised us. Work on, pray on, and the victory, through Christ, shall be with us!

W. D. TISDALE

COMMENCE RIGHT.—We respect the man who knows distinctly what he wishes. The greater part of all the mischief of the world comes from the fact that men do not sufficiently understand their own aims. They have undertaken to build a tower, and spend no more labor on the foundation than would be necessary to erect a hut.

BRO. SHARP writes that something over forty new students are enrolled at McPherson. The Huntingdon school is largely attended, and Bro. Royer informs us that there are one hundred and eighty-one students enrolled at Mt. Morris. We have not heard from the Virginia Brethren but presume their school is also doing well. We hope our schools will continue to do well, but before them all are many years of self-sacrifice and of hard struggles before they are firmly established. Endowments will be necessary before they can come up to a full standard of usefulness. None know the truth of what we here refer to so well as those who have sacrificed time and money in the school work.

THE CLOSE OF THE VOLUME.

WITH this issue of the MESSENGER our work as editors and contributors closes for 1889. Our labors for the closing year have become a record of the past. Well done, or illy done, they have gone beyond our power to recall, to improve or to make worse. The record is made up and it will stand for or against us in eternity.

The book which was opened to us with unspotted leaves Jan. 1, 1889, now closes forever. Its leaves are written upon and, doubtless, many of them are blotted and blurred. Then the book was pure and clean, now it is dimmed here and there with earth stains, with erasures, and it is far from being clean. It does not bear the pure, clear record we wish it did. Here and there self shows itself in an ugly blur. Here a blot, deep and dark, fell upon the white page. We have tried to erase it and have succeeded but the marks of erasure still remain. Here are lines written that we wish were not in the book, but what is written is written, and we close the book with a sigh and a wish that it might all have been better done. We wish there were fewer blots and blurs, fewer mistakes and errors, less of self and more of Christ in it all; but looking over it all we are made to feel that even in our weak efforts the Lord has been our helper. Whilst so little has been well done, yet we feel encouraged to struggle on. Our work must at best lack that degree of perfection which a high ideal points out to us, but we feel that the more of Christ we can get into our work and the more of self we can eliminate from it, the nearer will we come in writing upon the leaves of the book of our lives to divine approval.

One thought more than any other impresses us as we write and that is, how swiftly time passes away! It seems to us but yesterday when we wrote the first lines for the MESSENGER for 1889, and now we are writing the closing words for the volume. How, "swifter than a weaver's shuttle," have the days, the weeks, and the months of this year of grace fled into the remorseless past. They came and went, leaving us to wonder how a year can sweep by so quickly. But so time speeds on in its never-ceasing flight; and as the days, and weeks, and months of the old year, now hoary with age, have fled away, so "swifter than a post, or the eagle that hasteth to the prey," pass away all the days of our life. "We flee as a shadow and continue not." Have you ever watched the flitting shadows of a passing cloud on a bright summer day? How swiftly and yet how silently it passes over us and continues not! Fit emblem of the days of the years of man's pilgrimage in this world! How reflections like these should induce us to do with our might, and at once, that which has been placed in our hands to do. Ah, how sadly we often waste our time and lose golden opportunities! Standing to-day at the close of the old year, feeling that we have not done all that we might have done, let us, with God's help, resolve to make better use of the time yet to be graciously given us.

The closing year has brought to the MESSENGER family of readers its burden of sorrow. Many homes have been made desolate, loved ones have been taken away and many hearts are bleeding to-day from wounds inflicted by the hand of death. In the cemetery are newly-made graves where a kind father, a loving mother, a bosom companion, a gentle sister, a devoted son or daughter have been laid to rest. The home has lost its treasure, and sad hearts mourn the loved and the lost, but, even amid the sadness and gloom of death, comes the joyous hope of the resurrection, and through our tears we may sing, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." Our friends have been taken from us but, since they have passed over the river, heaven seems all the nearer to us and we but linger a little longer until the summons comes to us.

But, while there has been sorrow, we realize that the Lord has given us innumerable blessings. Our lives have been crowded with rich mercies, and we can say of a truth that goodness and mercy has followed us all the days of our lives and that the dear Father has been very good to us. Looking back over the year that has just gone from us, we must feel more and more our indebtedness to God and our entire dependence upon him. This will awaken in our hearts a feeling of trust in the Lord for the future, and of thanksgiving for all that he has done for us in the past. It will be well for us to look back often so that we may come to fully realize how much we owe him who careth for us.

But what of the future? The past is gone forever, and we turn from the dead past to the living present and the future time which God may give us to improve. Looking forward, then, we send, as we did a year ago, to the entire MESSENGER family sincere greetings for the new year, and we can do no better now than to repeat what we then said. We hope to visit you all during the coming year. May it be full of rich blessings to you all! May God's grace abound in you, and his sunshine light your pathway, and bring to you an abundant growth in divine life and a nearer approach to the likeness of Christ in God. We are pressing onward to the land of rest, for the land of the palm and pomegranate, and let us show by our lives, by our walk, by our conversation, that we bear true allegiance to our King Jesus.

Let us now gird up our loins for the conflict that the year to come will bring upon us. Let there be no desertions from the ranks of God's people; let there be no straggling or vagrancy in the army of the Lord; let there be no slackness in our work, no spirit of imitating the world, no neglect of attending religious meetings, no lack of faith in God's promises, no ceasing from prayer, no indifference to our mission work, no less giving to the Lord and to the poor, no giving occasion to the enemy by walking with the world, and no weariness in well-doing; but let there be a forward movement along the whole line, in Christian growth and development! Let our motto be "onward and upward;" let there be more love for each other, more zeal for the cause of Christ, more self-consecration, and in all more of Christ and less of self.

Will we not, my sister, my brother, enter upon the new year with these resolutions firmly fixed in our hearts and with an unalterable determination, by God's help, to carry them out? If so, those of us, who shall be permitted to live to the end of the year 1890, will see what great things the Lord will do for us. Surely, the Lord is gracious, and if we but do our part he will never fail to do his.

We close these lines and this volume of the MESSENGER, wishing all our readers a pleasant Christmas time and a blessed and happy New Year. May God's blessing attend you all, and when the end comes to our earthly pilgrimage, may we have life eternal!

SPECIAL NOTICE TO OUR AGENTS.

With this issue of the Messenger we send to our agents a special supplement and subscription list. We hope all who receive it will read it carefully and act accordingly. We want our agents to make a special effort to send us new names, not forgetting to get all of our old subscribers to renew for 1890. We believe, by making a strong effort, 2,000 new names may be added to our list between this date and March 1, and we ask our agents to make a special effort to secure the names.

We know that the Messenger is doing a good work. We have scores of letters testifying to this fact. Many have been led to inquire more earnestly for the whole Truth. It has gone out and opened up new mission fields and has carried comfort and encouragement to thousands of its readers. Our agents, while laboring to extend the circulation of the Messenger, may have the consciousness that they are doing a good work and are laboring for a good cause. Go to work, then, and may the Lord bless you all in every good work. If any do not receive the special circular, drop us a card at once and we will send you one by mail.

Since last report three have been added to the church at Warrensburg, Mo.

Bro. E. S. Young will spend part of the Holiday vacation with his friends and relatives in Ohio.

The Committee of Arrangements for our last Annual Meeting will soon make a report of their work. They labored faithfully and have a good report to make.

Bro. A. J. Wine, of South English, Iowa, has located at Nocona, Texas. We trust he will be pleased with his new home and be able to help on the good work in the Lone Star State.

The meetings in progress at Pine Creek, Ill., are largely attended and full of interest. Bro. Mohler is laboring earnestly. We trust that before the meetings close many may be induced to accept Christ as their Savior.

Bro. Samuel T. Harnes would like to secure a home among the Brethren. He is, at present, an inmate of the National Soldiers' Home at Dayton, Ohio, where he may be addressed. Who will write to him in regard to this matter?

Bro. Wm. K. Moore, of the Waddam's Grove church, Ill., called on us last week. He was on his way to Union County, Pa, where he will spend some time visiting his old home and preaching for the Brethren. We wish him a safe and pleasant journey.

We regret to learn that Bro. John Diehl, of West Branch, Ill., is still confined to his bed on account of his broken limb. It is now three months since the accident occurred and the old brother has had to suffer a great deal of pain, but he seems to bear his affliction patiently.

Bro. John W. Moats, of Altoona, Iowa, is visiting at this place. He preached at the Silver Creek meeting-house on Sunday last. Bro. Moats was called to the ministry in this church some twenty-five years ago. We are glad to have him with us again.

The Brethren at Newton, Kans., have had a season of rejoicing. Bro. Enoch Eby was with them and eight were added to the church by baptism. We rejoice with them.

The house in which the Brethren in Chicago have been holding meetings for about two years, is being repaired, and for the present our meetings are discontinued. As soon as the repairs are completed, regular services will be held again, of which notice will be given in the Messenger.

Since Bro. Amick's return from his western trip he has been on the sick list. He contracted a severe cold on the way from Denver to McPherson and to this were added symptoms of malarial fever. At this writing, although still confined to the house, he is better and hopes in a few days to be able to be out again.

Bro. Andrew Hutchison writes, under date of the 11th inst., as follows: "You may say to your readers that I am still quite hopeful that I shall be permitted to work for the Lord a little while longer. I have just returned from the Mound church, which is in Bates County, Mo. Their new meeting-house, which has recently been built, is located in the town of Adrian; 30x40 feet is the size of the house. It is a plain, neat, and well-built edifice, well suited to the purpose for which it was erected. It was dedicated to the Lord, Dec. 8, and its seating capacity was well nigh filled with an attentive class of listeners. The Brethren at that place certainly deserve credit for their work and prudence."

The Sunday-school lessons for 1890 will be taken entirely from the New Testament, and the Gospel according to Luke will furnish the material for the year's work,—at once interesting and instructive. "The Forerunner Announced," Luke 1: 5-17, opens the lessons of the first quarter. Continuing with the principal events in the early history of Christ, and incidents connected therewith, we close with the consideration of several occurrences during the first part of his ministry. Brethren Sharp and Neff have done well, in preparing the lessons for the Quarterly in such a way, as to bring out forcibly the many precious truths contained therein. We have printed an ample supply of the Quarterly, and, as before, it will be sold upon the following very low terms: Single copy, 10 cents; three copies, 25 cents; eight copies and over, five cents each; fifty copies and over, four cents each. Send orders at once.

Ingersoll is reported as having recently said in a letter to a New York lawyer, Mr. E. R. Johnes, in passing an opinion on an essay written by the latter gentleman on "The Immortality of the Soul," that the human heart will always say, "Perhaps there is another life." Ingersoll has only expressed here what every infidel in the world feels, whether he is honest enough to say so or not. No matter how he may have hedged himself about by the fallacies of unbelief, yet there is that in the soul that cries out in abhorrence against the doctrine that when man dies he goes back to the unconscious dust and lives no more. The heart keeps repeating over and over again, "There is another life," and we are glad to know that even Ingersoll, the great infidel, is compelled to admit the possibility of a life beyond the tomb. When he admits that, perhaps, there is another life, he has gone more than half way towards expressing a belief that there is such a life awaiting our departure from this world. Is the great agnostic being drawn toward a belief in immortality? If he uttered the words credited to him, it looks that way.

Sister Sadie C. Brallier known to many of our readers as a correspondent of the Messenger and as the writer of good poetry, has added "Noffsinger" to her name. She was married to Bro. J. B. Noffsinger, at this place, on the 1st inst. For the present brother and sister Noffsinger will make their home at Mt. Morris. The Messenger wishes them a happy and pleasant voyage together down the stream of time, and a safe landing at the end of the journey in the haven of eternal rest.

It seems strange, indeed, that Emin Pacha should have braved the dangers of Central Africa for a number of years, and then, after being rescued by Stanley and reaching civilization, should have met with an accident by which his life is endangered. He fell from the portico of a house at Bagamoyo and sustained injuries which, it is feared, will prove fatal. The latest advice from Zanzibar says that he is still in a dangerous condition, but Dr. Parkes, who accompanied Stanley, has hopes of his recovery. We trust that these hopes may be realized and that the life of the man who has done so much to civilize the region of Central Africa may be spared for further usefulness.

HENRY M. STANLEY.

For nearly three years the dark continent of Africa held the fate of this wonderful man as a sealed book. An occasional rumor of death and disaster came to the coast. At one time it was reported that Stanley had been murdered by the natives; again it was said that the courageous explorer was safe and that his expedition was successful. At last, after long waiting, the brave man, having marched over 5,000 miles through the jungles, the dense forest, the pestilential swamps, and the sandy deserts of Central Africa, returns to civilization. On the 5th inst., he, in company with Emin Pacha, the man for whose rescue Stanley was sent into the Dark Continent, reached the coast at Bagamoyo where they were received with great joy. Thus ends another chapter in the life of this great explorer. In another column we give a sketch of his career.

The New York Tribune in closing an editorial on the career of the explorer says: "Strongest, perhaps, of all the characteristics of the man which are revealed in this thrilling recital, is his constant, reverent and dominating faith in God. This trait, which was possessed to such a degree by those kindred spirits, Livingstone and Gordon, was long ago developed in Mr. Stanley, and his successive adventures have only deepened and confirmed it. A psychologist might find much food for speculation in this—in the effect upon the soul of wanderings through vast solitudes and of communion with nature in her most luxuriant, her most desolate and her most savage moods. But fine-spun theories aside, here is the significant fact, that the most heroic of living men is also one of the most devout. He sees nothing unmanly in being religious. He is not ashamed to say that he believes in God and trusts in him for guidance. He repudiates what the vulgar call luck and the unbelievers chance. To him the wisdom and the monitions of a Supreme Power are a tremendous verity. It is with the frankness of a most inspiring faith that he concludes his self-told Odyssey with the fervent cry, 'Thanks be to God forever and ever!' And to this every one who appreciates high achievement and exalted manhood will add his thanks for the life and the ennobling example of Henry M. Stanley."

Missionary and Tract Work Department.

"Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come." 1 Cor 16: 2.

"Every man as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give. Not grudgingly or of necessity, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." 2 Cor 9: 7

HOW MUCH SHALL WE GIVE?

"Every man according to his ability." "Every one as God hath prospered him." "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give." "For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not." 2 Cor. 8: 12.

THE Brethren's tracts are true expositors of the Gospel. They expose error, and defend the Truth. They speak and teach the same practical truths and principles as Jesus did every day. They are the same to one man and auditor as another. The Gospel is the Christian's armor and defense.—H

THE ruin wrought by sin is complete. It involves the entire man Therefore, to rid one's self from sin requires the sacrifice of the whole man, — soul, spirit and nature. All must be changed from the sinful state, and made conformable to the will, spirit and nature of Christ. Sin lives in the old nature, — Christ in the new. "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature! old things have passed away; behold, all things are become new." 2 Cor. 5: 17.—H

YOUTH.—Do you wish to be always young? Then be humble! Humility is youth. This is the way our Lord has it,—"He took a little child and set him in the midst of them." To be as a little child is to be as the kingdom of heaven. Pride is deceptive, lofty, dangerous, and as old and treacherous as the devil and sin. Faith, hope and love are safe These make a man humble, free and strong, and, with grace planted in his heart, keep him young. Sins make men crabbed, sickly and old, while grace inspires the soul with the youth and vigor of the spiritual and new life, which make him bright, cheerful and happy. The duration of heaven and home of the soul is not measured by time. There will be no growing old in heaven.—H.

CHOOSING.—To choose well is the battle half won. Choose good companions for your associates, and thereby improve your surroundings. These exert a powerful influence upon your character and life. Time is economy. It comes only once. Make it yours by using it well. Choose good reading, and profit by it. Choose a "tract," and read it instead of a novel. The heroes and heroines of novels are fictitious, and vanish like a vapor, but Christ, the "Hero of the Cross and the world's Redeemer," "sticketh closer than a brother." Choose the right side of the way, and truth for your steps. The steps of the sinner are not wisely chosen, lead downward, and lay hold on hell. "Many are called, but few are chosen." Matt. 20: 16 The steps of the Christian are chosen and directed by the Gospel, firm, graceful and stately. Lay hold on Christ, and go upward and heavenward! Choose this day whom you will serve. – H.

THE CHILDREN'S MISSION.

BY MARY M. GIBSON.

HOW would it suit to have a general Children's Meeting, all over the Brotherhood, on or near Christmas? The Good Book teaches us to ask and we shall receive, and to seek that we may find.

All congregations that intend to have such a meeting, should announce it beforehand, and tell all to come prepared to give into the Lord's treasury at least one-tenth, or more, of their pennies they would spend for Christmas pleasures. Most of you will be surprised to see how anxious the little ones are to respond to your request, for God has put it into their hearts to love his Word.

EVIDENCES OF THE TRUE CHURCH.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

Chapter Twelve.—Obedience the True Test.

OBEDIENCE covers the whole field of Christian duty. Obedience is wholly and only safe, as an infallible guide to the Rock, Christ Jesus. All other "tests," by themselves, are unreliable.

As proof that obedience is the only "true test," we refer the reader to the following Scriptural evidences. In Matt. 7: 24–27, Christ says, in conclusion to his great Sermon on the Mount: "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it."

Here we notice that the house which stood the storms, did so through its good and solid foundation. This, with the believer, means doing, obeying the words of Jesus. The house that fell represents the disobedient character,—that is, not doing what Christ commanded.

The hinge upon which our eternal destiny turns is in doing, — obeying the sayings of Christ, — or not doing them.

Again, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." Matt. 7: 24. Here, also, the condition by which we may enter heaven is, obedience to the will of God.

Again, "Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of Life, and may enter in, through the gates into the city." Rev. 22: 14. Here we have the "right" to the tree of Life, and entrance into the city guaranteed us by doing the commandments,—obedience.

Again, "He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him." Here we have our knowledge of God based on obedience—keeping the commandments.

Again, "If ye love me keep my commandments." John 14: 34. Here we have our love to the Lord measured by our obedience.

Again, "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." John 14: 21. No other genuine test of love to God can be given, than obedience to his Word.

Thus, all through the Bible, we find that the blessings and promises of God are conditioned on our obedience to his Word. "To obey is better than sacrifice, and to hearken, than the fat of rams." 1 Sam. 15: 22.

He that obeys from the heart all the sayings of Christ, doctrinally and practically, obtains all the benefit of church succession, of election, of conscience, of sincerity, of feeling, of the heart, and has all the blessings of obedience besides.

When we look at the accumulated Scriptural facts in support of obedience being the "true test" of our knowledge of God, our love to him, and our final acceptance by him, we are surprised that any other test is sought after. Disobedience brought sin into the world, and obedience only could take it away. Paul, in Rom. 5: 19, says, "For as by one man's disobedience, many were made sinners, so by the obedience of One shall many be made righteous." Obedience to God is the great antidote for sin. The obedience of Christ, only, could atone for the disobedience of our foreparents in Eden.

On condition of obedience to all things Christ has taught us we are promised his spiritual presence; "even unto the end of the world." Matt. 28: 20. Without obedience we have no promise at all.

GOD'S STEWARD.

BY J. S FLORY.

WELL, yes, if you are his servant, you are his steward. You have possessions. How did you get them?

"By industry, economy and good management, coupled to the blessing of God."

The last was well put in. Then, of course, you are in partnership with God.

"Yes, the earth and the fullness thereof is his."

Your life,—how about that?

"Well, yes, that the Lord gives me too."

How about your health and strength, so you can work, and your sense so you can manage well?

"Well I guess it is right to say God gives that to me."

Are these things given you to keep forever here?

"Oh, no, only lent to me."

Yes, I see you are his steward, — he only entrusted you with those things for a time. Do you strictly treat God as if he were your lord, and you his faithful steward?

"I hope so."

Well, let us see. Who gets the most of the surplus income?

"I suppose as it is mine, I can do as I please with it."

Does that idea fully come up to your confession? Now look at it, man, you put it all in bank, or deposit in your name. The Lord calls, but you do not hear very well. How much of your gains flows into the savings-bank in heaven? Echo answers, "How MUCH?" You make a will—do you?

"Yes."

You bequeath so much to your sons, and so much to your daughters?

"Yes."

And so much to the Lord's cause?

"Well, no; I make no provision in my will for that."

What! cut him off without a penny, and he your partner, — really the senior partner at that?

Belonging to the church do you not claim that all you have and are is the Lord's?

"Yes, I suppose so."

Your children are members of the church?

"Sad to say, No."

Is it possible you will bequeath what you claim is the Lord's to the world, to be used in Satan's kingdom,—perhaps to the down-fall of your own posterity?

"Well, I must say, I never thought of it in that way. What had I better do?"

Do?—why do what is right between partners in trade. Make a will, which you need not be afraid to face on the day of judgment. A fair share should go to help on the Lord's cause. Did you never hear that voice asking, "Will a man rob God?" Did you hear the answer, "Ye have robbed me (God) in tithes and offerings?" The Lord will require his own,—be assured of that. Refuse to divide with the God of the universe, and he will refuse to divide his glory with you. Take heed how you hear (reason); God is not mocked.

Notes from our Correspondents.

"As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

—Bro. W. R. Deeter, of Milford, Ind, will begin a series of meetings in the Camp Creek church, Kosciusko Co., Ind., on the first Saturday evening in January, 1890.

—Under date of Dec 5, Eld. Silas Hoover, of Boynton, Pa., writes: "At our last regular meeting, Nov. 31, one was added to the church by baptism in the Elk Creek church. We hope that others are near the kingdom."

—Sister Fanny Morrow writes: "Soon the record of 1889 will be complete. Its months, weeks and days, with their many opportunities, will have passed into history. We are all nearer the grave. Are we nearer heaven? Has holiness unto the Lord become our motto and watchword?"

—Sister Martha Click, of the Pleasant Valley congregation, Va., writes: "The good work is still progressing in this part of the vineyard. Dec. 1, one young man showed his willingness to renounce Satan, by being baptized in the chilly waters. May his days, to serve God, be many! Others are counting the cost!"

—Bro. S. S. Neher, of the Pine Creek church, Nebr., writes: "There are thirty-five or forty members in this church who live somewhat scattered. There has been a great deal of trouble in the church for some time, but, thank God, peace has again been restored. Nov. 30 we had our love-feast. It was truly a feast long to be remembered, after such a cloud of trouble. Two were added to the church by baptism during the summer."

—Bro. J. Hahn, of the Beaver Creek church, Pulaski Co., Ind., writes: "Our Communion is now in the past. It will long be remembered as a pleasant feast. Bro. L. W. Teeter, of Hagerstown, Ind., broke the Bread of Life to us. Five other ministers were present. We have our house inclosed, the floor laid, and finished the plastering, but we have not yet put in the ceiling, as we lack the means to finish."

—Under date of Nov. 27, Bro. George W. Sellers, of Bryan, Williams Co., Ohio, writes: "We as a church have our times of rejoicing, as well as our times of regrets and sorrows. Two weeks ago last Sunday one precious soul came out on the Lord's side and was baptized. Last Sunday a young man, just starting out in life, made the good choice. Brethren and sisters, let us have more faith, and apply the works to it, and the Lord will do his part!"

—Under date of Nov. 21, Bro. D. C. Hendrickson, of the Middle District church, Miami Co., Ohio, writes: "The waters are still being troubled. To-day two more precious souls, just blooming into womanhood, were received into the fold by Christian baptism; also one by letter. Our prayer is that they may be bright and shining lights to the church, proving faithful until death; then enjoy heaven with all the redeemed and sanctified throughout a never-ending eternity. Bro. D. D. Wine, of Pleasant Hill, was with us, and did the baptizing."

—Under date of Nov. 27, Bro. William Johnson, of Conway Springs, Sumner County, Kans., writes: "We are glad to say that the Slate Creek congregation is in a fair condition. The meetings are well attended, the attention good, and we have much to be thankful for. Our Sunday-school is well attended, and quite an interest is manifested in the work. Bro. Isaac Leatherman has taken up his abode in the bounds of our congregation. Being a good singer and Sunday-school worker, as well as a good defender of the Truth, we hope that his coming to us may be conducive to the welfare of Zion."

—Under date of Nov. 29, Bro. E. Miller, of Sidney, Ind., writes: "Two more were baptized at our quarterly church meeting yesterday,—right in the midst of a severe snow-storm. We can thus see that not even snow-storms will keep people from doing their duty towards God, if only they once get the full consent of their minds. We hope these lambs of the fold may prove faithful until death. The council-meeting passed off very pleasantly, though not many were out, on account of the snow-storm. We had Thanksgiving services in the forenoon. Our crops are not the best, this season, yet we have great reason to be thankful to God."

—Bro. Levi D. Bosserman, of the New Haven church, Mich., writes: "Our series of meetings, now in the past, was very enjoyable. Eld. D. Wysong came to us Nov. 9, began the same evening, and labored for us faithfully and with power until Monday, Nov. 25. On Saturday, Nov. 23, two precious souls were buried in baptism with their Lord. On the same evening we enjoyed a sweet Communion season with each other, and with God. May the Lord help us to always remember it! A good way to remember our duty, is to read the Word of God frequently. I would like all our members to commence on New Year's Day to read the Bible through in 1890. My brother and I read it through during this year,—and will start again with the new year, — reading three chapters a day on week days, and five on Sundays. Who will try it? This is not reading to read, but reading to LEARN."

—Under date of Nov. 26, sister Margaret Metzger of the Powell's Valley church, Oregon, writes: "The members of this church met in council, Nov. 23. Eld. M. M. Bashor, of Sodaville, Linn Co., accompanied by Eld. Samuel Barklow, of Myrtle Point, Coos Co., were with us. Some good admonitions were given by Eld. Samuel Barklow, and everything that came before the meeting was considered in a Christian spirit, and disposed of in the fear of the Lord. On Sunday following an excellent sermon was delivered by Eld. Samuel Barklow, assisted by Eld. M. M. Bashor, from the words, 'Keep your vessels filled with oil.' While those dear brethren were earnestly pleading for the fallen race to flee the wrath to come, we were made sad to realize that darkness seems to prevail rather than the true light of the Gospel. To-day the warning note is sounded; to-morrow it may be too late! May the blessings of God rest upon this church, and upon the labors of his servants every-where."

—Bro. J. F. Neher writes: "The Newton church, Kans., has just enjoyed a refreshing season. Having recently completed their meeting-house, the dedicatory services were conducted by Eld. E. Eby, Nov. 24. He continued meetings until Dec. 1, when the love-feast took place. It was, indeed, a feast to the soul. Eight dear souls were baptized and the saints much encouraged. Good and lasting impressions were made. Bro. L. Andes is the only resident minister, and would much appreciate it, if ministers, traveling or otherwise, would call and render assistance."

NUMBER II.

IN No. 1 I gave an account of my trip until I passed through the canyons of Wyoming and reached Pocatella, Idaho.

Leaving Pocatella we reached a large, sandy plain, streaching out beyond our vision toward the West, while to the North and South the snow-clad mountains extended their summits towards the sky in the distance. Those to the South are said to be at a distance of 75 miles, and those to the North a distance of 150 miles, though, to the casual observer, the farthest would not appear more than 20 or 25 miles at most. On toward evening the distant mountains sank almost entirely out of sight, and one wide expanse met the last lingering look.

The curtains of night were again thrown around us and shut out the landscape from our view. The sun set at 6 o'clock, and rose at 9 by my (Central) time. The first thing that met my eye this morning was a rail fence,—something I had not seen since I left Illinois.

Among my first thoughts was, "This is Thanksgiving Day and, though not permitted to enjoy it personally with my brethren, I hope to be with them in spirit." However, on board the cars is not a very good place for spiritual meditation. We reached Huntington, Oregon, the third day before daylight. The soil here looks quite rich in the valleys,—much like Illinois and Iowa, but the valleys are narrow, as yet, with high bluffs on either side. To-day, for the first time since we left Omaha, we see mud,—probably we are in the country where they have their rainy winters.

We next went down the Grande Ronde Valley, and are now running up through the canyons of the Blue Mountains,—the most picturesque scenery we have met yet. The timber is all pine, the rails for fencing are all made of pine timber. This was the first timber of any consequence since leaving Omaha.

From La Grande to Ramela,—a distance of 19 miles, the road makes an elevation of 1,418 feet, while from Cheyenne to Laramie, to the top of the Rocky Mountains, a distance of 56 miles, the elevation is only 1,199 feet. From Ramela to Pendleton, a distance of 56 miles, the road descends 3,134 feet.

When we got down toward the foot-hills of the Blue Mountains, we saw quite a number of Indian wigwams and a few Indians. At the depot at Pendleton we saw quite a number of Indian squaws and several pappooses. One of the squaws had her pappoose tied on her back with a shawl. They do not look as if they ever wash themselves or their clothes, but I suppose they enjoy themselves as well as other people in their way. We should have been here this morning to get a train to go north towards Moscow, Idaho, but were delayed yesterday by a spring breaking on one of the cars, hence had to wait until to morrow morning, which gave me this afternoon and evening to write up my notes. I took a little walk this afternoon, after I was through with No. 1, and found the city very much given to the liquor traffic. Almost half of the business houses handle it in some way. There is a great need of missionary work here, but I am doubtful if much could be accomplished.

Most of the business houses were closed to-day during Thanksgiving services. I did not get here in time to attend the services. I hope in my next to be able to give some news from the churches. May the Brotherhood pray, on my behalf, for that wisdom which cometh from above, so that, what is lacking, may be restored.

NUMBER III.

PENDLETON is a city of about 5,000 inhabitants, situated right in the hills. As there is no farming country near, it must be supported principally by the railroads. The weather is very pleasant here. There is a little snow up in the mountains, but none here in the valley. I wrote yesterday afternoon and evening without fire in my room. It is a little cool at night, but I did not suffer any.

I lodged last night at the Golden Rule House. The "Golden Rule" is, to pay for your meals before you leave the dining hall; and for your room in advance.

Boarding the train again, Nov. 29th, the first thing worthy of note is the way the people store their grain. It is all sacked and piled up in the warehouses or under sheds, and sometimes on large platforms, without any shelter or protection. This country must be noted for honesty. Were this the case universally, what a great expense would be saved in protecting property from the dishonest! But that time will not come until sin and iniquity are done away, and righteousness reigns supreme.

Next we passed over some very fine country, which looked very much like the prairie country of the East, but I saw not so many large farmhouses and barns as in Illinois. Passing Walla Walla, Washington, a city of about 7,000 inhabitants, the fog was so dense that we could not see much of the surrounding country which is said to be good. After getting away from the valley, the fog disappeared. Climbing the hills again, several hundred feet below us we saw the valley, and about that much above us, on the hill tops, we saw wheat-stubbles and straw-piles. Farmers are now preparing their ground, and seeding. Some fields are getting green. It seems odd to see the farmers at work at this season, especially in this northern latitude. At Riparia we again cross the Snake River, the same stream we crossed a few days ago near Pocatello, but it has increased in size quite materially. Steam-boats run on it from here to Portland.

After leaving Snake River we passed through some very poor, bluffy country, so much so that it is becoming monotonous.

I arrived at my present destination, Moscow, at 6 o'clock, Nov. 29, being about 96 hours, or four days, on the way from Omaha. No person met me at the train, so I came to the hotel, with the expectation of looking up the Brethren the next morning. Moscow, is a thriving village of about 1,500 inhabitants, situated near the mountains. It is the present terminus of a branch of the Pacific R. R, which is expected soon to be extended further into the interior.

On Saturday, Nov. 30, we made the acquaintance of several of the members, and now have our home at Bro. Isaac Hershey's. Bro. Hershey is in feeble health at present. He has taken a severe cold, and also had a fall a few weeks ago, from which he suffers considerably sometimes. Sister Dexter is also quite low with typhoid fever. The church here embraces quite a large territory. The membership extends about 40 miles south, and about 75 miles north. There are between forty and fifty members in the bounds of the District, and about twenty-five in the immediate vicinity of Moscow. The Brethren have a comfortable meeting-house in town, about forty rods from Bro Hershey's, where they have meeting every Sunday. There was meeting yesterday at 11 A M and 7 P. M; we expect to continue the meetings this week, and probably longer. We had tolerably fair weather and attentive congregations yesterday and last night,—more so than we expected under the circumstances.

We made arrangements yesterday for a council-meeting as soon as we can secure the assistance of brethren M. M. Bashor and J. C. Lahman. The church here, as well as in many other places, has had its reverses, but we hope, that by proper management and careful and prudent labors, peace and harmony may be restored, and the church again be got into working order.

D. E PRICE.

Moscow, Idaho Ty, Nov. 28.

From Malmo, Sweden.

NOVEMBER 10 we held our love-feast at Malmo, which was full of spiritual joy to our souls. Two were added to the church by baptism the night before. These were the father and mother of two daughters who have been members of the church for some time. They rejoiced to see their aged parents make the good choice. One who had gone away from the church, confessed his sins, and was gladly received into the fold again.

We ask all the dear readers of the MESSENGER to remember us in their prayers. Though we have to endure many temptations, our prayer is, that we may be faithful to the end. Brethren, let us all do what we can to spread the Blessed Gospel in every part of the world! Remember how many millions there are who have never heard the Gospel in its purity!

Our Blessed Savior wants us to go and preach to every creature, but what are you doing to help those who are doing the work? We are all able to help by giving of our means to those who are already in the field. Even that is not enough; it would not be too much if every congregation could send one missionary. Look, for instance, at the "Salvation Army!" In Sweden there are at least ten Englishmen, who are familiar with our language, and are now laboring here As a result, they have at least five thousand members. When we remember that the "Salvation Army" has worked only about two years longer in Sweden than we have, we can not help being ashamed of the very little we are doing. My dear Brethren, let us try to do all that we can, and, by all means, pray for and help those already working, and also try to send many more.

I do not say this in a spirit of fault-finding. By no means. On the contrary, we are very grateful for all that has been done. I mean to say this, however, The more you are doing, the greater will be the reward. It is our duty, as Christians, to obey all the commandments of our Blessed Savior, and one of the greatest is, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature." Mark 16: 15

JOHN OLSSON.

From Medical Lake, Washington.

AT this writing I am still waiting to hear from Bro. D. E. Price, at Moscow, Idaho Territory.

The MESSENGER is a great comfort to us, out here on this North-west Coast, where we are laboring to extend the Master's kingdom amid many difficulties. Letters come to us for our encouragement, and some are asking why we do not allow ourselves to be heard in the paper. In reply we would state that there is nothing of great importance to say. There are so many abler pens than ours, and space in the MESSENGER is valuable. Our desire is to work, and WORK is plenty! Satan's hold is strong and needs the power of a mighty weapon,—sharp as the two-edged sword,—to overthrow it. The work of preaching the Gospel is no less important to-day than when Christ sent forth his apostles.

There are only a few, scattered members in this State and much work needs to be done. Faithful ministers to the Truth are needed.

I well remember the weakness, numerically, of the churches in Northern Illinois, forty years ago. Looking at the strength and power of the several congregations to-day, and the influence they are wielding, we are not discouraged. We also remember some of our travels and labors in Wisconsin and Kansas, fifteen to twenty years ago. Organizations were quite small then, but how all is now changed! While in Florida, last winter, we preached at an isolated place called the Big Flat Woods upon the request of a native Floridian. A letter from Bro. Neher, of Keuka, a few days ago, informs us of a regular appointment at that place.

These small beginnings may be the gathering of the sheaves in the future, and as we are laboring almost single handed for the advancement of the Truth, we are anxiously awaiting the coming of Bro. Price. Those who have never been out on the frontier, know but little of the difficulties to be met.

Since we last wrote we have changed our location from Moscow, Idaho Territory, to this point, in order to meet the demands for our labor at this place. Our former location was too remote, making traveling expenses too great, railroad fare being five cents a mile. There should be more ministerial help provided to meet the wants, at least, of the few members. By persistent efforts churches might be established, and the cause of Christ get a foot-hold, from which it might spread to other points. It is a well-known fact that the doctrine of the Brethren must be lived out and practiced before it will be of effect among the people. Letters come to us from a long distance, asking us to come and preach, but how can our Board meet all these demands under our present system? May the great work be aided by the Brotherhood in furnishing men and means for the spreading of the Truth!

J. C. LAHMAN.

From Greene, Iowa.

Nov. 25th the District Council for the Northern District of Iowa, Minnesota and Dakota, was held at the Brethren's meeting-house in Greene. The churches were well represented. The churches of Southern Dakota petitioned for admission into this District, which was granted. Bro. Albright, of Bijou Hills, and Bro. B. F. Miller of Alpena, Jerauld Co., S. Dak., were with us, to represent the churches of South Dakota.

Everything passed off pleasantly. Bro. S. H. Miller, of South Waterloo church, was appointed member of the Standing Committee to the next Annual Meeting.

Bro. Marcus Fowler, of Spring Creek church, was appointed evangelist for this District for the ensuing year. There will be no queries from this District to Annual Meeting.

Quite a number of the brethren arrived on Saturday, and preached for us Saturday evening, Sunday and Sunday night. Bro. B F. Miller, of Dakota, and Bro. T. Meyers, of Sheldon, Iowa, remained with us until Tuesday night. Bro. B. F. Miller preached three sermons for us while here. Five sermons were preached during the meetings. The brethren and sisters were certainly bountifully fed on the Bread of Life, while our dear brethren were with us. It truly was a time of spiritual refreshing, long to be remembered. Our meetings were well attended and a deep interest was manifested by all present, both saints and sinners. Although there were no accessions, we trust that the seed sown fell into well-cultivated ground, and will bring forth an abundant harvest of precious souls. A goodly number of our brethren and sisters met at our church for worship on Thanksgiving Day, and were richly admonished by our beloved brother, Wm. Hipes, on the duties and thankfulness we owe to God, not only this one day in the year, but throughout the year.

Good News

Bro. J. C. Murray and wife of Nappanee, Ind., came to the Elkhart district, near Goshen, Ind., and commenced a series of meetings. The first two weeks they were at the Pine Creek meeting-house,—the north house of the Elkhart district. One was baptized and two reclaimed. The meetings at the north house closed one week too soon. People began thinking at the close of the meeting. From that place Bro. Murray came to the Goshen church. One sick man was baptized in Goshen. Bro. Murray used the Sword of the Spirit with power until sinners could not resist any longer. Notwithstanding the dark and rainy nights, and the muddy roads, good congregations would meet.

Bro. Murray is not an old man, but is willing to give his life for the good cause. Such men should be kept in the Master's service. We have a number of able ministers who could do a great deal of good, but who are all financially embarrassed. God wants the members to help the ministers, in their arduous labor. "Know ye not that they which minister about holy things live of the things of the temple, and they which wait at the altar are partakers with the altar? Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel."

While I am not in favor of a salaried ministry, I do think that a supported ministry is in harmony with God's Word.

Our meeting will long be remembered. Twelve were baptized at the Goshen church, fifteen in all were brought home. May they be found faithful workers in the Master's cause!

From here Bro. Murray goes to Gravelton, Ind. May God's choicest blessing go with him!

We were happily disappointed on reaching here, and enjoy living here very much. Religious and educational privileges could not be better anywhere. The school is in splendid working order. There is a good attendance, with a corps of able instructors. We have preaching on Sunday morning and evening in the College Chapel. By the request of some to have preaching on Sunday evening, the Sunday evening prayer-meeting and the students' prayer-meeting were united and will be held on Wednesday evening of each week hereafter. Our Bible Normal class, under Prof. Sharp's instructions, is doing finely, increasing in interest and size, so much so that we were obliged to move into larger quarters.

We have a very good Sunday-school, superintended by Prof. Fahnestock. The school meets immediately after morning services. The attendance is large. The children are not neglected. At the close of the school they occupy the front seats and a five or ten minutes' talk is given them by the Superintendent on the lesson, from a pictorial chart, which is an excellent way of impressing the lessons on their minds. The little folks, (and older ones, too) seem to enjoy it very much, and are always ready for their places in front, and anxious to answer such questions as may be asked them.

In some Sunday-schools the children are sadly neglected. In some schools no questions are asked them at the close of the school, but they are left in the rear of the building, to amuse themselves as best they can, while older ones talk over difficult points in the lesson. Let us bring the children to the front, and ask them a few questions, at least, each Sunday. They will take more interest in their lessons, be happier for it, and the time will be well spent.

Thanksgiving services were observed in the Chapel. The sermon was preached by Bro. Levi Mohler, of Missouri. At the close of the services, nine members were received by letter. Many came with their Thanksgiving offering to the Lord for his abundant blessings during the past year. May we at all times remember that all we have and are comes from God, and may we at all times be thankful to him for it!

Bro. Geo. S. Arnold commenced a series of meetings with us, Nov. 12, and continued until the 24th. He preached, in all, nineteen sermons, of which eight were doctrinal sermons. Our beloved brother held forth the Word with all the zeal and earnestness of a true Christian soldier, and, by his faithful labors and the blessings of God, two were made willing to come out from among the world, to have their names inscribed in the Book of Life. We feel that others were almost persuaded to take up the cross of Christ. May the Lord keep the waters troubled, until sinners find there is rest nowhere but in the arms of our Blessed Jesus.

In conclusion I would say that I, for one, sanction Bro. Moore's suggestion, in No. 47 of Messenger, for it is one in the right direction. It is a book that would be a great benefit to old as well as young brethren. Bro. R. H. Miller would be the very man to discuss the subjects, as given in the article referred to.

Eld. John Wise came to our locality Nov. 4, and remained two weeks. He preached, while here, sixteen sermons. The weather was bad, part of the time, but there were good congregations and a growing interest. Though there were no accessions at the meetings, the good seed sown, we trust, will bear fruit in due time.

We are trying to keep up a Bible class this winter, and meet at the church every Sunday to read and study the Word of God. It is hard work, however, to keep up the interest. Some say, "The roads are too bad," or "It is too cold," etc. If the Brethren could only remember that in assembling for the study of God's Word all are greatly blessed, they would be more anxious to thus meet, and build up each other in the most holy faith.

D. L. Miller, Treasurer.

From the Rockies.

In July, family and I arrived at Fort Collins, Colo., from Virginia, our former home, expecting to make Colorado our future home. We were kindly received and cared for by my brother who has been trying his fortune in this country for some time, and we are glad to see that the Lord has blessed his labor. We rejoiced to find him still firm in the faith delivered to the saints.

In the East we were privileged to meet with the people of God every Lord's Day. Here we are very much isolated from church associations. We hold our membership with the Longmont congregation, yet, being forty miles north of Longmont, we are not able to meet with them very often. We were with the brethren and sisters at Longmont once, since our arrival here, and, having the privilege of attending several meetings while among them, we were very much refreshed spiritually.

At this time, as far as we know, there are ten members in this vicinity and we have the assurance that there are others who might be of our number, could we have some minister locate in this neighborhood to help build up a church. Oh, may God hasten the day when we can have the privilege of attending public worship at least every Sunday. We can have school-houses in which to hold our meetings, at any time. We hope our missionary workers will think of us and not only think, but come to our aid. We were very favorably impressed by the account of Bro. Hope's visit among the members of Nebraska, given in GOSPEL MESSENGER No. 46. Such a visit would be very acceptable.

We have had but one minister to visit us during the last summer and fall. Bro. David Weaver, of Longmont, came to us once and gave us three very encouraging sermons. We hope he may come again.

We have often heard of members becoming careless and falling back into worldly lusts, in these isolated places of the Brotherhood. We thought it strange, but now we know the cause in part. These out-of-the-way places are very much slighted. There appears nothing to stir up their pure minds, and so they wax cold in the faith. Oh, may we be such as Paul speaks of in Rom. 8: 35-39.

Our elder, George Fesler, at Longmont, has been quite ill for some time. If the Lord will, we desire that he may be restored to perfect health. His presence and labor in the Lord are much needed here. We are favorably impressed with this country, and hope that many brethren and sisters will locate among us! D. M. CLICK.

From Clarence, Iowa.

We are and have been, of late years, in a very unfavorable situation for church work. Our membership is much scattered; members have been going west for cheap homes, and especially has our ministerial help sought other fields of labor, all of which has not been very encouraging to an ingathering of our children, our neighbors, and their children.

Just here I would most earnestly solicit correspondence with brethren (and especially ministers) who might desire homes in a good country at reasonable prices. We need your help.

Our council-meeting, previous to our love-feast, passed off pleasantly, though not as fully attended as was desirable. Our feast, Oct. 5 and 6, was an enjoyable season. Our members came together as well as could be expected,— isolated as they are,— and with Brethren from Dry Creek, Lost Nation, Oak Grove and Davenport, we enjoyed a refreshing season together. Brethren D. B. Eby, Joshua Shultz, T. G. Snyder, and S. C. Miller were our ministerial help.

Our regular meetings are usually well attended, and we are sorry that, on account of a lack of help in the ministry, we can not attend the distant appointments during the winter months. We have arranged with Bro. S. C. Miller, of Robins, Iowa, to hold meetings for us, four miles south of Clarence, Ia., baginning Dec. 20. We hope we may have a good meeting. May the Spirit of the Lord arouse saints to a sense of duty, and convince and convict sinners.

I have thought for some years, and now will take occasion to say (and we hope no offense will be taken) that it would be a good work if State Districts could arrange to send some worthy ministering brother into all the churches of their respective territory, especially to the weaker churches, which should be given a two weeks' meeting, at least once a year. Much is said, and quite a good deal done, to send the Gospel into new fields, to organize new churches in a missionary way. This is all right, but, in so doing, let us not lose sight of the old fields that need our care. They need to be fertilized. Building new church houses is a good work,—but just as important is the keeping up of the old ones already built.

We are glad that our last Annual Meeting has taken steps toward devising some way by which suitable ministerial help may be furnished where needed. JOHN ZUCK.

At Home Again.

At my last writing I was at Bro. Wm. Sandy's, Lincoln County, Nebr., where I held seven meetings with good interest. The one brother and the two sisters, composing the membership, were much built up. From there, Bro. Wm. Sandy took me, Oct. 28, to Chase County, where there is a small organization. I held seven meetings there with good attention and good interest.

I was next taken to Hayes County, to where my daughter lives. Here I had only two appointments. Then I went North to Frontier County, where there are a few brethren. Bro. Wm. Colebank is their minister. Here Bro. G. W. Stambaugh, from Cass County, met me and we held meetings on Saturday evening and Sunday forenoon. One was baptized and one reclaimed. We had meetings also on Sunday night. On Monday we had council-meeting and organized the little band of brethren into working order. They held a choice for a minister and two deacons. The lot for the former fell upon the young brother that was baptized the day before. His name is Alford Philips. The two deacons chosen are Benjamin and Oliver Lapp. May the Lord bless them and enable them all to prove faithful in their several callings. We had meeting on Monday night and on Tuesday, in the forenoon, at which time three more were reclaimed. Bro. Stambaugh now had to leave and left the writer to continue the meetings until Saturday night, when another was reclaimed, making, in all, five reclaimed and one baptized.

I next went to the place where Bro. Alford Philips lives, where I held two meetings, which encouraged them very much. Then I left for home, where I arrived in safety and found all well.

SHROYER.—In the Tuscarawas church, Stark Co., Ohio, Nov. 19, sister Magdalena Shroyer, aged 69 years, 1 month, and 17 days.

Deceased was afflicted for many years, but bore all with Christian fortitude. But few, if any, excelled her in the lively faith of the Gospel, the ardent love for Christ and his church, and the anxious yearning for the prosperity of Zion and the salvation of all. She was truly a mother in Israel. Some time before her death she requested Bro. Conrad Kahler to preach her funeral sermon from 1 Cor. 15: 57, 58. Eld. Kahler preached a very appropriate sermon to a large concourse of people. NOAH LONGANECKER.

HUNTINGDON NORMAL COLLEGE.—Winter Term, Next, Twelve Weeks.

This Term begins Dec. 26, 1889, and closes March 21, 1890, covering the wintery part of the year. While this time is not as comfortable for work of most kinds, it is well adapted to study, as the course is arranged in our school. It is the shortest, and, consequently, the least expensive term in the year. Yet it is so arranged that an important part of the work can be completed. What more profitable thing can you do than come and spend these twelve weeks at the Normal? While the form of standard in the Normal and Scientific Departments will be rigidly maintained, it will be the aim of the school to give due prominence to Bible study, two courses having been already introduced—"A Critical or Exegetical study of the New Testament Scriptures," and "Outlines of Bible Study, using the Bible only as the text-book.

The accommodations, in every respect, are ample. Members, and members called are especially desired,—all will be welcomed. Special rates to our ministers.—Free tuition to children etc. A copy of the "Advance" sent free to all. For Catalogues and any other information desired address H. B. Brumbaugh, President, or J. H.
